Khan Abdul Ghani Khan: Sir, so much has been said and written and stated about food inside this House and outside it that it is hardly possible for one to put forward any new idea or contribute any fresh suggestion. Since the Bengal famine we have been talking of food and food has become more and more scarce. In the last two or three years we have produced magnificent plans and reports on food and we have seen more magnificent deputations of beggars to beg for food in the foreign countries. I returned from one such deputation day before yesterday, the delegation that went to the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations at Copenhagen. In Commission A of that conference I did the begging for India, my colleagues did it in the other Commissions and Committees on which they were serving. I begged the Commission to give preference to India in the distribution of fertilisers and export an allotment of tractors because India was starving. Never shall I forget the shame that I suffered when I said that. There was I standing before the nations of the world admitting in so many words that though I came from a country which has unlimited man power, inexhaustible natural resources, one of the best climates and most fertile lands, with scores of long rivers and hundreds of square miles of flat ground, yet we are starving. I admitted in so many words that we were starving because we Indians were stupid and ignorant and inefficient and suffered from a lack of will and intelligence. And, Sir, these are precisely the reasons why we are starving. Our rivers, our soil, our mineral wealth is all as good as America's; our man power is greater, and yet America is rich and well fed and we are poor and starving. What is it that America has and India has not? It is the will to serve, the will to create, the will to produce. A thousand brilliant plans will not produce a single turnip, you cannot get fish by singing lullabies on the banks of rivers. If files and plans and statements and blue-books could produce food we would be the greatest exporters of food in the world. But unfortunately potatoes do not grow in files. We do not want speeches, we want action. I know the Honourable Babu Rajendra Prasad has the will and the desire to serve India, he has been given the most difficult portfolio, he has the most terrible responsibility and therefore the greatest honour. I know he will try his best, but that is not enough, we all must try our best. As long as there is one unfed child in India we have no right to raise our head with pride or talk of our culture or civilization or religion. There is no room in a hungry man's stomach or head or heart for anything else but hunger. A starving man knows no other God except bread. Food is the first duty and highest responsibility of every Government, everything else is secondary. There is no point in teaching a child geography when you should be giving him potatoes. There is no sense in making laws for a hungry people, hunger neither understands nor needs laws. It needs food. I know that you all realise this, but what I want to point out specially is that we must not forget that it is the farmer of India and not the soil of India that will produce the food of India. You forgot him and he undeified you, you condemned him to a life of ignorance and poverty and disease, and nature made you pay for it a horrible price, famine. I am glad you have remembered him at last. He is the real problem. You will dam the rivers and plough the fields and have the fertilisers but you will still starve until you educate the tiller of the soil and make him intelligent. Arm him with knowledge and understanding and he will beat hunger for you, nothing else and no one else can. The blind farmer of India is the great obstruction to the greater production of food in India. For example take the case of manure. Go to any Indian village and you will see stacks of cowdung cakes and the immediate consequence,—undernourished children and wretched crops. Do you think that if the mother of these half-starved children understood and knew that everytime she burnt a cake of cowdung she was burning away one solid meal from her child's food, she would do it? No Indian mother would, she would rather burn out her eyes. She does not know it but she must be made to understand it. I had exactly the same difficulty in my own village. I quarrelled with my people, I pleaded with them and I even threatened them but they still continued to burn cowdung cakes. I persuaded the men but I could not persuade the women, the only way they could cook their food was with cowdung. So three years ago I planted a few quick-growing trees for them and allotted them to various families. When they got a little fuel they saved a little manure, and this year I had the best crop in my land because they had a lot of manure. Next year I hope to get a better crop because they will have more fuel next year.

This brings me to the suggestion that I want to put before the House. My Honourable friend Mr. Lawson said the other day that food and agriculture were complementary to one another and he was glad to see them under one Member. I want to go further. I claim that more food is possible only if all the departments of Government co-ordinate to produce it. The farmer must be taught by word,—that is the Information Department, then by deed,—that is the Agriculture Department. The P.W.D. must make dams and canals and wells and make farms to market roads. Communications must give him better transport, Industries must give him fertilisers and science must give him improved seeds. If you look deeply into the subject you will be shocked at the number of wheels that you will have to turn before you can hope for any progress. Therefore I propose that we make an organisation modelled on the lines of the international organisation of the F.A.O. (Food and Agricultural Organisation) of the United Nations. This organisation must be made responsible solely for the production and distribution of food in India. It should be given the supreme authority over the provincial Governments and their provincial projects and the central departments in the matter of food. It should be a society of missionaries who will consider the feeding of Indian children holy and noble enough to give up their life to it, and we on our side must give them the power, the trust and the chance to make good use of their lives in the service of India and that is the quickest way, and to my humble understanding the best way and the only way of getting more food for India.

That is all that I have to say about the production of food. Now a word about consumption of food and I am through. If you want to get the best out of your food and your investment in it, you must eat intelligently. This is another thing we have to teach the masses of India. You must not ask for a particular variety of food that you like, you must eat what is good for you. Perhaps an example will help me clarify what I mean. Take my friends from South India. They have a famine. I am surprised they have not had a dozen instead of one. The Madrasi is a very intelligent Accountant and lawyer but he is a very unintelligent feeder. He eats only rice and he will not eat fish and eggs and meat and even wheat.

An Honourable Member: We are now eating maize.

Khan Abdul Ghami Khan: I am very glad to hear it.

On a specialised diet like that, the chances of starvation are much greater than for more general feeders, like the Pathans or the Punjabis. You must eat what you can get until you can produce what you would like to eat. India may pay crores of rupees this year to subsidise rice for you, but we cannot do it every year. You must eat what India produces—corn, wheat and bajra, eggs and fish—yes, Sir, fish—you cannot starve a human child because you feel sentimental about fish. You cannot be an intelligent eater and orthodox at the same time. The animals that had specialised food were the first to fall in the struggle for life. They are all extinct. It is unreasonable to say that I must have rice and chilies or I am going to starve, so help me God. No, you must eat whatever will keep body and soul together. You will get a little more brawn—and possibly a little less brain, and the result will be a better Madrasi.

The English, who are an infernally sensible race—and too much so, as we have found to our cost—are very intelligent about food. They have mechanized their farms, and they are short of meat and so what do they do? Why, they have eaten up all their horses. When you get Vienna Steak in London you must understand that in plain English it means plain good old plough horse.

I wonder when India will learn that there is no virtue in eating a turnip and no crime in eating a horse. For neither the turnip nor the horse is what matters. The only thing that matters is the strong and healthy young body which is the only house for a perfect mind, which is the only hope of a perfect nation. Feed India and educate her and you need not worry about the future of India. It will be greater than you have ever dared to dream.

I thank you, Sir.

Sri E. Venkatasubba Reddiar (South Arcot cum Chingleput Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I pay my tribute to the Honourable the Food Member for having appealed to the members of this House and also the public for co-operation in his efforts. And I also pay my tribute to the Food Secretary for having managed the Honourable the Food Member to repeat his theory against the prices.

Mr. President: Before the Honourable Member proceeds further, I would like to say a word. I stated in the morning Session that in view of the large number of members who wish to speak there should be a strict time limit and the speeches should be as short as possible and should deal with points which have not already been brought out in the debate. That is the only way of having the maximum number of points and suggestions brought to the notice of the House and to the notice of the Government. Though I do not want to fix any rigid time limit, but I think ten minutes should be sufficient for expounding any further points which Members have to place before the House. Members should therefore see that they do not exceed five minutes if possible or ten minutes at the most.

Sri E. Venkatasubba Reddiar: I would like to address myself only to the question of prices and not to other points. I was surprised to hear that the Honourable Member will not support any rise in the price of foodgrains. I think it is partly due to the work of the Department, but he argued a bad case good lawyer that he is in order to convince this House and also the public against raising the prices. But I would like to expose some of the fallacies in his arguments.

He said that he must look after both the interest of the producer and the interest of the consumer. Nobody denies that. What is it that the consumer would like to have? Would he like to have his rice or wheat at the cost of the producer? Now, he has not taken into consideration the cost of production of rice or wheat. So far as we are concerned, coming from the South I shall give some figures for raising paddy crop on an acre of land. If it is a dry land it comes to 120 rupees and if it is a wet land it comes to about 80 to 85 rupees per acre. I will request the House to bear with me if I go into details because I find I am the only person here in this House who has been fighting for the rise in price.

The cost of preparing seed beds and manuring is Rs 15 per acre in my district. Preparation of land comes to 21 before it is transplanted. The cost of transplanting and removal of seedlings comes to about Rs 8 per acre. Manure is required at the rate of $4\frac{1}{2}$ bags of oil cakes per acre, and the controlled rate is Rs 9.4 per bag although we never get it at the controlled rate. It comes to Rs 41.10. The land revenue on wet land comes to Rs 6 to 8 per acre, and harvesting charges Rs 15. All this taken together works out to Rs 85 per acre. What is the normal yield in India? We have got agricultural statistics in India and also several reports before us. They give 12 maunds of paddy per acre as the average outturn. So at the present rate of Rs 5.11, it comes to about 66 to 69 and even if you take the value of straw, which is about Rs 15 per acre, it comes to exactly Rs 84. He has nothing for his supervision charges and nothing for his establishment, and if it is a wet land he is just able to make up what he has spent on his land. But if it is a dry land he is a loser by 35 to 40 rupees. I do not mean that on an average every cultivator is losing, but that is the position. The Honourable the Food Member said that if he is a lawyer why should the cultivator go on cultivating his land. The Honourable the Food Member has not been practising for a long time. If he had been practising, he would have found that many a member of the bar is not able to make both ends meet and yet continues his practice, because they are not capable of taking up any other profession nor can they adjust themselves in any other walk of life. It is just the same with the cultivator. He has no other vocation and the other thing is from his labour on the land he hopes to get some crop. He hopes to get some grain which he would not otherwise get. So he is on the land and carrying on the profession of agriculture in order to help himself and if possible others.

The other question was raised: if as a matter of fact raising of foodcrops is not profitable, why should he not raise commercial crops or money crops? The answer is this. If you want to raise sugar cane or tobacco or ground-nuts, they are costly crops. Raising sugar cane in my part costs Rs 400—500 an acre and ground-nuts cost Rs 100—120 per acre. Many of these people find it difficult to raise those crops. The other reason is that the Provincial Government of Madras prohibited the growing of ground-nuts and money crops in March of last year. He argued if the level of price was raised the consumer could not pay and it would be a burden on the consumer who would not be able to meet his demand and get the other necessities of life. It is not true. He also quoted from some index figures that the price of rice has risen 320 per cent in the index. But from the reports of the Agricultural Statistics of India, 1938, I find that in Madras the rice price has been Rs 3.14 per maund and the present control rice price fixed by Government is Rs 8.9 per maund. It comes to 220 per cent and not 320 per cent over the pre-war level.

Mr. B. E. Sen: That is the all-India index.

Sri E. Venkatasubba Reddiar: I am giving figures for my province. Then he quoted that sugar has not risen in price. That is because it has been controlled from the beginning. Compared with other articles, the price of sugar has been kept very low.

[Sri R Venkatasubba Reddiar]

What about the needs of the agriculturist? Some of my friends have said those needs have gone up in price. In 1941 I was able to purchase a ton of oil cakes for Rs 32. Now I am not able to purchase it for Rs 180. Labour has gone up by four times. The work turned out by the labourer has diminished in proportion to the rise in wages. We cannot get cattle, implements and the price has risen by 10 to 15 times. So we say that the agriculturist should get a fair price and if the price is raised by one rupee per maund, it does not hit the consumer. One maund is 82 lbs. Under the present ration of eight ounces per head per day, only fifteen pounds are necessary for an individual for a month. A rupee increase in the price works out at one and one fifth of a pice per day, or three annas per month. I say if it is not possible, or the producer could not expect the consumer to pay three annas increase per head for this rice, the incidence is not very much. Even if it is thought that this could not be borne by the consumer I would suggest, just as they are doing in the Railway Department, that the Government itself subsidize this food and meet the cost of conveyance, the middleman's charges and pay the producer at the rate at which the consumer is getting.

There are, the second and third sorts of rice in Madras. They are very cheap. It works out at Rs 7-11 and Rs 7-6 per maund and if it is increased by Rs 1-8 it does not hit the consumer.

So far as village rationing is concerned, we heard the Honourable Member say that people were unwilling to take some of these varieties of grains. It is true. What is happening in villages where grain is produced is that some people are given 2 lbs of paddy per week. It is not sufficient for one day's meal. He is not able to take wheat. What is retained in the village is only paddy. The other grains are taken away. I would suggest that the Food Department try its best and raise the ration to one pound.

We support this motion and we will give all help to the Food Department as appealed to by the Food Member.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi (Calcutta and Suburbs, Muhammadan urban). The Honourable the Finance Minister twisted me the other day saying that I lived in the past and did not think of the future. That is not quite true. I listened to the speech of the Honourable the Food Member with great attention. Had he been present here, Sir, I would have congratulated him upon the manner in which he simplified the whole case for us and put a picture before us which gave us clearer understanding of the situation. But I am sure, Sir, critical minds like mine, must have realized that he was just repeating a lesson placed before him by the Department. In the last session we heard this phrase, ninety days. Once we have gone over the ninety days we shall have entered the millennium so far as food was concerned. Now, the same Department has made the new Member say it is only a question of sixty days and not sixty-one. By then we shall all be happy and our poor brothers and sisters in India will get a tummy-full of full, if you will pardon the expression. My feeling throughout has been, that for reasons which I cannot fully appreciate or understand this starvation stunt of India has been overplayed. We are accustomed, Sir, to shortage of food. Our brothers and sisters have not been able to eat even one square meal a day sometimes. We have been talking of this for years and years. But I was flabbergasted when the Honourable the Food Member said that he had spent Rs 91 crores in buying foodgrains and in order to equalise the local prices and the prices at which he had brought them outside, he had to pay a subsidy of Rs 15½ crores more and yet the situation is what it is. Sir, the history of the Food Department has not been a very happy one. Lord Trenchard chose three Food Ministers in about as many months and then himself sat on that gadi and the results are what they are. Will it surprise you to learn that this word 'statistics' leaves me cold. They are never correct. I know something about the jute statistics of Bengal. You can go and talk to any one you like and you will find that they have no faith in Government statistics. Commercial houses give you better statistics. I know the case, which I think the Honourable Member who will wind up the debate on behalf of the Department will note down carefully. They decided, here in Delhi, that a surplus area was not a surplus area. They promised to send so many thousand tons—we always talk in tons nowadays—to them there. The officials there wrote back saying that they had got so much of surplus and so they did not want any more. Train loads of grain were however sent and then the same Government of India bought that same grain at a higher price, paid double transportation charges and carried it to the area where it was actually needed. This is only one instance of incompetence of the most magnificent department the Government of India had when India was starving. They fixed prices and they are supposed to control them but does it surprise you to know that the Government itself buys at a price higher than the price—it has fixed. Can ridiculousness go any further? My own feeling is this—you, Sir, have asked us not to go into details and therefore I shall cut short my remarks—that the I C S (the Indian Celestial Service) does not understand the A B C of the problem. I wish the Honourable the Food Member had been here. I would then have appealed to him to save us from the civilians, who can only go on fattening fies but who do not know one grain from another. They sit in the offices, and smoke cigarettes. Their babus bring the files to them and they put their initials on them. They do nothing more than that. Sir, I hope the new Member, when he has got into the guts of the matter will hand over the problem of feeding India to the grain merchants. It is because the Government has come in that the merchants, in order to safeguard their own position, have done things which should not have been done according to strict principles of commerce or trade. Once these great civilians are removed, Sir our banias, our memons, our khojas and other grain merchants will be able to put India on a very sound basis in the matter of food. We shall get our rice, wheat, dal and oil at the normal prices that we used to pay. It is all because of this madness about internationalism which sends us with the beggar's bowl to other countries in the world.

Sir, the Honourable the Food Member suggested many ways of how he was going to increase production. Sir, the department has not drawn his attention sufficiently to the liaison between Government officials, zamindars and merchants. Sir black-market is not the right word. This liaison is more terrible. I will give you one instance. After the Bengal famine, the Government of India and the Bengal Government decided to have granaries. They bought rice from every corner in the world, filled the granaries and fixed the prices. Will you believe me that they could not sell one seer of grain, because all the grain which had been hoarded either in the zamindar's underground cellars or in the merchant's backyards came out into the market at a price lower than the price fixed by the Government. So, if this liaison could be broken by the Food Department, I am satisfied in my mind that there shall be no shortage. Our population is increasing and therefore we must have more food. Fertilisers should be introduced and, therefore, a monopoly should be given to a certain corporation and not open it up to the general public to establish fertilising plants in India. But there is one way of getting out of the trouble and that is to break the liaison between the Food Department officials and the food grain merchants and the zamindars. There is enough food in the country. I can understand the point made by the Honourable the Food Member that he has to look to the interests of the producers and he has to look to the interests of the consumers. If he can establish a balance, there would be nothing like it. But scholars and economists have found that the maximum number of media between the producer and the consumer is about 86 and the lowest about four to five. Now if they cannot break it through their monopolistic purchase policy, as they call it, then the producer does not get the 320 per cent increase the Honourable the Food Member mentioned and you and I have to pay, I do not know how many times more, for the food that we get and the poor man suffers consequently. My appeal to the Department will be please let the producer get as much as he can but bring the price of the foodgrains down as low as you possibly can. Here is a chance for the Government trying to become a real ma bap in the old sense of the term and get at every turn it bungles, and brings losses upon losses to the tax-payer.

[Mr Abdur Rahman Siddiqi]

During the great famine in Bengal the Government of India laid down its mighty big policies. Will it, again, surprise you, Sir, to learn that there was a revolt in the provinces. Assam was going to give us in Bengal 25,000 tons of grain but it did not give us more than 2,500 tons. The strong Governor of Bihar refused to send one single grain of rice to Bengal. Now if the Food Department is going to work through the provincial agencies, I am satisfied that it will be a new fiasco greater than any. And therefore in order to break the liaison and the incompetence, as I have suggested, let Government get out of this field. Let Government take up the problem of production only and leave distribution to commercial agencies who in certain cases have the experience of generations in that type of business.

I am sorry the Food Member is not here. There are other aspects of the matter to which I could speak. But if the Secretary to the Department conveys my appeal to him, to hand over distribution to men who understand know, and take back the civilians, we shall not need to go either towards the west or to Bangkok or to any other part of the world for our daily food. In this manner alone will the balance between the producer and the consumer be established.

Raja Bahadur of Khalikote (Nominated Non-Official). Mr President, Sir, I wish to congratulate my Honourable friend, Dr Rajendra Prasad, for his able and lucid speech on the food situation, and I have no doubt that he deserves to receive a well-merited tribute from this Honourable House for the masterly manner in which he has dealt with the most difficult problem of the day, so soon after his taking over charge of affairs. It is amazing to find that in spite of his advancing age and indifferent health he has so soon mastered a problem which is the most vexed of all the problems of the day. Let us hope that the approaching harvest will fulfil all expectations and that nothing untoward like cyclones and other calamities, common to our coastal areas, will mar the prospects of what appears to be a very promising season, so far.

Arising out of the speech of the Honourable Member, I wish to point out one or two matters by way of suggestions. I heard my honourable friend the Food Member say that in permanently settled areas there were no means of collecting statistics or data. So far as the permanently settled estates of the Madras area and the ex-Madras area of the Orissa province are concerned, there are facilities for gathering such statistics. In these estate areas, as well as in the ryotwari areas, the system known as the village officer system for groups of villages exists, and under this system it is the duty of these village officers who are public servants, to furnish all information and statistics to the authorities and they are the only agency on whom every revenue authority depends to gather statistics regarding the crop output. These village officers are low-paid and generally an uneducated lot, identifying themselves with the local cliques of the village. The natural conservative temperament of the villager prevents him from disclosing or parting with his stocks, and the village officer will surely make himself an enemy of the villagers if he gives a liberal estimation of the crop output. I have personally known of cases where village officers do not go to the fields or make any inquiries but just sit at home and write away some kind of a report which forms the basis of these so-called statistics. If dependable statistics are needed, it is essential to have a separate statistical machinery instead of depending upon the uneducated and ill-paid village officers who cannot be expected to turn out such work efficiently and accurately. The exact estimation of a standing crop on a field is a most difficult task and unless actual crop cutting experiments are carried out, this estimate can at the most, be approximate and sometimes vague.

There is not enough propaganda in the rural areas to induce the producer to part with his surplus stock for the benefit of others. Such is the case not only in permanently settled areas but in all areas. Another thing that tempts the producer to suppress his stocks is the control of prices by government. He lives in hopes that prices will rise further and often not satisfied with the control, he prefers selling his stocks in the black market to his friends in the neighbourhood and sometimes, gives his stock in exchange for other consumers goods. My experience has been that the procuring agents appointed by provincial governments are, generally, not the right type of people enjoying the confidence of the producers. Instead of appointing persons who try to make a regular business of it, why not entrust the work of procurement to co-operative societies as is being done in Madras? Why not also encourage the payment of bonus as is also being done in Madras, which is responsible for bringing out such a large percentage? This will have the additional benefit of discouraging the producer from going into the black market.

I am glad that my honourable friend, the Food Member, as Member in charge of Agriculture and Food, realises that the time has come not to agree to a further rise in prices, and I may assure him that the scheme of procurement will show far better results if the producer is given straightaway to understand clearly now that there is to be no further rise of prices.

By a proper planning of trade policies the Government of India can make attempts to solve the food problem. India is getting rice from Indonesia and Siam in exchange for textiles and a financial credit of 5 crores, respectively. Government must explore similar possibilities with the countries of the Middle East and other countries. As there is now a full-fledged national government in this country today, India's prestige at the moment is very high, as was proved by the conclusion of the Indo-Argentine Food Agreement. I wish to take this opportunity to pay my humble tribute to my honourable friend, Diwan Chaman Lal and his delegation for their great efforts in securing us food. It is, therefore, just the time to send out a strong delegation with full powers to negotiate and buy plant for the manufacture of fertilisers, tractors and other agricultural machinery. This government must also impress upon His Majesty's Government that it is very important that they should provide ample shipping space for carrying food to our country and to bring to our shores all this machinery which is so urgently needed.

The cost of fertilisers must be within easy reach of the agriculturists. Without making any discrimination between ryotwari and other areas, the system of giving grants-in-aid for even larger irrigation works should be adopted on an uniform scale for the simple reason that the food crisis makes no difference between ryotwari areas or any other areas.

Finally, referring to my poor province of Orissa, we are grateful to this government for providing that the share of the central government should be two-third instead of half, out of the 50 per cent grant. Loans also should be encouraged. We are thankful to providence that the province has recovered from those dreadful days of 1943 and is also doing her bit in easing the food crisis elsewhere in the country as was demonstrated by our parting with 5,000 tons of rice to Madras recently. The responsible ministry that is functioning there now will I hope, always be on the alert to prevent the repetition of a similar disaster to the one which occurred in 1943. It is gratifying to note that beneficial schemes like the Mahanadi and the Duduma projects will soon be taken up, and in this connection, may I hope that the central government will show to this poor province of Orissa the same generous consideration as in the case of other matters.

I wish to conclude now by saying that my Honourable friend the Food Member has started well in tackling the food problem on right lines and I wish him God-speed and the best of luck in this most difficult task that he has undertaken.

Sree Satyapriya Banerjee (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions Non-Muhammadian Rural). Mr. President, Sir, I confess it is painful to have to speak on the Food situation in the country for reasons which can be better imagined than described but one has to when occasion demands and circumstances permit.

The speech which the Honourable Food Member delivered the other day was a magnificent performance. The speech in which he gave a masterly survey and a careful and a straightforward analysis of the entire food situation of the country, neither belittling its gravity nor sounding a note of despair, will stand out in bold and striking contrast to the speeches delivered by his predecessors on similar occasions in the past. I fully realise that he has inherited a legacy from his predecessors, a legacy of commissions and omissions of which the less said the better and I do not want to take up the memories of the unpleasant past but I am glad to find that within a very short period he has been in office he has been able to create a record of policies which his speech has amply demonstrated, and I hope also, very soon he will create a record of actions, a record which would defy time and inspire confidence and courage in his fellow countrymen by his beneficent influence.

The food situation today is grave, it is dangerously menacing. There has been no improvement in the food situation says Dr. Rajendra Prasad. If that is true of the whole of India, how much more is it true of the province of Bengal. The Statesman, in its editorial of yesterday says while nowhere there is cause for complacency in Bengal particular reason exists for continued grave concern. Bengal, I must say, encircled as she is today, her food problem has been cast into shade and it pales into insignificance before the general political situation of the province particularly in Calcutta and East Bengal. Life is menacing. Liberty is at stake. Properties have been looted. Homes have been burnt. Sanctity and freedom of religion have been trampled under foot. Possible conversions into Islam and forcible marriages of Hindu girls with Mahomedans in Noakhali and Tipperah districts on a mass scale have taken place and the wound that has been inflicted on Hindu world by these unhappy happenings will take a long time if at all, to heal. That is the picture of Bengal now as she is today and I shall try to review the food situation in this perspective and my remarks will be confined to the problems of that province. Rice is available in many parts of the province and where it is available the prices are so high that they are beyond the reach of the poorer sections of the people of the province and it is as good as non-existent. There are also reports of death from starvation, reports which have not yet been contradicted. I have definite information that thousands of people marooned in the affected areas of Noakhali and Tipperah were, and, I am afraid, still are going without food. I would ask the Food Member, and in his absence the Food Secretary with all the earnestness and emphasis at my command to make arrangements for taking food to these affected areas immediately and save them from starvation and death. The matter does not brook any delay—that will mean sure starvation and death. I cannot, Sir, resist the temptation of quoting a few lines from the editorial of yesterday's Statesman. When the present communal strife began in August, many features of the food administration were unsatisfactory. Rice was selling in some deficit areas much higher than the official price, procurement was small. Government stocks were small. Distribution was uneven. In Calcutta there was no movement of surplus for a few days last week. Comment was made on the requirements of the disturbed areas in Noakhali and Tipperah. Alarming reports are coming from Mymensingh and other parts of province.

Let me now deal with the food problem in the province and offer some constructive suggestions in this regard. It is evident that the food problem in Bengal or for the matter of that, elsewhere, and anywhere in the world, has to be dealt with under the following heads—production, procurement and storage, distribution and rationing.

Before dealing with these factors let me give you some figures regarding Bengal. Bengal was declared a deficit province in 1943-44 so far as rice was concerned by 800,000 tons and the rice allotted to it was only 1,707,000 tons. Bengal was declared again deficit in the year 1944-45 by 11,00,000 tons and believe me when I say that rice was still despatched from it to the extent of 113,000 tons and this year, from 1st May 1946 to 30th September Bengal has received only 112,000 tons of foodgrains out of a total of 1,019,000 tons received from overseas. Bengal is deficit this year according to the revised estimate by 2 million tons. I hope the Honourable Food Member will give special consideration to Bengal regard being had to the deficit that stares us in the face. I will just read here a quotation from the statement of Sir Robert Hutchings made on the 17th June 1946 regarding Bengal

"Bengal would be self sufficient this year and at any rate would not call on the centre for help at present while it is still trying to save the people of Southern India. For the present we fully intend to see the people in Southern India through the trouble. The extent to which we can help Bengal, depends very largely on the assistance we receive from outside India."

I ask the House to ponder over the situation as described in this statement in comparison with what the situation actually is today and I ask the House to consider whether Bengal does not deserve special consideration.

Sir, let me first of all turn to the problem of procurement in that province. In Annexure A to the memorandum circulated to us we find only seven lines describing the system of procurement in the beleaguered province of Bengal. I owe it to myself and to members of this House to describe in brief outline the system of procurement—how purchases are made by the Government officers in those districts in which purchases are from the very nature difficult—I mean the districts of Kluhna and Bansal and while chief purchasing agents operate in the surplus districts of Dinajpur, Burdwan, Bubbhum, Bankura, Midnapore and 24 Parganas. Procurement in all these districts is done to all intents and purposes by the big mills which are heavily concentrated in those districts and the chief agents, only because they are so, get a commission of 2 annas per maund of rice or paddy plus 3 annas for handling and storage, costing the exchequer more than a crore and a half of rupees a year. I fully realise, Sir, that Bengal being a permanently settled area it is difficult, if not impossible, to introduce monopoly procurement here and now but it is quite possible to requisition the stock of holders of paddy land of more than 25 acres and more who are required to submit their stocks to Government. Why not assess the surplus of these people and take it over at Government's purchasing price? This can be done at once without any extra cost to the Government but with the saving to the exchequer of the commission paid to the chief agents. May I ask Sir why the recommendations of the Panne Enquiry Commission and of the Brand Committee have not been carried out by the Bengal Government? Provincial Autonomy is good but provincial licence certainly not. Provincial autonomy should not be allowed to degenerate into provincial licence and when that happens, it is clear duty of the higher authorities, if I may use the expression of Rousseau, to force that province to be free.

Let me come to storage now. It is admitted on all hands that loss due to storage has been considerable. We are told that there has been a storage directorate there has been an inspection directorate and there has been a laboratory and there must have been huge expenditure on all these heads. May I ask the Food Secretary whether these Directorates have done what was expected of them and had they done so whether such huge wastage due to defective storage could or could not have been avoided. May I ask what will be the approximate amount saved from wastage on account of defective storage as a result of the setting up of these Directorates? During the last session I asked a question regarding storage in Bengal, in reply to which my Honourable friend the Food Secretary was pleased to observe—an inquiry has been made from the Bengal Government and the information will be laid on the table when received. And you will be astonished to learn the information has not yet been supplied. It was on the 3rd April 1946. I trust the Honourable the Food Member will personally look into it and put the Directorates in the working order or scrap them altogether.

Now let me turn to distribution. Distribution and procurement are complementary, they go hand in hand. They go together. Foodgrains are procured not for defective storage but for effective distribution. The detailed reports from the different districts give an idea of the disastrous situation with regard to distribution. Immediate steps should be taken to remedy this state of affairs as follows—

(1) The needs of every district for the next few months should be immediately assessed and movement of stocks planned accordingly.

(2) The bigger towns should be immediately put on full rationing.

[Sice Satyapriya Banerjee]

(3) The modified rationing scheme should be introduced extensively in rural areas, if complete rationing is not possible

(4) Supplies must be given regularly, and not occasionally as at present under the modified rationing scheme

(5) The distinction between A, B and C classes should be abolished, for such a distinction falls heavily on the B and C classes and ultimately leads to the creation of a black-market for persons denied help

(6) Assessment of local needs is generally made by Civil Supply officers without consulting public opinion. The result very often is bad with consequential chaos. This should be stopped and arrangements should be made to enable responsible leaders of public opinion to have a say in the assessment, supply and distribution

(7) The Union Food Committee must be put under strict control and supervision so that they may no longer remain bottlenecks of corruption. It is also essential that these committees must be efficient units or be replaced by some other competent machinery

(8) Sub-divisional and District Food Committees must have no executive officer as then office-bearers

(9) Prompt enquiries should be made into grievances local or general, specially in cases of corruption and communalism and strong action taken if grievances are found to be genuine

(10) Finally, the assessment of per capita need must not be below the minimum nutritional standard

Let me give the instance of Calcutta. For the next two months on the basis of $\frac{3}{4}$ lb per capita Calcutta would require about one lakh of tons of stores, but the present stock I am told in the hands of the Government is only about 4 lakhs of maunds, an utterly inadequate and a ridiculously small amount

Now, Sir, let me come to the basic problem—the problem of problems regarding food—the problem of production. The policies of the Government in this regard have been many and varied but their performances have been few and far between. The performances have only led to extravagant cost without any commensurate results. I shall not deal with short-time production that has been done already and I shall not say much on the grow-more-food campaign. I must at once say that hitherto the grow-more-food campaign has been a colossal waste of money. The expenditure on this account amounted to Rs. 72.65 lakhs in 1944-45, Rs. 103 lakhs in 1945-46 and in 1946-47 a provision of expenditure of Rs. 102.85 lakhs has been made. Sir, the Members of this House will certainly be surprised to learn that the area under cultivation of winter rice in 1945-46 has shown a decrease of 6.4 per cent as compared to the previous year. And the yield of my poor province of Bengal compares unfavourably to the yield in Coorg and Madras. In Bengal it is about 900 lbs per acre while in Coorg it is about 1,450 lbs per acre and in Madras 1,050 lbs per acre. And if we look a little beyond to a country which has no intensive cultivation, I mean Egypt, we find there the yield of rice per acre is 1,854 lbs per acre. The system of rice cultivation being the same in Coorg and Madras as in other parts of India, it may be taken for granted that this decrease in yield is due to the fact that the soil has been denuded of its fertility and it has to be replenished. My time is up. I wish I had time to deal with co-operative farming, fertilisers and consolidation of holdings

One oil mine I have done. May the Food Department be infected by the dynamism and sincerity of Dr. Rajendra Prasad and may we as a result, be spared, such debates in future.

Mr. President: I think the Food Secretary will be able to do justice to his case if I give him 45 minutes.

Mr. B. B. Sen: About half an hour will be enough

Rai Bahadur Davendra Mohan Bhattacharyya (Nominated Non-Official) Sir, we have listened with interest to the very valuable speech that has been delivered by the Honourable Member in charge of Food and Agriculture surveying the entire food situation of the country. It is very good of the Honourable Member that he has kept nothing concealed from the House and he is so very sincere and earnest for the real welfare of the people concerned. I do believe, Sir, that with consistent drive we can raise India's food production up to the standard required for her present population. So far as Bengal is concerned, I may say from my personal knowledge that vast tracts of land are still lying uncultivated in western Bengal for want of irrigation projects, which, if attended to, will bring the whole area under cultivation and will go a long way in solving the food problem which is so acute in Bengal. Irrigation projects of those areas have long been prepared but we hear that they are not being executed for want of funds. I think the Honourable the Secretary of the Food Department knows some of these projects as he had to deal with one or two when he was the District Officer of Midnapore. May I under the circumstances request the Honourable Member in charge of Food and Agriculture to consider if it is possible for the Central Government to render any financial assistance to the Government of Bengal for carrying out these irrigation schemes and thereby relieving Bengal to some extent of her food difficulties.

We have been very pleased to hear that the Central Government have decided to help the poor agriculturists in small irrigation works, such as, tube wells, surface wells, etc., and the idea is that 50 per cent of the cost would be borne by the party that would benefit by it and of the remaining 50 per cent half would be contributed by the Provincial Government and the other half by the Central Government. May I know if this formula would apply to provinces which are running at a deficit? Take for instance, the case of Bengal which is at a deficit of about ten crores for the current year. If the Provincial Government fails to pay its quota will the Central Government pay the entire half and thus help the poor agriculturists of Bengal in food production?

Then Sir, the poor agriculturists of Bengal are confronted with another difficulty. Government agents for procurement of paddy do not reach the outlying villages and the result has been that the poor agriculturists of those areas are compelled to sell their paddy at rates lower than the controlled rates to middle men who have cropped up between Government agents and agriculturists. It is also reported, Sir, that if an agriculturist brings his paddy to the Government purchasing centre for sale, he is very often told that paddy is not required on that day or that the paddy is bad. The poor agriculturist has then no other alternative but to sell his paddy at a rate lower than the controlled rate as carrying the paddy back to home means unnecessary expenditure and harassment. May I suggest, Sir, that these agents should be asked to go to the village of the agriculturist for purchase and carry the paddy from there at Government expense.

There is another difficulty that the Bengal agriculturist is suffering from because of these Government agents. They pay the same price for rice which is coarse as well as fine, although everybody knows that the price for the two varieties cannot be the same. When these grievances are brought to the notice of the Procurement officers, they do nothing to remedy those grievances. May I suggest that the Department concerned should be asked to issue fresh instructions so that people may not suffer from these grievances.

Then Sir, the recent imposition of the agricultural income-tax in Bengal has probably stood in the way of the 'Grow More Food Campaign' in Bengal. The big farmers think twice before they extend their cultivation because the fruits of their labours would not be left to them for enjoyment. Therefore I request the Honourable Member in charge of Food and Agriculture to consider if the provincial governments should be advised to suspend the operation of the Agricultural Income Tax Act till India becomes self-sufficient so far as her food supply is concerned.

[Rai Bahadur Davendra Mohan Bhattacharyya]

Before I resume my seat, I would only like to add that the Honorable Member's speech has appealed to us most because in his speech he has claimed no credit for himself or for his department as his predecessor-in-office used to indulge in. The term 'I' or 'my department' has found no place in his speech.

Mr. President: Before I call upon Mr. Rohini Kumar Choudhuri to speak, I wish to invite the attention of the House to remove one possible misimpression. The Honorable Food Secretary said that he would require about half an hour to reply and Honorable Members might be under the impression that they can speak till half past four. I understand that there are some points which have to be replied to by the Honorable Secretary for the Agriculture Department. This debate will come to a close at about quarter past four. I believe the Agriculture Secretary will take about quarter of an hour.

Sir Pheroze Kharegat (Secretary, Agriculture Department) I would require only ten minutes.

Mr. President: I send about quarter of an hour. The Agriculture Secretary will be called upon to speak and then the Food Secretary will reply.

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Choudhuri (Assam Valley Non-Muslims) Sir, I rise to intervene in this debate to speak a few words regarding the plight of my unfortunate province of Assam.

[At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair which was then occupied by the Deputy President (Khan Mohammad Yunus Khan)]

Let me make no secret of my intentions. I want to dig into the ears of the Government of India and this House the case of Assam so that they may make amends for the neglect of my province. I wish that my Honorable friend Dr. Rajendra Prasad had been present here today because we in Assam have unbounded confidence and faith in his sense of justice and sympathy for the poor people. Sir, however, we cannot grudge his absence from this House on a more noble mission of peace. Let us all hope that he will come back with the glory of success unprinted on his face. But Sir, may I add in this connection that if the Honorable Members of the Interim Government had been able to make a timely visit to the disturbed areas of Eastern India, a lot of houses which were burnt could have been saved, a lot of food which was destroyed could have been utilised, not to speak of saving human lives. Sir, I do not say this in a spirit of carping criticism because I know that this interim government is not yet a full fledged national government and my Honorable friends who sit at the back of the Treasury Benches are still powerful enough to influence the decisions of Government.

Sir, I listened very carefully, like an attentive schoolboy to the speeches delivered by my Honorable colleagues but I failed to hear a single word of sympathy for the flood stricken province of Assam. The recent floods in Assam rendered thousands of people homeless and all their crops have been damaged. Nearly 1½ lakhs of people are fed on doles every day and still not a word was heard in this House in sympathy for the plight of Assam. It is true that the All India Congress Committee, through the good offices of my Honorable friend Sardar Patel granted a sum of Rs. 25,000. But that is a drop in the ocean. Yet we appreciate that. But what have my Honorable friends of the Muslim League done for the flood stricken people of Assam. Let me tell my friends of the Muslim League that the bulk of the sufferers in Assam are Muslims. But whatever the Congress or the Muslim League might do, it does not absolve the Government of their responsibility in this matter. I wish the Food Secretary would enlighten the House and say what this Government have done in order to save people from starvation. I hope he will not give the same stereotyped reply which he has given with regard to the question of evacuees from Noakhali that he has done nothing—that it was the concern of the provincial government. Is it not the responsibility of the Government of India to regulate the food policy of the entire country and find out whether any province is suffering because of unprecedented floods or unexpected sojourn of unfortunate refugees? The flood came very late in the month of October and there was no time to sow crops again.

An Honourable Member: What about the sufferings of Bihar people? You must refer to them also.

Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri. So far as the sufferings of Bihar people are concerned, I feel proud to say that our leaders and the members of the Interim Government have already rushed there and the statements which they have issued show that they realise the gravity of the situation and that they are doing their best to save the people there. I wish the same prompt steps were taken when East Bengal was in the throes of disaster and suffering. Apart from that, the problem of Assam is very peculiar and it is this. In normal times, we can grow sufficient quantity of rice. Now we have not only to feed ourselves at this moment, but we have to feed a large number of people whose crops have been destroyed, a large number of people who have taken shelter there and whose hearths and homes have been destroyed and unless the Government of India come to the rescue of the Assam Government it is impossible for Assam to feed this vast population. Sir, we were in a happy position just before the Government of India sought to meddle in the food problem of the province. At the time when there was no control, rice was selling in Assam at Rs. 30 a maund whereas in Bengal it was selling at Rs. 100 a maund. Now, what is the position? The producers have been left in the unhappy position of selling their paddy at controlled price of about Rs. 5 a maund whereas the Government of Bengal is getting their rice from us and selling it at a profit of fifty per cent. What is the effect of that? The Assam farmers get no benefit out of this. The Assam peasants do not get enough money to purchase their agricultural implements and to improve their husbandry. They do not get enough for their own living because with their slender earnings due to control of the prices of their agricultural produce. They do not get a proper price for their own produce but they have to pay a much higher price for purchasing other things. The only things that we want are sugar, gur and salt. You will hardly believe me when I tell you that at one time salt was selling in Assam in the black market at Rs. 12 a seer, and even now the position with regard to salt is very critical in that province. The reason for that is that the province of Assam has been wedded to the province of Bengal so far as the supply of salt is concerned so that if for any reason Bengal does not get a supply of salt Assam has to go without it. The Government of Assam two years ago was quite helpless in the matter, watching the people purchase salt at prices varying from Rs. 8 to Rs. 12 a seer. Should not any Government be ashamed of that? I am saying all this so that you may profit by the experience of the past and the Government of India may not fall into the same error again. Sir, if my information is correct the Food Secretary Mr. Sen was born and brought up in the province of Assam but he has already earned the distinction of being hard-hearted towards that province. In the last session he told us that the villagers of Assam were not given enough sugar or any sugar at all because they were expected to live on molasses. But what is the position about molasses? There were conflicting orders passed by the Government of India and sometimes molasses were allowed to be taken from some provinces and then an order came to stop the import. The villagers do not get sugar or sugar candy even at the time of illness, that is the position of my unfortunate province.

As regards dal which is not produced in sufficient quantity in the province, conflicting orders of the Government of India passed from time to time have been responsible for absolute shortage of dal now in that province so much so that in giving free rations Government had to get some dal from different provinces by seizure, but ordinary people had to go without it, and even now they are going without dal in many places.

Sir, I do not wish to take any more time of the House because other Honourable friends want to speak on this. I will only say that I have not been able to describe to even one-tenth of the injustice that has been inflicted on Assam on account of the deliberate neglect and indifference of the Government of India towards my unfortunate province which had to bear untold hardship in the last war and borne the whole brunt of it. But nothing is being done by the Government of India to help the Province at all.

Sir, I apologise to the House for bringing the lofty tone of the debate down to the level of mundane affairs of my unfortunate and neglected province.

Sri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras Indian Commerce) Sir, coming from the province of Madras which has set an example as stated in this House for other provinces to follow as well as having knowledge of many difficulties which require attention at the hands of Governments, both provincial and central, I am sorry that I have to come in at this late hour. Sir, we are thankful to my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lal for getting us at a time of stress and need maize in a large quantity. Maize was welcome at the time it came, but I am sorry he seems to be thinking that we should come to an arrangement with Argentina to go on sending maize to us in future also. I may tell him that though we were prepared at this juncture to take some quantity of maize and make use of it, it is not likely that maize will be taken in future if other grains like rice and chulam are available. I have got my own fears whether the large number of ships that are on their way from Argentina to Madras and other ports will have their contents sold and taken up by the people. Sir, we have already got some portions of our new crop and the second crop will come in very soon, and it is not likely that when the crops are gathered people will look at maize to which they are not accustomed. So I will warn the Government of India not to commit themselves to any arrangement under which they will get grains like maize or barley to which we are not used from other countries for the use of India. I may say that it is time we came to an agreement with Burma and Siam to supply to us our needs as they need to do before the war. The main question that will remain to be solved as a long-term question will be whether we are going to turn all our lands to the production of foodgrains or whether we are going to put them to the best use that is possible economically. That is a question which we have to face. We are growing what are called money crops wherever possible. It is only where the agriculturist cannot afford it or where the land would not profitably yield economic crops that foodgrains were cultivated and also where irrigation facilities would not allow any other crop to grow. The question is whether we are going to reverse the whole policy and force people to have recourse only to the production of foodgrains to the exclusion of those money crops which are more valuable. If international trade and international relationship means anything we have to grow what we can and what pays us to grow and make it a source of exchange with other countries from which we get other commodities. England cannot think of being self-sufficient in food, it has to depend on its neighbouring countries for its food supplies and for other resources. So the question will be whether we are going to make ourselves self-sufficient in the sense that we will not depend even on our neighbours like Burma and Siam for our food supplies as we have been doing hitherto. That will be the second question which I will put to the Central Government to consider very deeply before they enter into any definite programme for the future.

Then I come to rationing. In our province we started rationing in the towns and we did very well there. But the moment formal or informal rationing was introduced in the villages the whole thing broke down, and I am saying that because I am closely connected with the administration of this formal or informal rationing in the districts. In my own district of Coimbatore what is called informal rationing has been introduced. But only two months ago I went into the accounts for a month and I found that whereas the requirement of the district was 11,000 tons per month the actual offtake for that month was 2,000 tons. That only shows that this so-called rationing is mere eve-wash and does not mean anything. So far as the towns are concerned, as I said, rationing has done very well and I call it a success, but the moment they introduced it in the villages it broke down. What happened was this: I am glad to hear that Madras procured 94 per cent of its demand—I do not believe the figure is correct in any way, but still they were able to collect a large quantity and how did they do it? They did it because they offered Rs 2 per maund more, so that such of those as had some stock with them came forward and delivered it, and that is how a large quantity was collected. From whom? Not from all the people. It was collected from only those who were putting by all these stocks, who were evading your rules, who were keeping things which they ought to have surrendered voluntarily. It seems to me that the whole policy will have to be reviewed. There is the engine of repression in the shape of these procurement officers and others. The man who suffers is not the big landlord. He is always able to purchase exemption. It is the poor land-owner who always suffers. It is the man who has got one acre, and who has got two acres or three acres, who always suffers. I proposed in the Province of Madras that all these poor land-owners who are growing foodgrains up to 3 acres ought to be exempted from this system of procurement. They should be allowed to give whatever they have got and their surplus may be sold in the open market. In that way we can avoid the corruption and the repression to which the villager is put and also improve the administrative machinery of Government.

As I said the well-to-do land-owner somehow escapes and the poor man suffers. This will have to be looked into in any scheme that the Government is going to formulate.

I do not want to take up more time except to say one word about the prices. No doubt the agriculturist is suffering on account of the high prices he has to pay for labour and for seeds, manure and things like that. It is especially so in dry areas where there are no irrigation facilities and he has to draw water from a depth of 10 to 50 feet and has to meet an expenditure of Rs 40 to 50 per acre when in his brother in the Deltaic areas is only paying Rs 10. In such cases help has to be rendered and the suggestion I would like to make is this. The Government ought to make available to these men, especially in the dry areas, manure and cattle feed at very cheap prices. That ought to be their first concern. Secondly in the dry areas we are importing all these grains. What is done is they are paying to us in the dry areas the same price for grains that they are paying in the wet area. The result is that grain coming to dry areas from outside cost a rupee or a rupee and a half more per maund than those procured locally. If the prices for local grain and imported grain are fixed at the same level it will help the dry areas very much. This will be only adding the transport charges and procurement charges at the place of production to the procurement price in the dry areas. This will not affect the consumers.

Sir Pheroze Kharegat: I shall deal very briefly with some of the important points that have been raised during the course of this debate which relate to the Department of Agriculture. The first and the most important question that has been asked is what has been the increased acreage and the increased production as a result of the efforts that have been made in the past few years. Our statistics are generally considered to be hopelessly unreliable, but the fact remains that our acreage statistics in the temporarily settled areas are probably about the best in the world. These figures indicate that comparing the average of 1936 to 1939 with the average for the years 1942 to 1945 (the Grow More Food came into operation in 1942), there has been an increase in the cultivated area of no less than nine million acres. Nine million acres of additional land have been brought under cultivation by our cultivators which were not cultivated before.

The second figure I wish to point out is that 5½ million acres have gone under food crops. After having been transferred from cotton and jute. These figures do not refer to all India. I am not talking of Indian States about which the figures are unreliable, I am only referring to British India. But I have also worked out the figures for the temporarily settled areas : e , leaving out Assam, Bengal, Bihar and Orissa and the figure of increased acreage is 6½ million acres. There can be no question about that figure. It is absolutely reliable and must be accepted as an enormous contribution that has been made by the agriculturists of India to solve the food problem of the country. The increased production that must have resulted therefrom is—and these are the figures that have been given to us—43 million tons out of which the temporarily settled areas account for 23 million tons, i.e., in addition to what was produced in the years 1936-39, and working it out on the basis of the increased acreage, this is precisely the figure that we would get. There is one drawback to which I must frankly refer and that point was raised by one Honourable Member and that is because of the system of procurement and distribution there is a tendency, a very marked tendency on the part of certain provincial governments to under-estimate their production. He related to the case of the Punjab. The actual figures are that that province gave us an estimated production of 32 million tons of wheat. By crop cutting experiments it was found that the production was in the neighbourhood of 39 million tons—a difference of 700,000 tons in one province alone.

In estimating what has been achieved in this connection one must also take into consideration the amount of money that has been spent. We were told the other day that in order to import food we spend 91 crores of rupees and in order to distribute that food we spend an extra 15½ crores of rupees. Have we spent anything like that on the production of food in India? The amount that has been spent in the course of the three years does not exceed more than 5 to 6 crores. How does that compare with the 15½ crores spent in one year simply on subsidizing food imported from outside? And I ask the question is to why instead of going round here and there begging for food we should not concentrate all our efforts on trying to increase production in this country? It was suggested that we should enter into long-term contracts with other countries to supply us with food. By all means if it is necessary let that be done but why should we not enter into similar contracts with our own producers guarantee them a reasonable price and say whatever you produce we will take it such and such a price. Give them this guarantee give them all the facilities that are needed and I undertake it that they will produce all that is required in order to feed India within the next five years and there will be no need to go outside in order to beg or try to obtain things from elsewhere.

Several other points have been raised. They are of comparatively minor importance. I was asked what is our programme for distribution of seed. Our programme envisages the ploughing of 20 million acres under improved seed which will produce something like 800,000 tons of extra food within the next year.

References were made to co-operative farming. In reply, I gave to a question only this morning, I explained that the Government have already decided to take up experimental work in connection with co-operative farming in the Delhi Administration area.

So far as machinery is concerned, we have been trying our best to buy and get machinery, that is tractors, from other countries, but our efforts have not been very successful. We have with great difficulty obtained a few tractors which were left behind by the Americans and we have set up a tractor repairing factory and we hope that as a result of that within five or six months we will have at least 500 tractors which can be used where they are required. I admit that there are many areas such as those growing rice where tractors cannot be brought into use. On the other hand there are many other areas where there is a lot of land which if water were available, could be brought under cultivation. There are areas which are infested with deep-rooted weeds which can be eradicated by tractors and for which tractors are the only means of eradication. So there is considerable scope for the use of tractors in different parts of the country. We have also induced a private individual to start a factory for the manufacture of heavy ploughs required for use with these tractors.

As regards fertilizers, we are trying at the present time to import as much as we can, but in addition, we are not neglecting the importance of compost, compost-making by villagers and compost-making in towns, and we are giving subsidies for the preparation of these composts and for distributing the same to the villages.

So far as irrigation projects are concerned, I would like to mention one single instance of what one province has achieved. Within six months the Madras Government have constructed no less than 30 000 new wells, and if that one province could do that (they did it under the stress of famine) is there any reason why other provinces, provided they put their shoulders to the wheel in the same way cannot do? There are certain difficulties I fully realize. But I do think that a great deal more effort is required in this direction and I hope that provinces will come forward and try to induce the cultivators to take up these works whether of irrigation or of drainage or of soil conservation which are essential for increasing production.

In conclusion Sir, I would like to refer to the remark made by my honourable friend, Mr. Abdul Gham Khan. He characterized the Indian cultivator as ignorant, illiterate and more or less implied that he was a useless sort of creature. Well, Sir, I emphatically and entirely dissent from that suggestion. He is one of the most hardworking of people and so far as his own work is concerned, he has sufficient intelligence to understand what he is doing and what he can and should do. Give him the means, the facilities that are required, and he will produce for you everything that is wanted. Without any facilities, without practically any help, he has produced within three years no less than 3 million tons of extra food a year. With the facilities I am perfectly certain that he would be able to produce all the food that is required for feeding the millions of India.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths (Assam, European). The Honourable Member has told us of the increased area under cultivation and the resulting increased yield. Can he tell us whether there has been any substantial increase in the yield from the previously cultivated areas?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat. The figure of yield per acre? Unfortunately we have no figures for that. The only thing we can rely upon in the shape of figures are the crop-cutting experiments which have been carried out recently in respect of wheat and rice.

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena. What was the total amount of yield as a result of cultivation taken within the precincts of the New Delhi Municipality in pursuance of the Grow More Food Campaign undertaken by the officials and the Honourable Members and others?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat. I have no information on that point. But I think I did reply to a question in connection with the cultivation undertaken on the vista. I think we got something like Rs. 3,000 by the sale of the maize crop and something like Rs. 500 from the sale of the vegetables that were cultivated there.

Deputy President: Food Secretary

Mr. B. R. Sen; For one who has taken part in practically every food debate in this or the other House this debate has provided a unique experience. Such sympathy and such understanding from all sides of the House it has not been my privilege to experience before. I have however missed some very familiar features in the food debates that we have seen before. For instance, the very gentle persuasiveness of my friend Prof. Ranga, the demand of my friend, Dr. Zia Uddin for the abolishment of the Food Department for his difficulty under the present arrangements, to get rice for his pulgu and the anxiety of my friend Mr. Lawson for the fish in the Bay of Bengal and the Arabian Sea. The food administration in no country can be a success unless there is full understanding between the people and the Government. We are now fortunate in having a National Government with one of the biggest political leaders at our head, and with all the

[Mr B R Sen]

Members in the House now on our side to interpret his message, it will be surprising if we do not make rapid strides in achieving the objects we have set before us in food and agriculture.

Mr Lawson by his amendment has brought before us a very important aspect of the food administration of this country. Mr Lawson deserves the gratitude not only of this House but the people of this country for the insistence with which he has emphasised the importance of preservation of food and the measures to be adopted for preserving food. This question has agitated all sides of the House for some time. During this session we have had a series of questions and supplementary questions. During this debate we have had several speakers who have referred to the wastage and have made suggestions.

There are three points on which I have been asked to reply and they are— (1) What is the present wastage in our country? (2) To what extent we have been able to prevent losses and (3) What would be the ultimate saving if we apply all the measures that we have in view. Sir, from the way the questions have been put it seems to me that the members have rather vague ideas about the whole subject. The crop production of India is about 60 million tons. About 60 to 67 per cent of the crop is retained by the cultivators for their own consumption. About 33 to 40 per cent of the crop they bring to the market in small parcels throughout the year. It is difficult therefore for anybody to say what is the wastage which is going on in the houses of the millions of cultivators of our country.

Some of the members have asked why it should be difficult to ascertain the losses in this country when it has been done in other countries. I was interested to see what was the position in other countries, particularly U.S.A. and U.K. As Honourable Members are aware, U.S.A. is one of the most advanced countries in the application of statistical science. It is also one of the most advanced countries in the application of insecticides and in the construction of modern and scientific structures for housing the grains. There is a book before me by Richard Cotton, one of the great authorities on the subject of grain preservation. The only information that he can give about the extent of losses in that country is in these terms—

"It has been estimated that as a result of their feeding activities their presence in grain and cereal products and the cost of methods employed to destroy them, this group of insects exacts a yearly toll of at least $300,000,000 in the United States alone."

$300,000,000 in terms of rupees would be about Rs. 100 crores. If the loss in India is about 3 million tons of cereals, in rupees it will work out at 90 crores. Thus even with all the application of science the United States has not been able to conserve foodgrains to the extent that the Honourable Members here might think. In the case of the United Kingdom it was only in 1946 that a Committee was appointed under Prof Munroe of the Imperial College of Science and Technology to make a survey of the whole position. Honourable Members will be interested to hear what that survey brought out.

"The most important result of the survey is that it demonstrates the occurrence of infestation throughout all the industries producing, housing, transporting, trading in, manufacturing or using cereals and cereal products. To those who have had experience of infestation in other industries who have endeavoured to assess the extent of infestation in them and have now been privileged to carry out this survey with the co-operation of the grain industry the outstanding feature of the survey is the fact that infestation is no longer concealed."

I have not found in any publication relating to grains in the United Kingdom any reference as to the extent of losses. Sir, it is difficult for any administration to find out the losses in the country. This figure of 3 million tons for India is only an arbitrary figure and we cannot give any more exact figure than this.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: How will you calculate on losses?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The point I was making was that it is not possible in any country to say with any exactitude what the grain losses at any particular moment are Diwan Chaman Lal: Would it not be correct to say that the losses here would be greater than the losses in a country like the United States of America, which has gone in for modern systems of preservation?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The House would like to know what we are doing or what we propose to do with a view to prevent wastage in this country and to have a few figures in order to understand the question in its proper perspective. In the United Kingdom where there are warehouses and silos constructed on up-to-date lines, this is what the survey revealed

"The following data, obtained from the examination of the various consignments in the port warehouses and graneries seen during the survey, indicate the extent and nature of the infestation under the three main methods of storage. Of 3,316 consignments seen, 46 per cent were infested. The infestation was distributed as follows, silos 31 per cent, bagged grain 59 per cent, and bulk grain 75 per cent. In the general warehouses at the ports, 65 per cent of the consignments of feeding stuffs were infested, and in the mill warehouses 60 per cent.

The survey was carried out by one of the best authorities on the subject, and there can be no doubt about the correctness of the results. If this is the picture in the United Kingdom and the United States of America, the House will not be surprised if I am not in a position to state here and now what is the wastage in the country.

Sri V. C. Vellingiri Gounder: The Honourable Member mentioned silos. Does it refer to cattle food or human food?

Mr. B. R. Sen: Cereals of all kinds.

As regards saving, the corollary is that it will not be possible to say with any exactitude what the real saving would be. Honourable Members will ask why it is not possible for government to ascertain the extent of losses in government storage. So far as the Central Food Department is concerned, there are three depots established at Karachi, Calcutta and Bombay functioning under their auspices. I have got a paper before me which gives a survey of losses in our storage over the last few months. According to this survey a total loss of 30 tons of indigenous and 34 tons of imported foodgrains has occurred at the Karachi depot since April 1945, during which period the total quantity handled there has been 4,24,394 tons. At the Calcutta depot where 1,32,300 tons were handled, only one ton was lost. At the Bombay depot up to now no case of losses has come to notice. I do not know to what extent these figures can be relied upon, but it is clear that on a restricted scale it is possible to reduce losses to a certain extent. The survey I have just referred to makes out that the losses in these three depots since April 1945 have amounted to only 0.085 per cent as against 5 per cent for all-India, and the saving has amounted to about Rs 95 lakhs. Some members have said that if India had saved the 3 million tons which she annually loses, India would not have been compelled to import. The whole argument, if I may say so is futile. India could not possibly have saved the loss of this quantity whatever attempts India might have made in this connection.

I should also mention that even the scientific study in this subject is incomplete. One of the greatest causes of wastage is the interplay of the factors of humidity and temperature. The survey Report of Professor Munroe states

"A study of this problem of the interplay of these factors, humidity and temperature," as Prof. Munroe states "is that the infestation of grains is too little advanced to permit of an exact assessment of how it can be controlled in grain stores to reduce infestation."

The problem in India is even bigger than the problem in countries like the United States and the United Kingdom. I understand from what I have read that in cold climates the infestation starts within the storehouses— it does not start in the fields, but in countries of moderate temperature like India, the infestation starts in the fields. So even before the cultivator has taken the grain into the storehouse, the infestation is already affecting the grain. That is one of the factors which make control of infestation in India more difficult than in countries in the west. Again in India, as I have said the grain is very largely stored by the small cultivators— millions of small cultivators. There is therefore no sovereign remedy for this wastage in India. If the House will permit me, I will again refer to Prof. Munroe's report in this connection.

"A survey shows clearly the intensity of the amount of infestation varies with the conditions of trade and the conditions prevailing in grain stores and that the most remedy is already at hand in the rather practical form of improved hygiene or cleanliness."

This is the simplest and for conditions in India the most effective remedy. It is easy to say that producers should store under hygienic conditions, but this is a matter which is closely bound up with the living conditions. It cannot be done by merely issuing instructions or propaganda leaflets. It is a matter of education, it is a matter of raising the level of the economic conditions of the people. It is therefore clear that if the House expects that by the time we come to the next budget session I shall be able to get up and say that I have reduced losses of grain in this country by 50 per cent they will make a mistake.

Rai Bahadur Devendra Mohan Bhattacharyya. May I submit one thing that generally in rural areas farmers allow a rebate of 2½ seers per maund if one year has passed and that the amount is deducted from the storekeepers' Otherwise he is responsible for that.

Mr. B. R. Sen: That only shows that traders in this country take losses for granted, so long as they do not suffer any financial loss over the transaction, they are content. But the problem here is different. We have got to conserve food. We are not concerned with what profit the individual traders make. The House will no doubt ask me, what government is going to do in this matter? So far as the cultivators are concerned, we think that there should be sustained effort on the part of the provincial and state governments to educate the producers in this matter as far as possible. We have started training courses for officers of Provinces and States. Several courses have already been held. We propose to supplement these by regional courses so that a larger number of people can be trained with reference to local conditions. We have asked the universities to include study of grain preservation as one of the subjects. In these ways, if sustained effort is maintained we think, in a reasonable time, the losses could to some extent be reduced.

Diwan Chaman Lal: May I interrupt my Honourable friend? Has not Government considered the possibility, as was pointed out by me in my speech, of considering the plan adopted by Canada of preservation of grain on a co-operative basis by having co-operative elevators? The difficulty will not arise, the farmer will not have the grain, he will get a certificate and he will get an advance and the grain will go straightaway to these elevators, cleaned and preserved.

Mr. B. R. Sen: I shall come to that point a little later. So far as traders are concerned, we have done one thing. We have advised the provincial governments that they should introduce a system of licensed warehouses that traders will be given permits to trade in grains only when they have got warehouses up to certain standards. We have also made available to traders who have shown any interest, modern designs for new constructions and in this way we think some progress will be made.

Mr. Chaman Lal has referred to the development of what is called the over-normal granary. This has engaged our attention for some time past. It is, however, a matter which will require sustained study and condetable propaganda on our part. This would mean a fundamental change in the trading methods of this country. We know that this has been tried with success in South Africa, in the United States and in Canada. We should study this subject and see if we can introduce the system in this country.

So far as the Government storage is concerned, I have already said that one of the things that government has done in the past two years is to construct new storage. I have given the figures—12 lakhs of tons of storage has been built by provincial governments, 11½ lakhs tons of storage has been built by the state governments, the Government of India has also constructed about 1,95,000 tons storage at the main ports. The question of government storage is assuming added significance at the present moment. We have just received the report of the Krishnamachari Committee which was asked to go into the whole question of stabilisation of agricultural prices in the postwar period. One of the recommendations they have made is that a machinery should be set up for stabilising prices and in order to do that, it should be prepared to buy when prices are falling beyond a minimum limit and to sell when prices are rising above the maximum limit. That would require provision of storage for nearly two million tons.

Apart from that, there is also the proposal for building up an emergency reserve for preventing famine in future. This year we have had a bitter experience and we do not want that experience to be repeated. We must build up sufficient reserves in this country. I may say that the Policy Committee which sat in 1943 and which produced the blue-print on which we are working for the last three years suggested that we should build up a reserve of half a million tons. When they made that suggestion they were, however, not thinking of prevention of famines—they were thinking of the maintenance of price structure and keeping under control speculation. But even that comparatively small reserve of 500,000 tons we have been unable to build up in spite of our most strenuous efforts during the last three years. At only one stage it was at the end of 1944 we had in our hands what we could call a reserve of 120,000 tons, at the end of that year we had a serious

S P M shortage developing in the United Provinces and we had to disperse all that 120,000 tons to meet the situation there.

We have not yet given full consideration to the report of the Krishnamachari Committee. It is possible that the famine reserve and the reserve for the maintenance of stable agricultural prices would not be separate but would be the same. Even then we shall have to take up the construction of storage for nearly two million tons of food grains. That would give us added responsibility for devising ways and means to prevent losses in those storage godowns. Government must therefore pay intensive attention to this subject in future. I can say that the Food Department since 1944 when they established the Directorate of Storage has been doing everything possible in the matter. We cannot give you the exact results. It is not a physical possibility. But we have already made a start and we feel that we have already achieved some results.

One member asked if Government procured three million tons only this year, what had happened to the rest of the marketable surplus. As the Honourable Member knows, Government procurement does not cover the entire marketable surplus. Government collect only a small proportion of it, the rest is handled by the trade.

Mr Masani raised the question whether Government can give him an assurance that there will be no cut in the ration during the next two months in different parts of the country. He reinforced his remarks by the argument that the ration is already low and that the Food Ministers' Conference held at New Delhi passed a Resolution that in no circumstances should there be an all-India cut in ration.

Mr. Deputy President: How long will the Honourable Member take?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I shall take another twenty minutes.

An Honourable Member: One hour may be given to him tomorrow.

[6th Nov 1946]

Mr. Deputy President: All the days are full. I do not mind sitting ten minutes more if the Honourable Member will finish by then. He has spoken for 20 minutes already. If the House is agreeable I will sit.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths: This is an extremely important subject and I would suggest that the Honourable Member should be allowed to make a full statement to the House.

Mr. B. R. Sen: I shall try to finish as quickly as possible. I referred to the assurance asked for by Mr. Masani. It is not possible for me to give any such assurance. We have now entered the most critical stage of the year. We are now in the last two months of the crop year. We have still got a deficit of 515,000 tons, without which there will be a major breakdown in the food administration of the country. In some parts of the country, the ration is already very low, of the 12 ounces allowed, people are not getting more than 6 or 7 ounces. During the months of November and December we need very much more than 515,000 tons to maintain the full ration scale, but if we get this we shall be able to save a major breakdown.

The Honourable the Food Member recently paid a visit to the Punjab and succeeded in persuading them agree to make available 60,000 tons of rice in November and December. We have also heard from our representative in Washington that in November and December the United States is likely to ship another 110,000 tons. That is all we have before us in order to cover the deficit. How we shall meet the balance we do not know. Mr. Masani has suggested various devices. We shall have no objection to offering a bonus at the end of the crop year just as Madras has done but there is this danger that the bonus may raise expectations in the minds of the cultivators that they would get the same higher price for the new crop. If the Provincial Governments make it clear to the cultivators that the grant of a bonus at the end of a crop year does not mean that the bonus will be added to the price next year, we shall have no objection. In fact, apart from Madras, Bengal has also adopted this device for procuring their aus crop. An announcement to that effect has been made a few days ago. As regards offering consumer goods, this expedient has been tried in two provinces, United Provinces and Bihar. I do not know with what success. There is a danger in that also. If the cultivators feel that they can get consumer goods in exchange for foodgrains, then they may hold back their foodgrains till they get their consumer goods and Honourable Members know that there is a great shortage of consumer goods in this country.

As regards the proposal for a differential ration according to income, this is an expedient which I believe was discussed some time ago in Bombay and probably the Honourable Member himself knows with what result. We do not think it is possible administratively to introduce differential ration according to incomes. It is the same as the means test for other purposes that has been tried in the United Kingdom and other countries, which has not been successful.

We have had two extraordinary statements from two prominent members of the House, Dr. Zia Uddin and my friend Mr. Siddiqi, that there is no famine in the country and the famine is only in the archives of the Secretariat. I know that my old friend Mr. Siddiqi who was with me in Oxford years ago is a man of ideas and I am not surprised that this is one of his ideas. But I cannot understand how my Honourable friend the ~~now~~ Vice Chancellor can entertain such an idea. If only he had taken the trouble of going to the South and seen the conditions there, he would not have made that statement.

Dr. Zia Uddin gave us a discourse about the relation of currency to food prices. I am sorry I have not been able to follow his elaborate discourse. But we have studied this subject. It is our business to study this subject. There is a Price Advisory Committee on which we have representatives of Finance, Food, Agriculture and other Departments, and representatives of producers and traders, and on the recommendations of this committee we function.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Can I have a copy of the terms of reference of this Committee?

Mr. B. E. Sen: I shall deal with this question of prices in a little more detail in reply to another Honourable Member. Dr. Zia Uddin also said that in the United Provinces cultivators are not allowed to bring their own produce to the rationed areas. I interrupted him and said that it was not correct. I have now the authority for saying that it is not correct. People in the United Provinces are allowed to bring their own produce to the rationed areas for two months' requirements, against the cancellation of their coupons for that period.

Sir, I shall now pass on to the speech of Mr. Chaman Lall. He has returned from a very useful visit and I should like to add my own tribute for the way in which he performed his difficult task. I believe Mr. Chaman Lall had to get off his plane more than once in order to argue with and convince the Argentine Government. I certainly think that Mr. Chaman Lall deserves the gratitude of the House for the tenacity and persistence with which he completed the negotiations.

Mr. Chaman Lall has made some very important suggestions. One is that for the future we should try and enter into long-term contracts with countries like Australia and Argentina as the United Kingdom has done with Canada. We also have been thinking on these lines. Already a long-term contract with Australia is under tentative discussion, though we have not had my official discussion on the subject. We shall take up the suggestion of the Honourable Member as regards Argentina as soon as we get the report of his mission.

Mr. Ebrahim Jaffer raised one point which seemed to show that there was some misunderstanding. He said that the basic plan has been abandoned. That is not correct. The basic plan exists. What we have done is to supplement and reinforce the basic plan with a monthly food budget. What happens under the basic plan is that at the beginning of the crop year we get the surpluses and the deficits of the States and the Provinces and make allocations and then we leave it to the supplying and receiving provinces to get their allocations as best as they can. This year as the resources of the provinces and states became more and more slender, we found it necessary to keep a stricter watch over the stocks of the provinces. We introduced the system of monthly budgets. Under this system at the end of the month, we know what stocks are held by the different provinces, and we aim at keeping in each province a stock of six months requirements as far as we can. The system on which we are working does not mean the abandonment of the basic plan. The monthly budget was introduced under pressure of circumstances and as soon as this pressure is removed, we shall revert to the old system. I may say for the information of the Honourable Member that when we came to frame the Rabi plan in April this year, the only surplus declared was 40,000 tons of wheat by Sind and 30,000 tons of wheat by Bahawalpore while the requirements exceeded 900,000 tons. So, we could not possibly at that time frame an effective basic plan. Since then we have prepared a basic plan and have, as I have said, re-enforced it by monthly food budgets.

Sir, Mr. Reddhar raised the important question of prices. I find I have not the time to go into it in any detail but I have just now—a few minutes ago—got the summary of the recommendations of the Krishnamachari Committee. I would refer him to paragraphs 21, 22 and 29 of that summary. There it is stated that a fair price should be paid to the producer. The determination of a fair price entails calculation of the costs of the different items which enter into costs of production and actual living in different parts of the country. These must vary widely. Crops produced and several other factors can only be estimated by detailed inquiries, especially planned and conducted with this object. It is therefore necessary to take early steps to create a suitable machinery for the collection of data relating to these costs. They further say that in the transition period minimum prices should be fixed at the level of fair parity prices I may say that though we have not got necessarily reliable data for the determination of agricultural prices, we have got before us the authoritative statement of the Bengal Famine Inquiry Commission I would ask Mr Reddiar to refer to paragraph 7 of the second volume of that report in which the Commission say

"We think it is clear that it should be the common object of all Governments concerned to secure as early as possible as supply conditions in the transition period permit, that the prices both of rice and wheat in different parts of the country should be brought down to a normal parity with the level of rice prices at present prevailing in Madras and Sind"

It is thus clear that the Commission, on full consideration, took the Madras level to be the level which all Governments in this country should work up to in the postwar period So, it is not that we are following an arbitrary method All materials on the subject of prices have been minutely examined by the Honourable the Food Member himself I think it is hardly worthy of Mr Reddiar to suggest that the Honourable Food Member has merely accepted what I have placed before him The Honourable Food Member has got his own judgment and he has gone through all these papers and he has come to the conclusion which he announced on the floor of the House

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar. Is it open to the Honourable Member to say that it is not worthy of Mr Reddiar to make such remarks? The Honourable Member has used an unparliamentary expression and he should withdraw it

Mr. B. R. Sen: I did not mean anything more than this that the Honourable Member should have confidence in his own leader I may be pardoned if I used language which has hurt his feelings

Mr. Deputy President: Will the Honourable Member withdraw the word 'unworthy' which he used in connection with Mr Reddiar?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I withdraw

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Has not the Government of Madras written to the Government of India to increase the price of rice by half a rupee per maund and the price of millets by 3 annas per maund?

Mr. B. R. Sen: They have written to us Not only Madras but some other Governments also have written to us But we have got to look at the question as a whole

I shall now refer to the points raised by Mr Banerjee about Bengal The position in Bengal can be easily understood The crop production this year as announced by the Government of Bengal is 97 million tons This is slightly below what Bengal needs for her current consumption But it was hoped that with the reduced scale of rations all round, the Bengal Government would be able somehow to scrape through The pre-war average production in Bengal was about 96 million tons including imports The average imports that Bengal got amounted to 125 to 135 thousand tons The imports thus formed a very small percentage of the total supply that Bengal needed for her consumption It therefore follows that the distribution position in Bengal cannot be stabilised till the procurement of the internal surplus is placed on a satisfactory basis The Honourable Food Member said in his speech that about 25 million people in Bengal are either under statutory ration or are under controlled distribution The actual figure is 6 million under statutory ration and about 19 million under controlled distribution If you take direct responsibility for feeding 25 million people out of 60 million, then you must have under your control about 40 per cent of your total production That is, Bengal should have had under their control about 38 million tons out of their own production if they were to feed 25 million of their population adequately Actually the quantity procured has amounted only to about 680,000 tons, one sixth of what the Bengal Government needed It is therefore quite clear why the position is so unstable in Bengal We are of the view that there is no intrinsic shortage of supply in Bengal Some of my Honourable friends might disagree with me I can only go upon the figures supplied by the Bengal Government. Mr. Banerjee referred to the high prices and to the fact that Government exercise so little control over the market. The Government can exercise control only if Government have got large stocks with which they can play the market. At present the supply position is such that neither the Government of Bengal nor the Government of India can find the stocks for the purpose.

Then, Sir, a large portion of the population in Bengal who are under controlled rationing are not getting the benefit of the scheme. Out of 19 million people under controlled distribution only six million are getting their supplies more or less regularly. When you have got such a vast number of people who are not assured of their food from day to day, who do not know where they will get the next meal, or whether they will get it at all, the natural psychological atmosphere is created from out of which panic arises. Whenever anything happens, such as a debate in the Central Assembly on the situation in Bengal or in India generally, there is panic, and when there is panic, the producers hold back their stock from the markets which in its turn intensifies local shortages. Thus goes the vicious circle. That is a position for which, I, for one, cannot find any remedy until the Bengal Government build up sufficient reserves in their hands which they can use to influence the market and so improve and remodel their procurement arrangements as to succeed in getting a much larger proportion of the surplus from the hands of the producers.

My Honourable friend from Assam, Sreejuti Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri, found me guilty of callousness and lack of sympathy. I can assure him that he is wrong. Now, Sir, only a few days ago we had a visit from the Premier of his province. We had a long discussion on the points mentioned by the Honourable Member. Regarding salt, it is not correct to say that Assam is welded to Bengal. Salt can now be purchased in the market independently by Assam. We told the Premier of Assam that he should make his own arrangements to buy salt in the Calcutta market. It is true that the salt price has gone up from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6 since the Government of India took off their control a few months ago but it is now entirely in the hands of traders and since some Honourable Members think that traders will control the market better, well they have the benefit of this instance of salt in Bengal and Assam to ponder upon.

With regard to the complaint about dearth of sugar, I may say that the production in the country is 20 per cent less than in previous years. In previous years we used to get imports from Java in large quantities whenever there was a shortage in the country. Imports from Java we cannot expect now. Moreover there has been a change in the habits of people. In rural areas, certain classes of people used to take gur exclusively. Now on account of a temporary rise in their income, they prefer sugar to gur. This change of habit has brought in a greater pressure on the available stock of sugar in the country.

Sreejuti Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, I wish to ask

Mr. B. R. Sen: I have no time to give in. I think I have covered most of the points that have been raised in the debate. India has had a catastrophe of an unprecedented character. Even in a country like India where agriculture is a gamble in rains, it is seldom that we get a failure both of rabi and kharif crops. The shortage amounted to about seven million tons. The only reason why we have been able to get through this unprecedented calamity is the discipline of the people and the alertness of the administrations. I am sure, Sir, we can hope for a great future for this country when the people of this country can show such discipline under such trying circumstances.

Mr. Deputy President: The original motion was.

"That the food situation in India be taken into consideration."

[Mr Deputy President]

To which an amendment has been moved

That at the end of the original Motion the following be added

and that the particular attention of Government be directed towards the matter of losses in storage,"

The question is

That at the end of the original Motion the following be added

and that the particular attention of Government be directed towards the matter of losses in storage,"

The motion was adopted

Mr. Deputy President. The question is attention of Government be directed towards the matter of losses in storage'

The motion was adopted

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Thursday, 7th November, 1946

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at eleven of the Clock, Mr President (The Honourable Mr G V Mavalankar) in the Chair

MEMBER SWORN

Mr Hugh Weightman, C S I, C I E, M L A (Government of India Nominated Official)

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(a) ORAL ANSWERS

ENQUIRY INTO CIRCUMSTANCES OF DEATH OF MAJOR DONALD, POLITICAL AGENT WAZIRISTAN

274. *Sardar Mangal Singh : Will the Honourable the Member for External Affairs please state

(a) whether Government have made any enquiries into the circumstances of the death of the late Major Donald, Political Agent, South Waziristan,

(b) the right version of Major Donald's death whether he was killed by someone or he himself committed suicide, and

(c) if he was really killed by someone, what action Government have taken to bring the offenders to book.

Mr H Weightman : (a) Yes, Sir

(b) Death was self-inflicted. The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Gazette Extraordinary, dated the 12th October 1946 of which I place a copy on the table

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS DEPARTMENT

New Delhi, the 10th October 1946

No 286 A.—The Government of India have received with deepest regret the news of the tragic death on the 25th September, 1946 of Major J O S Donald, Political Agent, South Waziristan

Major Donald was a son of Sir John Donald, a previous Chief Commissioner of the North West Frontier Province, and his name is recalled as a household word among the tribesmen of the North-West Frontier. Major Donald had been a member of the Indian Political Service since 1931 and served in various capacities on the Frontier. As a servant of the State Major Donald followed worthily in his father's footsteps. Last June he was the victim of an unfortunate incident and was taken prisoner and held captive for 10 days by the Shabir Khel Mahsuds. After his release he returned to his post by his own wish and in the confidence that this way lay the path of duty. His presence was largely responsible for the conclusion of a settlement with the tribe, and with the settlement has dawned a renewed realization that Major Donald was a true and just man who had earned tribal respect. But the strain had proved too great and has ended in the tragedy of self-inflicted death.

The Government of India can ill afford the loss of such an experienced and distinguished Frontier officer.

ILL-TREATMENT OF INDIAN PRISONERS CONVICTED IN SATYAGRAHA MOVEMENT
AGAINST GHETTO BILL IN SOUTH AFRICA

275. *Sardar Mangal Singh : Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) the number of Indians in South Africa who have been arrested and convicted in the satyagraha movement started against the Ghetto Act, and

(b) how the Indian prisoners are being treated in jail, whether Government have made any enquiries about the ill-treatment meted out to the Indians in South Africa through His Majesty's Government or through any other agency?

Mr. H Weightman : (a) According to a telegram received from the Passive Resistance Council on the 21st October 1946 the total number of convictions up to that date was 1,269

(b) In August and September last the Passive Resistance Council made certain allegations of ill-treatment of the resisters by the jail authorities. The Union Minister of Justice who had ordered some investigations in the matter and also made a personal inspection of jail conditions stated that these allegations were unfounded. It was however reported that as a result of an official inspection better treatment of political prisoners had been recommended. As no complaints were voiced later it was presumed that the condition of passive resisters in jail had improved. On the 4th November a report was published in the press that the Natal Indian Congress had again complained to the Minister regarding unsatisfactory conditions in jail and harsh treatment by warders. The Government of India have not received information on this latest allegation. They receive reports usually from the Secretary to their High Commissioner in South Africa, who is still there.

Sardar Mangal Singh : Is the information of the Government of India derived only from the Secretary to the High Commissioner or do they get reports from the Union Government itself?

Mr. H Weightman : No, Sir. As I have said, we get this report from the Secretary to our High Commissioner who still maintains an office there.

ATTENDANCE OF MEMBERS OF THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY

276 *Sardar Mangal Singh : Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state

(a) when the inaugural session of the Constituent Assembly will be held, and what its likely programme is,

(b) whether any arrangements have been made for the members from sections A, B and C to meet separately, if so, where they will meet, and

(c) whether the members of the Constituent Assembly will be paid any daily allowance, if so, what?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan : (a) The inaugural session of the Constituent Assembly is scheduled to be held on the 9th of December. Its programme is a matter to be decided by the Assembly itself.

(b) Provisional arrangements have been made for the Assembly and its Sections to meet in New Delhi.

(c) It has been provisionally decided that members of the Assembly will be paid a daily allowance of Rs. 30 plus a conveyance allowance of Rs. 15, these being the rates admissible to members of the Central Legislative Assembly. It would, however, be for the Constituent Assembly itself finally to decide what the rates should be.

Lt.-Col. Dr. J. C. Chatterjee : May I know if Members of this House will be allowed the privilege of witnessing the inaugural session of the Constituent Assembly?

Mr. President : I believe that will depend upon the decision of the Constituent Assembly itself.

Sardar Mangal Singh: I presume Section 'A' will meet in the Library, may I know where Sections B and C will meet?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I have said they will meet in New Delhi.

DISABILITIES OF DOMICILED INDIANS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA (CANADA)

277. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) whether it is a fact that Indians domiciled in the Province of British Columbia (Canada) suffer from a number of disabilities, if so, the nature of their disabilities, and

(b) what steps Government have taken to remove those disabilities, and with what results?

Mr. H. Weightman: (1) Yes, Sir. In British Columbia the Indians who number about 1,300 are denied the municipal, provincial and federal franchise. As a result of this they are debarred from certain public offices and occupations. It is understood that the following are some of their disabilities which follow from their disqualification as voters—

They cannot serve as trustees in any municipal, district or rural school or hold any municipal office or serve as jurors, they are debarred from employment by contractors for the Public Works Department and for the sale of Government timber. They cannot be registered as pharmaceutical chemists, they are also debarred from holding foreshore leases or from holding Engineer's certificates under the Public Inspection Act.

(b) Government of India have made representations from time to time to His Majesty's Government but without any success so far. Government continue to pursue the matter.

Sardar Mangal Singh: The same answer was given to me two years ago, may I know if the Indian Government have made any special representations in the matter?

Mr. H. Weightman: Yes, Sir. I understand the last reminder on this subject was sent only a week ago.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: May I know how many Indians are there in British Columbia?

Mr. H. Weightman: I gave the figure,—1,300.

INDIAN DELEGATION TO UNITED NATIONS ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

278. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state

(a) the personnel of the Indian Delegation to the United Nations Economic and Social Council,

(b) what instructions have been given to this Delegation, and

(c) whether this Delegation will make any commitments on our behalf without any reference to this House?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) India's delegation to the last session of the United Nations Economic and Social Council, which began on the 11th September and ended on the 3rd October 1946, was composed of

(1) Representative—Sir A. Ramaswami Mudahar, who until January 1947 is President of the Council in his personal capacity, in the event, Sir Ramaswami was unable to attend the session.

(2) Alternate Representative (in Sir Ramaswami's absence)—Sir G. S. Bajpai, Agent-General for India in the United States of America.

(3) Alternate Representative and Adviser—Mr. S. K. Kirpalani, Indian Trade Commissioner in New York.

(4) Adviser—Professor B. P. Adarkar.

(5) Secretary—Mr S Sen, Officer-in-Charge of the Government of India's Liaison Unit at the United Nations Headquarters

(b) It is not at all times in the public interest to publish the instructions which Government give to their Delegations to International Conferences, and I regret I am unable to meet the Honorable Member's request for information

(c) Having regard to the functions and powers of the Economic and Social Council as defined in Article 62 of the United Nations Charter, it is not clear what the Honorable Member has in mind. As already stated, the session of the Council has terminated and I hope shortly to place on the table of the House the report of the Delegation

APPOINTMENT OF AN INDIAN AN ECONOMIC ADVISER TO GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

279. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Pahlwal : Will the Honorable the Commerce Member be pleased to state whether any steps are being taken to secure the services of an Indian Economist in place of the present Economic Adviser to the Government of India whose period of appointment is to expire in January next year ?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar : The attention of the Honorable Member is invited to the reply given by Sir Muhammad Azizul Haque, then Commerce Member to part (c) of the Starred Question No. 501, asked by Professor N. G. Ranga, in this House on the 25th February 1946. The position stated therein remains unchanged.

COUNTRIES TO WHICH EXPORT OF SUGAR AND CLOTH IS PERMITTED FROM INDIA

280. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Pahlwal : Will the Honorable the Commerce Member please state

(a) the names of the countries, if any, to which the export of sugar and cloth is permitted from India,

(b) the amount of each of these articles permitted to each country, separately, and

(c) the steps which Government have taken so far to prevent unauthorised export of these articles through smuggling ?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar : (a) and (b) I lay two statements on the table

(c) The administrative machinery at ports and land customs stations provides for prevention of unauthorised exports and the Defence of India Rule under which the export control regulations have been issued and which has been continued in force by Ordinance XX of 1946, provides penalties against violation of the Rules

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that those who are permitted to export these articles are making enormous profits owing to very high prices ruling in the countries to which these goods are exported, will Government consider the desirability of retaining these profits for the State by taking up these exports themselves instead of permitting private exports?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The question of the prices at which these articles should be sold to these countries and to what extent the State can take advantage of it is under examination by Government.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I did not want to know about the articles which were in dealings between the State and State, i.e., between the Government of India and other States—that I leave to the Government to settle in the best way they like—but with regard to private trade in those articles in which presumably there is a very high profit from the other markets, will not Government consider the desirability of keeping those profits for the State by themselves doing the exports?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: If the transactions are between businessmen of this country and the businessmen of another country there are considerable difficulties in the way, but Government will examine the suggestion.

Sardar Mangal Singh: May I know whether any amount of sugar has been exported during the last year to other agencies apart from embassies? I understand that some sugar is exported to some embassies located in Iran and other Middle East countries. May I know whether any amount of sugar has been exported apart from that?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The only sugar which is exported is so far as I am aware mentioned in the statements which I am laying on the table.

Sardar Mangal Singh: The statement is very small. The Honourable Member can read it out.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: So far as Persian Gulf is concerned it is 7,741 tons and so far as other neighbouring countries are concerned it is 9,712 tons—total 17,453 tons.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: May I know from the Honourable Member whether it is refined sugar or raw sugar?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: That again would require examination of the detailed figures and I want notice of the question.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: May I ask whether the Government are contemplating that the negotiations for sale should be between the two Governments and not through the businessmen on either side?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: As I told you the whole question is under examination but there are considerable difficulties after decontrolling these articles. At present businessmen of this country deal with businessmen of other countries so far as these articles are concerned and Government finds there are considerable difficulties in the way, but the question is under examination.

Sri N. V. Gadgil: May I know from the Honourable Member whether exports—whether of sugar or textile—are transferable?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: They are not.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: In view of the fact that stocks of sugar in this country are insufficient to meet the requirements even of this country, will the Government consider the desirability of stopping exports of sugar altogether?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The quantity exported is very small, and it is necessary to attend to the requirements of our neighbours also. The quantity now exported is only a fraction of what used to be exported before.

Mr. Vadialal Lalubhai: Is it not a fact that many cloth permits are being sold in Bombay and other cities?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Government are not aware of the sales, but if any specific cases are brought to the notice of the Government, Government will undertake very minute enquiries into the matter.

Mr. B. P. Jhunjhunwala: What is the quantity of sugar exported?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I have already given the figures in the statement which is laid on the table.

BOMBING OF TRIBAL AREAS IN WAZIRISTAN

†281. *Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state

(a) when the last bombing from the air took place in the tribal areas across the Western Frontier,

(b) the reasons for such bombing and the loss of life and property that took place in consequence,

(c) the expenditure incurred in such bombing, and

(d) the relation of the Frontier tribes with the present Government of India?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) Between the 1st August and the 10th September 1946 when the villages of the Birmi Khel, a sub-section of the Shahi Khel Mahsuds were subjected to an proscription in connection with the kidnapping of the Political Agent South Waziristan and members of his staff

(b) A copy of the official communique issued on the termination of operations is laid on the table for the Honourable Member's information.

(c) It is not possible to state exactly the cost of these operations, but at a rough estimate it may be taken to be about Rs. 1 lakhs.

(d) The relations of the Frontier tribes, as a whole, with Government are friendly. Government have nothing but goodwill towards the Frontier tribes.

Press Communique

In view of recent public statements about the bombing of the Shahi Khel Mahsuds in Waziristan the Government of India consider it desirable that the facts relating to the operations should be made known.

2. For some time past the Shahi Khel have been demanding a one-sixth share of the monies and other benefits (e.g. controlled commodities such as cloth, iron, sugar, etc.) accruing to the Mahsuds as a whole through Government. This demand is opposed by the rest of the Mahsuds who are in excess of the hereditary share to which the Shahi Khel are entitled. Early in June the Political Agent South Waziristan informed the Chief Malik of the Shahi Khel that he would summon the Shahi Khel Jirga to Razmak to discuss the dispute. On the 19th June the Shahi Khel assembled at a village on the Indus. Razmak had to discuss among themselves matters relating to the forthcoming Jirga. It transpired later that after the gathering the Birmi Khel section decided without the knowledge of the rest of the Shahi Khel to kidnap a Government official in order to emphasize their grievances. In furtherance of this resolve on the 21st June a powerful gang hid in ambush for the Assistant Garrison Engineer who was expected to travel from Razmak to Tardoba. It so happened that the Political Agent travelled on the same day and it was his lorry which ran into the ambush. The lorry was brought to a halt by a road block and very heavy fire was opened on it. Three of the Political Agent's tribal escort were wounded but no real test force is possible owing to the treachery of the Shahi Khel villagers and Khissadhis in the vicinity. The gang closed in looted the lorry and kidnapped Major Donald Dr. Nazu Ahmed the Agency Surgeon and Mr. Abdul Aziz Sterno together with the P. A. whom they carried off to their villages about 7 miles from the road.

3. As soon as news of the outrage reached Razmak the Resident in Waziristan despatched the chief Shahi Khel Malik to the Birmi Khel with instructions to effect the release of the captives. He also summoned the full Mahsud Jirga to Razmak. This assembled on the 24th June and the Maliks were reminded that in accordance with their agreements with Government the whole Mahsud tribe would ultimately be held responsible for the offence if they failed to co-operate in securing the unconditional release of Major Donald and his companions. The Mahsud Jirga strongly condemned the outrage which they regarded as a stain on their tribal honour and promised unanimously to proceed to the Birmi Khel and not to return until they had released the captives.

4 The Bromi Khel, however, proved truculent and demanded a sum of Rs 60,000 and a promise of immunity from punishment as the price of releasing their prisoners. As a guarantee of immunity they also demanded that the Mahsud Malikhs should deposit with them 50 magazine rifles, or in lieu, a further sum of Rs 50,000. These terms were conveyed to the Resident who in accordance with established policy declined to pay any ransom or to make any promise of immunity. At the request of the Malikhs he however advanced them the sum of Rs 1,10,000 making it clear that this would be recovered from them as a matter of course and that if they made it over to the Bromi Khel they would do so on their own responsibility and not on behalf of Government as ransom. Later it transpired that the whole of this sum was in fact handed over to the Bromi Khel and ultimately, after some further negotiations between the Mahsud Malikhs and the Bromi Khel Major Donald and his companions were released and brought into Razmak on the 2nd July.

5 It now became necessary to call the Shabi Khel to account for the offence. Although actually carried out by the Bromi Khel section it had been committed in territory for the protection of which the Shabi Khel as a whole is responsible and had been actively aided by the treachery of Shabi Khel villagers and Khasiulais. The Shabi Khel Junga was therefore summoned to Razmak to discuss reparation with the Resident. Despite several extensions of the date originally fixed the Shabi Khel refused to come in and it became gradually clear that their object was to evade responsibility for the offence in the hope that punishment would be spread over the whole Mahsud tribe. Other sections of the Mahsuds however made it unmistakably clear that they were determined that the Shabi Khel alone and the Bromi Khel in particular should be punished. Leading Mahsud Malikhs in fact advised the Resident that unless Government took action without further delay, against the Bromi Khel serious trouble would probably break out among the remaining Mahsuds who were becoming apprehensive that punishment would be visited on them.

6 It was accordingly recommended by the Agent to the Governor (General) that the following terms should be intimated to the Shabi Khel and that failure on their part to comply within a stated time should be followed by destructive air proscription, after the usual warning of certain areas in Shabi Khel country—

(1) The repayment of the money (Rs 1,10,000) received by the Bromi Khel from the Mahsud Malikhs. Although this sum was recoverable from the Mahsuds as a whole failure to attempt to recover it from the Bromi Khel would not only have put a premium on kidnapping but would have invited hostility from other Mahsud sections who felt strongly that punishment should fall on the Bromi Khel or at most on the Shabi Khel.

(2) The payment of Rs 20,000 as compensation for property looted and damaged and 10 persons wounded in the commission of the offence.

(3) A fine of 50 arsenal made and 200 other 303 magazine rifles.

(4) The surrender of 20 Shabi Khel hostages (as an earnest of compliance with the terms and of future good behaviour).

7 After full consideration these terms were sanctioned by Government on the 25th July and announced on the 26th July to the Shabi Khel by radio transmitted by the warning that failure to comply by the 30th July would render them liable to punishment. The Shabi Khel having failed to comply by the 30th July further leaflets were dropped on their villages by aircraft and also distributed by hand warning them that on the following day certain of their villages would be placed under destructive air proscription. They were advised to vacate these villages with their families and their animals and not to return until informed that it was safe to do so.

8 Air operations against the proscribed areas commenced on the 1st August. Destructive action was confined to villages inhabited exclusively by the Bromi Khel. Operations continued throughout August except when the weather made accurate recognition of the selected targets impossible. Six groups of Bromi Khel habitations were severely damaged but so far as is known the only tribal casualties were 5 persons killed and one wounded by a bomb which was released accidentally on a village outside the proscribed area. Throughout these operations the rest of the Shabi Khel and other sections of the Mahsuds held aloof from the Bromi Khel and gave no indication of helping them. Early in September the full Mahsud Junga approached the Resident and stated that the Shabi Khel were now willing themselves to repay the whole of the sum (Rs 1,10,000) advanced to the Bromi Khel by the Mahsud Malikhs and to guarantee compliance with the rest of the terms. The Mahsud Junga having confirmed the good faith of the Shabi Khel this offer was accepted by the A. G. G. and orders were at once issued (on the 10th September) terminating air proscription. The Shabi Khel have since come into Razmak and are implementing their undertakings in a satisfactory manner.

DATE OF SESSION OF THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY

†282 *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state when the Constituent Assembly is likely to begin its sessions and the amount of time it is likely to take to finish its work?

†Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The inaugural session of the Constituent Assembly is Scheduled to be held on the 9th of December. Government are not in a position to say how long it is likely to take to finish its work; that will depend on the Assembly itself.

ABOLITION OF SYSTEM OF GRANT OF TITLES

†283. Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state

(a) If it is a fact that large numbers of honours and titles, both English and Indian, are given to Indian nationals from time to time on behalf of His Majesty the King, and His Excellency the Governor-General, which are generally known as titles bestowed by Government, and

(b) if Government are considering the making of a representation to His Majesty the King and His Excellency the Governor-General not to bestow any such titles on Indian nationals?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan : (a) Yes, honours and titles are not conferred by the Government of India but by His Majesty the King and His Excellency the Governor-General on behalf of His Majesty.

(b) The matter is already under the consideration of the Government.

DELAY BY MANAGER OF PUBLICATIONS IN ATTENDING TO ORDERS FOR GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

†284. Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Secretary of the Department of Works, Mines and Power be pleased to state

(a) the amount of time on an average that the Manager of Publications takes to attend to an order for Government publication,

(b) if it is a fact that many orders placed with him are not attended to at all and

(c) whether Government propose to direct the Manager of Publications to expedite matters, and if he is unable to meet an order, to inform the party concerned immediately and also assist that party by telling him as to where the particular Government publication can be obtained if at all?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale : (a), (b) and (c) The Controller of Printing and Stationery reports that the Manager of Publications generally takes on an average about a week to attend to orders. He further reports that all orders are duly attended to. It appears, however, that occasionally heavy arrears have accumulated in the Central Publications Branch mainly due to the enormous volume of work in connection with military requirements and partly also because of inadequacy of staff to cope with the increased volume of work. The matter is being examined and the Manager has been asked to take necessary steps to avoid such delays, and in case he is unable to meet an order to inform the party concerned in the manner suggested.

LICENCES FOR EXPORT OF CASTOR OIL

285. Mr. Vadlal Lalubhai : (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state if it is a fact that export licences for exports of castor oil are not granted freely?

(b) Are Government aware of the very harmful effect that this policy has on the indigenous castor seed crushing industry and the resultant loss to the country as a whole? Are Government aware that this has resulted in a serious loss to the country's agriculture also, due to the loss of oil-cakes which are a very high grade fertilizer for agriculture?

(c) In view of the fact that castor oil is inedible, will Government explain why export licences are not freely granted?

†Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

(d) What do Government propose to do to protect the indigenous oil crushing industry which is in a precarious condition owing to the stoppage of Supply Department's orders for locomotive lubricants due to the availability of aviation spirit?

(e) Are Government aware that prior to independence seed was being exported in bigger quantities than castor oil and that the industry flourished only during the war?

(f) Do Government propose to see that a general export licence for castor oil is granted at an early date so that India may not have to suffer by exporting castor seed?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (i) Exports of castor oil are allowed on the basis of quotas which are fixed after due consideration of the requirements and the supply position in the country.

(b), (c) and (f) Government do not consider that the present policy is in any way harmful to the crushing industry or involves any national loss. Castor oil is being used in the country for industrial purposes in increasing quantities and free exports of oil will be harmful to the country's interests. Quotas of oil and seeds are fixed on the basis of available supplies taking into account the crushing capacity in the country.

(d) Recently Government have decided to allow export of an additional quantity of 8,000 tons castor oil. Further in view of shortage of supplies of linseed oil, there is now an increasing tendency to use castor oil for paint manufacture. It is considered that this will assist the crushing industry in disposing of the stock becoming surplus due to the stoppage of Supply Department's orders.

(e) Yes, Sir.

Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: Is it not a fact that oilseed is being allowed to be exported in big quantities?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Oilseed which comes to be crushed in the country looking to the crushing capacity of the factories here is allowed to be exported.

Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: Is it a fact that the British Food Minister has been allowed 15,000 tons of castor seed and the local industry is not allowed even to export castor oil?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I have already mentioned that the export of castor oil in limited quantities is allowed and now 8,000 tons more is being allowed.

Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: Will the Government not allow the industry to export castor oil to its full capacity instead of allowing exports of castor seed?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: According to the information at the disposal of Government this is the only quantity that can be permitted to be exported looking to the requirements of the country.

Sr. N. V. Gadgil: May I know from the Honourable Member whether it is the policy of the Government to encourage export of primary commodities as against processed or manufactured articles?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: No.

CONTROL ON EXPORT OF COTTON HARD WASTE

286 Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state if it is a fact that in spite of the insistent demand from the parties concerned the exports of cotton hard waste are rigidly controlled?

(b) Are Government aware that these controls are maintained for the benefit of foreign buyers to the detriment of this country's interests?

(c) Have Government received any representations from various bodies to lift the controls on export of cotton hard waste? If so, what action have they taken?

The Honourable Mr I. I. Chundrigar: (a) Export of cotton hard waste has been decontrolled from the 1st November 1946

(b) and (c) These do not arise

Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: Will the Honourable Member inform the House whether there is still price control on hard waste?

The Honourable Mr I I Chundrigar: I want notice

Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: Is it a fact that if there is a control on the price of hard waste the foreigners will benefit to the extent of the difference between the ruling price in this country and the price in foreign countries, which is nearly double than what prevails here?

Mr. President: It is both hypothetical and a matter of opinion. Next question.

EMPLOYMENT OF SERVICES & PROTECTION OF LABOURERS' EARNING A MINIMUM WAGE

287 *Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state—

(i) whether Government have considered or are considering ways and means through legislation or otherwise, for giving a labourer the position and status of a shareholder in the concern that such labourer serves; and

(ii) what steps are being taken for fixing a minimum wage for a labourer?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: (i) No

(b) The Minimum Wages Bill is already before the House

CONTROL OF EXPORT PRICE OF JUTE IN BENGAL

288 *Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal. Will the Honourable the "Commerco Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether Government are aware of the statement of the Honourable Mr H S Suhrawardy, Premier of Bengal, charging the Government of India that the control of export prices of jute as promulgated by the Government of India will have the effect of depriving the jute growers of such price as would be available, but for such control

(b) whether Government of India propose to clarify their policy in the matter;

(c) the reasons for taking such steps as adversely affect the position of jute price in the country;

(d) how the Government of India propose to counterbalance the obvious loss to the jute grower; and

(e) the present price and the control position in the different Provinces producing jute?

The Honourable Mr. I I Chundrigar. (a) Yes. Sir

(b), (c), (d) and (e) I lay on the table a copy each of the two Press Communiqués issued by the Government of India on the subject in which the position has been explained

Press Communiqué

EXPORT PRICES OF JUTE DECONTROLLED

ENHANCEMENT OF EXPORT DUTY

The Government of India have decided to terminate the Jute Export Control Order, 1946 with immediate effect

This Order it will be recalled, was conceived as an anti-inflationary measure as also with the object of ensuring that supplies of packing material were made available at reasonable prices to all countries of the world for facilitating the movement of cereals

The Provincial Governments concerned, however, did not take steps to continue the control over internal prices, with the result that jute prices in India have increased sharply while exports have been dislocated. In the long run controlled export prices of jute and jute manufactures cannot fail to influence the internal price level but this would involve a long process resulting in undesirable fluctuation of prices and dislocation of trade. The Government of India have, therefore, decided to withdraw the price control over exports.

At the same time, in order to reduce as far as possible the inflationary effects of uncontrolled export prices, the Government have decided to enhance the export duty on raw jute and jute goods. The high prices resulting from decontrol will benefit the growers of this commodity and a substantial part of the proceeds of the enhanced export duty will accrue to the principal producing provinces.

The Indian Tariff Act Amendment Ordinance 1946 promulgating the new rates of duties has issued in a Gazette Extraordinary.

The Government of India intend to continue the quantitative control over exports of raw jute and jute goods so that exports of Indian jute may be equitably distributed among all countries of the world.

Press Communiqué

With the expiry of the Defence of India Act and the Rules framed thereunder on the 30th September 1946 the control of internal prices of jute and jute goods will revert to the Provinces.

In view, however, of the responsibility that devolves on the Government of India for the supply of packing material at a reasonable price to all countries of the world so that the free flow of commodities from surplus to deficit areas may not be impeded and the urgent need that exists for containing inflation and also having regard to the larger interests of the country as a whole the Government of India have decided to continue the Export Price Control provisions of the Jute (Price Control) Order 1945. An order incorporating these provisions is being issued in a Gazette Extraordinary on the 1st October 1946 under Rule 84 of the Defence of India Rules as continued in force by the Emergency Provisions (Continuance) Ordinance (Ordinance XV of 1946).

COMMERCE DEPARTMENT,

Dated New Delhi the 30th September 1946

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honorable Member explain why the export control order was withdrawn and the export duty was simultaneously imposed?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The price of jute in the Province of Bengal went up and there was such a great demand in foreign countries that people were willing to buy at much higher prices, and the Government of India thought that this was an opportunity which could be availed of to impose a higher duty on export and get some money both for the benefit of the jute growers and the country.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honorable Member be pleased to explain how the Government of India propose to use the entire outturn of this export duty?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The Government of India have laid down rules on the subject. There was already a duty before. The duty has now been increased and the use of the amount realized by the duty will be in the same proportion as is laid down in the existing rules.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: When this export duty was imposed were all the relevant Provincial Governments consulted?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I am not aware of it. Probably the time was too short to consult them about it.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqui: Will the Honorable Member kindly tell us whether in filling the pockets of the Government through this higher duty they are not robbing the cultivator?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: To a slight extent the cultivator will lose the money. But a large portion of the income from this duty is used for the benefit of jute growers. This is under the existing rules.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Will the Honourable Member in Charge kindly inform the House whether this decision of levying an export duty was come to after consultation with New York and Washington?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I do not think so. I would however, require notice of the question.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Is it or is it not a fact that the ceiling price of raw jute as well as what the Americans call burlap was fixed under the dictation of New York importers?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I do not think so because New York will have to pay a higher price with the increase in price.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether after having passed this order in so short a time the Government of India have had communications with the relevant Provincial Governments and have asked them for their opinions on this matter?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: For the moment it has not been possible to do so. But in course of time the position will be re-examined in consultation with the provinces.

Mr. C. P. Lawson: Is Government aware that a situation of very considerable confusion now exists in the jute trade in all its Branches as a result of restrictions of the raw material and a removal of control on the manufactured goods and the negotiations going on with the Government of Bengal whereby this state of confusion may be terminated?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I do not think there is any confusion now. The position has been clarified after the second press note.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I heard the Honourable Member say that there was a considerable and very keen demand for the jute products in the world. If that is so have Government considered that the bulk of the export duty while those conditions continue will be borne by the foreign producer of jute?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: That will depend on the position in the market. Normally it will be passed on to the foreign producer.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is this duty not imposed as a kind of punishment on the Government of Bengal for refusing the demand of the Government of India about the control? And what would happen if the Government of Bengal refuses to allow this jute to go out of Bengal altogether?

Mr. President: The latter part is hypothetical. The first part may be replied to.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: May I have the question repeated?

Mr. President: Will the Honourable Member repeat the first part?

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is this duty not imposed as a kind of punishment on the Government of Bengal for refusing the demand of the Government of India for not agreeing to retain the control?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: All that I can find from the papers is that the Government thought they could utilise this opportunity for the purpose of having some revenue. I was not in charge of the Department when the decision was taken.

Mr. President: Next question. Mr. Madandhari Singh.

TRADE AGREEMENT WITH U.S.A.

290 *Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state

(a) the nature of the trade agreement with the United States of America, and

(b) whether there is any control over the change of Dollar which hampers the free trade between this country and the United States of America, if so, what and why?

[7TH NOV. 1946]

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) It is not clear to what agreement the Honourable Member refers. No trade agreement has yet been concluded with the United States of America.

(b) Yes, Sir. The nature of, and the reasons for, the control are explained auto alia in the Press Note, dated the 7th October 1946, a copy of which is laid on the table of the House.

In the working of the Empire Dollar Pool of the individual countries of the common area were given no specific allotments of the various foreign currencies which they were entitled to spend. The method by which expenditure was restricted was that the countries

The Government of India have kept in account of India's earnings and expenditure of hard currencies some figures about which were published in the Finance Member's Budget speech last February. Since the beginning of the War up to the 31st March 1946 India earned Rs. 495 crores worth of U. S. A. dollars and spent Rs. 240 crores having a net surplus of Rs. 165 crores. Against this has to be set off the fact that India spent more than Rs. 41 crores on the export of other hard currencies, namely those of Canada, Sweden, Switzerland and Portugal. India's net contribution to the Pool has therefore been about Rs. 114 crores till the close of the year 1945-46. During the quarter ending June 1946 for which preliminary figures are available, India's net contribution to the Pool, namely Rs. 114 crores, has been maintained.

is a fund known as the Post war Dollar Fund to which $ 100 million was contributed by the United States for the year 1944. In the year 1943-44 His Majesty's Government in view of our large dollar contributions to the Empire Dollar Pool and our willingness to agree to give reciprocal aid to the United States to place at our disposal a sum of $20 million in a separate fund to be utilised after the conclusion of hostilities with Japan for restocking and capital expenditure in the U. S. A. All expenditure for these purposes was to be met from the Fund and not till this Fund was exhausted were we to ask for dollars from the Pool for the financing of such expenditure. This figure of $20 million was a percentage of our dollar earnings on trade account in the year 1944 and H. M. G. agreed that they would credit the fund with a similar sum, upto a maximum of $20 million, for the year 1945 at our dollar earnings on the same basis for that year were of the same order as for the year 1944. In respect of 1945, H. M. G. have just intimated an allocation of $20 million. It is generally believed that this fund represents the total resources in U. S. dollars which India possesses for the purchase of capital goods. Such a belief is however, erroneous. The limit of our purchases is not necessarily the amount in the fund for we have the right to draw on the Pool for all capital goods the import of which we regard as legitimate. As against the $20 million allotted to the Fund for 1944 or in anticipation of further allotment the Government of India have issued sanctions for the import of capital goods, the purchase of ships and for other industrial purposes upto $28 million.

IMPORT POLICY

Recent criticisms about the import control policy of Government have been based on two grounds: firstly, that the administrative machinery for the grant of import licences was slow and inefficient and secondly that the strictness with which exchange control was enforced made it very difficult for importers both of capital and of other goods to import them from outside the sterling area. With the altered conditions brought about by the termination of War the Government of India have recently made a number of changes in the administration of import control with the result they hope, that the procedure for obtaining import licences has been very considerably simplified and shortened. They have also adopted the policy of removing, as many items as possible from the list of controlled items and of placing them on the Open General Licence for the sterling area. Other items have been placed on the Universal Open General Licence which means that these items may be imported both from any source whether within or outside the sterling area. Items which are thus decontrolled are continually under review and the list is gradually being expanded.

The Government of India have also reinforced substantially the rigidity of exchange control and the two tests of essentiality and non-availability are now applied with more flexibility. Requirements are now held to be essential if they are necessary for the maintenance and development of the national economy or the maintenance and development of the standard of living and non-availability is determined with due reference to the quality, price and period of delivery of comparable articles from the sterling area. Control in respect of proving non-availability has been shifted to Government from the importer so that it is now for Government to satisfy itself by its own enquiries whether goods required to be imported from outside the sterling area are available within it or not instead of as heretofore, for the importer to prove that they were not so available. Another modification that has been introduced is that the various currencies of the world have been graded in order of their difficulty and the tests of essentiality and non-availability are applied to imports with a decreasing degree of strictness in accordance with the comparative easiness of the currency concerned. With these modifications of policy and procedure it is expected that currency considerations will no longer hinder the rapid development of industry in India.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT

NEW DELHI

October 7, 1946

Mr. Manu Subedar (Are Government negotiating with the Government of the United States for a treaty of commerce and communication?) Will they resume those negotiations because I understand that the United States Government was anxious to make such a treaty but the then Government of India refused to entertain such a treaty in 1939?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The question of a treaty was considered in 1940 and the question was reopened by the United States in 1945. But it was then considered that the time was inopportune for the negotiations of such a treaty. However, there is no discrimination either by America or India against goods of either country, and the question will be taken up as soon as it is found to be opportune to do so.

SELECTION OF PERSONNEL OF INDIAN DELEGATION TO U. N. O.

290 *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state

(a) the principle that has been adopted by Government in the composition and selection of the personnel of the Indian Delegation to the United Nations Organisation,

(b) how many of the delegates selected by Government are Muslims?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) The selection of the persons best fitted to represent India and able to attend the Conference in question

(b) Of the five delegates to the General Assembly now in Session two are Muslims

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: In view of the fact that so far such delegations have been only party delegations may I ask the Honourable Member whether in future while selecting non-officials to such delegations, he will consider the desirability of associating all parties of this House?

Mr. President: Has the Honourable Member any answer to this?

Mr. H. Weightman: I do not think that that is really in issue. There is no question of 'one party' in connection with delegations at all.

- Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I ask the Honourable Member whether in selecting a Muslim High Court Judge as a member of this delegation he is not preventing him from expressing his opinion on the internal Indian situation in virtue of his office?

Mr. President: Order order. That is not relevant.

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Isn't it a fact that one of the Members of the Muslim League was invited and he refused to join the delegation?

Mr. H. Weightman: That is a fact.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqui: May I enquire whether in the Technical Staff attached to this delegation there are any Muslims?

Mr. H. Weightman: Not among the technical staff, but there are two in the secretarial staff.

PROTESTS IN CONNECTION WITH THE BOMBING OF TRIBAL AREAS IN N-W.F.P.

291. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state if they have received strong protests from responsible bodies in the North-West Frontier Province in connection with the recent bombing of certain tribes on the North-West Frontier Province?

(b) Is it a fact that the recent bombing of tribesmen includes also the civil population of Waziristan including many hundreds of men, children and the aged?

(c) Is there any truth in the Resolution passed by Frontier Muslim League in which it is alleged that the "barbarous practice of bombing of the civil population outside the 'Frontier' was resorted to by the Congress Government"?

(d) Will Government state if this practice of bombing has been permanently discontinued?

(e) Do Government propose to pay compensation to the victims of recent bombing?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) The Government of India are aware that the recent bombing on the North-West Frontier has evoked strong criticism in many quarters.

(b) No, Sir. Attention is drawn to the facts stated in the Government Communique, dated the 18th September 1946, a copy of which is laid on the table.

(c) No, Sir.

(d) The Government of India hope that the occasion will not again occur.

(e) Immediate compensation was paid to the victims of accidental bombing outside the Proscribed Area referred to in the Communique.

Seth Govind Das: Was any compensation paid to these victims before the Interim Government came into being? There has been bombing several times of this area before and on the previous occasions was any compensation paid to the victims?

Mr. H. Weightman: To these particular persons or to other persons on earlier occasions? Whenever there has been accidental death or injury caused—Yes, Sir

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: May I know whether this practice of bombing of people who are not at war or who are not fighting is allowed by international law? Should not the people who have done it be treated like the Germans at the Nuremberg Trial?

Mr. H. Weightman: It is always necessary for a Government to maintain a certain standard of peaceful control and hitherto Government have thought that this particular method was the cheapest and the most humane that was available to them. It must be recalled that we invariably gave notice of the intention to bomb any particular area and that the notice instructed people to remove themselves from that area.

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: Is it allowed by international law to bomb people who are not your nationals? These people of the tribal areas, I understand are not British subjects and the area where the bombs were thrown is not British territory. Is it allowed by international law to bomb another person's territory. Has been done?

Mr. H. Weightman: I know of nothing in international law which would stand in the way of the practice that we have put into force hitherto.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: With reference to the reply to part (c) of the question and in view of the fact that the Congress Government had nothing to do with the bombing may I know what steps Government have taken to counteract the false propaganda that has been done and is still being done by the Muslim League?

Mr. H. Weightman: I am not quite sure what propaganda the Honourable Member is referring to.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: A resolution was passed by the Frontier Muslim League that the Congress Government was responsible for the bombing whereas it had not taken up office at that time.

Mr. H. Weightman: I think the press communique is itself a sufficient refutation of that charge.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: May I know whether any action taken in the Frontier is done after consultation with the Provincial Government?

Mr. H. Weightman: Not after consultation. No.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: With reference to part (d) of the question is the Honourable Member in a position to inform the House the amount of compensation paid to people who are outside the tribal area?

Mr. H. Weightman: They were not outside the tribal area. They were within the tribal area but outside the 'proscribed' area.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: My question is with reference to the people outside the proscribed area.

Mr. H. Weightman: Yes, I have got the figures. Rs. 1,000 to the families of each of those killed (and they were five in number) and Rs. 360 for the person wounded. These payments are in accordance with customary rates.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: With reference to the communique which the Honourable Member has referred is there on record any protest by the Frontier Ministry against those bombings?

Mr. H. Weightman: In the form of a protest? No, I do not think so.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Does it mean that the Frontier Government approved of your bombing?

Mr. H. Weightman: No, Sir.

REMARKS BY HONOURABLE MEMBER FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS AT PRESS CONFERENCE IN DELHI re TRIBAL POLICY

292 *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to explain categorically to this Assembly what precisely did he mean to convey to his fellow countrymen at his latest Press Conference in Delhi on September 26, when he said that the Interim Government are seriously considering the whole Frontier problem "in the light of new circumstances" ?

(b) What did the Honourable Member precisely mean that "peace and tranquillity on the Frontier is considered vital to the security of Hindustan" ?

(c) Do Government apprehend an invasion of India through the Khyber Pass at an early date ?

Mr. H. Weightman : (a) The Honourable Member seems to have been somewhat misquoting of the remarks of the Honourable Member in charge of External Affairs. That new circumstances exist in India however is no doubt fully appreciated by the Honourable Member and the Frontier problem is only one of many hundreds of problems that require fresh consideration.

(b) Again the Honourable Member appears to have been misquoted, that is, the Honourable Member in charge of External Affairs is misquoted. What he actually said was that the security and well-being of the Tribal Areas is a definite factor in the defence of this country, a remark which does not appear to require further elucidation.

(c) No, Sir.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer : Security by whom and against whom.

Mr. H. Weightman : I do not understand what the Honourable Member means.

Mr. President : Next question.

293. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state what exactly is meant by "Policy of Firmness" advocated by him during a recent Press Conference on Foreign policy held in Delhi in connection with the Tribes on the Frontier ?

Mr. H. Weightman : The Honourable Member is presumably referring to the comment of the Honourable Member in charge of External Affairs that the approach to the problem of the Tribal Areas should be as friendly as possible but as firm as possible. The implication is obvious. There must be no impression that the Government is incapable of exerting its authority in the protection of its subjects.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. V. K. KRISHNA MENON AS AMBASSADOR FOR WESTERN COUNTRIES

294. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer : (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state if it is a fact that he has appointed Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon as his accredited roving Ambassador for the Western Countries ?

(b) Are Government prepared to state the terms of this appointment of Mr. Menon as representative of the Government of India ? Is Mr. Menon on fixed salary ?

(c) Do Government propose to place on the table of the House a copy of the report which it has been stated by Mr. Menon that he has posted to the Honourable Member for External Affairs on his recent discussions with the Soviet Foreign Commissar M. Molotov ?

Mr. H. Weightman : It would be appropriate that this question should be answered by the Honourable Member in charge of External Affairs himself. I have no doubt that he would be willing to accept short notice if the Honourable Member would put down a short notice question on this issue after his return to Delhi.

Shri D. P. Karmarkar: On a point of order, Sir, is it open to any Honourable Member to use a word like "loving"? Is it parliamentary to use such a word?

Mr. President: What question is the Honourable Member referring to?

Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Question 294, part (a)

Mr. President: There is nothing unparliamentary in that

NATIONALIZATION OF INSURANCE BUSINESS IN INDIA

295. Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state if they have considered the question of Nationalisation of all Insurance business in India?

(b) Has the Honourable Member received representations in this connection from the most important Insurance Companies in India?

(c) Have Government under contemplation the question of appointment of a Committee to consider the question of nationalisation of Insurance business in India?

(d) Are Government aware of the great alarm caused by reports that they propose to nationalise all Insurance Business in India?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) The question has not so far been considered by Government

(b) (c) and (d) The answer is in the negative

LOSS TO INDIANS IN SOUTH EAST ASIA BY THE REFUSAL OF BRITISH GOVERNMENT TO SUBSTITUTE JAPANESE CURRENCY BY BRITISH NOTES

296. Mr. P. B. Gole: Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations be pleased to state

(a) whether Government are aware that the Japanese Government gave Japanese currency notes in lieu of Burmese and Indian Currency notes during the period of the occupation to Indians in South East Asia and Burma, and

(b) whether Government are aware that the British Government refused to substitute the Japanese currency notes by British Notes after the conquest of the Japanese occupied territories and thus put Indian in South East Asia to considerable loss?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) The Japanese introduced their own currency in Burma and other countries in South East Asia. We have heard from Indians who have returned from those countries after their reoccupation that to some extent Indian and Burmese currency notes were exchanged for Japanese notes.

(b) Yes. Reports have been received that owing to invalidation of Japanese currency many Indians in Burma and other countries have in common with members of other races, been put to loss.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Do the Government of India propose to make up this loss after the reoccupation by the British?

Mr. H. Weightman: I think not Sir. The question whether the losses suffered by Indians on account of the redemption of Japanese currency should be included in the reparations claims against Japan is under consideration at the present moment

PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT OF BRITISH RESIDENTS IN SOUTH EAST ASIA IN THE MATTER OF RETURN OF PROPERTY BY THE CUSTODIAN OF ENEMY PROPERTY AFTER RECONQUEST

297. Mr. P. B. Gole: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state, whether Government are aware that Indians in South East Asia did not get back their property including gold from the custodian of the enemy property, after the reconquest, whereas the British residents received preferential treatment and all their property was returned?

* Answer to this question laid on the table the questioner having exhausted his quota

The Honourable Mr I I. Chundrigar If the Honourable Member is referring to the property situated in India belonging to British and Indian nationals resident in South East Asia and vested in the British Indian Custodian of Enemy Property, the answer is that no preferential treatment has been accorded to British nationals.

If, however, the Honourable Member is referring to the property of Indians situated in South East Asia, the question should be addressed to the Honourable Member in charge of External Affairs.

RESTRICTIONS ON ENTRY OF INDIANS IN NEPAL

298 *Shri. Mohan Lal Saksena Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that Indians are not allowed to enter into Nepal without Passport while the Nepalese have no such restriction when coming to India, and

(b) if so, whether Government propose to take necessary steps to see that there is no disparity of treatment in the matter of Indians going to Nepal?

Mr H Weightman (a) So far as the Government of India are aware, Indians may cross the frontier into Nepal without restriction to enter the Kathmandu Valley, however permits are required by travellers of all nationalities including Nepalese. It is a fact that Nepalese may enter India without restriction.

(b) Does not arise since there is no restriction on either side on crossing the frontier itself and since the Nepalese restriction to which reference has been made applies equally to Nepalese subjects.

GOODWILL DELEGATION TO NEPAL

299 *Shri Mohan Lal Saksena Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state

(a) whether the Interim Government propose to send any Goodwill Delegation to Nepal, and

(b) whether they propose to appoint an Indian Ambassador in Nepal?

Mr H Weightman The Government of India have not yet been able to give thought to either possibility.

INDIAN AMBASSADORS IN U. S. A., SOVIET RUSSIA AND OTHER EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

300 *Shri Mohan Lal Saksena Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please make a statement regarding the appointment of Indian ambassadors in the United States of America, the Union of Soviet Socialist Russia, and other European countries?

Mr H Weightman As the Honourable Member is doubtless aware it has recently been decided in consultation with the Governments concerned to raise the Indian Diplomatic Missions in the United States of America and China to the status of Embassies. America and China will consequently be represented in India in future also by Embassies. The question of exchanging Diplomatic Missions with the U. S. S. R. and other countries in the near future is under consideration.

SUPPLY OF FOOD BY RUSSIA TO INDIA

301 *Mr. Manu Subedar : (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state the efforts that Government have made for creating economic relationship with Russia generally and more specifically to find out whether Russia could supply food to India?

(b) Has any mission gone from India to Russia?

(c) Has any mission been invited from Russia to India for discussing common economic matters?

(d) Have Government attempted to negotiate barter agreements with other Governments, such as the Government of China, the Administration of Japan, Siam, Viet Nam, Indonesian Republic, Argentine, Persia and Afghanistan?

(e) If the reply to (d) above is in the negative will Government consider the advisability of reciprocal barterising in this manner, instead of waiting for normal trade channels to come on the scene?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) The nature of our economic relations with the U.S.S.R. is under the consideration of Government. The fullest assistance and facilities have, however, been given to the Soviet Trade Agency in India for the procurement of U.S.S.R. requirements from this country, e.g., raw jute, jute goods and tobacco. As regards the import of food from Russia a direct appeal was made at the United Nations Organisation conference earlier this year. Approaches have also been made to the U.S.S.R. through the Soviet Trade Agency in India as also through diplomatic and other channels with a view to exploring the possibility of foodgrains being made available from this source.

(b) No. Sir.

(c) No. Sir.

(d) While no specific barter agreements have been entered into with the countries mentioned by the Honorable Member, arrangements have been negotiated with Indonesia, Siam and the Argentine Governments for the release of certain specific commodities required by them with a view to securing for India release of foodgrains wherever possible from these sources.

(e) I may assure the Honorable Member that Government will take such action as may be considered necessary, whether by barter agreement or otherwise, for ensuring that adequate supplies of such commodities as are required for the satisfaction of our needs be made available.

Mr. Manu Subedar: With regard to part (b), may I know whether Government will not send either a goodwill mission or an economic mission or a trade mission to Russia in order to study the proposition as to whether there are any commodities produced there and whether there are any surplus which could be brought to this country with advantage?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Unless there is some preliminary inquiry which discloses that there are some commodities or articles which could be imported from Russia it would not be worth while to send a mission. The question will first be investigated here.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Petrol used to come from Russia before the war, and we are short of petrol. Salt used to come from Rumania and we are short of salt in Bengal also. I could mention many other instances but I do not want to take up the time of the House. Just as the Russians have thought it wise to send a trade mission to India to purchase and to investigate the possibilities of trade in certain commodities, is it not right and is it not high time that our Government send a mission to that country in order to have at least a preliminary survey?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Government do not consider that any useful purpose will be served by sending a mission at this stage unless we know beforehand that any articles would be available. Inquiries are being made to find out whether it will be possible to have any imports from that country.

Brijut Dharendra Kanta Lahiri Choudhury: In view of the reply just given by the Honourable Member is it or is it not worth while or necessary to send a commission to Russia to investigate into the matter and see which commodities or articles can be imported into India?

Mr. President: That is a matter of opinion.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: May I ask whether a year ago a representation was made by some members of the mercantile community requesting Government to give them travelling facilities to proceed to Russia?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I am not aware of that. I shall make inquiries.

PROFITS TO GOVERNMENT BY EXPORT TRADE

302 *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state the arrangements that Government are making in order to see that the bulk value of the export from India is realised by Government instead of by the trader who is lucky enough to get the export licence?

(b) Have Government got under consideration any scheme, by which some of these benefits could accrue to Government to enable them to build an exchange fund, which would help them to deal with the situation which may arise hereafter when the tide of inflation turns back?

(c) Is it a fact that Indian export articles are still leaving this country at controlled prices, whereas India is importing most of the articles at inflated prices?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) and (b) The Honourable Member's question is not clear, but if the suggestion is that Government should retain for themselves such portion of the profits as are considered unduly high in a particular trade, the answer is that Government are endeavouring to secure a reasonable share of these profits by the levy or the enhancement of export duties on such commodities. As the Honourable Member is aware, an export duty of Rs. 20 a bale has recently been levied on cotton and the export duty on raw jute and jute goods has been raised substantially.

(c) Of the commodities exported from India the prices of cotton piecegoods and yarn and tea which is being purchased by the Ministry of Food and a block purchase scheme only are now controlled. As far as cotton piecegoods and yarn are concerned this control operates also in the interests of the domestic market. Control over export prices of cotton piecegoods is now enforced only in respect of exports to such countries as are able to exercise effective control over internal prices in respect of such goods. It is understood that there is no control in exporting countries over the prices of the principal commodities imported into India though there is no evidence to suggest that specially inflated prices are being charged for goods so exported.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In addition to the export duty, which expedient Government are already using, may I know whether Government would not also consider such a thing as charging a license fee to exporters and also whether they will not consider sending goods on consignment to those countries on Government account and using the trade channel only as commission agents for the sale of these goods and get the fullest price in the Government pockets?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Government will examine the suggestion, though the persons who are now handling this trade will probably make a complaint about it.

Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: Is it not a fact that in many foreign countries Indian goods are sold at 250 per cent. of the prices here?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I am not sure about the percentage but Government are aware that prices in some countries are much higher than those prevailing here.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Does not this raising of export duties interfere with the international concept of the removal of barriers in international trade?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I do not think so.

MONOPOLY AND PRICE POOLING ARRANGEMENTS IN LK, D'WEELE AND PRINTING MACHINERY

303 *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state whether it is a fact that there is a monopoly and price pooling arrangement in the United Kingdom in regard to machinery for textiles and printing trade, which gives heavy quotations to Indian enquirers?

(b) Is it a fact that many classes of imports are cheaper from U. S. A. and hard currency countries than from the United Kingdom?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) As no single factory in U. K. makes complete textile spinning plant, the output of almost all such factories is pooled and handled by Textile Machinery Makers Limited. There is thus monopoly as well as price pooling arrangement in this line. Evershed Commission in the United Kingdom is however investigating the cost of production of spinning machinery where the question of monopoly price being exorbitant will be examined. In the cases of Textile Winding and Beaming machinery, Lancashire Looming and Finishing Machinery, which are made by groups of independent firms, there is neither monopoly nor price pool. In none of these cases there is any evidence that Indian orders are highly priced. The Board of Trade is, however, prepared to investigate fully any specific cases of heavy quotations put forward.

As regards printing trade, there is no evidence of monopoly or price pool arrangement.

(b) It is difficult to get exhaustive information immediately but in several instances supplies from U. S. A. and hard currency countries have come to us cheaper than from the United Kingdom while in some other cases, supplies from U. K. are cheaper than from U. S. A. and hard currency countries.

Mr. Vadilal Lalubhai: Is it not a fact that there are two big combines in the U. K. manufacturing spinning machinery and now they have combines and are charging 250 per cent. more than the pre-war price while the rise in the cost of production is only 50 per cent. in England?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: As I said, all the firms which are manufacturing textile spinning plant have pooled together and then manufactures are handled by the Textile Machinery Makers Limited. If there are any complaints about their charging excessive prices to Indians, we shall take up the question and the Board of Trade are prepared to examine any complaints which we may make and take action in the matter.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that there is a wide-spread impression amongst business circles will the Honourable Member for Commerce ascertain this position and take steps—that private and unregulated import it the hands of private parties are involving the payment of too much price? Will not the Government interfere in the bargaining between the Indian nationals and those who supply?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Is the Honourable Member suggesting that Government should make the purchases of the spinning machinery and then sell it to the persons desirous of establishing the mills here?

Mr. Manu Subedar: The suggestion is for ascertaining the demands in this country pooling all this demand and making the best bargain on behalf of India, either in the United Kingdom, U. S. A. or Belgium or Czechoslovakia or whichever country in which these goods can be secured at the best price?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: There will be considerable difficulties in the way because those who are desirous of setting up the mills are now making attempts in the United Kingdom and other countries of the world to secure the machinery as soon as possible and as there is competition among people desirous of setting up new mills, there will be considerable difficulties in the way. If Government find that an arrangement of the nature suggested by the Honourable Member will be welcomed by the people who desire to set up new mills, Government will certainly take up the question.

Mr. Vadilal Lalubhai: Is it not a fact that the Textile Control Board has already made such a complaint to the Government that the U. K. is charging unduly high prices?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The suggestion in the original question was that India is being charged higher prices compared to other countries. On that point no specific complaint has been received. If the allegation is merely that India is charged 250 per cent. more than the pre-war price, it is possible for the manufacturers to say that the cost of production has gone up and Government will certainly examine whether the increase in price quoted by the manufacturers is justified looking to the increase in the cost of production. If the increase is not justified, Government will certainly take up the question for decreasing the price.

Sri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Have the Government taken any action on so many complaints that have been made about the high price charged by the manufacturers?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: No specific complaints have been received except the general allegation. The matter has been taken with the Board of Trade and as I have stated in reply to the question that the Board of Trade are prepared to investigate fully into specific cases of heavy quotations put forward.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that there is extensive competition between Indians who are anxious to buy the equipment quickly at this end and there is a price pooling arrangement at the other end, would not Government assure this House that they will go thoroughly into this question and get detailed information from the textile associations and chambers of commerce?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Government will go thoroughly into the question.

PRICES OF ARTICLES RECEIVED FROM AND DESPATCHED TO BURMA

304 *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state the articles that have been received from Burma and the articles that are to be despatched to Burma?

(b) How do the prices of these articles compare?

(c) What is the position of prices paid for these articles with prices received by India?

(d) Is it a fact that Burma rice has been charged at a very high rate to India?

(e) Is it a fact that cloth and other articles supplied to Burma have gone at controlled prices?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) Trade with Burma has only recently been resumed through Commercial channels. It is not therefore possible to give a comprehensive list of the articles received from or supplied to that country. Cotton textiles, jute manufactures, groundnut oil and tea, however, form the major portion of our exports while rice and maize constitute the principal items of imports.

(b) and (c). As exports and imports are now made very largely through trade channels, it will not be possible without an elaborate investigation to give a comparative view of the prices paid for imports and those received for our exports.

(d) Yes, Sir.

(e) Cloth and till recently jute manufactures have been exported to Burma at controlled rates, and tea at rates fixed by the Ministry of Food. There is no price control with regard to other items of export.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Is it not a fact that the Burma Government charged this Government Rs. 16 a maund for rice?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: That is so.

Mr. Vadialal Lalubhai: Is Government aware that the price of piecegoods in Burma is more than double what India charges them?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Government do not know the exact percentage but certainly they are higher because of the shortage.

Mr. Vadialal Lalubhai: Will Government inquire?

Mr. Leslie Gwill: In regard to part (c) of the question, is it to be inferred from the Honourable Member's reply that the Burma Government are charging an export duty on rice that is sent to India?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The price includes export duty, rehabilitation charges and several other items. I do not think they are charging us a higher rate compared to the rate charged to other countries.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In future in interchange of commodities between other countries generally and more particularly with Burma, if the prices at which India supplies are at controlled prices and therefore presumably at a much lower price than that coming in from the Government of India, will the Government also supply India which is one of her oldest customers in rice at a fair price and not attempt to profiteer?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The suggestion is a very nice one but we were so short of rice that it was not possible for us to refuse rice even at an exorbitantly high price.

PURCHASE OF COTTON BY THE U. K. GOVERNMENT

305 *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state how much cotton has the Government of the United Kingdom purchased from India?

(b) Have Government any information as to the price at which such cotton has been purchased?

(c) Has permission been given for the export of such cotton to the United Kingdom?

(d) For what quantity has permission been given for the export of cotton to (i) China, (ii) Japan, and (iii) other countries?

(e) Have Government helped U. K. Government with finance in rupees for this purpose?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The question should have been addressed to the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies. It has accordingly been transferred to the list of questions for the 11th November 1946, when it will be answered by the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies.

APPLICATIONS TO TARIFF BOARD FOR PROTECTION BY INDUSTRIES

†306 *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state how many industries have made application to the Tariff Board for protection?

(b) How many applications have been disposed of and how many are still pending?

(c) In the case of which major industries is the period of protection expiring and the need for a fresh enquiry will arise?

(d) What measures do Government contemplate to meet the situation?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) and (b) Applications for protection are made to Government and not to the Tariff Board. Such applications are scrutinized by an Inter-Departmental Committee consisting of representatives of Commerce, Industries and Supply, Finance and other interested Departments and those that are found to have established a prima facie case for tariff assistance or protection are referred to the Tariff Board for investigation. Other applications are examined departmentally according to the decisions of the Inter-Departmental Committee. So far 10 applications have been remitted to the Tariff Board out of which the Board has submitted reports on 15 industries which are under consideration. Decisions on 8 reports will be announced very shortly.

(c) (1) Sugar, (2) Cotton Textile, (3) Sericulture, (4) Iron and Steel manufactures, (5) Wood pulp and paper.

(d) Government are actively considering the matter.

EXPANSION OF TARIFF BOARD AND EXISTING TARIFF INEQUALITIES

†307 Mr. Manu Subedar (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state whether the personnel of the Tariff Board is being expanded?

(b) Is a new and permanent Tariff Board being established?

(c) What steps are Government taking to correct the inequalities of tariffs existing at present, apart from the issue of protection, such as the same duty on raw materials as well as on finished goods?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar (a) and (b) Both these questions are under consideration

(c) Where the duty on finished goods is the same as that on raw materials there is hardly any tariff inequality. I may, however, add for the information of the Honourable Member that in respect of industries referred to the Tariff Board, any tariff inequality existing between finished goods and raw materials will be taken into consideration by the Board in framing their recommendations. As regards other industries, Government will consider sympathetically any applications that may be made to them for removal of tariff inequalities. I may further add that as a measure of assistance to certain industries Government have already removed duties on the principal raw materials required for certain industries.

TREATMENT OF INDIAN LABOUR IN CEYLON

†308. Mr Ahmed E H Jaffer (a) Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations be pleased to state if his attention has been drawn to the state of affairs in Ceylon in regard to the treatment of Indian labour?

(b) Do Government propose to place on the table of the House all correspondence that has passed recently between the Government of India and the Government of Ceylon in this matter of treatment of Indian labour in Ceylon?

(c) Has the Government of India's Agent in Ceylon submitted a report on this matter in recent months?

(d) Are Government aware that all reports from the Indian Congress in Ceylon go to show that Indian labourers are shut up in camps in barbed wire fences where they live a life as horrible as in German Concentration Camps such as Buchen and Bergen?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) Yes. The Honourable Member is apparently referring to the treatment of Indian labourers who were asked to quit the Knivesmure estate after it was acquired by the Ceylon Government.

(b) No, Sir.

(c) Yes. The Representative of the Government of India in Ceylon has kept the Government of India informed from time to time.

(d) The reports received by the Government of India show the facts to be as follows. The Indian labourers living on the Knivesmure estate refused to vacate the hme rooms in which they were living even after being ordered to do so by the Ceylon Government on their acquiring the estate for other purposes. In the first week of October the Ceylon Government put up barbed wire fencing around the hme rooms and employed watchers to control entry into the enclosures. A few men from each enclosure were allowed outside for short periods daily to procure foodstuffs and the like. Persons who went out without permits or overstayed their permission were refused re-entry. In reply to representations made by our Representative the Ceylon Government stated that the action had been taken in order to protect Government property against trespass and theft. As a result of the discussions the dispute between the labourers and the Ceylon Government was settled by the labourers agreeing to move to other estates on which the Ceylon Government found them employment and arranged for free transport.

STATEMENT OF VISIT TO N-W FRONTIER BY THE HONOURABLE MEMBER FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

†309. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer : (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please lay on the table of this House a comprehensive statement on his recent visit to the North-West Frontier Province ?

(b) What was the object in paying a visit ?

(c) Has the Honourable Member received a report of the disturbances at Peshawar on the occasion of his arrival at that place ?

(d) Has the Honourable Member seen the report of the speech by Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan made by him in connection with these demonstrations ?

(e) Do Government propose to have an enquiry made on Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan's allegations against the Political Department of the Government of India wherein he said that these demonstrations were organised and engineered by the Political Department to bring the Interim Government into contempt ?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) and (b) It would be appropriate that the Honourable Member in Charge of External Affairs Department should himself reply to these parts of the question and he would no doubt be ready to do so at short notice if the Honourable Member will put in such a question on his return to Delhi

(c) A full report is expected shortly

(d) Yes, Sir

(e) As has already been indicated in reply to a similar question on an earlier date an enquiry is being made into the allegations made against the officers of the Frontier Administration

SURRENDER OF HONOURS AND TITLES IN 1946

310 *Mr. P. K. Salve (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to lay on the table of the House a list of persons who have surrendered their honours and titles in 1946 ?

(b) How many Musalmans hold titles and honours in the Central Provinces? How many of them have abandoned the same since July 1946?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) The Government of India have no information. The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the newspapers in which the names of such persons have appeared

(b) The Government of India have no information

NUMBER OF INDIANS RESIDING IN COMMONWEALTH COUNTRIES (e.g., BURMA, MALAYA, AUSTRALIA, ETC.) BEFORE AND AFTER WAR

311. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) the number of Indians residing in the Commonwealth countries particularly Burma, Malaya, Australia, Ceylon, and East Indies before the War and

(b) their numbers now ?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) A statement showing the total Indian population in various parts of the British Empire according to the latest available estimates is laid on the table of the House

(b) No reliable figures are available

DISABILITIES OF INDIANS IN COMMONWEALTH COUNTRIES (J & CYLON, SOUTH AND EAST AFRICA, CANADA, EAST INDIES, ETC.)

312. *Seth Govind Das Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) the rights of citizenship and of holding of property of Indians in the Commonwealth countries, particularly Malaya, Australia, Burma, South and East Africa, Ceylon, Canada and East Indies,

(b) the disabilities of Indians in this respect before the war,

(c) the disabilities of Indians in this respect in these countries now, and

(d) the steps that Government propose to take to remove these disabilities?

Mr H. Weightman (a) (b) and (c) A statement showing the position is laid on the table of the House.

(d) The Government propose to attempt to remove these disabilities by means of negotiations with the Government of each country concerned.

[7TH NOV 1946]

Statement appended to reply to Question No 312 by Seth Govind Das in the Legislative Assembly

Name of Country	Rights of citizenship		Rights of holding of property
	(a) Before the War	(b) Now	(a) Before the War	(b) Now
1	2	3	4	5
Burma and Malaya	Indians in Burma and Malaya enjoyed the same rights of citizenship as other residents of these countries.	No change.	Indians in Burma and Malaya enjoyed the same rights of holding of land as other residents of these countries.	No change.
Australia	So far as Commonwealth citizens are concerned, Indians (permanently settled in that country) do not suffer from any disability. There are, however, a few discriminatory provisions in some of the State laws, certain sections of the Federal Statute of New South Wales and certain regulations in British India as well.	Since before the war so far as the Government of India are aware.	Now, as before the war so far as the Government of India are aware.	Same as before the war so far as the Government of India are aware.
Fig:	None so far as the Government of India are aware. There were three elected members in the Legislative Council in 1936.	There are five Indian members in the Legislative Council. Three are elected and two are nominated. Indians vote on communal basis.	Under the Native Land Ordinance No. 1 of 1915 and other rules issued thereunder, Indians and other non-white persons are prohibited from having land outright from natives.	Same as before the war so far as the Government of India are aware.

Note —1 It is understood that Indian residents are not allowed to acquire land in European managed lands, including

2 Although the tendency so far appears to have been to exclude Indians from responsible positions in the public service and to restrict that a Scheme has been proposed by the Secretary of State for the Colonies under which the holders of the Public Services belonging to the different races in the Colony would be entitled to equality in status and pay for similar work.

Union of South Africa

- (a) In the provinces of Natal, Transvaal and Orange Free State and the Union of South Africa, Indians did not enjoy a franchise. In the Cape Colony Province alone, Indians have been given political franchise along with the European students of the Province except that while franchise for European students is based on adult suffrage and is enjoyed by both men and women, it is based on education and property in the case of Indians and is enjoyed only by males possessing a requisite qualification.
- (b) Indians do not enjoy municipal franchise in—

Kenya

Indians had no municipal political and municipal franchise. There are five Indian elected members in the Legislative Council and one was nominated to the Executive Council.

After the war the post on teaching extension lightened at the Cape Province and the Cape Indians moved the same link to the Asiatic Land Tenure and Indian Representation Act 1946. Indians in Natal and the Transvaal Provinces have been given communal franchise based on education and income. In the Transvaal, the right of franchise is being extended to only males and the Indian community in Natal and Transvaal will jointly be represented by members in the House of Assembly and by 2 in the Senate, all being of Indian descent. Indians will also be represented in the Natal Provincial Council by 2 members. Indians in the Transvaal have not been given representation in the Transvaal Provincial Council. The above Act does not confer any municipal franchise on Indians in the following provinces—

Northern

In the Transvaal Province Indians could not hold fixed property except in localities assigned to them for a purpose. Indian land was also prohibited from residing on or occupying proclaimed land in any mining district. Out of the mining areas Indians also could not occupy land or premises and in April 1939 a petition on 30th April 1939 was thought of raising a petition from the Minister in Natal and Cape Provinces, there was no disability in the respect. In Orange Free State ASIATICS were prohibited from owning any fixed property.

In practice Indians are not allowed to own or lease land in the Kenyan Highlands for agricultural purposes. But Asiatic Indians are not permitted to purchase or occupy on or lease in a number of residential sites in Nairobi and Mombasa.

In regards the Cape Province the Transvaal and Orange Free State the post on remained same. In Natal the recent Asiatic Land Tenure and Indian Representation Act places restriction on the acquisition and occupation of land by Asiatics, except in exempted areas. Exempted areas have been so proclaimed in the Schedule to the Act or are to be proclaimed by the G. G. in Council on the advice of the Land Advisory Board, or after a period of five years, by resolution of Parliament. In non-exempted areas the terms of the restrictions under this Act are that no Asiatic can, except under a permit of a permit entered into any agreement with a non-Asiatic to acquire fixed property, and no Asiatic can possess property and no person can allow any Asiatic to occupy any such land or premises which was not lawfully occupied on the 31st January, 1946, by an Asiatic except under the authority of a permit.

1	2	3	4	5
Janganyika	No discrimination against Indians. There were 3 nominated Indian members of the Legislative Council.	No change, but the 11 is also now one Indian member on the Executive Council.	No restrictions before the war.	According to the Joint (Reserve) Commission on Land (Reserve) Ordinance, which was passed by the Legislative Council in 1943, no disposition of land of any kind was to be made in favour of a non-native without the consent of the Government. The ordinance was due to expire one year after the end of the war. Present position not known.
Uganda	There was no elective system. There were 2 Indian nominated members of the (Legislative) Council.	No change.	No racial discrimination against Indians.
Zanzibar	There was no elective system. There were two Indians on the Legislative Council.	There is a proposal reported to be one Indian on the Legislative Council.	Under the Administration of Land (Reserve) Ordinance (No. 1 of 1946), the alienation of land by Arabs and Africans to others, including Europeans, was prohibited, except with the sanction of the Government.	As far as the Government is aware, there has been no change.
Mauritius	Indians in Mauritius have exactly the same rights and privileges as any other section of the population. They are faced not so much with a lack of facilities as lack of opportunity to take advantage of facilities and this in turn is due to the fact that the Indians population represents the poor working class.	No change. It is the Government's aim.	As far as Government is aware, Indians had no disabilities in respect of holding property before war.	No change.
Kenya	Indians do not enjoy equal rights of citizenship with the indigenous population. The discrimination is based on the war.	Same as before the war.	In Kenya, Indians have the right to acquire and hold land.	Same as before the war.

mination is introduced in all important legislative and administrative measures by restricting the benefits conferred under them only to "Ceylonese" defined as "persons of either sex domiciled in Ceylon and possessing a domicile of origin." Thus, the right to obtain Crown lands under the Land Development Ordinance, fishing rights under the Fisheries Ordinance, Licenses for plying of omnibuses under the Omnibus Services Licensing Ordinance, etc., are denied to them. Very few Indians can qualify to enter the public service in Ceylon under the present administrative order of that Government. Even in regard to the fundamental right of franchise while the Ceylon se enjoy adult suffrage, Indian franchise is based on the difficult concept of domicile or alternatively on property or literacy qualification or holding of a certificate of permanent settlement	Indians in Canada, except the residents of Br. Columbia, enjoyed the same rights of citizenship as the other residents of that country. The only disability from which Indians suffered in this Dominion, was their exclusion from municipal, provincial and federal franchise in the Province of British Columbia	No change	No change	There was no restriction to the holding of property by Indians in Canada

British Guiana	Indians in B. G. enjoyed the same rights of citizenship as any other resident of the Colony.	No change	Indians had the same rights to property as the natives of the Colony	No change
Trinidad	Indians in Trinidad enjoyed the same rights of citizenship as any other resident of the Colony	No change	Indians had the same rights to property as the natives of the Colony	No change
Jamaica	Indians who have been born in the Colony or who have completed 10 years residence possessed the same political rights as the native population.	No change	Indians had the same rights to property as the natives of the Colony	No change

Seth Govind Das: Has the Government recently seen that a federal constitution for Malaya is being prepared and has any copy of that constitution come to the Government of India?

Mr. H. Weightman: I am afraid I have no information. I must ask for notice.

Sardar Mangal Singh: May I know whether these negotiations are carried on directly by Government or through their agents?

Mr. H. Weightman: They would be carried on, Sir, through the Government of India's own representative if there is one in the country concerned, otherwise, through the good offices of His Majesty's Government.

Seth Govind Das: Are there Government of India's representatives in every country that is mentioned in this question?

Mr. H. Weightman: There is certainly India's representatives in Malaya, Australia, Burma, Ceylon, Canada but not in the West (not East) Indies. In South Africa there was one and there is still a Secretary in charge of the office there of the High Commissioner. In East Africa there is none as there is no specific country named East Africa and so there is no specific representative there.

Mr. President: Order, order. The question hour is over.

(b) WRITTEN ANSWERS

SUPPLY OF HOUSES TO MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE

313. *Mr. Manu Subedar : (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Works, Mines and Power please state whether Government are aware that in the United States of America every member of the Legislature is supplied with furnished house, from which he is not dislodged during the period of his membership?

(b) Have Government considered the desirability of creating similar conditions in New Delhi so as to permit members of the Legislature to do the important work, which they are being called upon to do?

(c) How many houses intended for members of the Legislature are occupied by servants of Government?

(d) Have Government prepared any plan, by which this uncertainty would disappear and houses intended for members of the Legislature will be reserved for them and also an individual house given to a member will not be taken away from him so long as he is willing to give the rent for it?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Government have no information.

(b) Government generally try to provide Honourable Members with furnished accommodation either in bungalows, hotels or hostels. The total number of houses constructed for the residence of Members of both the Houses is 83, to which 12 houses constructed for officers were added making a total of 95. Of these 26 have been allotted to the Council of State and 68 to the Legislative Assembly and one is used as an enquiry office for M.L.A. bungalows. In addition accommodation in Western Court for five double suites and 26 single suites have also been provided for Members of the Legislative Assembly. The present difficulty is due to the fact that demand for bungalow type accommodation exceeds the number of bungalows available for Honourable Members.

(c) All houses intended for Members of the Legislature have been handed over to the Legislative Assembly Department and the Council of State Secretariat for allotment to Members.

(d) Bungalows intended for Honourable Members are always reserved for them during the session of the Legislature. Accommodation is also made available to Honourable Members visiting Delhi in connection with the business of the Legislature when the Legislature is not sitting, but it has not been found possible to ensure that individual houses given to Members are not taken away from them so long as they are willing to give the rent for it.

Government are aware of the inconvenience and discomfort caused to Members by the present arrangements and the position in this respect is now under their active consideration. The position is however rendered more difficult by the uncertainty about impending constitutional changes which may take place in the near future.

NUMBER OF HOUSES FOR MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

314. *Mr. Manu Subedar : (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Works, Mines and Power please state how many houses were constructed for the use of members of the Legislative Assembly?

(b) Are Government aware of the inconvenience and anxiety of members of the Legislature with regard to the house, which they will receive when they come from their destination to attend the sessions as well as Select Committees and other public work?

(c) Why should members be subjected to the ballot every time and two or three times in the year?

(d) Are Government aware of the inconvenience to members, who have to bring their linen, crockery and other equipment, staff of servants and their books and files?

(e) Are Government aware that members of the Legislature find it difficult to work if there is uncertainty about the facilities for residence every time a session is called?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale : (a) The total number of houses constructed for the residence of members of both the houses was 83. To these, 12 gazetted officers bungalows were added, making a total of 95. Of these 69 bungalows have been allotted for the use of members of the Legislative Assembly by a redistribution made in 1944 by a Joint Committee of both the Houses and representatives of the Labour Department.

(b) Yes

(c) Ballotting unfortunately is inevitable owing to paucity of accommodation.

(d) and (e) Government fully sympathise with the inconvenience and difficulty caused to Honourable Members. As already stated in reply to the previous question, the entire subject is now under active consideration.

REPATRIATION TO INDIA OF INDIAN EXILES AND PRISONERS IN ALLIED HANDS OUTSIDE INDIA

315. *Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal : Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state

(a) how many Indians—outside India—are still either prisoners in the Allied hands or are exiles,

(b) the machinery which the Government of India can use for getting whereabouts and other particulars direct in respect of such men,

(c) whether the Government of India have entered into direct diplomatic relations with the Allied powers for the above purpose,

(d) what steps are being taken by this Government for repatriating such persons to India; and

(e) the Government policy in the matter?

Mr. H. Weightman : (a) Forty-one civilian Indians are being prosecuted in Malaya, including Singapore, and seven in Hongkong for crimes alleged to have been committed during the war and to have involved the commission of atrocities. One Indian civilian in British North Borneo has already been tried and sentenced for such an offence. Apart from these persons, there are no Indian prisoners, either civil or military in Allied hands. There are no Indians abroad barred from returning to India, though transport difficulties have prevented the early return to India of some Indians stranded in foreign countries.

(b) and (c). The normal diplomatic channels are used to trace Indians abroad supplemented by Military Searcher Organisations in the Far East and the Indian Military Mission in Berlin The representatives of the Government of India in Burma and Malaya are also used for this purpose

(d) and (e) Government are taking all possible measures to repatriate, as and when shipping is available, all those who wish to return to India

ARREST OF DR LOHIA BY GOANESE GOVERNMENT

315-A. *Mr. P. K. Salve: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state if it is a fact that Dr Lohia, a Congress Socialist Leader, was arrested by the Goanese Government?

(b) Is it a fact that no news is allowed to come from Goa?

(c) Is it a fact that Dr Lohia was removed to Aguada Fort in Goa?

(d) Is it a fact that he had been detained there in solitary confinement?

(e) Is it a fact that he had refused food since September, until he was released?

(f) Is it a fact that the Goanese Government had forbidden all public agitation for securing his release?

(g) What steps had Government taken to secure release of Dr Lohia?

(h) Are Government aware that Mahatma Gandhi had a personal appeal to the Goanese Government to refrain from persecuting the Indian Goanese subjects? If so, with what result?

(i) What steps have the Government of India taken to remedy the situation in Goa? Do Government propose to make a detailed statement on the political situation in Goa to-day?

(j) Is it a fact that the Goanese Government have prohibited the entry of Dr Lohia into their territory? If so, what steps have Government taken in the matter?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) Yes

(b) Not as far as the Government of India are aware

(c) Yes

(d) Dr Lohia is reported to have been detained in Aguada Fort and to have been kept in solitary confinement there from 29th September to 2nd October

(e) The Government of India have no information

(f) The Government of India have no information on the point

(g) The Vice-Consul, Goa, was instructed to ascertain the reasons for Dr Lohia's arrest and to demand an interview with him Dr Lohia was however released meantime

(h) The Government of India have seen press reports of an appeal made by Dr Gandhi to the Goanese Government and of the Governor General's reply. Copies of the press reports are placed on the table

(i) The Government of India cannot intervene in the internal administration of Goa. Representations have, however, been made to the Portuguese Government as well as to the Governor General of Goa. The Government of India are not in a position to make a further statement on this matter at present

(j) Yes The matter is under consideration

Copy of Press Report

PANCHGANI, July 24—"If the Goa Satyagraha movement is to succeed it should be conducted by Gomantakas on the clearest possible issue, that is, civil liberty, the larger section of Swaraj should await its attainment by the whole of India unless, of course, the Portuguese Government wisely come to terms with the inhabitants of the Settlement through friendly negotiations," observes Mahatma Gandhi in a statement issued today.

The following is the text of the statement—

"Dr. A. G. Tendulkar, President, Goa Congress Committee, is the last one from Goa who has come to me with the latest news from the place. He tells me that there are several committees there working not necessarily for its inhabitants but for power. Yet at bottom the fight is good. He has produced voluminous papers in support of the statement that confusion reigns supreme in the minds of Goans, correctly described as Gomantakas. This confusion is bad in that the inhabitants of this Portuguese possession are novices in the art of real politics. Its separate existence, it is clear, can only depend on the goodwill of the mighty British Government and the impotence of its Indian residents.

CLEAR ISSUE

"It is, therefore, most essential for the success of the movement that it should be conducted by Gomantakas on the clearest possible issue, that is, civil liberty. The larger question of Swaraj should await its attainment by the whole of India unless, of course, the Portuguese Government wisely come to terms with the inhabitants of the Settlement through friendly negotiations.

"It cannot be attained by any direct action of the citizens, whether violent or non-violent. In non-violent action success is assured where every inhabitant is a hero ready to lay down his or her life. It is less to be thought of in Goa than in the more numerous and better seasoned and awakened British India. Therefore the clearest possible issue of civil liberty must be kept steadily in view.

NON-VIOLENCE URGED

"The second condition of success is that the fight must be through non-violent and, therefore also entirely by, open means. Thirdly there should be no parties struggling for attaining power and position. Where the goal and the means are common, different parties have no meaning.

"On reading the literature I find two such persons called loyalists who have already made slavish declarations saying that nothing is wrong in Goa and that a false agitation is being carried on by some mischievous persons. Let not the circle of these loyalists grow larger. The best way to avoid this growth is for all parties to become one"—A. P. I.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER

ARREST OF DR. LOHIA BY GOANESH GOVERNMENT

Mr. M. R. Masani: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state

(a) if Government are aware that Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia was, on entering Goa, put under arrest by the Portuguese authorities and held incommunicado for ten days, for the first three days in a dark and unventilated cell, and was then expelled from Goa for a period of five years and deported to the Province of Bombay,

(b) whether on 4th October, 1946, Dr. Lohia, while still in prison, wrote to the Honourable Member for External Affairs requesting him to take steps to persuade the Portuguese Government to give up applying International Law between Goa and the rest of India or, in the alternative, to secure an apology to Dr. Lohia for his illegal detention,

(c) whether Government agree that the action of the Portuguese authorities in detaining Dr. Lohia for a period of ten days constitutes a breach of International Law and an affront to a national and, therefore, to the Government of this country,

(d) whether Government have taken up the matter with the British Foreign Office with a view to diplomatic representations being made to the Portuguese Government and, if so, what results have been achieved, and

(e) whether Government are contemplating any further action in the matter by way of economic sanctions, appeal to the United Nations, or otherwise?

Mr. H. Weightman: (a) Government have received a communication from Dr. Lohia giving this information

(b) No letter was received from Dr. Lohia while he was still in prison but a copy of this letter was subsequently sent by him to Government

(c) and (d) Government are considering the legal implications and will take such action as may be considered necessary. They consider events in Goa to be a matter of importance and have already asked His Majesty's Government to have representations made on their behalf to the Portuguese Government through His Majesty's Embassy, Lisbon. The result of these representations is awaited.

(e) Any further action will depend on developments as well as on the legal advice obtained by Government.

Mr. M. E. Masani: I am sure we are all glad to know that diplomatic representations are being made through the British Foreign Office, but, with reference to part (a) of the question, will the Honourable Secretary please state if Government have any reason to doubt the veracity of the statement made by Dr Lohia as to the treatment he received while he was in detention in the Portuguese prison?

Mr. H. Weightman: The Government is not really in a position to make any statement on the actual treatment accorded to him and they will certainly not do so on information received from one side only.

Mr. M. E. Masani: Will Government, then, make inquiries through their Consul in Goa?

Mr. H. Weightman: We will consider that matter, if it is useful to make inquiries about a thing which has ceased to exist.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: In the consideration of this problem, will the Government of India also consider the question of Indian nationals not abusing foreign hospitality or right of asylum?

Mr. H. Weightman: That will be borne in mind.

Mr. M. E. Masani: Is the Honourable Secretary not aware that the detention of a national of a foreign country who enters certain territory is contrary to International Law and that the only right the Government of that territory has is of expelling the national who enters without a permit?

Mr. H. Weightman: I think that is rather a sweeping statement to make.

Mr. M. E. Masani: Do not the Government of India consider that the one month that has elapsed is sufficient to obtain the expert legal advice which they are now awaiting?

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: May I also request the External Affairs Department kindly to consult International lawyers as to the right of the nationals of one country going and starting agitations and mischief in a foreign country which has given them hospitality?

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO STANDING ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR INDUSTRIES AND SUPPLIES DEPARTMENT

Mr. President: I have to inform the Assembly that upto 12 Noon on Wednesday, the 6th November, 1946, the time fixed for receiving nominations for the purpose of election of one member to the Standing Advisory Committee for the Department of Industries and Supplies for the unexpired portion of the current financial year, one nomination was received. As there is only one candidate for the vacancy, I declare Mr Muhammad Rahmat-ullah to be duly elected to the Committee.

HINDU MARRIAGE DISABILITIES REMOVAL BILL.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh (Bombay City Non-Muhammadan Urban) Sir, I beg to move

"That the Bill to remove legal disabilities under Hindu Law in respect of marriage between Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

I do not propose to make a long speech because this question has been before the House for some time and the Select Committee by a large majority—I may say almost unanimously—has accepted not only the principle of the Bill but also the Bill as drafted. I am very happy to say that also the then Law Member, Sir Asoka Roy, not only agreed to the provisions of this Bill but also helped us to a great extent in clearing many of the misunderstandings.

Now, Sir, before I proceed further, let me clear some of the misunderstandings which exist with regard to this Bill both in this House and outside

[Dr G V Deshmukh]

This Bill deals with gotra and pravara, and it does not deal with the question of sapindas. Somehow or other, the impression has gone round that this means a question of endogamy and that marriages under this Bill are going to take place in the same blood, what are called co-sanguineous marriages. This Bill has nothing to do with this. It has nothing to do with co-sanguineous marriages, nor is it a question of endogamy. Indeed, so far as the prohibited degrees are concerned in the Hindu Law, this Bill does not interfere with them. You can still have your seven generations from the father and five generations from the mother so far as those restrictions are concerned. Now, Sir, I hope that with this explanation those who have been led to misunderstand the provisions of this Bill will disillusion their minds with regard to marrying in blood. So far as the question of gotra and pravara is concerned, as I have expressed myself before, I had taken the trouble of getting the opinions from learned sastris and pandits, whomsoever I could get at, and nobody understands gotra and pravara and what they mean today. Some people say pravara is more important others say that gotra is more important. Some will say there are four pravaras and 49 gotras, others will say there are only four gotras and 49 pravaras. In any case even Hindu lawyers of reputation have not been able to find out the exact meaning of gotra and what it represents. Some say it means family, others say it means blood, some others say it means grazing ground, while yet others say it means school. Therefore I submit the question is so ambiguous and so intricate that we do not see any light. I do not see why the Hindu society should spend all its energy over this futile and meaningless inhibition. All that this Bill intends to do is this, it does not say you go and marry some other person with the same gotra, it does not say that you can marry some other person with the same pravara, it does not do any thing of the kind. All that the Bill does is it is an enabling measure. All that it says is that if a marriage has been consummated between parties of the same gotra then the law shall not come in and say that this is invalid or that the children born of such marriages are illegitimate. That is all that this Bill intends to do. Sir, society is moving and moving pretty fast and if we, as Hindus are proud of our Hinduism I think every Hindu should be proud of his Hinduism, I think it is the bounden duty of every Hindu to see that unnecessary energy is not wasted in these meaningless and futile inhibitions. Hindu society now puts up with all kinds of indirect ways and means of evasion. I give you a case in point. There are marriages taking place between parties of the same gotra. What is the procedure? (Interruption.) I do not know what people in other provinces do? I am sure my Bombay friends will bear it out that Hindu society will put up with many indirect methods. Supposing a girl is of the same gotra as a boy. Then what is the procedure? The girl is given in adoption to a member who does not belong to the same gotra. When the girl is given in adoption she changes the gotra and then the two can be married. This is really fatuous. It is astonishing that Hindu society should put up with it. To begin with in Hindu society so far as I know a girl cannot be given in adoption, yet the Hindu society will put up with it and this is how the gotra is changed by the false method of adoption. The Hindu society will tolerate it they will accept that marriage but not a straightforward procedure like this. It is the duty of the Hindu society to put a stop to these indirect ways. Not only that. There is one thing more. Not only the intelligent public is of this opinion, but I find that the Bombay High Court also is of the same opinion that these gotras and pravaras have no meaning. In a recent decision in the Bombay High Court the case was taken to the High Court on the same plea that marriage was invalid because the parties belonged to the same gotra. The High Court decided otherwise. Under the circumstances let me urge upon this House that this is an enabling measure, a permissive measure. We do not know what gotra or pravara means. Instead of bending our knees and bowing our heads to this something that is absolutely ignorant superstition, let us be straightforward, let us clear some of our inhibitions so that the Hindu society may become more healthy. Sir, I commend my motion for taking the Select Committee report into consideration.

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That the Bill to remove legal disabilities under Hindu Law in respect of marriage between Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration"

Mr. P. B. Gole (Berar Non-Muhammadian) Sir, I have already given notice of an amendment to this Bill

Mr. President: This is not the stage for moving amendments. The Honourable Member is entitled to speak now, opposing the consideration of this Bill

Mr. P. B. Gole: Sir, so far as the first clause is concerned I oppose the Bill. The reasons are many. I should like to dispose of some of the wordy arguments, plausible arguments advanced by the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill. He says this is a permissive Bill. I do not understand what he means by permissive Bill. Marriage itself is a permissive thing. Everything of course depends upon the volition of the people. Those who do not want marriage need not marry. No law compels anybody to marry. Saying that this is a permissive Bill carries us no further. He says society has advanced. I do not understand what he means by advancement of society. If he means to say that manlatory provisions of law should be done away with and that instead of giving liberty licence should be given so far as marriage is concerned. I certainly am opposed to it. Society is always regulated. There are certain regulations in society which we are bound to obey. If my friend wants licence instead of liberty, I am certainly opposed to it. You will find, Sir, that my friend says that sapinda relationship is maintained. When sagotra relationship goes there is the clause about asagotra. I have not been able to follow him. The wording in the Bill is if it is between Hindus belonging to the same gotra or pravara. The original text of Manu on this point reads thus

Asapinda cha ya matursagotra cha ya pituh

Sa prashastā dīpā teṇām darkarmanī mathune

So far as the mother's side is concerned, the wording is asapinda. So far as the father's side is concerned, it is asagotra. If you take away asagotra, you allow sapinda relationship to remain. I do not know if my Honourable friend has read fully the opinion received on this Bill. Some are in favour of allowing sagotra marriages subject to certain conditions. A few people also express doubt that will be created in the minds of the public if you take away the word asagotra. If asagotra is taken away, then sapinda relationship remains and I do not think that will necessarily follow because Manu's text as I read it is Asagotra cha ya pituh (on the father's side—Asagotra). Marriages are allowed between two persons having no common gotra.

Now as soon as you take away asagotra, then sagotra marriage is allowed, and if sagotra is allowed sapinda marriage also will be allowed. There is no restriction on sapinda relationship at all so far as the father side is concerned. So far as the mother's line is concerned, there is no doubt that this sapinda relationship remains. Of course it necessarily follows because asapinda is included in asagotra. But if you take away asagotra and allow sagotra marriage it will necessarily be contended that really speaking as soon as you take away asagotra, sapinda is not in Manu's text, and therefore even in consanguinity marriage will be allowed. In fact even cousins two degrees removed will be allowed to marry according to this Bill. Of course I know Dr. Deshmukh does not intend it, he has himself stated that he does not want sapinda relationship.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I said nothing of the kind, so far as this Bill is concerned it does not touch sapinda relationship.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Then of course my Honourable friend probably means that even in the sapinda relationship marriage should be allowed as soon as you take away asagotra.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Sir, will the Honourable Member say what he means and not what I mean? He does not know what I mean

Mr. P. B. Gole: I did not know that Dr Deshmukh speaks in a language which is not understood by us

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: It is quite plain

Mr. P. B. Gole: It is not I only who understood it in this manner but so many learned people who gave their views in favour of removing this bar on sagotra have expressed doubts that if the Bill stands as it is and you allow marriage between sagotras, then marriage between sapindas will be feasible

Shri D. P. Karmarkar (Bombay Southern Division Non-Muhammadian Rural) Sir, is it not a fact that marriages are not only governed by the rule of the prohibition of marriages in the same gotra, but are also further governed by the rule prohibiting marriages within a certain degree of consanguinity

Mr. President. The Honourable Member is putting forward an argument Mr Gole will proceed

Mr. P. B. Gole: I am pointing out that all these texts are derived from the text of Manu which actually governs marriages so far as sagotra relationship is concerned There are hundreds of commentaries on this, and even Vigyan eswara who has written the Mitakshara, that is, the commentary on Yagnavalka, has clearly stated that sagotra marriages are prohibited In fact in matters of jurisprudence we find that when certain orders are given they are sometimes mandatory and sometimes recommendatory But mandatory orders are generally followed by a sanction And if any sanction is given and any prayaschitta is prescribed for interdiction of a rule that rule should be considered as a mandatory proposition From this point of view we have got to examine whether if sagotra marriage is performed any prayaschitta is prescribed for it. I will read certain verses in this connection Baudhyana says

Sagotramched amatya upayachchhet mativat nam vibhriyat

It means that in case of marriage between sagotras the girl so married should be treated as mother who should be supported and she should be discarded by the husband

Then there is Vashishtha

Parineeya sagotram tu saman pravaram tatha

Kritva tasya samutsargam divyashchandrayanam charet

This also says that in sagotra marriage the bride should be discarded It is really no marriage and the Shastric order is that the girl should be supported

Then Raghunandana has quoted verses from Sumamnd to this effect

So nanarsheyeem vivahya chandrayanam chareta paritrayya chamam vibhriyat

If she is so married she should be discarded, only she should be supported

So the law as it stands is that sagotra marriage is prohibited but if the marriage does take place the bride should be discarded and the husband should support her

But there is another difficulty which Dr Deshmukh has not explained although he has consulted so many learned books and pundits There is the verse

Sagotraddhishiyate nari vivahat saptamepade

The law is that on the saptapadi being performed the girl loses her gotra. Now if marriage is allowed between sagotras this verse becomes redundant because she must be deprived of her own gotra and she assumes the gotra of her husband, because she is supposed to die in the family of her birth and is reborn in the family of her husband So if sagotra marriage is allowed this verse as also all Shastric injunctions become redundant My Honourable friend talked of the necessity of improving Hindu culture and the law of marriage. It should be understood that the Hindu Law of marriage differs materially from the systems of marriage in other religions. Our marriage is not a contract pure and simple but a religious sacrament, when husband and wife are joined the marriage becomes indissoluble and so it should not be trifled with. My Honourable friend's Bill by allowing sagotra marriages would offend against religious texts, and so it should not have been introduced at all. My Honourable friend said that in a recent case the Bombay High Court has upheld sagotra marriage. But that is not correct. They have only upheld the custom and not sagotra marriage. They have stated that among Deccani Brahmans in Maharashtra there is a custom whereby a daughter is given in adoption to another having another gotra and if she is then married the marriage is held to be good, although originally in the family of her birth she had a common gotra with that of her husband. In a recent decision of the Bombay High Court both the Chief Justice and Justice Gajendragadkar have stated that as the law stands marriage between sagotras is not allowed at all. I will read the concluding portion of the judgment of Justice Gajendragadkar.

"However, as I have pointed out, the Privy Council have consistently taken the view that under the Mitakshara school of Hindu law the laws of Vivasvatar must be accepted as authoritative and binding. That being so there is no alternative but to hold that marriage between sagotra persons is invalid under Hindu law."

But they have stated that there is a custom and as we say amongst Hindus Shashtad modhu baleyasce. That means custom override the law. Similarly a custom has been held to be valid when a girl is given in adoption. As soon as a girl is given in adoption the gotra changes, and in order to facilitate that there should be asagotra marriage this scheme is resorted to, but they are very much anxious to see to the religious texts because after all marriage under Hindu Law is a sacramental thing and they do not want that this should be interfered with in a light manner as Dr. Deshmukh wants to do.

Sgt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadian Rural) He wants to perform an operation.

Mr. P. B. Gole: He is an expert in surgery and he wants to use his sharp knife so far as our religious texts are concerned. I am very much afraid whether by cutting these religious texts he will keep the Hindu religion alive. I do not know.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I will make it more healthy.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I must tell you that this is not an overgrowth in Hindu religion. It has been stated by the Honourable Member in his Statement of Objects and Reasons that this is an archaic law. I do not know what he means by that. Hindu religion is archaic and it is the oldest religion. Why is he fighting shy of archaic Hindu Law? If he says that it is archaic then even the sacrificial fire is archaic. Then what is the need of saptapadi, that is also archaic. The vow that is taken before the sacrificial fire namely Dharma charithe cha kame cha naticharami is also archaic. Therefore I do not think that this is a question which should be trifled with by men like Dr. Deshmukh who are proud of the Hindu religion. I do not understand, really speaking, why he is coming forward with this Bill which is not wanted by anybody. If we were to scrutinize the opinions that have been expressed with regard to this Bill we will find that there are more against it than in its favour. I have tried to count them, and I find that 121 are against this Bill and as many as 91 opinions are in favour. If you scrutinize these, you will find that all those persons, who are in favour of the Bill have not tried to explain the mandatory provisions of law. They have not also tried to go into the question of necessity or otherwise of having asagotra marriages. They say that society has advanced and perhaps many of them have come from Europe after having European education, have come to the conclusion that all that happens in the European society is good for our society also. Probably that is the idea underlying these so called reforms, and [Mr. P. B. Gole] because in the European society marriages are allowed even amongst cousins two degrees or three degrees removed, similarly they want that marriages should be allowed in the Hindu society. I do not understand how the customs that prevail in the European society or amongst the Westerners can fit in in our society.

Khan Abdul Ghani Khan (North-West Frontier Province General): It is also allowed in the Asiatic society, except amongst the Hindus. A muslim can marry his first cousin.

Mr. P. B. Gole: But there is absolutely no reason why we should take up the same custom. We have got our own culture and a very old culture too, and we do not understand why, in the absence of any real necessity, and just because men like Dr. Deshmukh are of advanced views and they want that the society should be moulded in this fashion, that we should depart from our religion. If they do not want to follow customs of the Hindus, nobody objects, they may marry in any form they like.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: They may do without it.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Yes. Hindu law does not come against them, but if you want that those persons who want to abide by their scriptures and who want to preserve their brahma form of marriage should also adopt this, it would be very unfair. I do not see any reason why you should enforce this on them. Many of the opinions that have been expressed against this Bill have given very cogent reasons as to why sagotra marriages should not be allowed. I have already explained to you about the difficulties in the Bill as it stands, but there are other very cogent reasons as to why this sagotra marriage Bill is obnoxious to the religious sentiments of the people and will, really speaking, take away the religious aspects of marriage. I do not know whether Dr. Deshmukh likes the religious aspect of the matter. Of course he is here with another Bill by which he wants to nullify the sacramental form of marriage because he wants that marriage should be registered. He wants marriage to be a contractual relation between husband and wife. If that is the idea, I do not understand why he has come up with this Bill. But so far as this Bill is concerned, which attacks the very fundamentals of the institution of marriage, namely, the rules as laid down by Manu and other commentators—I have very strong objection. Those who want to perform brahma form of marriage may do so, but if they do not want to have brahma form of marriage, they can very well go to a registrar and have their marriage registered under the Civil Marriage Act. My Honourable friend stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons that they have got conscientious objection to get their marriages registered. What is the conscientious objection? Their conscience is not stirred when they violate the principle of sagotra. They want sagotra marriage and their conscience does not bite them there. They say sagotra marriage should be allowed, but when the question comes of having civil marriage, apart from the brahma form of marriage, their conscience is stirred. I want to say that this is really a convenient conscience. It has no basis and it is only a reason advanced in order to justify such a measure. I may point out in this connection that Mr. Govind Deshmukh, brother of my Honourable friend Dr. Deshmukh, moved a similar Bill in the last Assembly and when that Bill was being discussed on the floor of the House, Sir Sultan Ahmed, who was the Law Member then,

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Were you present in the House at that time?

Mr. P. B. Gole: I was not.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member will address the Chair.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: He is telling stories about which he was not an eye-witness. He is using his arguments on hearsay.

Mr. P. B. Gole: There are printed proceedings of this House in which all this is mentioned. At that time the Law Member had introduced a comprehensive Bill about Marriage. The Bill was styled "A Bill to codify the Hindu Law relating to Marriage", and in that they had attached at that time—because the Law Committee recommended such a measure—an explanatory note 1 would read to you clause 4 of the Bill. The Law Committee has been sitting. I do not know whether the final report of the Hindu Law Committee has come or not, but I am sure that this was a Bill brought forward by the Government on the recommendations of the Law Committee and in Clause 4 of that Bill it has been clearly stated that a sacramental marriage may be solemnized between any two Hindus upon the following conditions, namely, neither already must have a husband living at the time of marriage both the parties must belong to the same caste if the parties are members of a caste having gotras and pravaras they must not belong to the same gotra or have a common pravara.

That is one of the conditions so far as sacramental marriage is concerned, and in this sacramental marriage even the Law Committee, which has been sitting for the improvement of the Hindu Law and they are going to submit a report, we have a comprehensive code and it may be brought before the House. They have maintained that so far as marriage between sagotras and pravaras is concerned the present interdiction stands. I do not think that after this Hindu society wants such a Bill. The members of the Committee are all Hindus and they are learned in Hindu Law. They have recommended that the interdiction of the pravaras and sub-pravaras should stand. The majority of them follow the old scriptures and as you probably know at the time when the contract of marriage takes place both on the side of the bride and the bridegroom, their fathers, grandfathers great grandfathers, and great great grandfathers with their gotras and pravara is pronounced and then only the marriage takes place. Therefore, at that time when the question would arise, at that time when the contract is actually solemnized, if a sagotra bride and bridegroom are put forward, it will be very much against all the rules of the Shastras which have been prescribed for marriages.

This Bill has been introduced into the House by Government. Probably because of the war it was not proceeded with or perhaps and instead of having piecemeal legislation they want this one code to be put in first. But the Bill stands and it has not been withdrawn. Of course after introduction of the Bill it has not been proceeded with. But once the Government Bill is before the House I do not understand why Dr. Deshmukh has been anxious to put forward again such a Bill, which is not only controversial but creates a number of doubts as to whether after marriage between sagotras the question of interrelation or sapindaship remains.

I would read to you certain portions from the Bengal Varnashram Swarajya Sangha, because that is a very pertinent thing.

"As to the statement that sagotra marriage is current (1) among the sudras, and (2) among some classes of Brahmins are answered as follows:

"That there has been some difference in the rules of conduct to be followed by Dwijas and Sudras is not a new discovery. Sagotra marriage is not forbidden for Sudras but it must be mentioned that even among higher classes of Sudras such marriage is rare.

"If it is a fact that sagotra marriage is current among some Brahmins that does not necessitate that the entire class of Brahmins should give up their ancestral Shastric conduct and imitate the unshastric conduct of a few others who have fallen from their ancestral conduct for some reason or other.

"Some rare cases of misconduct cannot justify legislative sanction to such misconduct among others. In fact, the special cases of misconduct among special classes of people have been mentioned in the Shastras and if all those cases of misconduct are sanctioned by legislation there will be nothing short of chaos in society."

This Varnashram Swarajya Sangha of Bengal further answers the reasonings of the mover of this Bill about eugenics. Of course I am not well versed in eugenics. That is a science which doctors know more than I do. But I know this much that here is an opinion about this eugenics given by eminent doctors from America and that has been quoted by this Varnashram Swarajya Sangha. Eugenics also support the view of our ancient sages. Charaka has:

[Mr P. B. Gole]
 been cited. The well known American author also speaks of different gotras of the husband and wife. The quotation from Charaka is

Atulya gotriasya rajah kshayante raho vishushte mithunee kintasya of course, Dr Deshmukh will say that this is what Charaka says. That is our native physician. But even doctors from America are of the same opinion. Here is the opinion of Dr Berwis. He says

"My researches give me authority to say that over 10 per cent of the deaf and dumb and over 5 per cent of the idiotics in our State institutions are offsprings of kindred parents, i.e., cousins. The frequency of imperfection of the children of such marriages has been noticed from the time of Moses or earlier and is proved by the fact that all the great moral codes—Hindu, Mosaic and Roman—have forbidden such unions."

Then there is Dr Price. He says

"Consanguinity of parents has been supposed to be the cause of mental defects in children such as idiocy, imbecility, feeble-mindedness, moral imbecility, degeneracy and Oligophrenia, etc."

This is also the view of Dr Fletcher Beach. Here Dr Berwis has referred to Hindu codes and from a moral point of view Hindus do not allow marriages between people of the same gotra. I do not understand, as I said, much of eugenics. That is a science by itself. I am quoting here the opinions of eminent doctors from America and England and they pursue these interdictions and prohibitions. One other difficulty would be that in the same family—I am talking of agnates and cognates—if you are able to trace a common ancestor, though because they are several degrees apart we may want to have a marriage, it is repugnant to our sense of propriety and decency. To marry in the same agnate family would be repugnant to our sense of decency. That those upon whom for generations we have looked as our mothers and sisters should be eligible as wives is repugnant to Hindu Law. I do not understand the necessity for such a Bill at all. Who has moved Dr Deshmukh to introduce this Bill in this Assembly? For the lack of such a piece of legislation is there so much hardship in the country as a whole?

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I have been paid a lawyer's fees.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I did not know that my Honourable friend is a lawyer too. I know he is only a doctor. He may have got his fees as a lawyer and I do not know about that.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: It is only lawyers who do something when they are paid fees but others do things on their own.

Sgt. N. V. Gadgil: Some adventure.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Let us confine ourselves to the Bill which we are discussing. All the opinions collected here and circulated all say with one voice that this Bill is not only inexpedient but it offends our religious idea of a marriage and therefore it should not be adopted at all. If Dr Deshmukh thinks that in the Bombay Province there is need for such a legislation, Bombay has got the power under the Act of 1935. The third legislative list gives powers of legislation so far as marriage and divorce are concerned and in that list the Provinces as well as the Central Legislature have concurrent powers. I am not quite sure that there is any necessity for sagotra marriage in the Bombay Province but if there is really any need for it, he should move a Bill in the Bombay Provincial Assembly. We are usurping the power of the Provinces.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Do you want me to seek election to the Bombay Legislative Assembly?

Mr. P. B. Gole: If you so desire, you may do it. We are here usurping the rights of the provinces so far as Hindu Law is concerned. Hindu Law is different in different provinces. Even the interpretation of Mitakshara is different in different provinces. There is a Bombay School, a Bengal School and a Madras School of Hindu Law, which interpret in different ways the Yagnavalkya Smṛiti and Mitākshara The commentators in the Provinces differ in their interpretation Therefore even so far as sagotra marriage is concerned although Manu has laid down Asagotra cha ya pitauḥ There may be a different interpretation in Bengal Boudayana has one interpretation and Nilakanta has another It is really the business of the provinces to consider what is proper for them My learned friend wants to force a law upon all the provinces but do they want it?

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: It is only permissive

Mr. P. B. Gole: Every thing is permissive Who is forcing you, for that matter, to marry? You are really usurping the right of the provinces to legislate so far as questions of marriage is concerned I go further and say that the right of the provincial legislatures to discuss their needs and to say what law would be suitable for them is being taken away by Dr. Deshmukh What right has he to encroach upon the field of the provincial legislature, although of course, as I said, it is in the Concurrent List Dr. Deshmukh can legislate for the whole of India but thereby he deprives the provincial legislature of their right to discuss a particular piece of legislation which will affect them If the provinces want a legislation in a particular manner they can do it If Dr. Deshmukh's Bill is passed today and the provinces want to amend that, there will have to be another legislation in the province

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official) They need not do it

Mr. P. B. Gole: It is true that it is a permissive legislation but at the same time it is an attack against our scriptures and our śāstras which should not be allowed

I would draw the attention of the House to the report of the Hindu Law Committee in connection with piecemeal legislation On page 10 para 12, the Report says

"We need not continue any further this distasteful analysis of the technical difficulties of a legislative measure which was inspired by high motives and which in spite of its faults marks an important stage in the evolution of women's rights Difficulties of this kind are inevitable in piecemeal legislation effecting fundamental changes in the Hindu Law The only safe course is not to make any fundamental changes by brief isolated Acts If fundamental changes have to be made it is wisest to survey the whole field and enact a code if not of the whole Hindu Law, at least of those branches of it which are necessarily affected by that contemplated legislation"

You will see there that marriage is a chapter by itself My Honourable friend takes just one sentence of it on sagotra marriage and comes forward with a piece of legislation If he took the marriage chapter as a whole and brought a comprehensive Bill I could have understood it

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: What would have happened to your Rishi's injunctions then?

Mr. P. B. Gole: That will be answered when you bring the Bill Perhaps Dr. Deshmukh will be discomfited when he brings any such Bill Today he has come with a Bill for the removal of the sagotra interdiction Tomorrow he will say that the vows taken by the bride and bridegroom before the sacred fire should be abolished Perhaps Dr. Deshmukh will then say that this is all permissive and that he is not forcing anybody not to take a vow before the sacred fire

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: That would be codification Will you support it?

Mr. P. B. Gole: Yes, codification will be supported But that is not the point here Marriage under Hindu Law is altogether a separate chapter dealing with all aspects of marriage Dr. Deshmukh brought in last time a Bill for the separate maintenance of married women I objected to that at the time but the Bill was passed in spite of my opposition

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: This is also going to be You have spoken your mind correctly

Mr. P. B. Gole: I will certainly bless you for having destroyed our Hindu Law, because such persons are always wanted. That is not the point The point is this That after this Law was passed many law journals criticised this Law and they said that this is a nasty piece of legislation. In fact here also the Hindu Law Committee have criticised at great length the old Bill of Dr Deshmukh which was passed regarding Hindu Women's Right to Property Act. Here also they gave a suggestion to these enthusiastic reformers

[Mr. P. B. Gole]

I P. M. not to come forward with such piecemeal legislation. If you want to make any improvement, if you want to codify the law and make it certain, then you should certainly bring in a comprehensive Bill. Of course Dr Deshmukh is not going to be guided by any such advice, but even Dr Deshmukh will admit that he has not even tried to define what is pravara and what is a gotra. He says that people are at a loss to define it. That is not correct. But you should at least define what you understand by a gotra—whether for instance if one family you wish to restrict the gotra, whether you wish to restrict the word gotra to a family, or whether you want to restrict it to a group of families having the same gotra. When you want that marriage between sagotras should be allowed, you must define what a gotra is. In this Bill gotra is not defined at all. On the contrary everybody is left to imagine what a gotra will be, everybody is left to define what a pravara is. That will be creating chaos. Taking my own family, for instance, I have got a family surname and if I am asked, I can trace my own ancestor up to the samanodakas. Does Dr Deshmukh want that in my family also after 7 degrees, marriage between a girl and a boy should take place? Why should it be? What is the reason? As between endogamy and exogamy—my friend admitted in his argument that exogamy is good and endogamy is not good. If that is so, is it not endogamy to marry in one family? How does he define this relationship also? He does not define it, but my main objection to this Bill is that it is so vague that it is likely to create confusion. I would read to you the views of Diwan Bahadur Bashyam Avangar, because he is a very learned judge who comes from Madras. On page 26 of these opinions, in para. 6, he says

"It is a settled principle that legislation ought not to be lightly resorted to. There should be no attempt to change a customary law except in cases of general or crying need or to remove glaring or general hardship. This applies with great force in the present case, as the law, which is sought to be interfered with, has an ancient and religious sanction."

This is a very sound reason that the learned and retired judge has given, that you should not really trifle with our old laws, ancient as they are. Because they are ancient is not a crime, it is not a mistake on the part of our Rishis. But when sound reasons can be given for not resorting to these sagotra marriages, I do not understand why Dr Deshmukh should come forward with this Bill. One thing may be noted in this connection. It has nothing to do with the rights of women for which Dr Deshmukh has been fighting. This concerns both men and women—the bride and the bridegroom, and therefore it should not be said—because perhaps the women members of our Assembly might come forward and say that it is in order to defend their rights that Dr Deshmukh has brought forward this Bill and therefore they should support this Bill.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: This is also canvassing!

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: It is on a par with the rest of the speech. Carry on.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member may carry on.

Mr. P. B. Gole: In so far as this Bill for sagotra marriages is concerned, even the Shankaracharya of Kanchi Peet has given his opinion. He is our religious head and he has stated in para. 2 at page 27

"The faith of the Hindus in the wisdom of their Rishis is fortified by the experience of uncounted generations who have lived the Hindu mode of life. Every religious community observes, in a narrow or wide range, the prohibition of marriages within certain degrees of consanguinity. The instinct of objection, apart from the commands of religion, against marriages within certain degrees of affinity has been most ancient and universal. The Bill under reference wants to do away with that principle, as prescribed by the Shastras. The rules on this topic in the Smritis and their commentaries are clear, definite and emphatic. There are texts of Gobhila, Gautama, Manu, Katika, Yagnavalkya, Vasishtha, Shatapatha, Vyasa, Kartikeya, Narada and Patanjali, which unequivocally condemn sagotra marriages is invalid. The Mitakshara expressly states that a girl who is a sapinda, Sagotra, or Samanyaprasava, does not acquire the status of a wife on marriage. Rishis, Apastamba, Shatapatha and Bodhayana clearly lay down that if a girl of the same gotra has been taken in marriage unwittingly, she must immediately separate and be treated like a mother. The idea of a sagotra marriage has been as repugnant to Hindus from the most ancient times, as the marriage of a brother and sister is among other religious communities."

You will see that our instinct is this, that in our own family we regard the womenfolk as our mothers or sisters, and to think of allowing a marriage between members of the same family is not only repugnant but is almost revolting. Our shastras are against it and even our religious heads have not countenanced it. In fact, as I said in the beginning of my remarks, if Dr. Deshmukh were to peruse—of course he has not the patience to pursue this—the opinions of learned people, learned in our shastras, he would have easily found out that there are very cogent reasons why a sagotra marriage should not be allowed. I would also give the proceedings of the meeting of the Hindu public held under the auspices of the Hindu Central Committee and presided over by Mr. Nagesha Rao. You will see that the Hindu public there have adopted this resolution. This is the Resolution passed in a meeting presided over by Shree A. Nagesha Rao.

"Resolved that the Hindu public of Punganu, emphatically protest against the introduction of sagotra and intercaste marriage Bills by Mr. Deshmukh in the Legislative Assembly as their provisions are subversive of Hindu religious law and culture, resulting in disruption of family and mischievously interfering with the existing law of inheritance of property of Hindu family and other kinds of untold misery. Resolved that the above Resolution be communicated to the Secretary, Varnasrama Swarajya Sangha, Madras to be forwarded to the authorities concerned."

Here you will see that the Hindu community in a meeting assembled here condemned the Bill. I will show a number of such Resolutions. Here is the Resolution of the Varnashrama Swarajya Sangha, Shimoga District, Mysore.

"This meeting not only condemns the Hindu Marriage Disabilities Removal Bill introduced by Mr. G. V. Deshmukh in the Central Legislative Assembly as it completely defaces the Hindu Dharma but also respectfully prays His Excellency the Viceroy not to give the slightest room for any such legislations."

You will see that the Hindu community resent the introduction of a Bill of this kind which interferes with their religion and culture. There is another Resolution of the same Sangha which says—

"This legislation will ruin the Hindu civilisation which has been in practice from thousands of years in regular order. If this legislation has been passed, Hindus will suffer much as it causes a great injury to their civilisation and Dharma. The legislations of this kind will in no way help but cause havoc in India. It comes in the way of freedom of Indians to be at peace and happy with their own religion and customs. This legislation is opposed to the promise given by Her Majesty Queen Victoria with a proclamation to Indians that in no way their religion and culture will be handled upon. Therefore we humbly and respectfully pray that no room should be given for any legislation which affects the Indians in their religion and customs."

Then there are a number of other protests. There is one from the Brahmin Congress in Madras.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member need not read all the individual opinions. It is sufficient if he gives the collective effect of them.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I will only give the salient facts.

Mr. President: These points may be taken up at 2-30.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly reassembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (the Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

ELECTION OF MEMBERS TO THE DEFENCE CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

Mr. President: I have to inform the Assembly that up to 12 noon on Wednesday, the 6th November 1946 the time fixed for receiving nominations for the purpose of election of three members to the Defence Consultative Committee, four nominations were received. Subsequently one candidate withdrew his

[Mr. President] candidature. As the number of remaining candidates is equal to the number of vacancies, I declare the following members to be duly elected —

1. Sardar Jogendra Singh
2. Mr. Sasanka Sekhla Sastry
3. Khwaja Nazim-uddin

In this connection I may point out that as Khwaja Nazimuddin has not so far taken the oath of office, he will not be able to function in the Committee until he takes the oath.

HINDU MARRIAGE DISABILITIES REMOVAL BILL.—contd.

Mr. P. B. Gole Sir, I was trying to give some of the important opinions regarding the Sapota marriage Bill and I have noted your suggestion that I should refer to them wherever my disesteeming character is mentioned. I will try to restrict myself to making such comments only as will throw further light on the objections that have been seriously taken to the Bill. In this connection I would like to point out that the Bombay Presidency Women's Council have passed a resolution and in that resolution although they approve of such marriages in Hindu law they say that the proposed legislation should not be allowed. Their opinion reads like this:

The Council says: "As the Bill on principle... But the Council is of opinion that such individual attempts to deal with Social betterment are not at all desirable as they will create great deal of trouble and disturb the present Social structure of the Hindu Community. Now when the Central Government has appointed a Special Committee to go into the details of revising the Hindu law in all its aspects, my Council would wish the same Committee to take up this question also."

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh May I ask if this resolution is in connection with the Bill or in connection with the other Bill?

Mr. P. B. Gole It is in connection with this Bill. With regard to the other Bill, there is of course tremendous opposition from the women also but this is not the time for it.

Now Sir, there is another very important opinion which is expressed by the All-India Muslim League Swamy Singh, Bombay. In the course of their opinion they observe:

"The Bill seeks to revolutionise the existing Hindu law of marriage by sweeping innovations of a drastic character introduced by the ancient Rishis and law givers, not on any sound principle but on the poor ground of expediency as stated in the preamble and for the benefit of a few so-called conscientious objectors to civil marriage who are heterodox and who do not represent the correct viewpoint of the Hindu Shastras and whose numerical strength is infinitesimally small and insignificant as compared with that of the orthodox Hindus all over India with overwhelming majority."

Further on they observe:

"Dr. Deshmukh has further urged that the rule of Hindu law prohibiting Sapota and Saprasava marriages is not necessary from the point of view of eugenics and stated that there can be no view of medical grounds against such marriage though he has defended on medical grounds the rule prohibiting marriages between Sapinda relations within the 7th degree is necessary. Here also the Doctor has failed to understand the exact significance and meaning of the words Sapota and Sapinda and their interrelation and tried to make out a distinction between them as if Sapotas are not blood relations while Sapindas are blood relations but which is clearly wrong as pointed out above. His remarks therefore in favour of Sapota marriages as being free from any objection from the point of eugenics and on medical grounds are misconceived and not to the point, and they do not deserve any serious consideration. It is hardly necessary to remind the learned Doctor that modern science has led to a collection of valuable statistics relating to heredity, problems of inheritance of blood and the organic relationship between several generations of ancestors and descendants and made a further advance into the laws governing the transmission of hereditary physical and mental qualities and predispositions from remote ancestors to their descendants and progeny which are not confined only to 7 degrees but which reach descendants even beyond 14 generations. In short the rule prohibiting marriages between blood relations is based on a natural law and a violation of which is bound to deteriorate the future population. The same rule is mentioned by the ancient Hindu law givers who have given a good deal of time to studying the value of such transmission."

I need not pursue this subject, but I have pointed out that the All-India Varnashrama Swarajya Sangha, Bombay, have very clearly answered the question of exigencies raised by the learned Doctor.

Now, Sir, there is another argument which has been answered by this very Varnashrama Swarajya Sangha, They say

"If the Doctor turns his eyes to history he will find that 'no religion of the world emblem of an ancient civilisation so continuous and unbroken as that of India and the worth and value of which have been proved by eminent scholars of the West. In India the ideas of the Vedic period still are a vital force and even the ritual of the Rishis is not wholly disused. It would therefore be rash and presumptuous if one argues that because the Vedic cult or religion is archaic being the oldest in the world it is barbarous, uncivilised and not worthy of being our ideal. Regarding the argument that several persons who favour the proposed reform in marriage have conscientious objection to civil marriage and that the Bill should therefore be passed for them, it may be said that the Mover has not shown what is the percentage of such persons in the total population of Hindus. It is submitted that such persons would be found to be very small fraction of the total population."

Then in paragraph 9 they say

"There is a further serious objection to the Bill that it is ambiguous as to and indefinite in as much as it seeks to validate marriage between the sapnotas which includes also agnota sapnotas within even degrees of blood relationship is pointed out above. The Mover has stated in the Bombay debate that his Bill is not going to affect Hindu law so far as blood relationship is concerned, but the Bill contains no specific clause exempting from its operation the law of marriage between sapnotas within seven degrees of blood relationship."

I have already referred to this in the course of my speech. Then there is this very important observation made by the Sangha

The Sangha further desires to point out here the well known principle of jurisprudence which is recognised and followed by all Governments, that if it is established that in a community a certain practice or custom not offending morals is traditionally followed by the people continuously for a very long period, it is the duty of the State to give protection against any interference with the exercise of the said practice or custom. It is therefore submitted that it is the duty of the British Government to protect the sacred rights of millions of religiously minded Hindus and preserve the integrity of their sacred law of marriage from legislative interference. The Sangha further submits that the Government should oppose the Bill in the interest of millions of orthodox Hindus and must not rights and have it thrown out on principle on the several grounds mentioned above.

Sir, I have given some important observations against sapnotas marriage. I will now give some views in favour of the Bill and show how the reasons given by them are not at all good reasons.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member need not read these opinion in extenso, he might give the gist and then give his own arguments.

Mr. P. B. Gole: You must have noticed Sir that I am not reading in extenso but merely touching on them. In fact the opinion of the Varnashrama Swarajya Sangha runs into five pages and I have read only a little portion of it.

Mr. President: What I mean is that extracts should not be read at great length. The memorandum or opinion may consist of several pages and the Honourable Member may read only a page of that. But all that he is quoting is mere repetition over and over again of the same argument in different words. Therefore he may just refer to the points and then reply to those points.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Besides, are we not supposed to have read those opinions? I expect copies are supplied to every Member?

Mr. President: Even without that assumption I am asking him to curtail his remarks.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Sir, I was going to point out the interpretation of sapnotas as put by the District and Sessions Judge of Ferozepur. He says

"Two persons are sapnotas if both of them are descended in the main line from the Rishi or sage after whose name the gotra is called. Two persons are samanaprarata i.e. of the same prarata if they are descendants in the main line of the three parental ancestors of the founder of the gotra."

He is against such legislation.

[Mr. P. B. Gole]

Similar instances could be given where the learned doctor's arguments in support of his Bill have been cogently answered by persons who are against this Bill. I will give you instances now of opinions in favour of the Bill. The Oudh Bar Association is in favour as also the District Judge of Ratnagiri who says

I am in favour of both the object and the provision of the Bill."

But he does not try to discuss the Shastric laws and the necessity for those laws and how that necessity has now disappeared. It seems to me that the opinion is practically prepared. They do not want to see what the old laws are and they go on saying that it is for the reformation of society. I may point out here that except perhaps in India old laws are everywhere expected. Even in England the rituals prescribed by the Catholic religion in cases of marriage are adhered to even now. And even in crowning the King the old methods are followed. They have preserved their old rites and customs. So far as Hindus are concerned, friends like Dr. Deshmukh are anxious to exercise and use their scissors or sharp knife and cut at the root of our religious texts. In this connection I will read the opinion of Sri Gurdas Banerjee, a very learned High Court Judge who in his book on Hindu Law and Studian says this on page 31:

"The importance of the institution of marriage is too well recognised to require any comment. It is the source of every domestic comfort from infancy to old age, it is necessary for the preservation and the well being of our species, it awakens and develops the best feelings of our nature, it is the source of important legal rights and obligations, and in its higher forms it has tended to raise the weaker half of the human race from a state of humiliating servitude. To the Hindu, the importance of marriage is heightened by the sanctions of religion. 'By no people,' says Sir T. Strange, 'is greater importance attached to marriage than by the Hindus.' In Hindu law it is regarded as one of the ten sanskars or sacraments, necessary for regeneration of men of the twice born classes and the only sacrament for women and vudras. It being a settled doctrine of the Hindu religion that one must have a son to save him from a place of torment called put, marriage, as the primary means to that end, becomes a religious necessity. This necessity, as regards the Brahman, is further pointed out in another way. 'A Brahman' says the Veda, immediately on being born, is produced a debtor in three obligations to the holy saints, for the practice of religious duties to the gods, for the performance of sacrifice to his forefathers, for offspring. Accordingly Manu ordains that 'after he has read the Veda, in the form prescribed by law, has legally begotten a son, and has performed sacrifices to the best of his power, he has paid his three debts.'"

You will see, Sir, that in Hindu society marriage has come to be regarded as a religious sacrament. It has got a religious duty and really speaking marriage laws are such as to elevate society. Now, Sir, by making these inroads into the expressed texts of Hindu Law, I submit that Dr. Deshmukh is doing a great disservice to our religion and to religious texts. He will not attach the same sanctity to marriage system and marriage institution as other Hindus attach and for that purpose he may require marriage to be simplified. But that is absolutely no reason why Dr. Deshmukh should try to revolutionise the Hindu Law which is followed by a majority of people who follow Hindu religion. A via media was arrived at by the Hindu Law Committee. In the Bill which was moved in this Assembly in 1943, they divided marriage into two parts, firstly sacramental form and secondly civil marriage, so that a Hindu could marry in either of the forms. Those who want to resort to sacramental form of marriage could perform the same according to the old Hindu Law under which sagotra relationship is prohibited for the purpose of marriage. But if they do not want to follow the laws laid down by Manu, then a provision is made for civil marriage under the Marriage Law. They had also made a provision in that Bill. Supposing a marriage is performed according to sacramental rights between sagotras, then they say that in such cases on account of some mistake or misapprehension on the part of those who performed the marriage, the doctrine of factum valet should be applied, and according to that doctrine if a marriage is proved to have been performed according to religious rights, although between sagotras still that should be recognised as a valid marriage. Therefore, without disturbing the texts of Hindu Law, so far as sagotra marriages are concerned they found out a via media by which the object which Dr. Deshmukh has can be achieved. In this case, he would not have any conscientious objection because provision has been made for civil marriage where no question of consanguinity or sapindaship may arise. They can go and have the marriage registered and it can be regarded as a Hindu marriage and the progeny of that marriage would be entitled to succession according to Hindu Law. All these objects could have been met and as has been observed by the Rau Committee it would have been better if Dr. Deshmukh had not proceeded with such a Bill. This is what the Hindu Law Committee say on page 13.

To the impatient reformer we would commend the example of Switzerland in evolving the present Swiss Civil code. Until 1874, Swiss civil law was in the hands of the Cantons of which the Federation is composed. By the Federal Constitution Act of that year, power was given to the centre to enact legislation on certain branches of civil law, but with the exception of these branches civil law remained with the Cantonal authorities. It varied greatly in different parts of the country, French law predominated in certain Cantons, Austrian law in certain other Cantons, German law in yet others, and in the rest customary law modified by occasional statutes. The inconvenience resulting from this want of uniformity became more and more acutely felt as inter-Cantonal relations developed. Accordingly, in 1898 the constitution was amended so as to authorise the Central Legislature to unify the whole of the civil law in Switzerland. In the mean time a great jurist was commissioned to prepare a preliminary draft which occupied him from 1893 to 1899. The draft was published and another commission was appointed to consider the criticisms received and to revise the draft. This commission consisted not only of jurists but also representatives of all sections of thought in Switzerland, sub-committees being formed to consider certain parts of the code. Not until 1904 was the final draft submitted to Parliament. The debates in Parliament continued for three years. Finally in 1907 the code was passed by a unanimous vote in both Houses. But it did not come into force until January 1, 1912.

Sir, the committee was set up and the law being prepared and it took a long time. Now in the present case our Hindu Law Committee has been in existence only for the past four or five years. It is not really a long time. We have to take into consideration this complicated Hindu Law. I already said that the interpretations upon texts of Manu and Yagnyavalky differ in different provinces and therefore to codify the Hindu Law which will embrace all the points and all schools of thought must naturally take time. I suppose even if Dr. Deshmukh does not proceed with the Bill no harm will arise. On the contrary as I observed even the Rau Committee has pointed out that this piecemeal legislation is causing great confusion. It caused confusion in the past as far as the Women's right to property Act was concerned. Also during the last session when the Married Women's Separate Maintenance Act was passed, it was severely criticised by the law journals. You will see therefore that the remarks made by the Rau Committee hold good in the present case also that piecemeal legislation is no good. I have pointed out to you Sir and that is also the opinion of so many persons that the wording of the Bill is defective and is capable of different construction. As soon as you take away the word 'sagotra' then marriage between cousins of the first degree is quite possible. By the removal of the word sagotra from the Bill it will give rise to so many difficulties. Therefore if my friend Dr. Deshmukh sees through the defect which is patent he will I suppose take back this Bill. He had better wait till the Law Committee makes its report and the Government pilots a full fledged Bill covering all sections of Hindu Law. Till then I say this Bill as it is introduced should not be proceeded with and it should be dropped.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari (Member for Education and Arts)

Sir, in order to make a few matters clear I crave permission to speak on this subject. Most of the arguments advanced by the Honourable Member Mr. Gole, who opposed the Bill centre round the protection of Hindu culture and religion. There are two ways in which we may attempt to protect a religion or culture—one by maintaining its rigidity another by liberalizing it so that it may be more harmony with the environment in which it has to live. The latter, I submit, is much the better way in the present times. If we really wish to preserve Hindu culture and strengthen it I feel as a Hindu that we ought to liberalize Hinduism to be more in consonance with the present times and the spirit of the times.

[Sri C. Rajagopalachari]

What exactly we are trying to do now is a very little thing. The Bill before us is to make certain marriages legal which would be illegal according to the orthodox interpretation of the Hindu texts today. Had British courts not been instituted in India and things had been left to the people themselves, the Bill would not have been necessary. Progress would have been automatic, but the introduction of the British Courts and the petrification so to say of Hindu texts has led to various difficulties. I would ask Mr. Gole to think for a moment about the text with reference to eight forms of Hindu marriages. Even a marriage by force is recognized as one form of marriage according to that text. That is not to say that Hindu Law recognised force is justifiable but the doctrine of factum tale is a important doctrine in the Hindu Law. If a marriage has taken place, whatever may have been the rules made, the duties prescribed, once it has taken place the genus of Hindu Law recognizes the marriage is valid. This is necessary even if we forget Hindu culture and Hindu law. What is the position of a lady who has been married against the rule for which Mr. Gole is pleading. Is she to be declared to have entered into an illegitimate alliance and the children declared illegitimate and is she to be condemned for ever and prevented from correcting her position in life? I submit this is exactly the position according to law if any cousin or uncle chooses to inflict it on a sagota marriage. The present Bill is not a new thing. In 1912 I find a Bill was introduced in this House to bring about among other things the very change which the present Bill seeks to bring about. There is nothing therefore extraordinarily new or revolutionary in this matter. That Bill was not proceeded with for several reasons one of them being that a more comprehensive code was in contemplation. I very much appreciate the position taken by the last speaker that there should be a comprehensive law and that these changes should not be effected by piecemeal legislation like the one before us. But for that reason we cannot postpone all reform. It is now so many years since the idea was taken up and whatever the reason may be we have not yet brought into being that comprehensive code. It is not desirable that things should be left in this condition. After all this is not, as may be supposed by some, an unimportant thing. Marriage is, as was said by the last speaker, a very important thing and do not Hindu friends know the difficulties that parents and guardians of girls are facing today. The more the restriction the greater the difficulties of parents of girls will be. It is good for girl's sake at least, to remove some of these restrictions. It is necessary to make marriage as easy as possible without departing from the principle of sacredness of the bond.

Much was said about the special characteristic of Hindu marriages. It was argued that in Hindu law and in Hindu culture marriage is a sacramental union. I claim on behalf of non-Hindus that all marriages in all communities are sacramental unions and it is wrong to imagine that only Hindu marriages are sacramental. The Christian marriage is a sacramental as is the Hindu marriage and in spite of what the lawyers say the Islamic marriage is also a sacramental marriage. That there is divorce does not remove the sacramental character of a union, that they have also a contract embodied in the sacrament does not take away the sacramental character of the union. In Hindu union also I claim that there is a contractual union as well as a sacramental union. If we examine the very mantras or formulae uttered during the ceremony of marriages in which I am sure the previous speaker is expert, we shall find a contract in it. The words are repeated in Sanskrit and therefore they are not understood. There is as much of a contract in a Hindu marriage as there is in any other form of marriage. Therefore the point is not to be decided by laying stress on sacrament or contract. All I hope are sacramental and all we know are also contractual unions. Does a union become less sacramental because of this Bill? I submit not. Even after this Bill is accepted there will be no less of a sacramental union when two people marry who had previously been married on account of this rule and who hereafter will not be so married. There is confusion. I am sure not deliberate in the argument advanced by the previous speaker. Does the speaker not know that two people can belong to the same gotra though they do not even belong to the same sub-caste, although the families are not related by blood, they are sagotrias, people whose whole life is totally separate from one another also happen to be sagotrias. I can imagine that Mr Gole may belong to the same gotra as mine, and yet my daughter cannot marry his son and his son cannot marry my daughter, though there is absolutely no blood connection between me and Mr Gole. This is if that is sought to be removed. The Bill is quite clear, but it can be made clearer still if there is any ambiguity. The Bill reads—

A marriage between Hindus, which is otherwise valid, shall not be invalid by reason only of the fact that the parties thereto—

- (a) belong to the same gotra or pravar ;
- (b) belong to different subdivisions of the same caste.”

That is to say if the bar of consanguinity is there, it shall continue to be there. But as doubts have been expressed by the previous speaker and probably may be expressed by others also there is no harm in adding an explanation to this Section that by the terms of this section it is not intended to remove any bar by way of consanguinity. I understand in amendment has been given by some member and that amendment if accepted would remove all possible doubt in the matter.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh : Could it not be added as an explanation—

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari : Yes, Sir. An explanation is just the form a provision should take when it is sought to remove a doubt. It is not intended by this section that the rule of proximity bar should be affected and that is why an explanation is an appropriate form for an amendment. All the arguments that have been advanced against this Bill are arguments which may be advanced against something totally different. If it was proposed by Dr. Deshmukh that brothers and sisters could marry or that cousins could marry all the arguments would be sound. But here it is not the intention. Would anybody who opposes this Bill be able to explain to me what this gotra connection is? Once upon a time it might have had a meaning but today it has no meaning. Today nobody can if I name the gotra to which I belong and give the names of five Rishis who form the pravar of my gotra, tell me why I claim this or on what ground I can claim it or why my man who belongs to the same gotra could not have the freedom to marry in my family. Nobody is today able to explain what gotra is. Of course research into antiquities may be made and we may be able to get some explanation, but it has no real validity in actual consciousness today. And that is why this very long overdue amendment is necessary. But the argument is if you want to give up any regulations of Hindu custom why don't you marry according to the civil law? Why do you want to change the law applicable to Hindu marriages as such? For this reason I answer. It is not merely a sentiment which too by itself is important. There are legal consequences following a marriage which is done under a Civil Marriage Act and not under ordinary Hindu Law. The law of succession and many other incidents would be involved and there is no reason why I should be compelled to give up the Hindu Law of Inheritance for my family if I seek to marry and the marriage is objected to only on the ground of this rule against sagotra. That is the reason why this law is necessary. It is a very small and not a fundamental alteration in the Hindu scheme of things. For instance, in the very same text which prohibits sagotra marriages, we also find that a boy should not marry a girl who is taller than himself and that a boy should not marry a girl who is older than himself. There is no doubt that from the artistic point of view also a boy may not care to marry a girl who is taller than himself or one older than himself. But yet such marriages do take place and they are very happy and accepted by the Hindu Law, and therefore it is from same text and in the same context both these prohibitions are derived. Our ancestors were not as rigid as Mr Gole wants us to be. They change and changed very freely and the law of factum valet came to help. In all matters and in dealing with marriage the Shastrias gave advice. But when somebody disobeys, they did not want to punish the issue by declaring such a marriage invalid. If we do not change this law we will make marriages difficult. It is not a small matter. I refer to the dowry custom and other difficulties in the way of marriages for girls. Many orthodox Hindus have appealed for a change of the law or some legal enactment to relieve them of the hardships arising out of the dowry practice, and if we liberalise the scope for marriage by removing the bar against castes or one thing or another, to that extent we make it easier for people to marry and get their girls and boys married, and I think Mr. Gole should welcome a change in that direction.

The essential of marriage, let us remember is that we want the boy and the girl to be happy. If a boy and a girl who belong to the same gotra wish to marry, why should we prevent it? I am unable to see any reason whatsoever. It is quite a different thing if you could point out in what Hindu culture or Hindu religion is affected. Although we heard a very long speech from Mr. Gole, we did not hear any valid arguments that could appeal to a reasonable man. I am putting it rather strongly. I wish him, if he can, to show why two persons who have no consciousness of any blood relationship whatsoever, but yet who belong to the same gotra should be prevented from marrying? It is as if we should give obedience to an abracadabra formula which we do not understand, and that is what is sought to be achieved. I hope, Sir, the House will accept the Bill.

Pandit Balkrishna Sharma (Cities of the United Provinces, No-Muhammadan Urban). It was with profound respect, mingled with pity, that I heard the speech of my friend, Mr. Gole in opposition to this Bill. The speaker, who preceded me has made, in his own characteristic way, mince-meat of what Mr. Gole said, and therefore perhaps it will not be quite in fitness of things for me to go ahead with demolishing his arguments point by point. There was a saying, when Mr. Asquith was alive in the House of Commons that whenever there was a difficulty, somebody used to whisper bring the sledge hammer and Mr. Asquith was called in and he used to make short-shrift of the arguments of the opponents. In our House, in the Honourable Mr. C. Rajagopalachari, we have got a veritable sledge hammer. He has made short work of the arguments of my friend, Mr. Gole. I would not go into details, but still I would like to make a few observations while supporting this bill.

While I was hearing Mr. Gole, I thought to myself if perchance Dr. Deshmukh had brought in a measure validating, at this late hour, widow re-marriages, how would my honourable friend Mr. Gole have reacted? I believe he would have reacted just in the same manner in which he reacted to the present measure. Perhaps he would have been still more vehement in his denunciations. Let it be understood very clearly that the present measure is a definite incroad on the Hindu law as it exists today. Let there be no gainsaying of that fact. Knowing full well as we do that we cannot go on with our ancient customs and traditions and laws and realising as we do the need of the hour, we come here with such a legislation. To say that it is a piecemeal legislation, that the whole Hindu Law should be codified and that before that is done no relief is to be given in any direction in order to enable the Hindu society to face the music of the present juncture, is an argument which I have never been able to understand. I can very well consider the necessity of tackling problems with which the Hindu society is faced even in a piecemeal way and therefore to say that a legislation like this is of no avail does not lead us anywhere.

Mr. Gole did not like the idea and he asked a question. What did Dr. Deshmukh mean by saying that society is very much advanced? If we are so obtuse as not to see the very obvious nobody can make us see. But the problems are there. The times have changed. Doubts have arisen in our mind and we really want to penetrate behind the rationale of the whole traditional bias with which we are ridden. Why is the present day Hindu not satisfied by mere quotation from either Yagnavalkya or Manu? He wants to see things through; he wants to see behind things as to what the reasons are and you cannot satisfy the present generation of Hindus if you only know how to throw the injunctions of the ancient scriptures in his face. I can tell you that you will not thereby be protecting the Hindu society. Realise that there is a revolt in Hindu society today. Realise also that the present day Hindu young man does not want to accept things merely because it is an Apta pramanam. The Apta pramanam must be logical and the mind of man must be convinced of the reason behind that apta pramanam. Argument um ad hominem cannot be carried too far and therefore I think if Mr. Gole looks dispassionately at this small amendment which Mr. Deshmukh wishes to introduce into the marriage law of the Hindu, he will realise the necessity for it and he will tone down his opposition, which he has so very vehemently displayed today in this House. Many of the opinions which he inflicted upon us from that document with him have left me absolutely cold and, as the Honourable Mr. Rajagopalachari pointed out, there is absolutely no connection between Sapinda and Sagotra. I am a Parashar by gotra—a Brahmin belonging to the Northern or Central India. The Honourable Mr. Rajagopalachari might be also a Parashar by gotra (who knows) and yet I am never conscious of having had the privilege of any relationship whatsoever with his ancestors. So, after all, the gotra business and the patni business have lost all the rationale that might have been behind them in generations gone by. Today they have become meaningless shibboleths and we cannot allow our society's advance to be retarded by such considerations. As a matter of fact the Honourable the Education Minister referred to an amendment which is sought to be introduced in this Bill as an explanation. When I am standing here to offer my support to the Bill, perhaps it is not the time when I should move the amendment and therefore I will seek your permission, Sir, to move it when the proper time for it comes. But if there is any doubt on that point, as the Honourable the Education Minister has said, that doubt can be set at rest by introducing a sort of explanation that with the removal of sagotra and saprarav barriers from the Hindu marriage, the marriages will not become consanguine. Therefore I think that that objection of Mr. Gole can be met by that explanation.

Mr. Gole has said that this sort of permission offends against our sense of religion and that Hindu marriage being sacramental it should not be trifled with. As a matter of fact nobody likes to trifle with such serious happenings in life as marriage or birth or even death and if we do it we do so at our own risk or peril. We are not trifling with marriage by introducing this change. We are simply trying to rationalise the whole thing. Marriages, barring marriages amongst the same gotras have been a practice in our society for a long time as a stabilising factor. Mr. Gole has quoted many sentences from the law on the subject contained in Sir Gurudas Banerjee's book. Mr. Gole should not be surprised to find that even today a majority of the Hindu community does not observe what he calls sagotra and saprarav barriers. I think the majority in the Hindu society do not belong to the Dvijas or the upper three classes—the Brahmins, the Kshatriyas and the Varshyas and yet I would like to see the face of that man who will not call our Sudras, who are the true pillars of society any the lesser Hindus than the Dvijas themselves. They should also consider one thing. If even today amongst the majority communities in the Hindu society these restrictions do not exist and still they have not ceased to be very vile and very brave Hindus there is absolutely no reason why the upper classes should stick to these restrictions.

I would not like to take much of the time of the House by answering so many other points which my friend has raised today during this discussion. I would only say that if we do not pass this Bill today into an Act we shall be really laying the axe at the very root of Hindu society.

With these words, Sir, I support the Bill of my Honourable friend Dr. Deshmukh.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural). Sir, I must congratulate my Honourable friend Mr. Gole for his very lucid exposition and the manner in which he put forth the case of the ancients. I am glad that he has studied the subject so very well.

(Sri M. Annambasayam Ayyangar.)

There is no doubt that by this Bill my Honourable friend Dr. Deshmukh wants to make an amendment into our ancient Hindu law. Let us be clear about it. It is another question to find whether such an amendment, knowing it definitely that it is an amendment contrary to the accepted principles of Hindu law which we have been following not only recently but for ages past and the history of which objection or prohibition were not now able to trace—having observed that injunction for so long whether it is necessary to continue the prohibition against such marriages is another. With all respect I would urge upon my honourable friend to consider whether our ancestors have not been modifying the injunctions regarding marriage from time to time. I will only remind him that at that time—about 3000 years ago—a number of Scythians had doubts whether all the injunctions that were originally laid in the Manu and other texts should thereafter be adopted, having regard to the change of times. They went to Avesta who took the Rishis to his father Parasara to whose gotra my friend Pandit Balkrishna Shama belongs. Parasara's text supersedes Manu Smriti and is the ruling text so far as Kali is concerned. Parasara told these Scythians that having regard to the change of times it is not longer obligatory upon them to adopt all these injunctions—it was not easy—and therefore he gave a new text, and lastly he said

"Whenever there is any doubt or difficulty and if there is any matter which I have not covered, you apply to three learned men who is called a parishad and whatever they prescribe shall be the law."

Now, I would have welcomed my honourable friend, having placed this matter before the parishads of his own countrymen who believe in the ancient texts of Hindu law and who have also got a progressive outlook and who are ready to modify it according to the needs of the society. No doubt opinions have been gathered from various persons, but today we do not have the parishads of this kind. In these circumstances, this Assembly has to take the place of that parishad, and after my honourable friend Rajaji has spoken about what I wanted to speak on this subject, I have been a little unnerved. I only wanted to suggest that having regard to the fact that some text of Hindu law which governs the entire continent of India has been interpreted differently in different schools—in Madras there is one interpretation, in Bombay there is another, in Mithila or Benares there is a third and in Bengal there is a fourth—these several interpretations have come into existence according to the particular usages and customs which are in advance of the law. Usages of particular people run in advance of the law and the law comes afterwards to settle difficulties and doubts that may have arisen after the practices which make amendments into the previous texts of law. Therefore these text writers, who were not Scythians or nishis themselves, though they are not our gurus or acharyas, have taken note of the change of times, and of the usages that have grown up in accordance with those times. I claim that we have got a right to make similar changes whenever these changes are necessary. I am a conservative to this extent that unless there is sufficient justification to change the old practice or unless the old practice is obnoxious either on moral grounds or is dangerous to public safety, I am not prepared to change the ancient texts. The way in which I would like to be satisfied as regards the need of this Bill is whether the need has arisen whether really the circle of getting brides and bridegrooms has become so narrowed on account of various circumstances that it is necessary for us to enlarge the field and do away with the injunction that sagotra marriages should not be allowed.

So far as the scientific aspect of it is concerned, science has yet to disclose on what grounds these injunctions have been laid. We have been told in various textbooks on heredity that these special qualities persist for seven generations but there may come a time when we find that the chromosomes which have been found to play an important part in the sexes and in the characteristics of individuals and in races also would affect them—we do not know. Therefore I am not prepared to condemn that prohibition against sagotra marriages or to say that it may not be good even today. But in some parts of our country—whatever may be the necessity to have sagolia marriages—on account of the caste having become narrowed as in the Madras Presidency, the people themselves have tried to circumvent this rule. We heard in the opinions read by Mr. Gole that in the southern part of the Bombay presidency there is a practice for sagolia marriages being celebrated by the daughter being given away in adoption to another gotra. I am not aware of any text of Hindu law which allows the adoption of a daughter except in the case of a daughterless girl, but all the same this practice has been adopted to evade the prohibition in the texts against sagolia marriage, which otherwise will become invalid. And that is so. I am certainly in favour of legislating the practice instead of trying to circumvent a text of the Hindu law. I am also aware of the instances that were quoted of a practice prevailing in Orissa of persons who serve as priests in the temple of the Lord Jagannatha who cannot marry except in a narrow circle as they cannot get brides or bridegrooms and therefore a similar system has been adopted for a long time when a father's rights to other gotras in adoption which is done just before the marriage itself and thus between two different gotras the marriage union is celebrated. Therefore there seems to be in some parts of the country a need to get out of this gotra trouble, because it is not as if we are making an innovation today—the practice has been there and we are only trying to legislate that practice. My honourable friend Mr. Gole might remember that some few years ago an Act was passed in this legislature to validate Arya marriages between different castes with retrospective effect otherwise about 150 to 200 marriages would have become invalid and the children would have been dubbed as bastards. Therefore, it might be necessary in some parts of our country to make this innovation. All that I am urging my honourable friend Mr. Deshmukh who is the sponsor of this Bill is to accept a small amendment that it may be left to the various provincial governments to bring this Bill into operation on such date as the provincial government might by notification in the official Gazette so declare. All that I am trying to do is this—in my part of the presidency I am not aware of any need for legislation of this kind immediately. Further marriage legislation is a concurrent subject—it is in the concurrent list there are not many opinions urging the need of such kind of legislation so far as my province is concerned. I had a talk with my honourable friend Mr. Gole and he consented with one other small amendment to my amendment—that instead of leaving it to the provincial government to notify the date on which this shall come into operation the Provincial government in consultation with the Provincial Assembly should do it. We need not now be afraid of the Provincial Assembly at all for this reason that the Provincial Assemblies now are broad based and more representative than the present assembly here. People come in there on a wider franchise and seeing that this is a concurrent subject it must be left to them to decide whether this Bill ought to come into operation at all or not.

Therefore as far as I have been able to judge if only my honourable friend can persuade himself to accept this amendment I do not think my honourable friend Mr. Gole would seriously press his opposition to the introduction of this Bill. It is left to my honourable friend to decide.

So far as the various provinces are concerned, there is no need for uniformity. No doubt, so far as sagolia is concerned it is a prohibition against marriages in any part of India. To that extent we have got jurisdiction, and it is right that we should pass some legislation to bring about uniformity but I would urge upon my honourable friend to see if that ought to be the guiding principle in respect of all kinds of legislation. There is another piece of legislation before this House. We have not been uniform with respect to marriages and other customs. In my part of the country, one can marry his maternal uncle's daughter. That is an incest according to the regular texts of Hindu law,—Mann and Yagnavalkya and Parasara, it is an incest in northern India; still that practice goes on, a man can marry his sister's daughter in my part of the presidency it is not allowed in other parts.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: It is allowed in Maharashtra

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: You are also a Deccanese, but not in northern India. In Bengal a man with a number of children can be adopted. In Bombay a person who is married and has children can be adopted along with his children and himself into another family, whereas in my presidency and other parts of India only a bachelor can be adopted and not a married man. I would only be too glad if myself, my family and my grandchildren were all adopted in a rich man's family and there will be no need for legislation. Therefore when we talk of this, let us not make it appear that all the injunctions in Hindu law are so bad that we must adopt wholesale or in parts all new ideas from the West or other parts of the world. Let us not be disgusted with our ancients. I am proud of them. I am deeply pained to hear some of my friends speak as though what we have done all these years is wrong. Under Muhammadan Law, a person the son of a mother, cannot marry a girl not on the ground of consanguinity but merely because she was suckled by his mother. There is that prohibition. There is also the prohibition that a brother and a sister, though not born of the same womb, cannot marry. Such injunctions are there. All the same modifications have been made from time to time if they are found necessary in view of changing conditions. There seems to be a case for some modification so far as Bombay is concerned and some parts of Orissa are concerned but it is not so with respect to other provinces. Therefore I say that this legislation should not be imposed upon all provinces. The matter must be left to the Provincial Governments to bring it into operation on such date as they think fit. The Provincial Governments are broadbased now. I accept the principle that we must change our texts wherever necessary. I am not seeking to stand by particular text for all time without any alteration. I would urge my Honourable friend to accept the modification I have suggested when I shall move the amendment. I support the Bill.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: I thoroughly appreciate the motive of my Honourable friend Mr. Gole when he opposed this Bill. I concede that whatever he has said has been said because he feels that way. I agree with him that our Shastras must not be lightly dealt with. I agree with him that our culture is very ancient, and that in the Hindu culture there is enough scope for progress. I only want him to go a little further. I carefully listened to his speech and the three main points which he tried to make out I shall in my own way try to answer.

The first point that he made out was that this is a religious matter and this House is not competent to legislate in matters which are religious. In the first place I do not know what he exactly means by 'religion'. As I understand it in my own humble way I divide it into two aspects—one which is spiritual and in that sphere I agree with him that this House, in fact no person in the world, has any right to interfere but so far as the other aspect is concerned, namely those rules and injunctions which are meant for the security of the society, for the progress of society, are matters in which the learned of the land as well as the law giver have a right to interfere. In fact, they have a duty to the society, being the leaders of social thought. The word 'dharma' as defined means Dharama Dharma iti alu—that which holds together. If our experience were to find that that code or that body of rules which has been so far understood as dharma is not able to answer, is not able to discharge the function which was expected of it, I think it is only wisdom that we must change. Now so far as the competence of this legislature is concerned, this is not the first time such a point has been raised. You will find that during the last 75 years several enactments which according to the assumption of Mr. Gole were obviously interference with religious matters have been passed by this House and its predecessors—The Freedom of Religion Act, Caste Disabilities Removal Act, Hindu Widows Remarriage Act and what is popularly known as the Sarda Act or the Child Marriage Restraint Act. I remember when the amendment of the Original Sarda Act was under discussion the same objection was raised not only by members of the Hindu community who were members of this House but that objection was also urged by some members of the Muslim Community because they also believed that it was a sort of interference with their religious faith. On that occasion I pointed out from the Histories of various Muslim countries how when there was a conflict between morality as understood by every sensible man in the world and the strict tenets of the religion it was always religion that had to stand down. If a measure is calculated to advance social justice, to secure more social security, then no religious injunction should be allowed to stand in the way. I think this House has established beyond doubt its competence to legislate in matters such as marriage and succession and several other things. It is very late in the day now to contest the competence of this House and so far as this Bill is concerned it would have been much better if this objection had been taken by my Honourable friend Mr Gole when the motion for reference to the Select Committee was under consideration.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I raised objection then also.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: The House then accepted the reference in that case and the question merely becomes one of academic interest. Now, as I listened to my Honourable friend Mr Gole, I was at a loss to know whether he was opposed to this Bill because it was a piecemeal legislation and not a full Code dealing with all aspects of the Hindu law,—marriage, succession, adoption, etc. If that is so, then his objection assumes a different aspect. His objection is to the form and not to the contents. But I gather and I assume also that his objection is not merely to the form in which this matter has been brought before the House but he also refers to the substance of this piece of legislation.

My Honourable friend Mr Gole was referring to a recent judgment of the Bombay High Court in which the marriage between a man and a woman belonging to the same gotra was held valid. It is true, no doubt, that the decision was based on the ground that the girl was given in adoption and a custom to that effect was proved, but in the observations of Justice Gajendra-gadker this House will find some indication of the mind of the High Court Judge, for he says

‘Notions of good social behaviour and the general ideology of the Hindu society have been changing, with the growth of modern sciences and as a result of the impact of new ideas based on a strictly rational outlook of life, Hindu customs and usages have changed. The custom as to marriages between persons of the same gotra which I have held proved in this case is an eloquent instance in point. Between the letter of the law and sadachar—good conduct, according to the consciousness of the community—there is obviously great variance. It follows, therefore, that the prohibitions which have been so emphatically enunciated by the Nibandha writers in this connection have not, for a considerable time past, conformed to the usage and custom recognised by the community. In such a case it is obviously the duty of the legislature to intervene and to amend the material provisions of Hindu law so as to make them consistent with the custom and usage prevailing in society and thus help to place the Hindu law of marriage on a more rational basis.”

Now, Sir, I do not accept the view that ancient Hindu law is either infallible or is something which can never be changed. It is not like the laws of Medes and Persians. In fact, law ought to be an aid and not hindrance to the social progress of the community. If the law cannot keep pace with the growing public opinion, it has got to be changed and there are recognised ways by which this can be done and by which the law can be brought into line with what is called positive morality or public opinion. One is legislation and another is to interpret it in such a manner that although the letter of the law remains the same, the spirit has undergone a change consistent with the changing spirit of the time. The third is to recognise customs. So, in one way or the other, the law is liberalised for the progress of the society. Now, my Honourable friend Mr Gole will agree that if it was the view of our ancient Rishis that the law, which has been pronounced once by Manu, is to remain as it is for ages to come, then it is difficult to reconcile to the fact that after Manu there have been several law givers, there have been different interpretations and there have been different Smritis. The very fact that there are several Smritis goes to show that they must have been compiled with a view to bring the law in consonance with positive morality of that time.

Now, I go further. If we accept the fact that law is an indication as to how the course of society and as to how the conduct of several individuals constituting the society are to be governed, it follows that it can never remain stationary, it can never be static. In fact, the modern philosophy of law is that it must change. At the same time, I do not mean to suggest that just as we change the page of the calendar every morning, the law should be changed every session of the Assembly. No, that is not the idea. I do agree that there must be a substantial body of public opinion before it becomes the duty of social leaders and legislators to undertake some legislation by which the desired end is achieved. My Honourable friend Mr Gole will agree and he has, in fact, stated so in the course of his speech, that in Hindu law custom overrides the text. Now, custom and tradition are not mere words. They represent certain ideas. What are the ideas behind these words "custom and tradition"? If a thing is done once, it cannot become a tradition. It must be done so often and it must be repeated so often that it begins to be tolerated. Custom emerges when opposition yields to indifference and indifference to toleration. Then I think it is time when the leaders of the society ought to make a move. I therefore bring to the notice of the House that in so far as my impression is concerned, it has reached that stage and the best proof of that is the judgment of Justice Gajendragadkar, which I have already read out. We have to change or perish. Sn, change or perish is the watchword of nature. I quite remember years ago it was the view that if there was a forcible conversion the man was lost to the caste. But now after a quarter of a century, I find the leaders of the Hindu society are coming to a right point of view. After all, faith is not a matter which can be enforced. In fact, faith and force are two opposite things. That clearly shows that we have to change otherwise we will have to perish.

Now, my friend Mr Gole read several texts from Yagnavalkya, Manu Smriti and other Smritis. The main text on which the whole thing is based contains the word "prashasyate". My Honourable friend Mr Gole will agree that, when translated, it means 'recommended'. When a girl and a boy are not in the degree of consanguinity—sapindaship—a marriage between them is recommended. Marriage otherwise is not prohibited and no amount of grammatical quibbling on the part of any Shastris here or outside will convince anybody that that interpretation is not justified by the text.

It was suggested by the Honourable Mr. Rajagopalachari that in certain text in which this provision or prohibition is embodied that the girl should be yayiyasi, she should be arogini and she should be bhratrimati (having brothers). But very often a girl is selected if she has no brothers because then inheritance comes. On such occasions no religion figures. If these three adjectives which are embodied in the same text which says that sagotra marriage is barred are not construed as prohibitory, if these three adjectives are merely recommendatory, I fail to see why the other adjective should be mandatory and not recommendatory. It must be a very queer grammar. Grammar means system, consistency, clarity. I, therefore, submit that the word "prashasyate" really means 'recommended'.

Going further my Honourable friend Mr. Gole asked what was the necessity for having such a piece of legislation. I have already answered him by quoting the very judgment to which he made reference. But I want to inform him that there are certain castes in this country among whom it is very difficult to have marriageable boys. You marry outside the caste or you marry one who belongs to the same gotra. The result has been social unhappiness.

In provinces in which Hindus are in a great majority the scarcity of bridegrooms may not be felt so much, but if my Honourable friend Mr Gole refers to the opinions of those Hindus who live in the North-West Frontier, like Veli Chand Khanna and others, he will find that they have welcomed this Bill because they know the difficulties of the situation. If the ancient Shastias laid this down as a prohibition I cannot imagine that they did it without any reason. In those days the joint family was there consisting of mothers and cousins and it was only necessary that a certain decorum must be observed and it is for that that this prohibition was specially enacted. As has been well said, a joint family consisting of relations several degrees removed was the normal condition of society, and in order to guard the chastity of Hindu girls in such families it became necessary to lay down these rules with a religious rigour that they might deter any member of the family from entertaining the idea of marrying another member thereof. And if you go to the etymological meaning of the word 'gotra' it only means a place where cows are kept. In those days when society was in its infancy there was a sort of organisation based on some principle that if some people live in a particular locality or as if they were one people, just as Anglo-Saxon Tun and German Zaun became a town indicating one community. In the same way those who lived in one place came to be called people of the same 'gotra'. Big joint families are rare and communities are no longer confined to towns. Society has progressed. It has moved from status to contract. Now my honourable friend Mr Gole will obviously agree that, so far as Kshatriyas are concerned, they simply borrowed the 'gotras' of Brahmins. Will that rule hold good and will it have any propriety so far as Kshatriyas are concerned? No, Sir. If my Honourable friend Mr Gole says that this is a great assault on Hindu society he will agree that except the Brahmin community this prohibition is not found in any section of the Hindu community. It is confined strictly to three or four per cent and even within this section in many places and in many communities this has also gone. If the reason of the rule was then good the reason has now gone. If the significance is gone and the symbol remains we are to be so foolish as to hug it to our breast? No, the needs of the time must be taken into consideration. Modern philosophy of law as I said a few minutes ago contemplates continuous progress and contemplates law as a dynamic force. The old conception of law as negative and prohibitory influence is gone and now it is a positive agency whereby social progress can be achieved. Just as in the sphere of taxation we always held that taxation was simply for the purpose of taking as much as was needed for the expenditure of Government but the modern idea is that it is something by which we can secure a more equitable distribution of wealth. In the same way law is not something which tells you not to do this or that—it has that character of doubt—but it is at the same time an agency whereby we can accelerate the progress of our society towards objectives that we may have in view. Ancient societies required a different set of principles. In this connection the House will be interested if I read a few observations from Bentham's book 'Principles of the Civil Code':

"If there were not an insurmountable barrier between near relatives called to live together in the greatest intimacy, their contact, continual opportunities, friendship itself and its innocent excesses, might kindle fatal passions. The family, that retreat where repose ought to be found in the bosom of order, and where the movements of the soul agitated by the fires of the world ought to grow calm would itself become a prey, to all the inequalities of rivalry and to all the furies of passion. Suspicious would banish confidence—the tenderest sentiments of the heart would be quenched—eternal enmities or vengeance, of which the bare idea is fearful, would take their place. The belief in the chastity of young girls, that powerful attraction to marriage, would have no foundation to rest upon, and the most dangerous anarchy would be spread for youth in the very asylum where it could least escape."

Now, Sir, families although claiming one 'gotra' are not living in the same way. They are dispersed all over the country. It might interest my Honourable friend Mr Gole to know that he is at the head of the...

 migrated to Berar and I have remained in my province. This is so everywhere. As was suggested by the Honourable Mr. Rajagopalachari if there is nothing to make parties feel that they belong to the same gotra, why should there be prohibition or banning of marriage between them? I submit, Sir, we have to lay down one test. Find out what was the reason of the rule for any particular shastric injunction. If that reason does not hold good today, we must disregard it, not in a spirit of disrespect. I will not yield even to my Honourable friend Mr. Gole in my respect for ancient shastras or Hindu culture, but at the same time, I owe a duty to my future generations. I stand today at that moment of history which connects past with the future. I am the inheritor of all that is best from the past, but at the same time, when I go, I must leave something better. If I have found the world wrong, let me make it less wrong, if I have found it good, let me make it and leave it better. To sum up if the reason for the rule is not available, then the rule has got to be changed. The proper line of argument should be what the society requires should be done. My Honourable friend Mr. Gole suggested that those who were anxious for sugatta marriage should resort to the provisions of Civil Marriage Act. I would just refer to the disabilities imposed under that Act.

"A marriage under the Act severs ipso facto the person from the co-parcenary family. For the purpose of the right of succession the person who marries under the Act shall have the same rights and be subject to the same liabilities as the person to whom the Caste Disabilities Removal Act applies. Succession to the property of any person marrying under the Act is regulated by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act. A person marrying under the Act shall not have the right of adoption, and when a person marries under the Act, his father, if he has no other son living, shall have the right to adopt another person as a son. The implication of the disability in clause (5) above is that the marriage of any person under the Act may be tantamount to his death so far as the family is concerned and the right of succession is given to him as an outcaste. Why when he is anxious to have as much of ancient culture as he can, he should be driven to resort to an enactment which denies him many facilities, in fact penalises him? I submit that the right point of view is to go ahead with this legislation although it is piecemeal.

My Honourable friend Mr. Ayyangar said that Hindu law is interpreted in different ways in different provinces. That establishes the case for having uniformity. If it is interpreted in different ways, let us have one legislator and it is the function of the Central Government or the Federal Government to have a normative law or a model law, as they say so that it may be a great guide and direction to the constituent states. Therefore I am against the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Ayyangar. Let us pass the Bill as reported by the Select Committee and contribute something towards the progress of Hindu society. Sir, I support.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi (Calcutta and Suburbs, Muhammadan Urban). Sir, I know a mlechha like me has no business to interfere in a purely domestic matter pertaining to Hindu society. But, Sir, I bow in homage to Mr. Gole for trying to place before the House the point of view to which I also subscribe. I know that the law must keep pace with the progress of society. I fully appreciate and support the view of Dr. Deshmukh. You will appreciate, Sir, that in order to meet difficulties of the type that have arisen in Hindu society, Muslim law makers gave us a principle called iyama' ul-umma, that is when there was a consensus of opinion in Muslim society, to that extent we could change the law, so long as it did not interfere with the text of the Quran. The Hindu law and Muhammadan law since what is known as the British Connection have changed considerably. There have been inroads from almost every side which neither the Hindu nor the Muslim could stop. Our laws, as they exist to-day, are Privy Council made law. This piece of legislation which we are now discussing has been described as an inroad. I am prepared to allow inroads made by the society which is going to change the law. That is why, Sir, I began my remarks with the assertion that I should have nothing to say about the topic that is being discussed. But may I, Sir, sound a note of warning to the House that progress does not necessarily mean the biological theories of marriage or progressive conceptions of marriage, one hears of as existing in the West, and particularly in Moscow. My note of warning is that if it comes into the head of this House to make use of its sledge-hammer majority and interfere with the law which is mine, I am afraid argument of the type used this afternoon about progress and about law keeping pace with society may not meet with the approval of Muslim opinion and may not be acceptable to Muslims. I am, therefore, trying just to raise this note of warning that in the mad rush for initiative progress the personal law of the Muslims in India, shall not be interfered with by majorities in legislatures, for as I have submitted progress does not exist in Washington, London or Moscow alone. The sooner we get out of that intellectual slavery the better. Let the Hindu change his law as one Honourable Member said from day to day like the dates in the calendar, but let it be in response to the consensus of opinion, so to say of the ijma ul-umma of the Hindu social group. We heard arguments that the Mitakshara law was interpreted in different parts of the country differently, but whether under conditions such as these people in different provinces should be forced to accept things as the Bill visualizes, is a matter again for friends who are part of the Hindu social structure to decide. I shall watch their progressive steps with great interest, but I must request them not to go ahead too fast. There may be institutions in our Indian society, both Hindu and Muslim, which if studied carefully may lead us to the opinion that all that shines in the Western world is not gold. We may be able to teach them many a lesson. An Honourable Member talked of the Sharda Act. We also understand that child marriages are not good. Muslim countries have adopted measures to regulate such marriages, but the point is that here in India we objected to the non-Muslim British Government interfering with the fundamentals of our law. We would not allow a non-Muslim Government even to judge whether ijma ul-umma in India was or was not unfavourable. It was for this reason that Muslim opinion was opposed to it. To-day it may be marriage and tomorrow it may be something else. The history of the East India Company and the influence of padris on the earlier British legislations in this country, you will agree with me, Sir, interfered with Muslim society as well as Hindu society very deeply. Whether we should call it progress or advancement, I leave to individual Members to decide, but whatever it is, I should not like the fundamentals of my religion to be interfered with. And religion, Mr Deputy President, is not a Friday affair for me like the Christian religion in the pews of the Church on Sundays. I believe in religion as affecting this life of mine and the next. You know the prayer we repeat daily—'Oh Lord! Give me betterment here as well as in the next world.' We do not make any distinction between the Church and the State because to us the Church is the State and the State is the Church, and our religion, I am proud to state, has gone on taking into it anything and everything that would have raised the moral stature of man. We have accepted many progressive concepts and theories on the basis of the adage "take what is pure and shun what is impure", for again may I, Mr Deputy President, suggest that all that glitters in the Western world is not gold.

Sir, I should like to support Dr Deshmukh's Bill, and after the explanation given that consanguinity or sapindaship is not going to be interfered with and sagotraship, as explained by gentlemen who can speak with greater authority on the point, has ceased to exist in the way in which it was understood centuries ago, consequently if sagotraship is broken this Bill does not do any harm. It rectifies a fiction that has existed for long. A factum valet is being made law. Sir, Honourable Members from Gujarat will realise that due to the scarcity of girls a certain section of the Kurbi caste arranges marriages only in the adhik-mas (the extra thirteenth month) after every 12 years and when I was a school boy reading in Ahmedabad and later on I have been shown a girl of two married to a man of about sixty-two. These things have interfered with the basic principles of the law-givers of Hinduism. If the new law-giver tries to create a better balance of Hindu outlook on life, I think it is a step in the right direction. This inroad, Sir, I hope will also interfere with the caste system as it happens to be to-day. The Honourable colleague to my right talked of the Brahmana, the Kshatriya and the Vaishya as different from the Shudra and said that the three upper classes had stuck more or less to the sagotraship, but the fourth class had not. I hope this law will make an inroad into the upper three classes and that the terrible strictness and rigidity of the caste system will begin to break because with the breakage of the caste system, which exists nowhere else in the world except in our country, there will be less trouble in India. It has made Hindu society non-absorptive. If it could open wide its doors on which the legend is "thou shalt not enter", this two-clause Bill embodying a change of a fundamental principle of Hindu law might lead to the solution of the problem of unanimity of outlook and vision in the different groups among the Hindus forming the population of this country. If this little Bill spreads all over the country, I feel, Sir, that our terrible problem of Hindu-Muslim, Brahmana non-Brahmana, Hindu-Panchama problem will perhaps be placed on the road to a solution.

Pandit Balkrishna Sharma: I move

"That the question may now be put."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Sir, I will take only two or three minutes. I see that the House is already in favour of this Bill. I will therefore request my Honourable friends who have given notice of amendments to withdraw them both as a matter of discretion as well as for the sake of smooth passage of this Bill.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali (Member for Railways and Transport) As a matter of chivalry also

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: The time is very short. The arguments which have been brought forward by the Honourable Members who are opposed to this Bill are not new, we have been hearing these arguments right from the days of suttee. I am glad to see that he knows what value to put to these arguments. One thing I noticed and that was interesting that 111 were against and 90 for. I hope that Mr. Gole who brought this argument forward had read his 'Manu Smriti'. In the last chapter of it you will find that Manu says that the correctness of a view cannot be judged by the number of heads that you count and that very often you will find that the opinion that is in one head is perhaps more righteous than the opinions supported by 100 spheres or Goles.

So far as the argument of the sacramental character of the marriage is concerned, it is a very funny argument that has been brought forward repeatedly and I am prepared to meet it again. Wherever marriage laws are concerned, I do not think any Hindu can explain what really a sacrament is. I take it, it is a word which we have bodily taken and accepted from our British Judges as it was used in Christianity and in England. If marriage gives a status of a sacrament to a woman it also gives a status of a sacrament to a man and I take it that if the state of sacrament is the same for both, because mind you the ceremony is the same, I really cannot see how a man can marry four, five or six times, and even while his wife is living and when his wife is also dead whereas a woman who has the same sacrament and who should have the same religious right, on account of the sacrament cannot marry another, whether the husband is alive or dead. Therefore, I say, the less talk we hear in this House and in the opinions that I have read both on this Bill and the other Bill which will soon be coming before the Assembly, the less we hear about this argument of a sacrament the better for all Hindus I have no objection to Varnashram Sanghas and other institutions bringing this argument about the sacrament. But Bar associations, leading practitioners, intelligent people who are supposed to know better, when they come forward and talk of Hindu marriage as a sacrament and that anything you suggest interferes with the sacrament, either they are deceiving themselves, or they do not understand or they have not studied it properly.

Again the argument is brought forward about codification. This argument is also an old one. It was on this argument that codification has come in. That social reform was steadily prevented in this House for six years. From 1940 to 1946 whenever I suggested it, not only the Members but the Law Member, said we cannot have piece-meal legislation. On this the legal profession at one time was very hot. They say you cannot do anything with piece-meal legislation. Let us have codification. And yet when you do give a code to the Hindu society, what is the result? Oh, this is uprooting the whole society. So if you suggest codification it is too much. If you suggest piece-meal legislation you say it is not good. You cannot progress. All I say is that in a case of a society of 300 million men it is impossible to get unanimity and it is impossible to get interests, not religious but vested interests,—I purposely say so—to see things and to give a unanimous opinion. What is the remedy then to improve a big population like this? It must be piece-meal legislation. If you have codification, nobody can be more pleased than I to have the whole matter changed. But as practical men, not as men merely practising in Courts, but as men who are dealing with the human element in the Legislature and the world, isn't it better that the crying evils and the innocent inhibitions should be removed and it does not prevent codification coming in. By all means let codification come in at the same time.

Another parrot cry with regard to this Bill my friend, Mr. Gole and others say we must wait for codification. Now will you exercise a little intelligence. When a measure is put forward and it has repercussions on the law of succession and adoption you say let codification come in. But where is the question of repercussions on this Bill with regard to succession and adoption? And yet intelligent lawyers, who should know better talk of codification. Even when codification comes in, let me warn my brethren that I have seen the fate of those Bills and legislative measures over which months and months . .

Mr. Krishna Chandra Saarma (Meerut Division Non-Muhammadian Rural) He is making a new case. It is not a reply.

Mr. Deputy President: He has got the right to reply.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I have known Bills over which months and months were taken and over which solicitors and draughtsmen were engaged, and yet could you produce a perfect measure? Take your Insurance Bill, the Income-tax Bill, the Motor Transport Bill. In spite of spending months and months you cannot produce a measure which will meet all the human wants. Therefore do not pin your faith to codification and then go to sleep for one thousand years! The law must keep pace with living society and as the society changes I do not care whether it is 100 years or 100 days, if new conditions arise, you have to modify your law.

So far as my friend, Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar's amendment is concerned, I am not prepared to accept it. Either the thing is good or it is not.

Mr. Deputy President: Will the Honourable Member let the amendments be put now?

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Then I have finished. I am very thankful to the House for the support it has given and for the speakers who have supported this measure and I have not the least doubt that the House will support this healthy measure in the same way as the House has supported many of the other measures for the health of Hindu society.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That the Bill to remove legal disabilities under Hindu Law in respect of marriage between Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration"

The motion was adopted

Mr. Deputy President: Clause 2

Mr. P. B. Gole: Sir, I move

"That sub clause (a) of clause 2 of the Bill be omitted"

Mr. Deputy President: The practice is that when an Honourable Member moves his amendment he makes his speech along with it

Mr. P. B. Gole: I thought you would move the amendment and then I would be called upon to speak. I want to point out that this clause is very faultily worded and it would give rise to many doubts. The clause reads "between Hindus belonging to the same gotra or pravara". I heard with attention the speech of the Honourable Mr. Rajagopalachariar and I would have certainly accepted his view, provided it was really a marriage between families of the same gotra living in Madras and Bombay or as between families in Madras and Northern India. But according to the wording of this clause 2 (a) it will be possible to marry in the same family

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: It must be otherwise valid

Mr. P. B. Gole: Sapinda relationship is not defined anywhere in this Bill

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam Valley Non-Muhammadian) Sir, on a point of order, is such an amendment permissible? Because if clause 2 is omitted from this Bill there will be nothing left

Mr. Deputy President: He is not omitting the whole of clause 2 he only wants to omit sub-clause (a) of Clause 2

Mr. P. B. Gole: What I want to point out is that if this clause is passed as it is, marriage between cousins of the second, third or fourth degrees should be possible. Sapinda relationship has not been defined. Some authorities are of the opinion that sapinda relationship exists up to third degree and others up to the 5th and some others say up to the seventh degree. You will also know that beyond the sapinda relationship there is what is known as sakulva. If the Bill is passed with clause 2(a) as it stands marriage will be possible in the same family. I would certainly not have objected to this Bill if the marriage was expected to take place between families living apart, one at one end of the country and the other at the other end and having absolutely no connection. But this is really speaking over-doing the thing. The Bill as it stands gives also permission for marriage between persons in the same family and it is highly objectionable. Therefore I move that this clause as it is worded should be omitted.

Mr. Deputy President: Amendment moved

"That sub clause (a) of Clause 2 of the Bill be omitted"

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, I am afraid my Honourable friend is trying to beat a dead horse. After a lengthy speech of over an hour the argument has gone against him. The House has accepted the main principle. Sub-caste marriages are already valid. This only makes it clearer. The other important point is sagotra marriage and my friend finds that the House has accepted the principle. He wants to say that in the same family some difficulties may arise and what will the members of the family do. Sapindas of the 14th degree in the same family are not available nor seen in any part of the country. I am not aware of a single family for fourteen generations living together. The easiest device for them is if they want to effect a marriage after the seventh degree. Therefore it is utterly useless to raise this point once again. Having lost the main point let him not clutch at the straw.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That sub-clause (a) of Clause 2 of the Bill be omitted "

The motion was negatived

Mr. Deputy President: The next amendment is by Mr Madandhari Singh

Mr. Madandhari Singh (Bihar and Orissa Landholders) Sir, I move

"That in sub clause (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, after the words "gotra or pravara", the following be inserted, namely

'except dynasty of the parents of bridegroom and bride' "

In moving this amendment I would like to place before the House the position in my Province In my province the orthodox people are against marriages between gotras and pravaras I therefore wanted to express my views before but I could not get the time for it, as my friend Mr Sharma proposed closure In moving this amendment I want to make clear only one point, viz , that no marriage should be performed in the same line of the parents of the bridegroom and bride I move this amendment for the consideration of the House

Mr. Deputy President: Amendment moved

"That in sub clause (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, after the words "gotra or pravara", the following be inserted, namely

'except dynasty of the parents of bridegroom and bride' "

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, this is a very dangerous amendment Gotra and pravara are very well known to all Hindus They are accepted and need not be described But what is dynasty of parents of the bridegroom and bride? It is a new innovation We want to get rid of one and my Honourable friend is trying to bring in another I am against this amendment

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That in sub clause (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, after the words "gotra or pravara", the following be inserted, namely

'except dynasty of the parents of bridegroom and bride' "

The motion was negatived

Mr. Deputy President: The next one is by Pandit Balkrishna Sharma

Pandit Balkrishna Sharma: Sir, I beg to move

"That to clause 2 of the Bill, the following explanation be added

'Explanation The provisions of this section shall not affect any bar on the ground of consanguinity prescribed by law or custom in regard to Hindu marriages' "

I do not wish to take up any time of the House Some doubts were raised in regard to the provisions of this Bill, according to which Mr Gole thought that perhaps since sagotra marriages have now been permitted, therefore marriages might take place in the same family In order to guard against that this explanation is put in

"That to clause 2 of the Bill, the following explanation be added

'Explanation The provisions of this section shall not affect any bar on the ground of consanguinity prescribed by law or custom in regard to Hindu marriages' "

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: With the permission of the House, I would like to accept this explanation, but I would like to clear up one point and it is this: it says the provisions of this section shall not affect any bar on the ground of consanguinity prescribed by law or custom in regard to Hindu marriages " After this afternoon's discussion, when I saw that within sagotra, even sapindas are included, as a layman I am frightened of these legal and technical words and I would like to be assured that this will not mean again undoing and bringing in pravara and gotra as measures of consanguinity. If the lawyers assure me, then I will accept the amendment.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: I think I can give that assurance to the Mover of the Bill.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I would like to say a few words on this. With all respect to Rajaji, who has had greater experience both in the world and in law and practice, I am not sure whether this satisfies the intention in one part of our country consanguinity does not mean relation by blood within prohibited degrees. I think prohibited degrees are in some cases on account of relationship by blood, and in others, relationship on other grounds. Therefore I was anxious that the other amendment of my honourable friend Mr Venkatasubba Reddier might be adopted. But I would like to have some clarification in regard to this matter. Let it not throw wide open the gates for suspicion and doubt. All that is wanted by this amendment is that the prohibited degrees of marriage—7 on the paternal side and 5 on the mother's side—ought not to be interfered with. Marriages even among persons of the same gotra, if they are within these prohibited degrees, ought not to be allowed. I am not sure whether the word consanguinity will meet this situation.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: If I may thank Rajaji for his explanation—we did consider this in detail in the Select Committee, and the opinion of the then Law Member, Sir Asoka Roy, was that the clause might be left as it is without trying to add anything. I merely want to pass on this information—after a great deal of discussion with regard to these prohibited degrees and consanguinity and all that, we came to the conclusion that the advice of the Law Member that the clause may be left as it is, should be taken. In the circumstances, I should like Rajaji to consider and my friend Pandit Balkrishna Sharma to consider whether it is worth while adding this explanation, and whether it will not be better to leave the clause as it is, as it was decided by the Select Committee.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal (Presidency Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) Since the House has agreed to pass the measure, as it emerged out of the Select Committee,—whatever may be the different views in the House they have now practically gone into cold storage—it ought to be the business of the House now to see that the Bill goes out in such a shape as to make it workable. The measure as it came out of Select Committee is perfectly clear in its own way. This proposed explanation will amount to putting in a wheel into a wheel and that will serve only one purpose, namely, the purpose of my friend Mr Gole, that the wheel will not revolve. I believe expert legal opinion ought to be avoided as far as possible outside the House, it should not be the merriment and feast of lawyers nor should it be the despair of the judges, there will be different interpretations, and though an important and experienced member like the Honourable Mr Rajagopalachari's attitude was quite clear, the explanation is practically putting a spoke in the wheel, to the detriment of the whole measure. Therefore it is worth while considering as to whether the Bill should not be kept as it is. Even those who do not agree with all the arguments of the sponsors of the Bill at least agree that the drafting of the Bill is very clear. There is no doubt it wanted to remove certain doubts, and how it wanted to remove doubts in the existing law was perfectly clearly worded, and in our anxiety to forestall certain arguments that might be made in course of the debate, we are practically entering into an arena of endless controversy which, I submit, the wisdom of this House ought to avoid by all means.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Just one request, Sir. It is now five minutes to five o'clock. I hope you will sit a little longer so that we may get the Bill through the House now.

Mr. Deputy President: I have no objection to sit a little longer, because I know the difficulty of non-official members who move non-official Bills. But I would request honourable members not to repeat arguments but to try and throw light on legal points only.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: In view of what has been said by Mr Sanyal, I think I should advise the Mover of the amendment to withdraw it. We have clarified it by the discussion we have had already. Although there is enough in the language of the Bill as it stands to include what is intended in the amendment, in view of what was said by Mr. Gole I thought there was no harm whatever in adding the explanation. But since fear has seized the reformers, I advise the advancement may be withdrawn.

Pandit Balkrishna Sharma: I crave the permission of the House to withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

'That clause 2 stand part of the Bill.'

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy President: Clause 1

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I do not move my amendment in view of the enormous opinion in favour of the Bill immediately becoming law.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

'That clause 1 stand part of the Bill.'

The motion was adopted.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh, Sir, I move

"That the Bill as amended be passed."

Mr. Deputy President. Motion moved.

"That the Bill as amended be passed."

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, I am aware that honourable members are anxious to get away and my honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh is anxious to move his Bill. While welcoming this measure as it is merely an enabling measure and it is open to various communities to adopt it or not to adopt it—it does not force anybody to marry in the same gotra if he does not want it and therefore there is nothing like compulsion—but I would like that while we meet here and try to evolve a change suited to modern conditions, we need not, on either side, lay too much emphasis in respect of old days, on the one side, or on the other too much of abuse or, I should say, even insult, of the sacrament of marriage. My honourable friend may be a doctor of medicine and he may be able to cut my throat easily, but he cannot easily cow me down in the matter of law and in other matters. Lawyers certainly have got as much experience as my honourable friend has, with the respect to society in which they move, they have even greater opportunities of knowing whether it is a sacrament or not. I can tell him that so far as marriage in Hindu law is concerned it is a sacrament and is indissoluble. It continues not only in this world but also in the other (Interuption). My honourable friend may not believe in it, but it is not as if . . .

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh. I am only saying that it should be for both the sides.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Both sides of course must be there, but in the way in which you make inroads into our systems of law, you are practically dissolving it. You can dissolve it if you like and make the marriage for a number of months or years. Therefore it is no good trying to ridicule our ancient systems. Whenever there is need for change, have it. If my honourable friend wants to have some progressive changes made, this is not the way to approach the question. Why should you unnecessarily alienate the rest of the community which is prepared to go with you, and instead of helping them, you insult them? As far as my part of the country is concerned, there is really no need for this. I would therefore like to urge some caution on both sides—not merely on one side. Let us not ridicule our ancient institutions merely because on account of impact with western and other culture we do not see eye to eye with them. That is all I would like to say. Otherwise, I welcome the Bill.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: I crave the indulgence of the House for just a few minutes. In this Bill the Government as such have not expressed their views. Of course one member of the Government has spoken and has given his opinion. In the course of the debate on this Bill, there was some talk of concurrent legislation between the provinces and the Centre. My friend Mr. Ayyangar by an amendment which he has subsequently withdrawn has dragged in the question of provincial legislation. Mr. Gadgil gave him an effective reply by introducing the principle of normative legislation. I raise this question because Government should make up their mind in the matter of many more marriages that have become the burning problem of today. My good friend, the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal and other friends from Bengal, both Hindus and Muslims, know that recently many marriages have been made and unmade involuntarily. The excitement of the day will subside but these problems will have to be solved. I would myself prefer such legislation to be brought forward at the Centre because it is only here that political parties and communities have combined together for carrying on Government and this Government extends to the whole country. Therefore the problems which have been raised recently or even today in Bengal by forcible conversions and forcible marriages will have to be settled by legislation and it ought to be the declared policy of this Government that it will take up the question of all-India legislation on a broad based scale in the immediate future.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That the Bill as amended be passed."

The motion was adopted.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Sir, I thank the House.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 8th November, 1946.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Friday, 8th November, 1946

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr President (The Honourable Mr G V Mavalankar) in the Chair

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(a) ORAL ANSWERS

APPOINTMENT OF GOVERNOR AND FUTURE LIABILITIES AS A RESULT OF BRETTON WOODS AGREEMENT

316 *Sardar Mangal Singh Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state

(a) what amounts have so far been paid to the Bank and the fund created as a result of the Bretton Woods Conference Agreements, and what would be the recurring liability for the future, and

(b) whether any Governor and the Executive Director and an alternate Director have been appointed, if so, who are they?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) $8 million have been paid to the Bank $72 million (in rupees) remain to be paid. A contingent liability of $820 million will remain outstanding.

No payment has been made to the Fund beyond $40,000 for administrative expenses which will count towards our quota. $400 million have to be paid on demand of which about $27½ million are payable in gold and the rest in rupees.

There is no recurring liability towards either institution.

(b) Yes, Sir. The appointments made are as follows:

International Monetary Fund —

Governor Sir Chintaman Deshmukh

Alternate Governor Mr N Sundaresan

Executive Director Mr J V Joshi

Alternate Director Dr B K Madan

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development —

Governor Sir Chintaman Deshmukh

Alternate Governor Mr N Sundaresan

Executive Director Mr N Sundaresan

Alternate Director Mr J V Joshi

Sardar Mangal Singh: May I know if there are any Indians on the staff of these organisations apart from Governors and Alternate Governors?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Yes, Sir.

Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Government of India see to it that sufficient number of Indians are appointed on the staff of these organisations?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Some Indians are being appointed on the staff and I may assure the Honourable Member that it is always the effort of the Government of India to see as many Indians appointed on these International bodies as possible.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the Government of India will make a report about the number of people employed on the staff of these different International organisations to the next session of the Assembly?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: If the Honourable Member will put down a question to that effect, the Government will be willing to consider it.

PAYMENT OF SUBSCRIPTIONS BY INDIA TO INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

317. *Sardar Mangal Singh - Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state.

(a) the names of international organisations together with the amount of subscriptions which India pays annually to every organisation, separately; and

(b) whether there is any recognised international organisation whose headquarters are in Asia, if so, where?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) A statement is placed on the table of the House

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if those persons who have been sent as delegates are permanent representatives to these organisations on behalf of India and whether they are making any reports quarterly or periodically to the Government? If so, will the Government kindly place those reports on the table of the House?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I would like to have notice of that question.

TRANSFER OF LAHORE MINT TO CALCUTTA

318. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state

(a) whether it is a fact that the Lahore Mint will be transferred back to Calcutta, if so, why, and

(b) the expenditure on the building of the Mint and other expenses incurred in this connection at Lahore?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) Yes, Sir, not only because the original scheme, which the war situation in 1942 interrupted, contemplated the establishment of a new and up-to-date Mint at Alipore (Calcutta) in place of the existing Calcutta Mint, but also because on a subsequent review of the position Government have been convinced of the undoubted administrative and financial advantages of the transfer.

(b) The expenditure on the building of the Lahore Mint and the other expenses incurred in connection therewith is of the order of Rs. 52 lakhs.

Mr. Manu Subedar: May I ask why the Government will not consider the continuance of the Mint at Lahore and erecting a new one at Calcutta in view of the future needs of this country?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: This was a purely temporary arrangement and there are a number of administrative difficulties in having a Mint at Lahore. It has been considered, therefore, that it will be better and more convenient to have this Mint at Calcutta.

BILL FOR THE IMPOSITION IN INDIA OF DEATH DUTIES

319. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state whether Government will proceed with the Bill for the imposition of Death Duties in India, and if so, whether the Bill will be taken up this session or the next?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The Bill has been circulated for opinion and a decision about the further action will be taken after Government have studied the opinions expressed on the Bill.

Sardar Mangal Singh: May I ask if it is likely to be taken up during the next session?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I am unable to give a categorical reply to this question, but I can assure the Honourable Member that the earliest opportunity will be taken by the Government to arrive at a decision.

Sardar Mangal Singh: I am asking whether, as a matter of principle, the Government has come to the decision that the death duties should be levied or is the Government still undecided on this matter?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The Government is waiting for opinions in this connection.

Seth Govind Das: Has the Government fixed any date by which opinions are expected to be received?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The Government had fixed a date and that was the 15th of August 1946, but there are still some important provinces which have not sent their opinions and they have been asked to expedite the matter.

(CERTIFICATE FROM CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNMENT SERVICE)

320. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state

(a) whether the certificate to the effect that "so far as is known to me the applicant has not taken part in any movement subversive of law and order" is still required from the candidates for Government service, and

(b) if the words "subversive movement" include the various struggles for India's freedom including non-violent civil disobedience movements and the spontaneous movement of 1942?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) No

(b) Does not arise

RECRUITMENT OF EUROPEANS AND BRITISHERS TO SERVICES IN INDIA

321. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state the steps which the Interim Government have taken or propose to take to stop further recruitment of Europeans specially Britishers to services in India?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Interim Government have decided that

(a) appointment of non-Indians to civil posts under their administrative control should be made only in very exceptional cases and that also only on contract for the minimum period necessary,

(b) whenever it is proposed to appoint a non-Indian to a post, the concurrence of the Home Department is to be obtained and all such appointments are to be notified to the Cabinet office,

(c) whenever a Department proposes to employ a non-Indian in any post, it should simultaneously take suitable steps to train Indians to fill such post, and

(d) all Departments should examine cases of posts at present held by non-Indians and the desirability of taking steps to replace those officers on termination of their present appointments, and submit a report of such examination at an early date to the Home Department.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know if the Honourable Member is aware that the post of the Secretary of the Federal Public Services Commission has fallen vacant and it has so far been held by a non-Indian? It is in the desirability of appointing an Indian to that post?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I do not know about the vacancy, I want notice.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Will the Honourable Member consider the desirability of offering inducement to non-Indians to vacate their seats so that they may go away?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: What inducements?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Gratuties and pensions so that they may go

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: So far as the Central administrative services are concerned, the question has been taken up with the Secretary of State to settle the terms

Sardar Mangal Singh: Do I understand the Honourable Member to say that this policy applies only to the civil side of the services and not to the military side?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: It does not apply to the military side

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Have any European civil servants applied for premature retirement after the Interim Government came to office?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I do not know of any such application

Sjt. N V. Gadgil: They will be sympathetically considered

EXTENSION OF SERVICE TO I. C. S. MEN (BRITISH PERSONNEL)

322 *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Palwal Will the Honourable the Home Member please state

(a) the number of Indian Civil Service men (British personnel) who were given an extension of service or taken on special duty during the war, and are still continuing in service,

(b) their emoluments, the office they occupy and the work they are doing,

(c) the reason or reasons for their continuance, and

(d) the number of said officers still employed by Provincial Governments, provincewise?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel. Four British Indian Civil Service officers who were granted extension of service or re-employed after retirement during the war are still continuing in service. A statement regarding their emoluments, the offices they occupy the reasons for their continuance and the Government under whom they are employed is placed on the table

Serial No	Name of the officer	Pay	Office he occupies and the work he is doing	Reasons for continuance	Government under whom employed
1	Mr. A. J. Dash, C.I.E. I.C.S. (Retired and Re-employed)	Rs 3,000 p m	Chairman, Bengal Public Service Commission	* Appointed on 26th September 1942 on five years tenure in first instance	Government of Bengal

The present extension is due to expire on the 31st March 1947	Government of India
4	Sir Henry Knight, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S. (Granted an extension of service for one year from 24th November 1945)	4,000 p m 10,000 p m 4,000 p m 5,500 p m	* Adviser to the Governor of Bombay Governor of Madras (26th February 1946 to 6th May 1946) * Adviser to the Governor of Bombay Governor of Burma (11th June 1946 to 1st September 1946) Governor of Assam (4th September 1946 to end of November 1946)		Government of Bombay

* These appointments are made by the Governor of the Province concerned.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the Honourable Member's reply to the previous question and the general inclination of this Government to replace non-Indians by Indians, will the Honourable Member consider the desirability of sending away these four persons, whoever they are and replace them by Indians as early as possible?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Arrangements for giving them facilities to go are being considered.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it not a fact that all of them are over 60?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I have not got the information here.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it not a fact that I C S officers can continue up to 60 years of age ordinarily or 35 years of service?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I have no knowledge about the rules.

ACCEPTABLE VOCABULARY OF HINDUSTANI

323. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state—

(a) the steps taken by Government to arrive at a generally acceptable vocabulary of Hindustani, and

(b) the results achieved so far?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) and (b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by Sri Akbar Hydari to question No. 84 by Seth Govind Das on the 7th February 1946. The Standing Advisory Body, referred to in the Press Note mentioned in that reply, has submitted an interim report which is under my active consideration.

Seth Govind Das: Is it not a fact that since that question was asked, a vocabulary of a few words have been made and opinion has been expressed that in such small vocabulary, no Hindustani broadcast is possible?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: All that I know of is that a committee has been appointed to prepare a list of common words which could by agreement be used.

ACTIVITIES OF DR A JHA IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROPOSED INDIAN WAR ACADEMY

324. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Secretary of the War Department please state if Government are aware of the activities of Dr A Jha in connection with the proposed Indian War Academy?

(b) What precisely is meant by the statement that all entries to the Academy will be considered on merit only?

(c) What steps are Government prepared to take to ensure that no discrimination will be made as regards that community which has supplied the majority of recruits to the Army in the last 150 years, to wit, the Muslims of India?

(d) What safeguards do Government propose to enforce with a view to ensuring that members of all communities get a fair opportunity of serving their country in the country's armed forces?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) Yes, Sri Dr Amarnath Jha is the Vice-Chairman of the N W A Working Committee, and undertook his recent tour at the request of H E the Commander-in-Chief, who is the Chairman of that Committee with a view to arousing interest in the proposed Academy and discussing the scheme with Provinces and States.

(b) to (d) The N W A Working Committee is to meet on the 11th of November 1946 to consider the draft report prepared by the Vice-Chairman. It is, therefore premature to discuss these questions. I can, however, state at once that Government will see that there is no discrimination against any community in the Armed Forces and that members of all communities will have a fair opportunity to serve in these Forces.

DECISION RE PROVINCE OF PANTH-PIPLODA

†325. *Shri Sri Prakasa Will the Honourable Home Member be pleased to state—

(a) if Government have taken any decision regarding the future of the Chief Commissioner's Province of Panth-Piploda, and

(b) if there is any map showing the exact location of this Province, and if so, whether he will be pleased to put a copy of it in the Library of the House?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel. (a) No The future of Panth-Piploda will be a question for consideration by the Constituent Assembly

(b) A copy of the map has been placed in the Library of the House

PASSAGE TO STUDENTS AWARDED SCHOLARSHIPS FOR STUDIES ABROAD

†326 *Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that a large number of students have been awarded scholarships for studies abroad, but have not been able to proceed for want of passage,

(b) the number of such students and the arrangements that are being made to expedite their departure,

(c) what arrangements, if any, Government have made for such students to be suitably engaged while they are awaiting their passage, and

(d) what stipends, if any, are being paid to them during this interval?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari (a) and (b) The total number of scholars selected for studies abroad in 1945 and 1946 is 557 (339 Central, 218 Provincial), and 442 (187 Central, 255 Provincial) respectively. Of these 527 (321 Central, 206 Provincial) and 231 (121 Central, 110 Provincial) have been admitted and 315 (314 Central, 201 Provincial), and 164 (85 Central, 79 Provincial) respectively have sailed. The number of Government sponsored students who have been admitted to institutions and are at present awaiting passages is 79 (12 Central, 67 Provincial) in 1945 and 67 (Central, 31 Provincial), in 1946. Of these 79 Central Government scholars are 43 and Provincial Government scholars are 36. They are expected to sail soon. The position regarding passages particularly to the United States of America was very difficult last year. It has however considerably improved now. Difficulty of admission in suitable institutions abroad however continues.

(c) Special courses of training in India were arranged for Central Government Scholars selected last year who were not otherwise usefully employed and who could not be sent abroad for want of either passage or admission. In the current year, in order to avoid disappointment and hardship to the selected students it has been decided not to finalise the award of scholarships until arrangements are completed for admission and passage.

The Provincial Governments have been kept informed of the arrangements made by the Central Government in respect of the Central Scholars so that they could, if they so desired, make similar arrangements in respect of their own scholars.

(d) In the case of Central Scholars selected in 1945 who were in employment at the time of the selection but could not join their posts an ad hoc maintenance allowance equivalent to leave salary while on leave on average pay, subject to a minimum of Rs. 100 and a maximum of Rs. 500 p m was sanctioned. For others who held no employment a minimum maintenance allowance of Rs. 100 p m was sanctioned. If the stay in India exceeded 4 months, the minimum was raised to Rs. 150 p m. The Provincial Governments were apprised of these arrangements so that they could, if they so desired, make similar arrangements in respect of their own scholars.

† Answer to this question laid on the table the questioner being absent

INDIVIDUALS AND COMPANIES ASSESSED TO INCOME-TAX ON INCOMES OVER ONE CRORE OF RUPEES DURING 1945-46

†327. * Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) the number of persons who have been assessed income-tax on incomes of one crore of rupees per year during the financial year 1945-46, and

(b) how many out of them are individuals, and how many are companies or joint families?

The Honourable Mr. Laquat Ali Khan: The information has been called for from the Commissioners of Income-tax and a reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

MEDICAL HELP FOR PEOPLE IN RURAL AREAS

328. * Mr. Maçandhari Singh: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Health be pleased to state 'it is a fact that many people in rural areas do not get any medical help during their illness'?

(b) If so, what are the proposals of Government to give proper medical aid to the people living in rural areas?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: (i) Yes.

(b) The present plans for the extension of medical relief in the rural areas include the provisions of the following new institutions and appointments—

Madras—270 rural dispensaries, 150 village health centres and 15 group centres

Bombay—100 subsidised medical practitioners' centres in addition to 330 recently started

Bengal—500 new rural dispensaries

United Provinces—500 additional dispensaries and 600 additional subsidised medical practitioners, 74 travelling dispensaries and 55 travelling units for epidemic work

Punjab—375 rural dispensaries and 320 subsidised dispensaries

Bihar—32 rural health centres and one travelling dispensary in each sub-division

Central Provinces—40 new dispensaries and 100 subsidised medical practitioners

Assam—145 rural welfare centres to which dispensaries will be attached

Sind—40 new dispensaries

Orissa—100 new dispensaries

Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara—Health centres will be established on the Bhoir Committee plan. In the beginning three such centres will be opened in the rural areas in each Chief Commissioner's Province.

2. All the provincial plans are being reviewed by Provincial Governments in the light of the Bhoir Committee's report.

3. In addition to the schemes mentioned the Central and Provincial Governments have made provision in their plans for ambulance services, the improvement of hospitals and the training of staff which will directly or indirectly assist in the provision of medical relief in the rural areas.

Seth Govind Das: Are all these dispensaries allopathic dispensaries?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: Yes, those that I have read out. But some of the provincial governments have prepared schemes for the establishment of Ayurvedic and Unani dispensaries.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know how many thousands of population are served by a dispensary in Madras presidency?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: I will give the information to the Honourable Member

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What is the proposal of the Central Government in case of inadequacy of medical relief? Will the Government of India give subsidy to the provinces?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: The Central Government are assisting the Provincial Governments by a lump sum grants for development. They are not making any contribution particularly for the establishment of dispensaries in rural areas.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it by way of capital outlay or recurring grant?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: The Central Government are making grants which will be utilised by Provinces both for capital and recurring expenditure.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know whether there are any arrangements for indoor patients in any hospital in the rural areas of Delhi?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: No, Sir, not at present.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is the Honourable Member aware that there is no provision for maternity cases and so a great deal of hardship arises?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: Yes, Sir.

Seth Govind Das: Sir, on a point of order the Chairman asked the Honourable Member to repeat his answer. When he did not do it I thought he was hard of hearing but now I find he can hear very well. May I know why he did not repeat the answer?

Mr. President: Order, order. Next question.

POLICY OF MILITARY TRAINING OF INDIAN GIRLS AND PARTICULARS RE INDIAN WOMEN IN I N A

329. Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state

(a) whether Government have in their possession full particulars about those Indian women who were in the Indian National Army of Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose,

(b) whether Government have considered the question of utilising the training and experience of these women for military training of Indian girls, and

(c) the policy of Government with regard to giving facilities for military training for our women folk?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) No, Sir. Government have not got full particulars.

(b) and (c) It is not at present the intention of Government to have women in Service Establishments, except as Nurses.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state if Government have got some particulars if not full particulars?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Yes, Sir. We have got a few particulars about a small number of these women.

Miss Maniben Kara: Do I understand it is the policy of Government to make a differentiation between men and women in the services?

Mr. President: That does not arise out of this. Next question.

REPEAL OF PRESS LAWS

330. Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state

(a) the names and descriptions of those current legislative provisions (including ordinances) which go by the name of press laws,

(b) whether attention of Government has been drawn to the volume of dissent against such laws and to the wide demand, made through the press and on the platform and floor of legislatures, asking for the repeal of such laws,

(c) the attitude of Government to such demand and criticism, and

(d) whether Government propose to constitute a committee for going into the matter, if so, when and in what manner?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) The Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, the Indian States (Protection Against Disaffection) Act, 1922 and the Indian Press (Emergency) Powers Act, 1931.

(b) to (d) I have already mentioned in my speech to the all-India Newspaper Editors' Conference that the Government would have no objection to setting up a Committee with a view to examining the repeal or modification of the Press Laws.

Mr Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: When do Government intend to set up a committee like this?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I was waiting for the official Resolutions of the Conference being communicated to me. I received a letter only yesterday from the President and the matter is being considered.

Miss Maniben Kara: May I know if at the time of the press conference the Honourable Member did not request the editors to support the policy followed by the present Government because it was a national Government, and whether the Honourable Member does not think that such an assurance from the papers would interfere with the freedom of the press?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Honourable Member is misinformed. All that was said was that they should observe the conventions that they themselves had laid down and that liberty also enjoins a certain amount of corresponding responsibility.

Miss Maniben Kara: Do I understand that the papers which were represented in this editors' conference are those who always support the policy of Government?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: No, Sir.

CENSUS OF LIBRARIES IN BRITISH INDIA

331 Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state:

(a) whether Government have taken census of libraries in British India, if so, what is the number,

(b) the number of libraries in towns and in rural areas,

(c) who finance these institutions,

(d) whether Government are aware of the necessity of establishing libraries in rural areas, and

(e) if so, what are the proposals of Government for establishing libraries in rural areas?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a), (b) and (c) No census of libraries in British India has been taken by Government and so it is not possible to give the number or the other information asked for. An all-India census and the collection of figures even if successfully achieved will, I fear, give no real information about the very varying equipment and quality of the libraries scattered all over India. The figures obtained in such a census may even be very misleading. At a Library Conference held in Calcutta in September 1933 a resolution was adopted to bring out a directory of libraries in India and a very representative and competent Committee was formed. The Committee issued a questionnaire and took charge of the various areas allotted severally to the members. The response to the questionnaire and reminders that were sent was, they have regretfully admitted, not very encouraging. They however published a Directory with what data they collected. The number of libraries included in the publication is 269, of which 17 are University Libraries, and 181 public libraries. There are many more libraries in the country beside those included in this Directory that was published eight years ago. The book is available at the office of the Indian Library Association, 6 Esplanade East, Calcutta.

(d) and (c) The establishment of rural libraries depends on availability of good and useful books in Indian languages as well as people ready and willing to use the books for self education. The Honourable Member putting the question is aware that Libraries is a Provincial subject and it is for the Provincial Governments to formulate proposals. It is presumed they will do so in connection with their development plans of social service.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Are Government aware that in most of the Indian languages there are no books now available on technical and scientific subjects? If so even if a library was set up how could it have books which do not exist? May I know, what steps, if any, Government will take in order to bring into existence in the Indian languages books on technical and scientific subjects which do not exist at present?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: The difficulty pointed out by the Honourable Member is just what I referred to in the main answer. As regards steps for the production of new books the matter will be considered.

SALARIES AND ALLOWANCES OF MINISTERS IN INTERIM GOVERNMENT

332. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state if it is a fact that the salaries of the Ministers in the New Interim Government have been fixed at Rs. 1,500 per month?

(b) Is it a fact that Ministers are allowed House Allowance, Food Allowance, First Class travelling allowance, furniture allowance and also allowance for the entertainment of friends of Ministers?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) No.

(b) Members of the Cabinet do not receive any House Allowance, Food Allowance, Furniture Allowance or Entertainment Allowance. The rules regulating the payment by Government of their expenses when travelling on duty are contained in Supplementary Rules 92, 94, 95, 97, 97A and 166 copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: If the answer to (a) is in the negative, may I know what is the salary fixed now and before?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: It is a continuing thing, no change has been made.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: What is the amount?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I do not know, I am told it is Rs. 5,500.

CHARGES AGAINST EIGHT DELHI PAPERS FOR PUBLISHING SPEECH OF A MUSLIM LEAGUE LEADER

333. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state what the charge is against the eight Delhi Papers which have been served with notices because of the alleged publication of a speech of a Muslim League Leader?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Nine papers, on the publishers of which notices were served, appeared to the local authorities to have published matter falling within the mischief of clauses (a), (d), (f), (g) and (h) of subsection (1) of section 4 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Is it a fact that the speech referred to was made by one who is now a member of the Treasury Bench?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: That is so, Sir.

Miss Maniben Kars: Is it a fact that an order was passed by the District Magistrate to show cause why security should not be demanded from Vanguard for publishing news which was circulated by the Associated Press of America?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: That is so, because the District Magistrate thought that it was a breach of the provisions of the law.

Miss Maniben Kara: Then am I to understand that news circulated by the Associated Press of America cannot be taken up by newspapers? And will it not be an interference with the freedom of the press in this country?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Editors of the papers themselves knew that it offends against the conventions that they themselves laid down.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: When the speech was made by such a responsible person, was it not an irresponsible action on the part of the authorities?

Mr. President: Order, order. That is matter of opinion.

Miss Maniben Kara: May I know if in future news sent out by the Associated Press of America and the Associated Press of India will also pass through Government censorship?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: No, Sir.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is it a fact that no further action was taken in the matter?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: No further action was taken because the Press Advisory Committee advised in favour of dropping it.

FINANCING OF INDIA BY BRITISH GOVERNMENT FROM THE EMPIRE DOLLAR POOL FOR PURCHASE OF CAPITAL GOODS

334. *Mr. P. B. Gole: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that the British Government had financed India to pay 20 million dollars for each of the calendar years 1944, 1945 and 1946 from the Empire Dollar Pool, to enable India to purchase capital goods,

(b) if so, whether Government of India have issued licenses for the purchase of such capital goods with a view to using that amount, if not, whether Government propose to give reasons for not utilising the dollars for India's benefit,

(c) the number of licenses issued for purchase of capital goods during the three years referred to above and the amount of dollars utilised every year for the purpose, and

(d) whether British Government intend to release similar amounts from the Dollar Pool even after 1946?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) and (d) His Majesty's Government have earmarked a sum of 20 million dollars in respect of each of the calendar years 1944 and 1945 for meeting India's post-war requirements of capital goods from U. S. A. The question of allocation for 1946 and subsequent years has not yet been settled.

(b) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The second part, therefore, does not arise.

(c) I presume what the Honourable Member desires to know is the value of the sanctions issued for the import of capital goods, etc., which would count against this allocation. Such sanctions up to the end of August 1946 amount to about 38 million dollars. Figures regarding actual utilisation are not available for individual years but the total so far utilised comes to 1.73 million dollars, approximately.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that the dollars accruing to India in the Dollar Pool amount to 114 crores of rupees worth of dollars, will Government take over this whole amount from the Dollar Pool and put an end to the Dollar Pool as soon as possible?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The matter is under the consideration of the Government, and I can assure the Honourable Member that the Government of India will take action as soon as possible.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Have Government considered that the grant of 20 million dollars to India in the post-war period by His Majesty's Government when several hundred dollars were due to India was not justice done to India, but it was a 'concession' while it was not even a concession?

Mr. President: What is the question?

Mr. Manu Subedar: Have Government considered this matter and in the light of this will Government now put an end to the Dollar Pool now that the conditions under which the Dollar Pool was brought into existence have abated?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I think I have already answered that question that the matter is under the consideration of the Government.

Mr. P. B. Gole: So far as the allotment for the year 1946 is concerned, will the Honourable Member say whether any allotment should be made for 1946?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I cannot give the Honourable Member a definite reply on the question, but orders from India have not been delayed on account of sufficient dollars not being available.

Mr. P. B. Gole: May I know whether any amount which was raised during the year 1944-45 will be available for purchase of capital goods?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Yes, Sir.

Seth Yusuf Abdoolah Haroon: May I know from the Honourable Member what is the attitude of the Government with regard to dollar licences which were issued years ago and have not been utilized? Are they prepared to withdraw those licences and utilize the dollars in other directions?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I would request the Honourable Member to put down a question for the Honourable the Commerce Member on the subject.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an editorial note in the Statesman of this morning in which the question has been raised as to whether dollars have been according to Government declaration, freely given for all purposes, and yet there is a continuing discontent and a continuing complaint that sufficient dollars have not been given, and the figures given by the Honourable Member himself of the non-utilization of the forty million dollars would go to indicate that dollars must have been denied to the public?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The attention of the Government has not yet been drawn to the note which the Honourable Member has referred to. Now that the Honourable Member has drawn the attention of the Government, it will be examined.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: May I ask the Honourable Member whether any allotment has been made for 1946?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: No, Sir.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Will the Honourable Member see that he gets at least twenty million?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I have already replied that allotment has been made for 1944 and 1945, and no allotment has been made for 1946 yet, but I hope that allotment would be made.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will the Honourable the Finance Member see that this allocation of dollars is not confined to a few capitalists in this country, but that they are equitably distributed among the various provinces and a part of it shall go for the relief of the consumer and not reserved for capitalists?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: These dollars are for capital goods only.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Why so?

Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson: Will not the Government agree by the terms of the Anglo-American loan which provides for winding up the dollar pool in July?

That is indirectly a notice to the other members that in any case dollars will be in the free market

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: That is so

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know from the Honourable Member where the balance of 10 million dollars minus what has already been drawn is held?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: It is an amount earmarked in the Bank of England

ASSETS IN INDIA OF UNITED KINGDOM NATIONALS

335. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state whether Government have got any estimate of the assets in India of the United Kingdom nationals?

(b) What steps have Government taken in order to have this estimate made?

(c) Have Government any particulars of recent sales by British nationals to Indians of their assets in India?

(d) Have Government any information as to the manner in which the money so realised has been converted from rupees into sterling and, if so, through whom and what is the total amount?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) Government have no estimates other than those prepared by individual economists and private institutions

(b) It has not been possible for Government to carry out any such investigation so far. The question of the suitable means and methods of obtaining information in respect of these assets is under consideration

(c) Government have no information apart from what has been reported in the Press from time to time

(d) In the absence of any instructions on the conversion of rupees into sterling the requisite conversion of rupee proceeds of sales of foreign-owned assets must have taken place through the normal banking channels. No information is available as to the magnitude of the amounts involved

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the early negotiations for the settlement of the sterling balances, will not Government make an effort to get at some kind of rough estimate by consulting private economists before the occasion for these negotiations arises?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The Government will try to get as much voluntary information as it is possible

Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson: With reference to part (b) of the question and the Honourable the Finance Member's answer to the first supplementary question, namely that the Government will try to get as much information on a voluntary basis as possible, will the Honourable the Finance Member give an undertaking that the owners of British assets in this country will be consulted in any process by which it may be sought to estimate the total of those assets?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I said 'voluntary information' and surely those sources that will give this voluntary information will be authentic sources

Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson: I am not suggesting that the voluntary information would be unauthentic or inaccurate. I am asking the Honourable the Finance Member, as he appears to put the calculation of such an estimate on voluntary basis, will he give us an assurance that those who are the subject of the estimate will be consulted in the calculation of it?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Yes, certainly

Diwan Chaman Lall: Is it a fact that the voluntary estimates made by private economists of British assets in India vary from 2 million sterling to one thousand sterling?

Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson: And more

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: That is so

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Isn't it a fact that the predecessor of the Honourable the Finance Member said that he would make an estimate departmentally and that he would give us figures as to how the sterling balances are liquidated?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: All that my predecessor stated must be on record.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Isn't it a fact that the Department has proceeded to some extent in estimating the assets of British nationals in this country?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: On a voluntary basis the Department has started collecting information.

REPAYMENT OF STERLING BALANCES AND REPEAL OF SECTION 41 OF THE RESERVE BANK OF INDIA ACT

336. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state whether Government have communicated to His Majesty's Government the desire of India to have the sterling balances repaid at an early date and, if so, what is the reply?

(b) What steps are Government taking to expedite the settlement of this question?

(c) Have Government taken any precautions to see that the volume of sterling balances does not increase?

(d) Have Government decided to repeal section 41 of the Reserve Bank of India Act and, if so, when do Government propose to introduce the necessary legislation?

(e) Why are Government balances accumulated in London?

(f) Are Government free to convert them into Continental and other currencies?

(g) If they are blocked, who gives such information, on what terms, and when?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) and (b) I would refer the Honourable Member to my reply to part (c) of his starred question No. 172 on the 4th November 1946.

(c) Yes, Sir.

(d) I would refer the Honourable Member to my reply to his starred question No. 87 on the 30th October.

(e) Government balances are held by the Reserve Bank in deposit and it depends on the transactions of the Bank and the relative demand for rupees and sterling how the balances of the Bank are held.

(f) Yes, in accordance with the common policy followed in the sterling area is explained in the Press Note issued by the Finance Department on October 7 1946.

(g) In view of the answer to part (f), this part of the question does not arise.

Mr. Manu Subedar: With regard to the repeal of Section 41, have Government considered the desirability of implementing their own assurance on the floor of this House by the predecessor of the Honourable the Finance Member that this particular section, which compels India to give rupees for sterling at lib, will be repealed or at all events its operation would be suspended.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, the matter is under consideration.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: May I inform the Honourable Member that the question is not so simple as it is made out to be, as I am definitely opposed to any change in Section 41.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I agree with the Honourable Member that the question is not so simple!

POSITION OF INDIA IN THE MATTER OF DOLLARS AND HARD CURRENCIES

337. *Mr. Manu Subedar : (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state the latest figure of sterling balances belonging to the Reserve Bank and how does it compare with the figure for the same date during the last five years ?

(b) Have the Government of India made any demand to terminate the Dollar Pool ? If so, in what terms and what has been the reply ?

(c) Are Government aware of the popular feeling against the Dollar Pool, because of the belief that it has involved the diversion of dollars accrued to India to other uses ?

(d) Are Government aware that there is much resentment in the country against the Dollar Pool ?

(e) What is the amount of payment received from the Dollar Pool for the purchase of food during the current year ?

(f) What is exactly the present position of India in the matter of dollars and hard currencies and what are the figures during each of the last few years since the Dollar Pool was instituted ?

The Honourable Mr Liaquat Ali Khan. (a) The relative figures of the sterling holdings of the Reserve Bank as on the 20th October 1946, which is the latest date for which information is available and on corresponding dates in the preceding five years are, in round figures, as follows —

	Rs
25th October 1946	1,631 crores
26th October 1945	1,382 „
27th October 1944	1,109 „
29th October 1943	815 „
23rd October 1942	413 „
24th October 1941	216 „

(b) The answer to the first part is in the negative. The second part does not arise.

(c) and (d) Government are aware of the feelings in the country against the pooling arrangement. Government have tried to clear, in the Press Note issued on the 7th October 1946, certain mis-apprehensions which have given rise to these feelings.

(e) Figures of actual dollar disbursements for the purchase of food are not readily available in view of the considerable time lag in the receipt of information from London where all such transactions are settled. However, the estimated exchange liability based on allocations made by the International Emergency Food Council and contracts entered into within the dollar area during the year 1946-47 is as follows —

	Rs
Food grains	34.25 crores
Other foodstuffs	4.69 „
Total	38.94 crores

(f) The position has been explained in the recent Press Note on the subject issued on the 7th October, 1946, of which I lay a copy on the table.

I also lay on the table of the House a statement showing India's earnings and expenditure of hard and difficult currencies during each of the years since the pooling arrangement was instituted.

Press Note

INDIA'S DOLLAR EARNINGS AND EXPENDITURE POSITION EXPLAINED LIBERALISATION OF IMPORT CONTROL

As there appear to be considerable misgivings in the public mind about such matters as India's earnings and expenditure of dollars, the Empire Dollar Pool and the Postwar Dollar Fund Government consider it desirable to explain the main facts in this regard to the public.

EMPIRE DOLLAR POOL

It was customary before the war for a large number of countries (generally referred to as the 'sterling bloc') to hold all or almost all their foreign exchange balances in London in the form of sterling. Sterling was then freely convertible into other currencies and therefore countries which held sterling balances could convert them at will into any currency which they happened to need for fulfilling their international obligations. With the outbreak of the war and the increasing difficulty thereby caused in securing the convertibility of sterling, this system assumed a degree of rigidity which had not been previously contemplated. Those members of the 'sterling bloc' who continued to be members of what is now known as the "sterling area" forewent their right to hold foreign exchange in their own custody and agreed to impose restrictions on the expenditure of foreign exchange in order to ensure that the limited resources of the sterling area of foreign currencies were utilised to the best advantage in the prosecution of the war. The whole of the sterling area's holdings of foreign exchange were held in one pool in the custody of the Bank of England and the British Treasury. As the United States dollar was the most important foreign currency in this Pool this whole arrangement came to be known as the Empire Dollar Pool instead of the Sterling Area Pool of Foreign Exchange which more correctly describes it.

In the working of the Empire Dollar Pool of the individual countries of the sterling area were given no specific allotments of the various foreign currencies which they were entitled to spend. The method by which expenditure was restricted was that the countries concerned agreed not to spend foreign exchange unless the demand for which it was required was essential and could not be satisfied within the sterling area. The test of essentiality varied in strictness from time to time as the volume of the Pool increased or decreased and in the conclusion of the war and for a considerable period before it the test was whether a particular demand was necessary for the prosecution of the war or for the maintenance of the civil economy at a wartime level. The member country itself has always been the judge of the essentiality of its own requirements and when it has certified that a particular requirement is essential and its Exchange Control has granted the necessary full permission the Pool has never questioned the decision taken. With the end of the war the definition of essentiality applicable till then lost its meaning and the Government of India in much more liberal now in the classification of requirement is essential than they have been in the past.

The Government of India have kept an account of India's earnings and expenditure of hard currencies some figures about which were published in the Finance Member's Budget speech last February. Since the beginning of the War up to the 31st March, 1946, India earned Rs. 405 crores worth of U.S.A. dollar and spent Rs. 240 crores having a net surplus of Rs. 165 crores. Against this has to be set off the fact that India spent more than she earned, to the extent of Rs. 41* crores, of other hard currencies, namely those of Canada, Sweden, Switzerland and Portugal. India's net contribution to the Pool has therefore been about Rs. 114 crores till the close of the year 1945-46. During the quarter ending June 1946 for which preliminary figures are now available there has been a substantial net drawal by India on the Pool mainly on account of food imports and other payments on Government account. These figures must not however, be taken as our "share" in the Dollar Pool for what we can spend is, strictly speaking not related to nor limited by what we have contributed.

POST WAR DOLLAR FUND

The public are aware that there is a fund known as the Post War Dollar Fund to which the Pool has contributed $20 million for the year 1944. In the year 1943-44 His Majesty's Government agreed in view of our large dollar contributions to the Empire Dollar Pool and of our willingness to agree to give reciprocal aid to the United States to place at our disposal a sum of $20 million in a separate fund to be utilised after the conclusion of hostilities with Japan for restocking and capital expenditure in the U.S.A. All expenditure for these purposes was to be met from the Fund and not till this Fund was exhausted were we to ask for dollars from the Pool for the financing of such expenditure. This figure of $20 million was a percentage of our dollar earnings on trade account in the year 1944 and H. M. G. agreed that they would credit the Fund with a similar sum, up to a maximum of $20 million for the year 1945 if our dollar earnings on the same basis for that year were of the same order as for the year 1944. In respect of 1945 H. M. G. have just intimated an allocation of $20 million. It is generally believed that this Fund represents the total resources in U S dollars which India possesses for the purchase of capital goods. Such a belief is however, erroneous. The limit of our purchases is not necessarily the amount in the Fund for we have the right to draw on the Pool for all capital goods the import of which we regard as legitimate. As against the $20 million allotment to the Fund for 1944 and in anticipation of further allotment the Government of India have issued sanctions for the import of capital goods, the purchase of ships and for other industrial purposes upto $28 million.

* This figure was a misprint for Rs. 51 crores

IMPORT POLICY

Recent criticisms about the import control policy of Government have been based on two grounds, firstly, that the administrative machinery for the grant of import licences was slow and inefficient and secondly, that the strictness with which exchange control was administered made it very difficult for importers both of capital and of other goods to import them from outside the sterling area. With the altered conditions brought about by the termination of War, the Government of India have recently made a number of changes in the administration of import control with the result they hope, that the procedure for obtaining import licences has been very considerably simplified and shortened. They have also adopted the policy of removing as many items as possible from the list of controlled items and of placing them on the Open General Licence for the sterling area. Other items have been placed on the Universal Open General Licence which means that these items may be imported freely from any source whether within or outside the sterling area. Items which can thus be decontrolled are continually under review and the list is gradually being increased.

The Government of India have also relaxed substantially the rigidity of exchange control and the two tests of essentiality and non-availability are now applied with more flexibility. Requirements are now held to be essential if they are necessary for the maintenance and development of the national economy or the maintenance and development of the standard of living and non-availability is determined with due reference to the quality, price and period of delivery of comparable articles in the sterling area. Further, the burden of proving non-availability has been shifted to Government from the importer so that it is now for Government to satisfy itself by its own enquiries whether goods required to be imported from outside the sterling area are available within or not instead of as heretofore for the importer to prove that they were not so available. Another modification that has been introduced is that the various currencies of the world have been graded in order of their difficulty and the tests of essentiality and non-availability are applied to imports with a decreasing degree of strictness in accordance with the comparative easiness of the currency concerned. With these modifications of policy and procedure it is expected that currency considerations will no longer hinder the rapid development of industry in India.

NOTE—All figures in lakhs of rupees.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that this is called the Empire Dollar Pool, a word against which we have the strongest objection, and in view of the fact that the circumstances justifying the institution of this pool have not abated, will not Government respect public feeling and also India's interests, in pressing for an early termination of this dollar pool?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, there are certain practical difficulties, but as I have already said, this is a matter which is receiving careful attention of the Government of India.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Irrespective of the fact whether one likes the word "Empire" or not, there is a sterling pool all the same and this question is not so simple. We have to decide whether rupee should continue to be linked with the sterling or not. That is the first issue before we abolish this sterling pool altogether.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: May I ask the Honourable Member to repeat his question?

Mr. President: There is no question.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know, Sir, if from any of the countries in the Empire or even from the United Kingdom the Honourable the Finance Member has received any objection to the closing of the dollar pool?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: We are not concerned with other countries. We are only concerned with the interests of India.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What is the difficulty and why should it take time to close this dollar pool so far as India is concerned?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: It is rather a complicated business and if my friend will take the trouble of coming to my room I shall try and explain it to him. It cannot be explained in answer to a question like this.

NUMBER OF INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE OFFICERS IN EMPLOYMENT OF GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AFTER TERMINATION OF NORMAL PERIOD OF SERVICE

338. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state how many members of the Civil Service are in the employment of Government after the termination of their normal period of service?

(b) What are their names, present emoluments and functions?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The information is being collected and will be laid on the table of the House when complete.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that this House in the last Budget Session expressed itself against the employment of superannuated persons?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I can say this that there are a large number of vacancies and recruitment has stopped for a long time. Therefore, we have asked some of them against their will to continue. Provinces are also free to employ them. If they want to do so, we cannot stop them. In some cases Provinces have employed them.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Do I understand the Honourable Member to mean that the Government policy is to employ superannuated persons only when there is a necessity?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Only when it is absolutely necessary they are employed.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Isn't the Government aware that a number of persons who are subordinates now can rise to these places and as such they have a legitimate complaint that they have been blocked by the superannuated men?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Except in very exceptional cases, no such superannuated men are employed.

IMPORT OF SALT FROM OUTSIDE AND ABOLITION OF SALT DUTY

339. *Mr. Manu Subedar : (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state whether Government have reached any decision with regard to the abolition of the salt duty ?

(b) How much salt is produced in India and how much of it is through Government agency ?

(c) How much salt is imported from outside ?

(d) Have Government examined the position whether the whole requirement of India cannot be produced here and, if so, have Government found any reasons why the total quantity could not be produced in India and why even something more cannot be produced in India for supply to Burma and other countries ?

(e) What are the conclusions to which Government have reached with regard to Indian self-sufficiency in salt and the need to supply for the public relatively clean salt produced under controlled conditions ?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to Shri Sri Prakasa's Question No. 176 and Mr. Sanyal's Question No. 189 on the 11th November 1946.

(b) On an average annually about 600 lakhs mounds of which about 200 lakhs mounds is through Government agency.

(c) About 50 lakhs mounds on the average during the last five years.

(d) and (e) These matters are under examination and no final conclusions have yet been reached.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal : Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state when that promised statement is likely to be given ?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan : I said in reply to the question to which I have referred that I hope to make a statement shortly.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon : May I know from the Honourable Member if the duty is abolished, whether the benefit will go directly to the consumer ?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan : That is also one of the questions which is being examined.

Mr. Manu Subedar : Will Government take specific steps in order to ensure that the salt which will be available to the public, particularly the poorer sections of it, will be good pure white salt and will not be the mixed muddy dirty brack which is at present available to the poor in most parts of the country ?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan : So at this very moment in India the Central Government is studying the question of the manufacture of salt in England and America.

MAINTENANCE OF RANCHI MENTAL HOSPITAL EXCLUSIVELY FOR EUROPEANS

340. *Seth Govind Das : Will the Honourable Member for Health be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that a mental hospital is maintained by Government exclusively for Europeans at Ranchi

(b) if so, the reasons for spending the Indian taxpayers' money for giving this facility to Europeans exclusively, and

(c) whether Government propose to open this hospital for persons belonging to all nationalities and communities and make it a hospital for advanced cases of mental diseases and attach a research section to it ?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam : (a) There is a Mental Hospital for European patients at Ranchi maintained by a Board of Trustees constituted under the Ranchi Mental Hospital Act 1922. Indian patients accustomed to the European mode of living are also admitted up to a maximum of ten at any one time.

(b) No expenditure on the maintenance of the hospital is incurred from Central Revenues. The cost is met from the contributions by the Provincial Governments who send patients to the Hospital and from fees from paying patients

(c) The matter will be considered in consultation with the Board of Trustees
Seth Govind Das: May I know from the Honourable Member why the number of Indians who are admitted in that hospital is only ten?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: When the figure was fixed some years ago it was considered at that time that there would probably be insufficient accommodation for more patients, taking into account the provision of accommodation for European patients for whom the hospital was primarily intended

Seth Govind Das: May I know why only such Indian patients are admitted in the hospital who are accustomed to the European mode of living?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: I understand that the accommodation provided is in accordance with European standards of living

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: What is the total number of beds in this hospital?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: The maximum number of patients at present is 250

Seth Govind Das: When the total number is as much as 250 will Government consider the advisability of increasing the number of Indian patients who want admission into that hospital?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: As I said, the whole matter is being considered

Khan Abdul Ghani Khan: May I know what the Honourable Member means by European standard of living for lunatics?

(No answer was given)

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Is mental disorder more common in this country amongst the Europeans?

(No answer was given)

RESERVATION OF VACANCIES IN CIVIL SERVICE FOR J. N. A. PERSONNEL

341 *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state:
 (a) whether any vacancies in the Civil Services are reserved for 'war service' candidates even by the present Government,

(b) if so, whether Government propose to abolish all such reservations and throw open the recruitment to all qualified persons, with or without 'war service' and

(c) whether Government propose to reserve 50 per cent of vacancies in the Civil Services for Indian National Army personnel drawn from the army or otherwise and for those who were incarcerated or went underground in connection with the Indian National Resistance Movement of August 1942?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a), (b) and (c) Previous orders reserving all or a fixed percentage of vacancies upto the 31st December 1945 in the various services still stand but the question whether and, if so, to what extent they should be modified is engaging my attention. The present position is, however, that even after all the suitable war service candidates are absorbed in the posts for which they have been selected or in the case of the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police the recruitment to which has been stopped, in equivalent posts, a large number of vacancies would still be available to candidates from other sources of supply including those mentioned by the Honourable Member. No fixed percentage of vacancies arising from 1946 onwards have been reserved in favour of 'war service' candidates but the orders issued by the previous Government will have the effect of allocating a proportion of such vacancies in Superior Services to war service candidates. As I have already said I am reviewing the whole question.

Seth Govind Das: As the Honourable Member has just said, in reviewing the whole question, will he see that only such persons are taken in these vacancies (persons even with war service) who are not non-Indians?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Yes

RECRUITMENT TO INDIAN ARMED FORCES.

342. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state

(a) whether it is a fact that a theory of martial and non-martial races is followed for purposes of recruitment to the Indian Armed Forces,

(b) whether it is a fact that at present the recruitment to the Indian armed forces is chiefly confined to a few provinces like the Punjab, Madras, etc., and to a few communities like Marathas, Gurkhas, Jats, Rajputs, Pathans etc., and

(c) if so, whether the new Interim National Government propose to revise their policy and fix the quotas of different provinces to the recruitment in the armed forces, on the basis of their proportionate population strength?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) In the past recruiting to the Indian Armed Forces was mainly confined to what in those days were termed martial classes

This management was, however, completely changed during the war of 1939-1945 and personnel were enlisted from all classes and from all provinces

(b) The class composition of the post-war army was planned in the early months of 1946 in accordance with this new policy of making the representation of all classes as broad as possible. Recruiting is now being carried out on this principle

(c) Government have not yet determined the size of the armed forces in the future. They do not however propose to fix quotas for provinces on the basis of population

Seth Govind Das: According to the present arrangements may I know whether there will be any kind of quota to be taken from the provinces or no quota at all?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The intention is that there should be no fixed quota for any particular province but care would be taken to see that all provinces and all classes get equal opportunities for enlistment in the armed forces of the country

Sardar Mangal Singh: May I know whether the Honorable Member will assure the House that care will be taken to see that the Indian armed forces constitute a first class and efficient fighting machine and that no other consideration will prevail with the Government of India?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I hope and trust that this House will support the Government in maintaining the Indian army at the highest pitch of efficiency which it had reached during the war and for which it won laurels throughout the world

Seth Govind Das: Is it not a fact that the efficiency of the proposed army which Sardar Mangal Singh contemplates depends upon the education and training which is given to those soldiers and not upon any community or class?

Mr. President: That is a matter of opinion

NATIONALISATION OF INDIAN ARMED FORCES

343 *Seth Govind Das: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state

(a) the steps taken for nationalising the Indian armed forces and for breaking its exclusiveness from the general public and the rural masses in particular, and

(b) the development and extension programme of the various arms of the Indian armed forces to meet India's defensive and offensive requirements?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I venture to suggest that this is not really a proper subject for a question but for a resolution. I would not attempt to answer on the lines suggested to do so would not be doing justice to the subject. I would however, say

(a) That Government's plans for the nationalisation of the armed forces will be made known very shortly. In the last three years every effort has been made to interest the general public in the armed forces and great progress has been made in this direction. These efforts are continuing and will be intensified. There is no exclusiveness in this connection and the more interest the public take in the armed forces, the more pleased will the Government be.

(b) As regards the development of the armed forces to meet India's defence requirements, this is the constant concern of the Defence Department and at present I am glad to say that India has no offensive requirements.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES IN THE CENTRALLY ADMINISTERED AREAS

344. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Is the Honourable the Home Member aware of the public criticism against the present practice of appointing Honorary Magistrates in the Centrally Administered Areas of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara from amongst the titled gentry not possessing sufficient knowledge of law? If so, do Government propose to abolish this system altogether in the interests of administration of justice? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel : My enquiries show that in Ajmer-Merwara less than 40 per cent of the Honorary Magistrates are titled persons. In Delhi out of 20 Honorary Magistrates the number of titled persons is eleven. Apparently the local authorities were satisfied about the legal knowledge of these persons when the appointments were made but I am prepared to ask the Chief Commissioners particularly to bear in mind the desirability of appointing persons with sufficient knowledge of law, when vacancies occur on the expiry of the existing appointments.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Is the Honourable Member aware that for these posts of Honorary Magistrates persons are appointed really for the loyal service they had rendered in the past and then legal knowledge or then education has not so far been the criterion for their selection?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel : I have already answered that question. I know that no disloyal man is appointed as an Honorary Magistrate.

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri : Will the present Government propose to abolish the system of appointing Honorary Magistrates throughout India as has been proposed in some of the provinces already?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel : In the question under reply we are asked to consider the matter of the appointment of Honorary Magistrates in the Centrally Administered areas only and not in the whole of India.

Shri Mohan Lal Saxena : Is the Honourable Member aware that the loyalty of these Honorary Magistrates was to the old order which has come to an end and not to the existing order?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel : Evidently it has not come to an end yet.

Seth Govind Das : Will the Honourable Member consider the advisability of abolishing these Honorary Magistrates' jobs as has been done in various provinces in the central areas also?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel : As far as I am aware, it has not been done in the autonomous-administered provinces, the centrally administered areas are not expected to go ahead of those provinces.

(b) WRITTEN ANSWERS

DISSATISFACTION AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF CHIEF COMMISSIONERS

345. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava : (a) Is the Honourable the Home Member aware of the dissatisfaction among the public against the administration of Chief Commissioners in the Centrally Administered Areas?

(b) Do Government propose, under these circumstances, to set up elected Advisory Councils whose advice may be binding on and necessary for Chief Commissioners on all important administrative questions? If so, when?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel : (a) The Government of India have received representations expressing dissatisfaction on the grounds indicated.

(b) I have already initiated proposals for establishing Advisory Councils and hope to finalize them at an early date.

FUTURE RECRUITMENT TO SERVICES IN AJMER-MERWARA

346. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava : Will the Honourable the Home Member please state if Government propose to frame rules for the future recruitment to Government services in Ajmer-Merwara, and to set up a representative public Committee to make selections for such recruitment ?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel. Yes. Government have already initiated a proposal to frame recruitment rules which will cover not only the larger Central services but also the small services and isolated and newly created posts. These will apply to Ajmer-Merwara when approved.

It is not suitable to associate a representative public Committee with selection for recruitment which in appropriate cases will be made in consultation with the Federal Public Service Commission.

LACK OF HEAD RESTS ON NEW DELHI ROADS

347 *Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Honourable Member for Health be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that men and women workers carrying loads on their heads, are greatly inconvenienced from lack of head-rests on the roads of New Delhi and

(b) if he proposes to take steps to get these constructed in large numbers at suitable places ?

Mr S H Y Oulsnam : (a) Government have no information.

(b) The suggestion will be communicated to the New Delhi Municipal Committee for such action as may be found necessary.

PAY OF GOVERNMENT SERVANTS APPOINTED AFTER 4TH AUGUST, 1931, TO POSTS ON NEW SCALES OF PAY AND THEIR ELIGIBILITY ON PROMOTION TO SCALES OF PAY OF HIGHER POSTS

348. *Mr. Tamuzuddin Khan : Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state whether Government servants who have been appointed after the 4th August, 1931, to posts carrying new scales of pay are eligible to get on promotion the present scales of pay of higher posts for which new scales of pay have not yet been determined ?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan : The crucial date for determining whether a Central Government servant is entitled to old or new scales of pay is the 15th July 1931. Individuals appointed after that date are termed 'new entrants' and are eligible both on initial appointment and promotion only for the new scales of pay. New scales of pay have been determined by the Government of India for the majority of posts, but in cases where this has not been done the rates of pay for new entrants will be fixed by Government.

UNQUALIFIED INCOME-TAX OFFICERS IN SIND

349 *Seth Sukhdev : Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state

(a) the number of Income-Tax and Assistant Income-Tax Officers in Sind,

(b) the number of Hindus, Muslims and others, separately,

(c) how many of these officers have not passed the qualifying examination for Income Tax Officer's post,

(d) why non-qualified men are given such responsible work, and

(e) whether it is a fact that when senior clerks and others do not pass the qualifying test for then cadre they are reverted ?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan : (a) There are 21 Income-tax Officers in Sind. There is no such grade as Assistant Income-tax Officer.

(b) Hindus	8
Muslims	10
Others	3

(c) Of these nine have not yet passed all the subjects in the departmental examination by the higher standard, as normally required.

(d) The reason is that fully qualified men are not yet available in requisite numbers and it is not feasible to leave the posts unfilled as that would lead to accumulation of arrears.

(e) Ordinarily that is the position, but when pressure of work demands it, those that have not passed the qualifying test are allowed to officiate as upper division clerks.

VICTIMISATION OF AND WRONGFUL REMOVAL FROM SERVICE OF AN INCOME TAX OFFICER IN BIHAR

350. *Maulana Zafar Ali Khan - Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that several prominent members of the Bihar Legislature have drawn the attention of the Government of India to the victimisation of an Income Tax Officer of Bihar; if so, what action has been taken on their complaints or representations;

(b) if it is also a fact that a competent Court of Justice has also held that the said Income Tax Officer was wrongfully removed from service and that he was not given adequate opportunity to defend himself as provided by the Civil Service rules;

(c) if it is further a fact that the judgment of the Court reveals that a manufactured and extra judicial letter was placed on the record while forwarding the same to the Federal Public Service Commission; if so, what action has been taken or is proposed to be taken against those responsible for the act; and

(d) whether Government propose to make an inquiry into this matter?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan - (a) Representations have been received from some Members of the Bihar Legislature regarding an Income-tax Officer of Bihar who was dismissed from Government service sometime ago. They have been informed that a case filed by the officer in court is at present sub judice, but that the whole matter will receive the careful consideration of Government as soon as the case ceases to be sub judice.

(b) The court held that the requirements of Rule 55 of the Civil Service Classification Control and Appeal rules and section 240(b) of the Government of India Act were not strictly adhered to in the proceedings conducted against the Income tax Officer.

(c) The reply to the first part is in the negative. The second part does not arise.

(d) Government will take appropriate action in due course when the matter is further considered as indicated in my answer to part (i).

EXPENDITURE ON HARAPPA EXCAVATIONS BY THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF ARCHAEOLOGY

351. *Makhdoom Ali-Haj Syed Sher Shah Jeelani. (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state what was the total amount spent on Harappa Excavations by the Director General of Archaeology during the year 1946?

(b) What was the actual amount spent for digging the site?

(c) Do Government propose to place on the table of the House a statement in tabular form showing the expenditure incurred in this connection including the digging, purchase of tools and plant, conveyance, upkeep of camp, employment of temporary and workcharged staff including draftsmen, surveyors, chaukidars, bistis and sweepers?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari - (a) The total amount spent on Harappa Excavations during 1946 was Rs 81,497.

(b) The actual amount spent for digging the site amounted to Rs 22,428.

(c) A statement giving the information asked for is laid on the table of the House.

[8TH NOV 1946]

	Rs
(1) Digging	22,423
(2) Purchase of Tools and Plant	1,485
(3) Conveyance (including transfer of camp from Taxila)	1,593
(4) Upkeep of Camp including 31 University students	2,744
(5) Work-charged staff (including student supervisors)	1,390
(6) Temporary staff	825

EFFECT ON INDIAN FINANCES BY THE ABOLITION OF SALT TAX

352. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer : (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state if Government propose to introduce legislation at an early date for the removal of the Salt Tax in all the Provinces of India ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the appointment of a Committee of experts to examine the effects of the removal of the Salt Tax upon the Finances of the country in the present financial stringency ?

(c) Are Government aware of the remarks of the distinguished Indian Economist Professor Brij Naran, who has opposed the removal of the Salt Tax ?

(d) What is the average consumption of salt per head per annum, and "if salt were made as free as the air" how many pies per head would be saved by the poor of India ?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) and (b) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to Shri Sri Prakasa's question No. 176 and Mr. Sarwal's question No. 189 on the 4th November.

(c) Yes, Sir.

(d) (i) The per capita consumption of salt is about 12½ lbs. (6 to 7 seers).

(ii) I can answer only in so far as the duty is concerned and not in regard to the cost of production, transport, storage, etc., if any. At the present rate of duty, viz., Rs. 1/9/0 per maund the incidence is about 0/3/0 per annum or 8½ pies per head per month, and this would be the maximum saving.

RESOLUTION RE RELEASE OF INDIAN NATIONAL ARMY MEN AND

Mr. President: The next item is further discussion of the following Resolution moved by Pandit Govind Malaviya on Monday the 4th February, 1946 and not concluded on the 1st April 1946 —

"In view of the universal expression of public opinion throughout the country in the matter, this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council to give up the trials of the officers of the Indian National Army and to release immediately all men and officers of the Indian National Army as well as all other political prisoners under detention or imprisonment."

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan (Finance Member) : Sir, as the Honourable Mover of the Resolution is unavoidably absent, I would with your permission like to move

"That further discussion of this Resolution be adjourned to the next session."

Mr. President: The Honourable Member has stated that as the Honourable Mover of the Resolution is not present here today, he moves that further discussion of this Resolution be adjourned to the next session.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Home Member) : I support the motion.

Mr. President: The question is

"That further discussion of this Resolution be adjourned to the next session."

The motion was adopted.

RESOLUTION RE THE RUNNING OF CIVIL AVIATION AS A STATE DEPARTMENT

Sardar Mangal Singh (East Punjab Sikhi) Sir, I beg to move

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that Civil Aviation be run as a State Department like the State Railways and be not handed over to the private enterprise."

In moving this resolution and speaking on it, I am very well aware that I am probably wounding the susceptibilities of several vested interests and their supporters, but I will take jolly good care not to say anything which would be likely to wound their susceptibilities. I would like to say also that I do not intend to embarrass the government which have already sufficient headaches about other matters. But the subject of this resolution was so urgent and important that I wanted that before the government took any further steps in that direction, the House should have an opportunity to express their views. I was provoked into sending in this resolution by the speech of Mr. Ali Zaheer when he was a Member of the Government of India, in which he used expressions which would strike at the very root of nationalisation of this industry or of any other industry. In that speech he definitely and conclusively stated that there would be greater facilities, there would be greater efficiency and, he also added, there would be more courtesy in the management of civil aviation if it is handed over to private companies. I do not accept this statement. I refuse to believe, whatever might be said of the past governments, that the present all party government can be less courteous or less efficient than some of our capitalists who are here to take up these services. I have not moved this Resolution simply to get mental satisfaction as a socialist—I am not a full-fledged socialist either—but I consider this proposition from the administrative point of view as a sound one. We are just starting civil aviation in this country. India is a very big country and is eminently suitable for the expansion of air services. I would, therefore submit that as an administrative proposition or even as a business proposition it is better that the Government of India takes it over from the very beginning. Civil aviation in this country is making rapid progress. The report given by the Civil Aviation Directorate says that the public demand for air travel increased at a rate far exceeding expectations a year ago. During the first half of 1946 the total number of passengers carried by the air services was 87,633 as compared with 24,000 in the whole of 1945. Air travel is becoming very popular and is bound to increase as we go ahead. I am aware that some of the Honourable Members—I will not say some of the Honourable Members of this House who represent the vested interests—might get up and say that if it is in the hands of private companies it will be more efficient, and why should the government spend so much on this when it is not directly connected with the welfare of the masses? To that I respectfully submit that of all the industries civil aviation is better suited to be departmentally run. At the present moment we have got all the necessary things owned by the government. All aerodromes, landing grounds, emergency landing grounds with all the hangars and buildings and runways, etc., costing enormous sums belong at present to the government. Civil aerodromes numbering about 150 and the air-force aerodromes numbering twice as many, all belong to the government. The length of the runways is as much as a road from Calcutta to Bombay. Again, we have got the entire lot of aerodrome equipment, maintenance equipment, operational equipment, radio equipment, radio beacons and other stores costing millions to the government. We have got all these things with us. Almost all aircraft owned today by private companies and private owners have been sold by the Government. Then we have got specialist technicians for all branches of the Aviation. Many were trained at the expense of the Government 15 or 20 years ago. We have got the Meteorological Department, the Central P.W.D. Aviation Wing, Inspection Section, Posts and Telegraphs, Customs and Police and the rest. We have already got all these. Then we have got transport aerodromes for the carriage of goods and passengers. We have got all the apparatus and what is much more important we have got quite a large number of machines at present with the Government. The Dakota machines are being disposed of by Government.

at a comparatively cheap price. Some of these machines have been purchased by private companies from the Government at a price of Rs 70,000 or 80,000, while these machines have been bought from America for more than two or three lakhs. Some of them are quite new.

Now Sir, we have got all the machines to run all these lines. We hardly require more than 70 or 80 machines or it may be 100 machines at the utmost. At the present moment, all these companies which are running have got only 19 large and 6 small machines. The Government at the present moment have got a large number of machines. The Dakota machines have been tested in the war. They cost less. They gave good service but for some reason or other—about which my Honourable friends on my right might say something—these machines are being run down by propagandists who are in the pay of the British and the British machines are being advertised. I am not representing the Americans. I am for getting cheaper machines and the best machines. I am not prepared to pay more for a similar machine. Sir propaganda is being carried on to run down these machines and to popularise British made machines in India. Recently one concern has given orders for the purchase of six machines. One of them has arrived and on the very first day when a demonstration was to be given that machine nosedived and two machines prepared by the same factory crashed. I have no quarrel with any factory or any machine. The point which I want to make is that the Government of India at the present moment have got a sufficiently good number of machines to run this department themselves. They have got the aerodromes, equipment, personnel and machines. Why hand over all this property of the Government to the private owners? I ask—why not run it yourself?

The other point which I want to make and which is very serious is this and I want the Defence Department to take note of it. If you run the department yourself and if an emergency comes or war comes, then you can switch off the whole of the machines to the war requirements without any difficulty. Whether you want war or not, it will come. It is not a question of a wing or not wanting. War is coming and if you hand over this department to the profiteers it will be very difficult to switch off the machines to the war requirements. There were some difficulties at the start of the last war. The pilots who accepted service under certain conditions were unwilling to serve under different conditions. Then again the Indian Air Force Department is organising a transport command. That command will also do similar flights. Why duplicate? Why not let that department do this and also give exercise and practice to our pilots. If you do that, you reduce your expenses. You increase the efficiency and the striking force of the Indian Air Force. I would therefore say that it would be a wrong policy for the Government of India to hand over this department to the profiteers.

Then Sir the argument is advanced—Oh just wait. Let these capitalists sink their money in it and after some time we will take possession of it. I want my Honourable friends to get rid of this delusion. They may not be able to take possession of the wealth of the capitalists. On the other hand, I am afraid the capitalists might take possession of our Government.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali (Member for Railways and Transport)
You need not fear that all

Sardar Mangal Singh: I need not fear so long as there are strong men there as at present but there may be different men at the time of the next election. The capitalists may arrange to send their own men. We should not forget this. We cannot visualise that there will always be strong men there like Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Pandit Nehru or my friend the Nawabzada. Other men will be sent in their places and therefore I am afraid that we will not be able to control them. On the other hand things may work just the other way about and we may end up by succumbing to their propaganda, to their cajoling and to all sorts of sweet talk. I wish to remind my Honourable friends on the Treasury Benches and particularly my friend Mr Asaf Ali that during the last 50 or 60 years our leaders have been talking of the nationalisation of the railways

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: We have nationalised them

Sardar Mangal Singh: I am very glad I am saying—nationalise air transport also. If one of the members on the Treasury Bench gets up and says that private companies will be more courteous, will be more efficient, I say we are condemning ourselves. We are going back on the policy laid down by the Congress during the last 50 or 60 years. I therefore wish to remind my Honourable friends on the Treasury Benches that they should be very careful in this matter and should extend the same policy to the air transport. There is another small point. We are at the present moment organising co-ordination in the transport system of our country. We are co-ordinating the road transport, the rail transport and possibly the coastal shipping transport. Why not fit in this air transport also in it? I do think some scheme can be devised by which the whole system of transport may work as one unit. That will be more efficient. Private companies will hesitate to operate lines which are not sufficiently remunerative. They will not pay the same attention. I do not know how many applications have come before the Licensing Board. I am very sorry that the Honourable Member in charge of this subject is not here today, but anyhow the Honourable Secretary will get up and explain how many applications they have received and whether any applications have been received for lines which are likely to be less remunerative. It is an important public utility service. There may be accidents and there may be crashes. May I inquire if there are any crashes on the company-managed lines, will this House be entitled to discuss them and invite the attention of the Government to them? Or will the Government Member get up and say, "This is a matter with which the Governor General in Council has nothing to do." Our questions will be returned by the Honourable the President saying, "The Honourable Member is hereby informed that this is a question with which the Governor General in Council is not concerned." We cannot ask a question even about the Reserve Bank which is the product of the legislation of this House. I therefore, do not wish to hand over the safety and service of these lines to the private-owned companies whose primary object would be to fleece the public to earn profits and no more. This profit motive is the root of all troubles. I wish the present Government of India will set an example so that other countries may know that in India at least they have stopped all exploitation by the capitalist classes.

Sir, the proposition that I am putting forward is not a novel one. There are other very successful air lines in the world which are at present being operated by the State. I would remind my Honourable friend that the Dutch Air Line is a State-owned and State-managed concern and that line is very successful. In Russia, of course, all air lines are State-owned and State-managed. Even in the United Kingdom, from which most of our administrators get their inspiration, they are also marching towards nationalisation. The present Government of India should work in a way that all the means of production, particularly the public utility companies and the key industries, are taken over by the Government. I am very glad that in the United Provinces steps are being taken to take over the land of the zamindars and to put it to more useful purposes. (Interruption) I am also asking the House to pass a Resolution. The point which I wish to make out is that we should make full use of the resources of our country to drive away poverty, ill-health and ill-fortune from our country. Half of our land is lying idle and there are other sources of production which are not put to full use. I refuse to believe for a moment that Pandit Nehru would be less efficient than Messrs. Tata and Birla. I refuse to believe that. Then, Sir, some friends might get up and say that it is a losing concern. That argument will be brought forward because all these are the tactics of the capitalists. As I have shown, we need not spend much. We have got all the equipment,—the machinery, the personnel and everything else, and the Government need not be afraid of putting in their [Sardar Mangal Singh] money, lest it may be a losing concern. Sir, I do not claim to be a business-man, but I can very well imagine that leaders of the companies who have applied for licences, such as, the Tatas, Birlas and Dalmas and others, are not fools. If they did not expect good dividends, they would not invest their money. So, we need not be afraid of it.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Division, Muhammadan Rural) They will give 50 per cent dividend or may be even cent per cent.

Sardar Mangal Singh My Honourable friend has increased it even cent per cent. So, we need have no fears on that account. The air travel has become very popular and the revenues will increase. I am not a prophet but I can foresee that after one or two years the Air Department of the Government of India will be able to contribute a substantial sum to the Central Exchequer, like the Railways. I, therefore, have no hesitation in asking the House to adopt this Resolution.

Several amendments have been tabled. I am not one of those who will make a fetish of words or phraseology. My object is that civil aviation should be taken over by the Government and run departmentally. If other suitable words can be substituted, I have no quarrel with them as long as my object is achieved. My Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lall has given notice of an amendment. I have read it and re-read it. It sounds well, but I would like to hear him before I give any opinion on it, because it is capable of different interpretations. Sometimes it looks to me that it is neither fish nor fowl. Unless my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lall, for whom I have great respect, assures me that the steps will be taken by the Government to take over civil aviation departmentally, I am afraid I cannot at this stage say that I am agreeable to that amendment.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab Non-Muhammadan) It may be flesh, if not fish or fowl.

Sardar Mangal Singh There are other amendments. They will be moved, and after I hear them, we might come to some agreed decision. I wish to assure the Government that it is not my intention to embarrass them any more. Probably the Licensing Board is sitting and this is the right time.

An Honourable Member No, it is not sitting.

Sardar Mangal Singh I think this is the most appropriate time for this House to express an opinion and give directions to the Government which I hope will abide by the decision of this House. I request Honourable Members to treat this motion purely on its merits. In this connection, I would request the leaders of the two major parties in this House to release their members and to give them full freedom of speech and vote in this House. This is not a political issue. It is not a vote of no confidence. It is a first class public matter on which the opinion of the House should be taken. I therefore say that members of the Congress Party and Muslim League Party should be free to vote and speak as they like. Sir, I commend this motion to the House.

Mr. President: Resolution moved.

'This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that Civil Aviation be run as a State Department like the State Railways and be not handed over to the private enterprise.'

There are a number of amendments tabled by Honourable Members and in order to facilitate further discussion, as the Members speaking will not have a right of reply, except the Mover, it is better that the House should be in possession of all the amendments. The first in chronological order is in the name of Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, I do not propose to move my amendment in view of the more comprehensive amendment tabled by my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lall.

Diwan Chaman Lal: Sir, I move

"That for the original Resolution the following be substituted

This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that early steps should be taken, keeping in view the principles of State Control or State ownership, to lay down the lines of Government action in connection with the development of Civil Aviation in India both in the matter of internal and external lines"

Mr. President: Amendment moved

'That for the original Resolution the following be substituted

This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that early steps should be taken, keeping in view the principles of State Control or State ownership, to lay down the lines of Government action in connection with the development of Civil Aviation in India both in the matter of internal and external lines"

I had an amendment in the name of Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth and Mr Siddique Ali Khan has a further amendment to the same. There is also the amendment of Capt. Syed Abid Hussain Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth (West-Coast and Nilgiris Muhammadan) If it is decided that only one portion should be voted upon, it would be easier. Otherwise the whole amendment of Capt. Abid Hussain will have to be accepted or rejected. Mine and Mr Siddique Ali Khan's are in two portions.

Mr. President: The difficulty is that Mr Siddique Ali Khan's would be an amendment to an amendment. For the purpose of dividing an amendment into two parts for voting, there should be one amendment as a whole, instead of being an amendment to an amendment.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: There would be separate voting, if the House decides it.

Mr. President: If the Chair so decides, I do not mind putting it into two parts. It would then be more convenient than to take up Capt. Abid Hussain's amendment first.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: Shall I move my amendment?

Mr. President: If that is moved, the other (Capt. Abid Hussain's) will be barred.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: These are two separate amendments. That would be the third amendment. So far as that is concerned there is no difficulty. The idea is to give facility to the House to vote separately if they so desire.

Mr. President: I see the point of the Honourable Member. But then the difficulty which I may point out to him would be that if he moves his amendment, the other one of Mr Siddique Ali Khan's comes as an amendment to an amendment. Therefore, at the time of voting, the position would be that if Mr Siddique Ali Khan's amendment is carried then his amendment will be amended by that amendment and the whole will be put to the vote again, the same amendment cannot be put separately again as part of the substantive amendment. That would be the position.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: Once his amendment is accepted, then my amendment stands amended with that amendment and that becomes a substantive amendment.

Mr. President: The point is that if his amendment stands amended by the acceptance of the amendment of Mr Siddique Ali Khan, then it will not be possible for me to divide that amendment again into two portions for the purpose of voting.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: Then there is no further amendment.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: To obviate this difficulty, my Honourable friend Haji Ishaq Seth might himself add the words which are the subject matter of the amendment of Mr Siddique Ali Khan's. There will be only one amendment.

Mr. President: That involves the question of my giving him permission to introduce a matter of which he has not given notice.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: The House is aware of that amendment. It is not new.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: If that is your ruling, then Capt Abid Hussain will move his amendment.

Mr. President: If the Honourable Member is prepared to accept the course that he does not want me to split up the amended amendment, he can continue.

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan (Agia Division Muhammadan Rural): If the amendment of Mr Siddique Ali Khan is accepted, it will be put up as one thing and not as two.

Mr. President: If he further wants me again to split it up, that cannot be done while in the other amendment it can be done. That is the point which I wish to bring to the notice of the House.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi (Calcutta and Suburbs Muhammadan Urban): I was trying to catch your eye all this time, but I did not succeed. Sir, I want to know whether a negative amendment can be moved or can the original motion be dis-established entirely by an amendment?

Mr. President: The point of order involves two issues which are separate and independent. So far as the former part is concerned as to whether a negative amendment can be moved or not, I am clear that a negative of the original proposition cannot be moved and the Honourable Member has the right to oppose it. But so far as the substitution is concerned which does not mean a negative of the original proposition, I see there are precedents in which such amendments have been allowed.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: Sir, I move

(i) That between the words 'be' and 'run' the words 'owned, controlled and be inserted, and

(ii) that for all the words occurring after the words 'State Department' the words 'by Provincial Governments' be substituted."

Mr. President: Amendment moved.

(i) That between the words 'be' and 'run' the words 'owned, controlled and be inserted and

(ii) that for all the words occurring after the words 'State Department' the words 'by Provincial Governments' be substituted."

Mr. Siddique Ali Khan (Central Provinces and Berar Muhammadan): Sir, I move

"That in the amendments proposed by Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth after the words 'by Provincial Governments' the following be added

"in accordance with co-ordinated schemes drawn up by a Central Committee on which the Provincial Governments are adequately represented."

Mr. President: Amendment moved.

"That in the amendments proposed by Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth after the words by Provincial Governments' the following be added

"in accordance with co-ordinated schemes drawn up by a Central Committee on which the Provincial Governments are adequately represented."

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Quarter Past Two of the Clock. Mr President (the Honourable Mr G V Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Mr. President: Seth Govind Das. I believe the Honourable Member knows that there is a time limit of fifteen minutes.

Seth Govind Das (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions Non-Muhammadian): Yes, Sir. I rise to support the amendment moved by my Honourable friend, Diwan Chaman Lal. In my opinion there is not much difference between the Resolution of my Honourable friend, Sardar Mangal Singh, and the amendment moved by Diwan Chaman Lal. In principle both agree because the amendment also it is stated 'keeping in view the principles of State Control or State Ownership'. The words, State Ownership are there which mean that if the Government think it advisable to make aviation a State-owned enterprise it can do so.

Now, Sir, we cannot deny the fact that there is a lot of difference in the position in which we were before this Session of the Assembly and the position in which we are today. There is no doubt that we have not got complete independence, yet we cannot deny this fact also that today the Treasury Benches are occupied by the real representatives of the people (An Honourable Member Peoples) and the interests of the country are absolutely safe in their hands. Therefore, Sir, the amendment which has been brought forward by my Honourable friend, Diwan Chaman Lal, is as it ought to be under the present circumstances. But though we have full confidence in the present Government, yet we can express what we think proper in this House and recommend to them what they ought to do.

I am, Sir, for nationalization of this industry, and I have got my own reasons for it. I shall relate my reasons briefly. First of all, we cannot help big business to go on having huge profits. In provinces we want to abolish agricultural zamindari. In the United Provinces Assembly, we have passed a resolution for nationalization of industries also. While, Sir we are contemplating to abolish agricultural zamindaris we cannot help in the establishment of commercial zamindars. My other reason for nationalization of this industry is that no transport system can be perfect in this land unless we have all sorts of transports co-ordinated. Now, Sir, aviation is also one kind of transport, and we know that though we have plans for co-ordinating rail-road system yet how difficult it is for us to co-ordinate these two transports and that is because vested interests have been created on roads. Now if we give aviation to private concerns vested interests would be created in this sphere as well and it would be difficult for us to co-ordinate aviation with rail and roads. The third reason why I am opposed to this enterprise going in the hands of private concerns is that so far our plans for industrialization of the country are not made and we want first machinery for making machinery in our country and then we want machinery for heavy industries. If this industry remains in the hands of the State, only those lines will be worked which are found absolutely essential and aviation would be expanded when we start making our own aeroplanes. If we go on importing motor cars, aeroplanes and other consumer goods indiscriminately, our sterling balances, which we could accumulate after such a long time and after such great trouble would dwindle away.

Sardar Mangal Singh: They are already selling rotten machines.

Seth Govind Das: And therefore in the interest of our industrialization it is necessary that this industry should remain in the hands of the Government. My fourth reason for not giving this enterprise to private concerns is that they will never have aviation lines well distributed. Their eyes will be on profits and they will only work such lines which will give them huge profits ignoring the interior of the country, and also ignoring the medical, postal and other facilities which will give less profit, but more convenience to the rural and semi-rural population of this country. My fifth and the last reason for not giving it to the private concerns is that if it is given to the private concerns, there will be cut-throat competition and there will not be any standardization of the industry as it ought to be. In view of these reasons, I am in favour of making this industry a state enterprise, but at the same time I do not want to bind the hands of the Government and say that they should do such and such a thing. If they feel that at present there should be only control of this industry they should be at liberty to do so, and this is what the amendment of Diwan Chaman Lal asks.

If the Government think that it is advisable to control this industry there are two ways of doing this. One is to invest sufficient amount of capital in these concerns, I mean 51 per cent and the other is to make such rules and regulations which will control the working of this industry. In my opinion there cannot be any proper control unless there is 51 per cent investment of the Government in these concerns. But Sir, this also I want to leave in the hands of the Government. These are my suggestions which I am putting before them for consideration.

As far as control is concerned, eminent industrialists have themselves accepted that some sort of control of industries is necessary. The President of the Indian Merchants' Chamber of Bombay recently said "We realize that a certain amount of regulations and control by the State will be necessary and may have to be accepted." Now Sir, what kind of control it ought to be and in what way it should be done should be left to the Government. But unless and until, as I have said, there is sufficient investment, by making rules and regulations alone there cannot be any proper control. I can give many instances in this respect. But I shall content myself by giving only one illustration and that is, Sir, the working of the Factories Act. Recently, the Honourable the Labour Member brought a measure here and while moving it he himself admitted that control by making rules and regulations cannot be effective.

There is one more point towards which I want to draw the attention of the Government. They should see that this industry remains an Indian industry. Recently Sir, an article appeared in the Eastern Economist, in which it is said that recent developments unhappily go to prove that Government are not acting up to their professions of permitting the development of Indian Air services, both internal and external by Indian enterprise under Indian management and to encourage the employment of Indians. It was disclosed in the course of the Assembly debate on the grant for Civil Aviation that one of the two major companies is operated by managing agents in whose firm non-Indians hold 60 per cent of the share capital and five out of the seven seats of Directors.

And, Sir, while concluding my remarks, I shall point out that the policy of the Government in this respect should be clear. So far Sir, we were being ruled by an alien Government. The interests of India were not safe in their hands. They wanted to encourage foreign capital and the foreigners. But now, Sir, the reins of the Government have come into the hands of the real representative. The attitude of the Government which was ruling so far, with regard to industries can be known from a statement of Government's industrial policy which was issued in 1945 by the Planning and Development Department. They said

"The attitude of Government towards industry in the past was for many years one of laissez faire. Till the war of 1914-18 this policy was maintained in the belief which was in accordance with current economic doctrine that industrial progress was best achieved by unregulated private enterprise. This attitude underwent some modification after the last war through the adoption of the policy of discriminatory protection."

But we know that up till now the same policy practically continues.

In 1919 Mr. Montague, the then Secretary of State for India said

"I accept the fundamental principles underlying the recommendations of the Commission that in future Government should take an active part in the industrial development of the country. Secondly, that Government cannot undertake this work unless provided with an adequate administration, equipment and forearmed with reliable scientific and technical advice."

But in spite of a lapse of 25 years, the Government remain where they were. I expect that as the circumstances have changed the present Government will look into the policy thoroughly and will see that if this industry is not immediately nationalised steps will be taken so that it is fully controlled and is nationalised in the near future. I support the amendment moved by Diwan Chaman Lal.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer (Bombay Southern Division, Muhammadan Rural)-I rise to raise my voice against the resolution so ably moved by Sardar Mangal Singh. I am afraid his speech was too emotional. I am not convinced with the arguments that he advanced that this industry should be taken over by the State I should like to read an extract of a speech by Mr Herbert Morrison leading member of the British Socialist Cabinet

"People have been known to go red in the face of blue or both red and blue, in discussing it (nationalization) either as pronationalisers or antinationalisers

There is however no real need for excessive excitement for the question to be decided is whether, in the circumstances, the industry is likely to be better run by free competitive private enterprise, or controlled and supervised monopoly enterprise, or by public enterprise, of one sort or another

It is up to nationalisers to prove their case that there will be public advantage by nationalization It is no less up to the antinationalisers to prove their case that the public interest can best be served by private ownership "

This I am afraid, my friend has failed to do To judge whether State or private enterprise will give better benefits we must consider three points (a) That Air Lines in India are properly co-ordinated (b) That further subsidies and fares are kept as low as possible (c) Greatest possible efficiency, latest improvements to be incorporated and best and most courteous services If this can be achieved by private enterprise, we are certainly for it If not, we are definitely for nationalization

In air line operation, there are following factors to be considered very carefully (a) It should not be forgotten that this is a very highly specialised subject (b) Of great importance are the commercial and human aspects (c) Rapid and continuous changes take place in designs of aeroplanes and in operations (d) Lastly, that large elements of personal contact with passengers is involved

The question is whether the State can give you better results than private companies This is a fact which requires to be carefully considered I am sure all of us will agree that the way the present airways in India are being run is to my mind very satisfactory We are also all satisfied with their timings, the comforts that are offered to us and in every respect they are most satisfactorily run Every day we hear in the House and even outside 'Look at the railways which are run by the State, hundreds of complaints, but have you ever heard of complaints against Indian Airways' We have not come across any accidents, whereas we read in the papers every week of train crashes

My friend said that the Government of India can take over the industry, as they have 90 Dakotas May I tell my honourable friend that those Dakotas which are offered to Airways today are useless Lives will be in danger if they are used Now look at the companies I know, Sir, that all the private companies in India are importing from England first-class machines equipped on modern lines I would ask my friend Sardar Mangal Singh, to be the Member in charge and take over those Dakotas and see how far he will succeed These Dakotas are of no use I would advise my friend the Secretary for Posts and Air to see that these Dakotas are not offered to the public for use They are so much scrap and I am sure the Dakotas which have been lying in the dump in Bengal are absolutely of no use and they should be burnt

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official) Which airline company do you belong to?

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: I represent none I can assure my friend that I was offered a Directorship by three well known companies, but I refused to be a Director I desire to have no interest in any air line I know myself that it will not be a paying concern I will be the last to start a concern myself I can assure my friend that I am speaking from an unbiassed point of view and I hold brief for none

One point I would like to say against State Management State management of airlines would subordinate air transport to the interests of railways as in the case of road development, where railways are jealous competitors and will retard the development of national aviation My friend said that we have got best brains in the Cabinet and they will be able to run this under State management. But may I ask him whether they have got all those resources at their control which private companies have? It will be very difficult for even the Honourable Members in the Interim Government to run this as a State-managed concern. I hope they will drop that idea even if they have got it in their mind. I can assure my friend that I do not doubt their ability. I know they are the best men in the country but that is not the point. The point is whether they have the resources.

Secondly these airlines will be subject to the influence of political groups, which we should all avoid. The policy which has been outlined by the Honourable Member in charge, a Congress nominee, can be changed today by the present member, a Muslim League nominee. If policy is going to be changed like this as Members in charge change, that I am afraid the air companies will not know what to do in future. In this connection I would like to read only a few lines from the statement of the previous Member, Mr. Ali Zuhreer, as far as nationalisation is concerned.

"The question of nationalisation of air services has been agitated in papers and has engaged the attention of Government. The present policy of Government on this question is to allow private companies, licensed by the Air Transport Licensing Board, to operate the internal route. In coming to this conclusion the Government has been greatly influenced by the consideration that its machinery is not as yet so highly developed as to enable it to undertake actual operations in aviation.

The progress of civil aviation in the beginning can be achieved more by permitting private companies to operate on internal routes under strict Government licensing and supervision.

The Government hopes that on account of private enterprise greater facilities, efficiency and economy will be available to the passengers than if the services were to be nationalised at this stage."

I am sure no members of this House would disagree from this. The Government's case in favour of private concerns is so strong that it needs no further clarification.

Sardar Mangal Singh: The Government themselves have repudiated it in reply to my question.

Sir Harold Shobert (Secretary, Communications Department): No, Sir, that has not been repudiated.

Sardar Mangal Singh: You said that that was the view of the Government of India at that time.

Mr. President: Order, order.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: I would also like to read one more quotation on the subject from the Indian Finance of the 12th October, 1946.

"There is hardly any exaggeration in the statement that as things stand the easiest way of killing new enterprises in this country is to hand it over to Government—to nationalise it."

I would suggest to the Government that they should not embark on this mission of taking over civil aviation under state control. Their hands are already too full at present and I am sure their hands will be also too full in the future. Let them first see to the basic needs of the country and let them devote their time and attention to the question of providing food, clothing and housing to the people of the country and then let them embark on other ventures. I personally think that the time has not come when they can think of taking over civil aviation under state control.

Miss Maniben Kara (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I rise to support the original Resolution so ably worded and moved by my Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh. That Resolution in a very clear way has stated the objective of the Resolution, which is the ownership of civil aviation by the State. Sir, I strongly oppose the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lal, which though on the face of it, looks very innocent and harmless, gives an impression that he also stands for some sort of nationalisation of civil aviation. I would draw the attention of Honourable Members to the amendment of Diwan Chaman Lal, where he very clearly states "keeping in view the principles of State Control or State Ownership." He talks of "or state ownership." He does not say "and state ownership" which means that it may be owned by the State or it may not be owned by the State and to that extent it is essentially a very different idea sponsored by Diwan Chaman Lall as against the one which is already embodied in the Resolution itself.

Civil Aviation is certainly a public utility service. It is used by the public it is for the benefit of the public and if the policy of the present Government is for social welfare both the parties who are today occupying power, if their policy is to nationalise the key industries and essential services, this is the time when they can act upon their declarations. I can very well understand if they openly come out and say that they do not stand for nationalisation of key industries but I cannot understand nor appreciate the moving of such amendments which looks like pseudo-socialist amendment. It gives the idea that we stand for nationalisation and quietly and silently it has been moved "or otherwise." It makes no sense. Again I would like to draw the attention of the House to a question which was asked by my Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh on the 31st October.

"Will the Honourable Member for Communications be pleased to state whether Government are aware that there has been continuous and rapid growth of air transport in India and that air services are in private hands."

And the reply given at that time was that

The policy of the Government was in favour of regulated private enterprise. The present Government has no time to review the policy to announce to the House soon. I may, however, say that the House will have an opportunity to discuss this subject on Sardar Mangal Singh's resolution to be debated on the 8th November. Probably by that time I may be in a position to indicate Government's policy."

This is a reply given to this House on the 31st October during this very session. I am waiting with great interest to know what the Government policy is going to be on this Resolution. As it has been already pointed out by the Mover of the Resolution this particular industry cannot exist or cannot continue its proper functions without the aid of the State. Even today the Government have to supply them the pilots and they are responsible for the education of the pilots. They have to have the aerodromes they have to have certain supervisory staff. In various ways without Government support this private enterprise cannot go on and I fail to understand why Government should want to aid an enterprise of private individuals. The meaning of the word 'private enterprise' presupposes profits. An industry for use can be run only if it is owned by the state. I have been awaiting and watching the policy of the present government, and I hope that on this issue at least government members will boldly come forward and say that they accept the spirit of the Resolution. The national government which is in power should stand for the nationalisation of key industries and should not want to declare their intentions. I am very much grieved to note that in certain respects where the government have already declared their policy like at the trade and employment committee, the Honourable Member made his declaration of state policy when he talked of giving protection to private industries by giving them high tariffs and subsid as I have no quarrel provided they come out and say so openly. Then I will know where I stand. But it always happens that able men like Diwan Chaman Lall, with his parliamentary experience of so many years who can make able speeches and convince the House,—says that instead of 'and' he has put that little word 'or', which makes all the difference in the resolution which has been moved by my friend Sardar Mangal Singh. The present Government from whom we expect great things, on the question of industrial unrest also has foisted the Trade Disputes Act on working classes. These are not the ways by which the social welfare of the country can be brought about, these are not the methods by which the present government can create the confidence in the public to feel that now we have our own government at the centre and we can expect better things. Big manifestoes have been drawn up by both the political parties who are today in the seats of government. Only two months before they were on this side and I know that questions were asked about nationalisation of certain industries, but today when they are put in power, let us hope that they do not noodwink the public. One of my friends in his speech has stated, that because there is a national government we must ditto them. He is of the opinion that, it will be a terrible thing if the policy of the government changed every time with the change of colour of the skin of the members of government. Sir, that is precisely our point. We have been fighting against the particular system which has been followed by the foreign government. We have not been fighting for the mere change of the colour of the skin, but we expect that the national government consisting of Indians—will change the system and policy which has been followed by the foreign government which was keeping the country in starvation and misery and was responsible for all sorts of evils in this country—my reply to the last speaker is this: he must realise that we certainly do demand that with the change of the government, the policy of the government must change. If the intention of the present government is, as is pointed out, the maintenance of the status quo, I think we have fought the battle in vain. We may get political independence, but it will not be freedom for the masses. For freedom of the masses it will be absolutely essential that we should give up the policy which has been pursued by the foreign Government and that we should accept a progressive policy which alone will guarantee peace and harmony and happiness for this country. I am surprised that some members from the Congress benches have come forward and asked us that we should not expect drastic changes simply because now at the centre there is a national government. It is because we have an Indian government that we have a right to claim from them certain changes. We could not make that claim from a foreign government because they came here to suppress and to exploit us. Their motive was very clear, they came away all these thousands of miles to have no other benefit except to exploit us. But we certainly expect better and greater things from an Indian government, and I would be most grieved to have any such utterances coming from members of the so called popular parties.

I would therefore think that this is high time that on such questions of social importance whereby the social welfare of the common people can be safeguarded, the government must come forward with their declared policy. This is their opportunity, and I think Sardar Mangal Singh's resolution is most timely and let the entire nation judge the present government by their action. I would therefore appeal to my friend, Diwan Chaman Lal, to withdraw his amendment. Every one of us should pass the Resolution unanimously, expressing our opinion so that the government may take note of the Resolution which has been passed here. Let us not take the other way round, that we should go on, as pointed out by one of the speakers, supporting the government in all their actions. No. These legislatures are going to control the government, and not the government going to control the legislatures. That should be the position. I am surprised that an honourable member belonging to a popular party should come forward on the floor of this House and make a statement that we must let the Government decide what they want to do, whether they want to control industry or own it. Why should the government decide? It should be this Assembly that should decide whether they will control or they will own it. I do not want to say more, because most of the points are covered by the Mover of the Resolution. I hope that this resolution which has been moved is absolutely in accordance with the declaration of both the parties who from the government and they will accept this Resolution in spirit and in action. With these words I strongly oppose all the amendments and support only the original resolution moved by Sardar Mangal Singh.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Nominated Non-Official). Mr President, it appears to me that my friend, Sardar Mangal Singh, and Maniben and Company have formed the opposition in this House. They are welcome to do so, and I wish them God speed and success. But I would like to draw attention to the constitutional position in this House. It is very different to what it was a few months ago. Today on the treasury benches we have representatives of the two main parties in this House, the Congress and the League, and it is expected that members of those parties will support their government, will support the treasury benches

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Do you know if this is their view?

Mr. President: Order, order

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: My friend Mr Joshi is welcome to be in the opposition I might have added his name to the company The constitutional position I desire to place before this Honourable House is this, that if you are to have party government, the House should not definitely express its opinion in such definite terms as are contained in my Honourable friend the Sardar's Resolution, before knowing the exact position of government You cannot expect members of the parties supporting the government to definitely commit themselves to a policy which they might find is not acceptable to the government The constitutional position is that the Government declares their policy The Opposition oppose The supporters of Government support that policy and have the privilege of criticising but as soon as they oppose Government by their vote, then either the Government is defeated and another Government comes in or those Government supporters who oppose form another party Now, that is the constitutional position in every legislature of a democratic character Now, my Honourable friends here desire to express a definite opinion on a policy which has not been properly formulated by Government but on which a member of the Interim Government has expressed a definite opinion There is no question of change of colour One member of the Interim Government resigns and another takes his place That makes no difference You have to take the opinion of the member of the Interim Government who expressed an opinion on this question

Miss Maniben Kara: He has not expressed

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: It was read out and if my Honourable friend could not understand the meaning of plain English I cannot help her I am fairly certain that it was worded very clearly It was a member of the Interim Government who expressed the opinion That opinion was read out to this Honourable House and it was on the very question we are discussing Now, Sir the Opposition—I will call it the Opposition—formulates a Resolution contrary to that opinion expressed by a member of Government and my friend behind me calls upon Government to carry out their pledges to serve the country and to do everything that is for the benefit of its people I know it is all very pretty to say that Mr President, we have been accustomed to hear that sort of language in the past Those things were suitable then but today they are not suitable and we must change our mentality We must change our methods because we are in a totally different position and therefore I congratulate my friend Diwan Chaman Lall on having drafted a Resolution on which is suitable and coming as it does from the supporter of a party which is on the Treasury Benches, we cannot expect my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lall to dictate to Government that they shall do so and so

Miss Maniben Kara: Why not

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Does not my friend understand what it is to have a constitutional Government? If she wants to oppose for the sake of opposition, I do not deny her that wonderful position but the position is very different now

(Interruption by Maulana Zafar Ali Khan)

Mr. President: Order, order Let the Honourable Member proceed

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Mr President, you did not hear that interruption It was excellent He said that in a war of words, it is difficult to beat a woman Mr President, you and I have had opportunities in the past of having to deal with them and neither you nor I are going to be frightened

[Sir Cowasjee Jehangir]

Now, Mr President, having explained the constitutional position to the best of my ability, I say that it is not up to either members of the Muslim League or the Congress in the very beginning of our constitutional life in this House to lay down the policy of Government and dictate to them that they shall follow it. When they formulate their policy, I will have no objection to any member of the Muslim League or of the Congress criticising Government and saying "we do not agree." I myself reserve to myself that privilege.

Having dealt with the constitutional problem, we come to the merits of the case. I will be accused of being a capitalist. I will be accused of being partial. May I turn the tables on those who pretend not to be capitalists. They pretend that they have not got a rupee in this world. They have got nothing to invest and therefore it is their privilege to talk of ultra-socialism and to say that they are impartial and to say that if anybody does not agree with their opinion they are partial. I plead guilty to the charge of having a little money but I do contend that in all matters which affect the real interests of this country there are men who may be capitalists but who will put the country before themselves and let that be clearly understood by my friend to the right and my lady friend behind me. Therefore, Mr President, if I contend that there is a great deal of sound argument put forward by my young friend Mr Jaffer I should not be accused of being partial. This is a young industry and if it can flourish under Government control by all means have Government control. It is the one form of industry in this country or in any country which should have considerable government control. The lives of the people of this country who fly are in the hands of the management of these companies and it is up to the Government to see, by their control, that flying is made as safe as possible. That is their business and I trust that such control will be exercised impartially and strictly and that flying will be made safer in India by Government control than in any other country but that does not mean that Government should own the whole concern. (An Honourable Member Why?) It is all very well to call for nationalisation but one has to judge whether nationalisation of any industry is in the interests of the country and its people or whether it will damage both the Government and the people.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I rise on a point of order. My point of order is whether Government propose to take part in this debate and if they propose to take part, they should do so at an early stage.

Mr. President: That is more or less a point of opinion.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: We want to hear the Government view.

Sir Harold Shoober: Government would much prefer to have the views of the House first.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: It is not fair to the House that the Government should speak last. The House must know what the Government point of view is, so that we shall have an opportunity of speaking on that point of view. You cannot be a dictator.

Mr. President: There is a good deal of force in what the Honourable Member has said. I have myself felt it many times that it is better if the Government intervenes at an early stage because they have got the right of reply.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Member for Home and Information and Broadcasting). Sir, I propose to say a few words. Not being accustomed to long and unimportant speeches, I wish to point out at the outset that the Member in charge of this Department has not yet put his foot on solid ground. You all know that the Government that you see here has taken charge of running the administration of office under very difficult circumstances. We have taken office under a shadow of a great tragedy that has ever happened in this country. Just after the great Calcutta tragedy—17 days after it—, we took office. The happenings in other parts of the country are known to you. We must put our foot on solid ground before we rush into dangerous waters. We must govern or learn to govern before we enter into hazardous undertakings. We must know what nationalisation of such important business means financially, from the point of view of administrative ability and efficiency and many other things. We are asked to remember that the Government is put to test or they are on trial for the undertakings given to the public. Nobody remembers these undertakings more than those who have made them. We know our undertakings and we know our responsibility and, therefore, we do not want to be hustled and we do not want to be pushed into things before we know that what we undertake is a solid thing. Therefore, I can only say at the present moment that the policy of Government has not yet been formed. You know the coalition Government has only been formed a few days ago. After that the Leader of the House also has been engaged in an undertaking of which I should not say much, but it is a very hazardous thing and a very dangerous thing. He has taken a very grave responsibility and he cannot avoid it. Many of us would like to know and rush to places where there is danger. Therefore, we have yet to create stable conditions in this country before we undertake the dangerous or hazardous undertakings or undertakings involving risks and we must think before we do anything of the kind.

Now I appeal to the House—I am a novice and I have no experience of Legislatures, but I feel very much disturbed—and I must confess that many of you have not yet realised that this is not the same House which it was before. We have a long business to go through. If you see the list of business, you will find that all important items are put aside and we have not done much business. There are now only four official days left in which we have to transact all the remaining business. All the important Bills are still pending. That is not the way in which business can be conducted by a House which wants the Government immediately and straightway to take to nationalisation of big industries. Therefore, what I say is that accepting the principle of nationalisation is one thing but to put it straightway into practice without caring for the consequences, without considering the implications and without examining carefully the pros and cons of the business is another. It is not nationalisation but I should say, it is the beginning of liquidation of Government altogether. Therefore, on behalf of the Government I can only say that the amendment of my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lal is the proper amendment because it gives Government time to consider the whole situation.

Mr Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal (Presidency Division Non-Muhammadan Rural): Mr President Sir, after the lucid statement made by the Honourable the Home Member I do not think there is any need to impress the House regarding the wisdom of the amendment which has been given notice of and which has been moved by my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lal. I want to assure the Mover of the original Resolution, Sardar Mangal Singh, that we the members of the Congress Party stand exactly where we did previously. I will not take much pains to refute the heated arguments of my very good friend Miss Maniben Kara. She has complained of the change of skin. Naturally, Sir, when the Party in opposition goes behind the Government, there is bound to be some change in the skin but we, the Members of the Congress Party, have not changed our mind or our character at all. But my friend Miss Maniben Kara has neither changed the skin nor the soul behind the skin. At a previous stage, she was behind the then Government and accused the Congress Party of its impractical ideology.

Miss Maniben Kara: And also the Government.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: That was only a ruse. Even now she is accusing the Congress Party for its practical ideology. So, she is very constant, but it must be perfectly understood that our amendment is practically in line with and in tune with Sardar Mangal Singh's Resolution, but we want to make his proposal more workable so that it may be taken in hand immediately. As the Honourable the Home Member has clearly put it, we stand by nationalisation, but we cannot go ahead merely with the abstract proposition in hand. We should also be able to put it into effect and thus be able to achieve our object in a gradual manner. Miss Maniben Kara censured the point very much when she thought that Diwan Chaman Lal's amendment is a negation of the original resolution. Definitely it is not. Therefore, all her invectives against this amendment were beside the point.

I do not agree with my Honourable friend Mr Jaffer's arguments. He was satisfied with the courtesy of the private enterprise, he was satisfied with the efficiency of the private enterprise, and he was satisfied with the timing of the private enterprise. The real thing regarding which satisfaction is necessary is not this. We are not really satisfied that the profits should go to private pockets. That makes the distinction. The State must earn all the profits. I think the Birlas, the Tatas and the Dalmas and a host of others, even if they give maximum satisfaction to the passengers by efficient service, even then we will not be satisfied because all the profits are taken away by them. The State must earn the profits so that they will go to the advantage of the commoner. We are committed to our fundamental declarations, we have declared in our election manifestos and in other spheres and contexts that all means of transport are to be nationalised or controlled by the State. My Honourable friend Miss Maniben Kara should apply her mind to the English wording. There is something like the conjunctive 'or' and the disjunctive 'and' and there in the election manifesto 'or' is used in a comprehensive sense. Here also in the amendment, Diwan Chaman Lal has used it in the same sense. I hope our Government will be able to make rapid strides in the direction of nationalisation in a practical spirit of achieving immediate results. Sir, there is no use mincing matters. My Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh ought to understand why instead of supporting his Resolution, we have had to give this amendment which is the best compromise under the circumstances. The wisdom of it is illustrated by the attitude which was expressed by my Honourable friend Mr Jaffer. He is perfectly nationalistic minded. He has previously talked over this matter in a spirit which was the spirit of the Congress. But today we talk of nationalisation, but he talks in the light of private enterprise. So there is a difference between the Congress Party and the Muslim League Party here (Interruption). There are members who spoke in that light. What is this Government? This Government is a composite Government, it is a composition of two major political parties and also other elements. They have to compose themselves and their differences before they can go ahead with things of this nature. Sir, in this connection while realising the difficulties or drawbacks in nationalising internal services, I would invite the attention of the Government to external services and to my mind, Sir, these services can be taken up forthwith and there is no difficulty in that. If we leave our external services to open competition, then foreign companies will oust Indian companies and the result will be that in this very important matter, India will not get any berth and that is what I desire should be avoided. Sir, geographically and meteorologically India is best suited for air enterprises, and externally, Sir, if we can carry on contact with the neighbouring States and powers, we shall at once go up in prestige and that will mean a lot. Sir, this carrying of external services under nationalistic management has got commercial advantage, it has got political advantage, it has got social advantage also. Commercially it will bring crores and crores of rupees which will be available for the State and for the man in the street. Politically, Sir, this Interim Government which is out to achieve independence will at once get recognition outside this country, if India's air services are operated for the purpose of contact with all independent countries of the world. Sir, my Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh was pleased to refer to the case of Holland. Sir, Holland is a very small country, but it has got its own state managed external services which goes as far as Sumatra. We must also have our external services which will go to the farthest corners of the country, our aeroplanes sealed with the insignia of Indian Government will reach foreign lands and will add prestige to our Government and to our people and will demonstrate to the world that the interim government has achieved political independence in action. Socially also it is necessary that we run these services because geographically and politically we are the brain trust of all the powers in the East. You find today in Afghanistan there is no air service, in Tibet there is no air service, in Nepal there is no air service. On the one hand we can go to Cairo, and on the other, we can cut across Afghanistan to Russia, we can go to Iran, Iraq and to every side of the globe and if we have to play our role as a central force in the conglomeration of eastern powers and States, it is just necessary and desirable that we start with a proposition like this today and forthwith. Therefore, Sir, I submit that the Congress attitude must not be misconceived. I trust Sardar Mangal Singh has not misconceived our attitude. My friend Miss Mani Ben Kara rather went to the extreme length in attributing to us weakness which is not ours. We want to go in for nationalisation, that is our aim and object, but at the same time, we want to carry on consistently with limitations of the present government. We are a composite government now and the parties behind it have also got to compose and coalesce. Once this Government has settled down, once the major difficulties have been liquidated, it will be time for us then and then alone to whip the Government to action, but today in trying to get the golden egg in a spirit of extortion, we must beware that we do not kill the hen herself.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, I have a great apprehension that the present problem of competition between rail-road may become later on a triple proposition, that is competition between road, rail and air. I invite the attention of this Government to this danger that is ahead. We have followed very clearly the history of the development of Indian railways. We first began with company managed railways, we gave contract to companies, gave them land, guaranteed a certain rate of interest and left the whole thing to them. After an experience of 75 years, the Acworth Committee gave its decision by the casting vote of the Chairman that all railways in India should be acquired and should become the property of the State and that they should all be run by the State, and owned by the State. We adopted this principle after our unfortunate experience of the development of railways for over 75 years. This principle was also adopted in France, Germany and other countries and it is now accepted here that the State should own the railways and run them. Again when we discussed the nationalisation of various industries, we remembered that the first place should be given for nationalisation of transport. Transport, they say, is the first industry to be nationalised. Everything else may follow. We learnt this after the bitter experience of loss of several hundreds of crores—I have not calculated the exact amount—on our railways. We then came to the conclusion that railways should be nationalised and owned by the State. I would impress upon my colleagues that they ought not to commit the same mistake which they made in the case of railways now as regards air transport. We must remember that there is bound to be a common board to control all forms of transport,—rail, road, air and also water which is an important problem in Bengal and Assam though not elsewhere. We should not make any mistake about it which may create trouble later on. We ought to learn from past experience of the railways when after 75 years we decided that all the railways should be owned and managed by the State. Secondly, we must realise that transport will have to be nationalised at an early date, and as a corollary to that, we will have a common authority to control all types of transport.

With these two main objects in view it is out of question to have these administrations and companies which may lead us to many complications. When I raised this point in supplementary questions I was told that the State is not in a position to undertake the direct administration at once because they have not got the resources and also the technical staff required. As a compromise I suggested that a contract may be given for 10 years. We should also have some control over this administration. For instance, rates and fares are important items of all traffic, and even in the case of Indian railways when companies managed them Government kept the right to fix rates and fares. So even during these ten years of contract Government should keep that right. I also hold very strongly that the fare by air should not be more than that by an air-conditioned saloon. I am contemplating a time when all the first class traffic will go by air and the railways will have only two classes,—upper and lower. So the fare by air, as I said, should be the same as in air-conditioned coaches and no further profit is justifiable. I find a Resolution tabled for next week regarding a limit about the declaration of profits. So I think they should be allowed to charge only first class fares. Government at present cannot undertake the administration not for want of money but for want of technical personnel. It will take ten years to get these technical experts by opening aeronautical classes in our institutions. Another point is that the aircraft now used by these companies will be replaced by up-to-date and modern aircraft in ten years' time. I was offered by American Disposals a four-seater aircraft for Rs 4,000 but was advised by a friend there at the same time that I should not take it because in a few years' time they would be sending here modern aircraft and these machines would become obsolete. So in ten years we will be able to run these things in more comfortable aircrafts.

A point was raised by one Honorable friend that we should have some kind of control over companies registered abroad but whose airships pass through India. My own view is that in such cases these companies should be asked to pay some tax which may be fixed by the transport authority because they use our airports. We need not necessarily acquire any share in those companies unless they start from India or have their terminus here. Companies initiated here should be treated in a different manner and we should have something to say in their administration and also in their shares. Therefore I have regretfully come to the conclusion that as we are not yet prepared to undertake the administration of air transport we should give it on contract for a few years. But I feel strongly that it should not be given to one company because that one company will be so strong and will have so much influence that you will not be able to acquire it. In 1934 I saw the influence of Tata's with the members of the Assembly when the Iron and Steel Protection Bill came up for consideration in Simla and therefore I would never agree to the contract being given to one company. Create about half a dozen companies or more and give them contracts to run on different routes. By giving it to one company you will merely perpetuate its possession and you will find it difficult to dislodge it. Therefore they should be given to different companies. I know several companies are being formed in India but the crocodiles and alligators do not like to have small fish in the sea to exist. Therefore the contract should be given to smaller companies so that after ten years you will find it easy to acquire them all.

Khan Abdul Ghani Khan (North West Frontier Province General). Sir, I would not dare to open my mouth so soon after the food debate if I did not feel that the matter before the House was really one of the most vital that has come before this session. I do not want to pretend to advise Honourable Members, I only want to point out the great importance of our decision today. Here is a test case for the future and the present Government of India, and therefore the people of India to say their intentions. The motion of my Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh has not led us to discuss aviation, it has led us to the cross-roads. It has brought us to the cross-roads and we must choose the path along which we intend to carry the destinies of India. It is not a discussion of aviation, it is a discussion of principles. We must today decide whether we stand for the good of the nation or the good of the few who prey on the nation. But we must show the nation today what we mean when we call ourselves servants of the people.

We have to choose between the effective animosity of the powerful rich and the helpless love of the helpless poor. I know it is a hard choice but it is also an obvious choice. Only you must tell yourself the truth, and telling the truth, Sir, is the hardest thing to tell in the world. As I am neither rich enough to be a financier nor poor enough to be the servant of one, I can afford to tell the truth and here it is

The financier is a hunter of the most intelligent animal—Man And like the hunter, he must use the most intelligent camouflage to hide his true nature He is a nationalist when it pays, he is an internationalist when it pays, and even a communist when it pays To him virtue is profit and sin is loss He has no moral philosophy, he cannot afford one And like a hunter he must go where the hunting is the easiest and the animals the fattest He loves the country that gives him the greatest profits But when he can mix virtue with profit, he is dressed as a nationalist Don't get taken in by the term 'National Capital' Don't let these arch-exploiters exploit your patriotism A bullet made in India will kill you just as readily as a bullet made in England or America if it is fired into your body There is no such thing as national capital, because capital, like all diseases is international Every one knows that Hitler reconstructed his Germany with English money He offered a higher interest and was given as much as he wanted, and the Luftwaffe for years used Rumanian petrol for bombing English homes and American soldiers—the Rumanian petrol which was produced by English and American capital A hunter does not worry what jungle he shoots in as long as he gets a good bag It is logical and rational

I have heard all the arguments in favour of private enterprise, which translated in plain English means 'public theft' I have heard all the pious and clever sermons persuading me how virtuous it is to take from those who cannot spare it and give to those who don't need it As for efficiency if the Government is good enough to look after our lives our education, our railways, and food, it is certainly good enough to look after a few dozen aeroplanes and their snobbish passengers Taken purely as a business concern it is not big enough to deserve a debate in this House but as a question of principle it is the biggest thing that has come before us If there are going to be any profits, let them go to the nation let it help the poor rather than serve the rich Our decision today will prove which are our real masters You must show whether you stand by the many poor or the few rich, whether you stand for national progress or private profit Nationalization versus private enterprise means that and nothing else

It is aviation today, it will be coal, iron, and petrol tomorrow We are not asked to give a verdict on aviation, we are asked to show how we intend to plan the future of India And my answer is 'nationalization'—the only protection against local chills and foreign plagues Sir, I support the motion

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Sir, I rise to support the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Saudar Managal Singh Before I speak on the Resolution itself, I would like to say a word I myself said that a representative of the Government of India should speak at an early stage in the debate and I was very glad that the Honourable the Home Member accepted my invitation and placed before this House the views of the Government on this Resolution Unfortunately, Sir, he did not state the views of the Government but he stated the difficulties of the Government in expressing their views on this question Sir, I fully appreciate and I have no doubt the House itself appreciates the difficulties of the present Government in coming to a definite decision on the important question which is being discussed in this House There is no doubt that they are new, they have not had sufficient time to discuss these important questions and come to a definite decision We appreciate their difficulties We also appreciate that due to the disturbed condition of the country, their leaders are engaged in dealing with a very grave problem and if the Government feel that they had no time to come to a decision on this question we appreciate it But, Sir, I do not quite appreciate what the Honourable the Home Member said as regards the method in which we transact our business in this House I am not quite sure what he exactly meant by the words which he used, but I think he felt that we spend a little more time in discussing matters than perhaps he likes But I would like the Government of India and especially the Honourable the Home Member to realize that we are here to discuss questions and we are not all belonging to one party. If the House had consisted wholly of one party perhaps a long discussion may not have been necessary. I therefore would like the Government of India to appreciate the position in which we are placed. We are not the Government. We are here to express our views and give, if I may be permitted to say so, some guidance to Government, and I am quite sure even the present Government will not consider it to be impertinent on the part of a legislature to seek to give guidance to any Government that may be in power at the Centre. My Honourable friend, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, said something about the constitutional change. I fully appreciate the constitutional change and last time when I spoke in this House I myself stated very plainly that we welcome the new Government with open arms. We are very glad that we have for the first time a representative Government, a national Government. But Sir, that cannot take away the responsibility of this Legislature to express its views and to give guidance even to this Government. My Honourable friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangir tells us now that the circumstances have changed; it is for the Government to formulate policies and it is for the House to support them.

An Honourable Member: Or oppose

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Sir I would fully appreciate if the Government places its policy before us. But if the Government does not place any definite policy before us, then it is our duty to give guidance to that Government according to our best lights.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: You must give them time.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I fully appreciated their difficulty but at the same time we have to transact our business. We have a non-official date for Resolutions and there is a Resolution before the House. Therefore it is our duty to express our views. I do not appreciate the difficulty pointed out by my Honourable friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, difficulty brought about by a change in the circumstances of the Government. Whoever may be the Government it is the duty of the members of the legislature to speak out their considered views and give as good guidance to the Government as they can.

As regards the subject of this discussion we had only a few points spoken in favour of private management of this industry. It is generally accepted by most of the members that this is one of the industries which is eminently fitted for being conducted by the Government, that is for being nationalised. My Honourable friend Mr Jaffer said that on account of certain things this is an industry which is eminently fitted to be run by private enterprise. He said that Government cannot have the resources of private companies. This is a new argument, that the resources of private companies can be larger than the resources of the Government. I cannot understand how a private company however efficient and sound it may be, can have greater and larger resources than even the weakest Government in the world. Therefore I feel that from the point of view of resources the Government is the only organisation which can command resources enough for a very large industry. For the present air communications is a very small industry in our country. The industry is new and being new it is easier to nationalise it because vested interests have not grown up. After vested interests grow up, there will be much greater opposition to nationalisation. I therefore feel that this industry is eminently fitted to be conducted by the Government, because as my Honourable friend Mr Jaffer himself has said every day new changes are made in the structure and design of the planes and the organisation which is to run this industry must possess the resources for coping with the new inventions that are made or the new discoveries that are made.

Then, Sir when my Honourable friend, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir said that the Government must take the responsibility for the safety of the passengers, he really pleaded for the nationalisation of this industry and the industry being conducted by Government. If Government is to be responsible for the safety of the passengers, then it is Government which must not only own but control and manage this industry. So from the point of view of safety, from the point of view of running the industry efficiently and with the best planes we can get and from the point of view of the interest of the country this industry is eminently fitted to be run by the Government and I hope that the legislature will give a clear guidance to the Government on this point and state that as Government is now considering this question that Government has the assurance of this legislature that they should go ahead with the plan of nationalising this industry, not only owning but controlling and managing this industry

Sir, the Honourable the Home Member, whom I am very glad to see now return to the legislature, told us that there are dangers and risks in the Government adopting a policy of nationalisation. I myself do not know what the dangers and risks are in the policy of nationalisation. But I am quite sure that if there are any dangers or risks those can be overcome by the Government much better than by a private body. A private body may make losses and those losses will ultimately fall on the country. Therefore it is much better if there are any risks or dangers that those risks and dangers should be faced by Government and Government should not leave it to private parties to meet those dangers or risks. I therefore hope that the Government of India will give early time to the consideration of this most important question and boldly and courageously come to the conclusion that this industry should be nationalised, should be controlled and managed by the Government on behalf of the country. I therefore support the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Sardar Mangal Singh.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, during the course of my practice as a lawyer at the bar I have been accustomed to some quixotic judgments where the reasoning is in favour of the plaintiff but the judgment is against him. I thought my Honourable friend Mr Joshi would agree with my friend Mr Chaman Lal to modify or amend the resolution moved by Sardar Mangal Singh. His arguments were all in favour of the amendment. I thought that he was giving some advice or making some suggestions to the Government as to how they should make up their mind and we also expected that at a future date after the Government enunciated its policy it would be placed before the House, so that there may be an opportunity to discuss it. I thought those were the lines on which my Honourable friend was proceeding. But anyhow he has chosen to support whole-hog the Resolution of Sardar Mangal Singh. I assure him and also the lady Member that no one of us has watered down our view on nationalisation of public utility services and key industries. We do stand by it. He would have seen that in the manner in which my Honourable friend Mr Abdul Ghami Khan supported the entire nationalisation of this industry. He may take my Honourable friend Mr Ghami Khan as the engine without any coaches attached to it. An engine if it runs all alone, it may run 50 miles per hour but when a number of coaches and goods wagons are also attached to it and the longer the train is, though the engine might show a speed of 50 miles it will be actually running at 25 miles per hour. Therefore my Honourable friend can take it from us that the Congress is still wedded to this principle but the question now is how far the principle can be put into effect or into practice. Already we have committed ourselves heavily. If my Honourable friend will remember he will realise how much we have invested on this enterprise so far as will be seen in the budget that was passed last year. I am trying to place before the House a few commitments which the business will involve if we take up the service as a whole and that is why the Honourable the Home Member wanted to move cautiously with respect to this aspect.

Now, Sir, this year we passed a budget for a recurring expenditure of 6.12 crores per year—4.66 as recurring expenditure for maintaining the aerodromes, renovation, repairs, etc. Interest and depreciation alone comes to 1.46 crores per year amounting in all to 6.12 crores a year for a period of ten years. And during this period an estimate has been made of capital expenditure of 17.49 crores but the interest that we will get is this. Whereas the interest we earn is 1.46 crores we have to expend more than that even at the initial stage. Therefore you might consider whether it is at all advisable to start off straight away a number of air services from end to end not knowing what commitments it would involve our country and the taxpayer for whom all of us are jointly responsible.

[Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar]

and whose interests we are bound to safeguard. This Government is absolutely committed in due course or immediately, whenever it is possible to nationalisation of all key industries and all public utility services. In present circumstances the amendment is the only course that can be adopted. As the Honourable Home Member observed there is a change in the government itself. When the Member in charge of this portfolio before made his statement there were fewer members, assuming he was speaking on behalf of the government then. Now there is a change of membership in charge of the portfolio. What is the hurry? Cannot we wait a little before making a recommendation?

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Cannot we express our opinion?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: You can certainly do that, but you need not pass this Resolution and tie down the hands of the government. Licenses have been given to some companies. You will have to pay more if you are to take over all the shares in the companies now. Are we to tie down the hands of the government? We are not sitting in the same House as before. A few months ago we had a bureaucratic government in the centre and it was open to them to accept or reject any Resolution we passed. That is not the case now. If you have sufficient strength not merely to carry this Resolution but also to come and occupy our benches, you can shake this government. This government is shakeable.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: We cannot

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Certainly you can. You can convert me to your views and we will shake this government. This is a parliamentary democracy, and we are all representative, we have a responsibility to support the government, we are not merely to uproot a government without taking the responsibility. They will resign and take your place, as soon as you gather sufficient strength and sufficient personnel to support your view, you must come and do the job yourself.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member must address the Chair.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I am glad the Chair is also part of the government and I made a mistake in addressing our friends. I say the amendment has been very carefully worded. We cannot think of a greater propagandist of revolution on socialistic lines than my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lal. He has been the champion of the cause of the poor all along and he has given in an amendment to this effect 'Or' ought not to be understood to be merely an alternative. It is cumulative. He wants that this service should be nationalised, but how and when he wants the government to make up its mind, it may set up a committee or all of them may consider it. I am only trying to give one or two suggestions which the government should take into consideration. It has been already agreed, even according to the constitution that may be framed, that communications ought to be a central subject. Under it are road thoroughfares or highways, to the extent of 17,000 odd miles—the property of the Central Government. So far as efficiency is concerned, I am suggesting for the consideration of government to ascertain the financial commitments of that under-

4 P. M. taking whether the through services from Delhi to Bombay, Delhi to Madras, Delhi to Karachi, Delhi to Calcutta etc., may not be taken up by the centre and whether the feeder services might not be left to private enterprise, so that private enterprise also will have scope, and we will have the advantage of having good competition between one service and another. They might consider this matter, but even then it is on the question of how and when they should start. We may not have the finance immediately and if we are to do this at once it may be at a loss, and to that extent the government will not be serving the interests of the public, who will thereby have to lose money.

Therefore, though we are in the abstract committed to this position that the public utility services ought to be nationalised, we have to move warily. I would remind Mr. Joshi that though the socialist government is there in England, they have not with one stroke of the pen nationalised the railways, though they have been in power for over a year.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: They have nationalised the railways

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: They have not nationalised the railways yet I ask why? It is not as if they have done everything the moment they came into power I will also ask my friend to wait a bit They have begun with some industries, we have already started nationalising the railways Only yesterday there was an accident here within four miles from here, there was also an accident in Ongole and I am still waiting to see how all these accidents might be averted and avoided Many such inconveniences may arise There may be not only financial difficulties, there may be other measures which have to be taken If there had been any other government I would have felt justified in tabling an adjournment motion With our own government, I cannot pretend and say that I am more interested in the welfare of the public than the Honorable Members who are in charge of these portfolios If it is possible to avoid accidents, they will take all the necessary steps and therefore there is no meaning in my tabling adjournment or censure motions I have confidence in them Likewise, why should we not eliminate all these difficulties? R 101, the moment it set out, was destroyed, we had all that experience, but the experience has not been utilised Therefore I would appeal to the Mover and his supporters to accept this amendment, which supports the principle and at the same time gives some time and opportunity to the government to consider this matter in all aspects and then come forward with a scheme of nationalisation immediately or in the near future We are committed to the principle

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will you give contracts for short periods or long term?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: My honourable friend has himself given 10 to 15 years, that is a sufficiently long period according to me In the first year there is going to be Rs 17 crores odd non recurring, and Rs six crores odd recurring They have been modest I do not mean to say that their responsibility is over once they leave this country We want to plug all holes I am appealing to members to accept this modified form because the matter has not yet been fully considered by the government and therefore we have to proceed with care and caution I commend the amendment to the vote of this House

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan (Dacca cum Mymensingh Muhammadan Rural)

Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment of my honourable friend, Diwan Chaman Lall But I am at a disadvantage as other members have been at a disadvantage, because Diwan Chaman Lall has not yet given us his views. So far as the Government is concerned, there also we are at a handicap because we see that the government has no views whatever on this subject The last speaker, Mr Ayyangar, says that the amendment of Diwan Chaman Lall is the only Resolution that could be moved under the present circumstances. But I fail to realise the reasons on which he can make that assertion What is the resolution of Diwan Chaman Lall? Is it at all a resolution? It is a recommendation to the government to lay down the lines of government action in connection with the development of civil aviation That is the recommendation I do not know how the government would have been any the worse off without this gratuitous advice on the part of my friend

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: All Resolutions are recommendatory

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: It is nothing but asking the swallow to fly or the fish to swim They can do that without any advice on the part of my honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lall But I appreciate the words that fell from the Honourable Home Member when he said that they have been in office only for a very short time and within this short time they have been troubled with so many other things that they have not been able to give any thought to this important subject That is a thing which the House must appreciate; but what I do not like in his speech is that that he spoke rather in a defeatist spirit His idea is that it is too risky a business Without examining the business at all, how can he make an observation that it is a risky

[Mr Tannuzuddin Khan] affair? That is where I do not agree with him. On the other hand I think that we must be up and doing. I appreciate the present difficulties of the Government. They are faced with an extraordinarily difficult situation. That is true but still we must recognise the fact that we have to keep pace with the times and that it will not do to procrastinate on an important subject like this. The busy world is not going to wait for us. The world will be running as fast as possible and if we do not take time by the forelock we shall lag behind. Therefore although the present Government is labouring under very difficult circumstances I think that the earliest opportunity should be taken to bestow serious thought on this important subject.

It has been said that the composition of the Government has changed and therefore the attitude of the different parties supporting the Government policy must undergo a corresponding change. There is something in that but there is no reason why the different parties should not be allowed to express their own views on an important matter like this. The present Government is certainly composed of representatives of the different political parties in the country but we are not yet a coalition government here. There is no coalition party in the House. The Congress Party is quite different and separate from the Muslim League Party. Therefore the position is unique and very unsatisfactory. Under circumstances like this, we, the Muslim Leaguers, do not accept the position that because there are certain representatives of the Muslim League on the Treasury Benches, the Muslim League should be precluded from giving expression to their views on important subjects.

I congratulate Sardar Mangal Singh on the excellent speech that he made and on the cogent reasons that he advanced in support of his Resolution. I do not however agree with one thing that he said. He said that the Congress policy for the last 50 or 60 years has been for the nationalisation of the key industries. That may have been the ostensible policy of the Congress but has that been their real policy? I have already said that the representatives of the Muslim League and the Congress and certain other minorities now form the Government but we should not be blind to the criticism that is levelled both against the Muslim League and the Congress by their enemies. The Muslim League is said to be an organisation of Nawabs and Knights. That is a false charge and the few Nawabs and Knights that may have been there are no longer there in the sense that they have renounced their titles. But so far as the Congress is concerned the charge against them is that the Congress is in reality a capitalistic body. It is supported by capitalists but its ostensible policy is nationalisation. Therefore I say that the Congress is on its trial. The present Government is predominantly a Congress Government. Is it going to implement its ostensible policy? Mr Ananthasayanam Ayyangar says that the Congress has always been wedded to a policy of nationalisation. Granted, but the Congress seems to be in love with capitalism.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: No, No

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: This clandestine business should cease. The Congress should come forward in their true colours.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: It is open business.

Mr Tamizuddin Khan: It has been said that on the ground of efficiency Government should not go into this business. One ought to have been ashamed to advance an argument like that. If the contractors and capitalists can manage a thing like this, how on earth is the Government unable to manage this airways business? The argument is that there are no technicians, no trained personnel but where will these capitalists and contractors get their technical personnel. If they can get their technical personnel, why should not the Government be able to get hold of these technical personnel. This is an argument which I fail to realise altogether. Then, Sir, if you advance the argument of efficiency and if you say that on that ground that the Government should not take it up, then why say to the Britishers—Quit India. Let them stay here and let them manage these airways. Perhaps they will manage the affair better than an Indian concern. If the Government is a Government of the people and if this Government is going to be run for the people, then the Government cannot say—this is a business which we cannot manage. The time is coming when the Government will be a people's government. It is not yet a people's government and that is why people advance arguments like that. When it will be a people's government, it will be run for the people and no such argument will come forward from those who are responsible for running the Government. (An Honourable Member) We claim to be representatives of the people. You are claiming many things but giving proof of very few things. That is my quarrel with you.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir raised a constitutional objection. I do not agree with him there at all. He had a fling at the poor people of this country. He said that those who have nothing to invest can very well advance arguments in favour of nationalisation but those who have a stake, that is what he meant to say, have to think twice before they can talk of nationalisation.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: I never said anything of the sort.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: If I remember aught, that is what he meant to say, although what he said was that people who have nothing to invest may say a certain thing. That was a fling at the poor man.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: On a point of personal explanation. The Honourable Member evidently did not hear what I said and, if he did, he did not understand it. I said that people who have something to invest can be as impartial as those who have not. I was talking of the partiality or impartiality of the two classes of people. I was saying that gentlemen like my Honourable friend accused people who had something to invest of partiality. I said that those who have a little to invest can be as impartial as those who have nothing. Now, I hope my Honourable friend will withdraw the accusation.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: I did not make any accusation. My friend spoke about those who have nothing to invest and I think that there was a fling at the poor man. Of course he talked about impartiality and nothing else. He was quite correct there but what is impartiality in this world? The capitalist is partial to himself and my Honourable friend means to say that the poor man is partial to himself. That is exactly so. But it is only to be seen who is in the majority because the world is ruled by the majority. Luckily or unluckily for my Honourable friend, the poor man is in the majority. The poor man has the final say or should have the final say and he is bound to have the final say in the very near future. Although he may be partial to himself, his word will be law and not the word of a few capitalists who still hold their sway in this country.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member has only two minutes more.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: Something was said about rail-road competition and that this will be another thing coming into the field to compete with the railways, namely, the airways. That is all the more reason why from the very start the airways should be a Government concern, so that there may not be any difficulty such as has arisen with regard to rail-road competition. With these words I oppose the amendment of Diwan Chaman Lal and support the Resolution as sought to be amended by my Honourable friend Haji Ishaq Seth and Mr. Siddique Ali Khan.

Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj (Nominated Non-Official) Sir, I had no intention to take part in this debate, but as the debate proceeded I felt that there was too much talking in the air about the subject whether civil aviation is a subject fit for nationalisation immediately or whether the amendment moved by my friend Diwan Chaman Lal which seeks to make it a subject for careful [Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj] examination by the Government is the question to be decided now. I differ from the observations that were made by my Honourable friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangur with regard to the constitutional position as he stated at the present moment. So far as I can see, the constitution has not changed at all in practice. The only change is that the Government is composed or constituted of representatives of the people. That is undoubtedly so. But the fact remains that they are still irresponsible to the Legislature and it is possible for this Government to talk in a more or less irresponsible manner. Even if a miracle happens and this Resolution is carried, the Government may not give effect to it. And that is what I meant when I told my Honourable friend Mr. Ayyangar that this Government could not be shaken. But he has assured me that if this Resolution should ever be passed in this House, the Government would resign.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I did not say that. If it is passed by the House, we will accept it. I am not opposed to the resolution but I have only modified it.

Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj: In any case, I feel that the constitutional position has not so far changed as to encourage me to hope that any resolution passed by this House will necessarily be accepted by this Government. However, that is a different matter.

Coming to the subject of nationalisation, I have been listening with great interest and appreciation also to the speech of our young friend Khan Abdul Gham Khan. He really raised a very important issue when he said that it is not aviation that we are discussing today but the ultimate principle of nationalisation as a whole. The question is whether the party to which he belongs and the party which is now occupying the seats of power is here and now ready to state its position with regard to the nationalisation generally and in particular about the civil aviation. Both by my early training and my temperament and also on account of the peculiar circumstances in which I was born and brought up, I am for nationalisation in the sense in which I mean it. I mean by nationalisation the control and ownership by the State of the most essential key industries and also of the most essential goods that are needed for the consumption of the people. If I had the choice and the power to draw up a priority in the matter of nationalisation of these things, I would put the nationalisation of land first, because, I feel, that in a country like India which is not yet fully industrialised and which will continue to be mainly agricultural, nationalisation of land ought to be the first thing that ought to be done. I do not know what views have been expressed by the Congress Party or the members of the Congress Party before with regard to the nationalisation plan. If there is any proof of sincerity of this Party towards the programme of nationalisation, they will, I hope, start with the nationalisation of land first.

Now, Sir, coming to the subject of the nationalisation of aviation, I was rather doubtful about the significance of the phrase 'civil aviation' used in this Resolution. Civil aviation not merely means the operation of air services, in other words, air transport, but it also includes the private flying and training in the Flying Clubs and other subjects. I wonder if it was the intention of the Mover of the Resolution to nationalise all the items that come under civil aviation. He says that he merely wants to confine himself to the operation of air services. I hope the House will not consider me immodest if I say that I claim to be a person who is interested in aviation in more ways than one and particularly in flying. I think I am one of the few Honourable Members of this House who like flying very much, and during the course of my flights I used to take interest in the actual working of the various Companies and also in the machinery which they employed like the aeroplanes and other things. It is a fact that of all the Companies which are now operating, not merely the Western Companies but also Eastern Companies the Tata Air Lines, which is today called Air India, has got the best record. They have been undoubtedly lucky inasmuch as in their early years they have been supported by an able set of Indian pilots and engineers. There were days when the planes did not have the equipment that a modern plane has. There used to be only one pilot. These days we have two pilots. There was not even wireless equipment as it is today. Even ground organisation was not quite so good as it is today. We must thank the War in a way for the enormous development of the conditions of air transport in this country. A number of aerodromes have come into existence. But still equipments are lacking. The radio equipment and the beam system and other developments have no doubt come. It is undoubtedly true that the State should take complete control of these assets and if I may say so, they should develop this industry. I am one who would support the view that the State should control this industry, even if at the present moment it is not able to take the ownership of the industry. But before the state takes over, I should very much like to know what exactly is going to be the form, and function and powers and the nature of the composition of this State. I am very doubtful as to what it is going to be like. Well, Sir, there are States and States and it often happens in our country that when you say, the government or the state, it merely happens to be controlled by the same set of persons for centuries and centuries. I am one of those who believe that such important things as nationalisation ought to be postponed to the day when we have got a suitable and stable constitution which will command the confidence of the different peoples and communities in this country. I do hope that the Constituent Assembly, if it functions successfully, will be able to establish a State like that. That would be the time when I would take up seriously the question of nationalisation. Otherwise, I feel the talk of nationalisation at the present moment is unreal and impractical. While I am in sympathy with the spirit of the Resolution, I feel I cannot give my entire support to nationalisation of airways, for the reason that the Government having with it all the assets have not been able to help private companies that are operating now successfully under very great handicaps. I doubt very much if Government will be able to take up immediately all these airways and manage them. Take the position of hangars. Hangarage is insufficient. Many companies have ordered for new planes. Many planes have come to this country but there are no hangars to protect them against wind and rain. People think, it does not matter, planes can be in open air. Again there is no place for workshops in most of these aerodromes. That is the position today. Then with regard to technical staff like pilots, ground engineers, radio officers and the like, in spite of the fact that during the war, a number of people have joined R A F and got training, it is difficult indeed to get what may be called commercial pilots who are accustomed to navigation and who might be called all-weather pilots. I know of instances where some of these R A F British pilots who ply these planes have not been able to negotiate the Indian monsoon weather, whereas Indian pilots who have had special training have been able to fly. We find so many difficulties, practical difficulties in the matter of operation. For the present I know what the fate of this Resolution is going to be. But I should like the Government to take into consideration the question of provision of greater facilities, greater number of hangars and also to institute immediately a course of air training so that more pilots may be ready to come if and when the State takes control. I must also stress the question of representation of various communities in the services relating to aviation, pilot service, radio officers, ground engineers and so on and in order to satisfy all communities, it is necessary that representation should be given to all communities in the matter of training so that when the State accepts the responsibility for the whole thing, the necessary personnel may be ready to take their place in the air transport organisation of the Indian State. With these words, I resume my seat.

Dewan Chaman Lal: Mr Deputy President, the debate on this subject has been a very rambling one, but I think every member will be agreed on this that it is a very important subject. Honourable Members have been exercised in developing their own pet theories in regard to the future management of civil aviation in India. It is necessary that they should have done so, but at the same time, we must not forget the fact, as the Honourable the Home Member pointed out that we are no longer in opposition just attempting to waste the time of the House. We have to be concise, we have to give guidance to the government undoubtedly as my Honourable friend Mr Joshi pointed out, but there are moments when a debate can be restricted to the main fundamental issues. The fundamental issues have been so completely confused by some Honourable Members who have spoken on this issue that I am really surprised that even some old hands who ought to know their job better than they have displayed on the floor of the House today should have done so. For instance the very able Lady who spoke and my Honourable friend Maulvi Tamizuddin Khan no doubt made able speeches. The last speech of Maulvi Tamizuddin no doubt condemned the amendment and supported the original Resolution, but in doing so he used the very words of the amendment itself. He said let the Government take time to consider and throw some light upon this question. That is exactly what the amendment has set out to do. You cannot tie the hands of the Government down now and here, to a particular method whether of nationalisation or of control unless the Government has had time to consider the various aspects of this question. My Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh has talked about nationalisation without letting the House know that there are various types of nationalisation. Which type of nationalisation does my Honourable friend want? Does he mean the Russian type of nationalisation or does he mean the British type of nationalisation? Does he mean complete financial control of this industry by State? Does he mean a corporation set up by the Government? I point that out merely for the sake of letting the House know that there are various methods of nationalisation of industry. If you merely say nationalisation without giving time to them, how are they going to take up this matter. I think it is asking your own Government to do something which is not practicable at all. At the same time the Congress is definitely wedded to the principle of nationalisation. Let there be no mistake about it. The Congress manifesto contains the very words which we find in the amendment. The Honourable Lady spoke about the necessity of that single word 'or'—Government owned or Government controlled. These are very words used in the manifesto by the Congress. They are wise in using the phrase because in such large matters they have to choose and they have to go slowly. There are other industries today which may need immediate attention in the matter of nationalisation. I did not hear in the course of the debate one single word about the coal industry, the jute industry and the tea industry. There are surely many industries which have priority in the matter of nationalisation. This morning we discussed the question of British interests in India, such as may be taken over in part payment of the sterling balances being owed to us. There is also that question to be considered. Surely you cannot tie the hands of Government down in the matter of time and priority when such important issues are at stake. That was the real reason why this amendment was put in. Government must have time to consider this matter, time to consider what particular steps they will take in order to develop civil aviation and on what lines they shall develop it. But remember this that there is no distinction in the matter of the principle laid down in the original Resolution and the principle laid down in the amendment. The objective is exactly the same, whether by nationalisation now or by State control now or whether possibly by a combination of the two until the final objective is attained of nationalisation which is the objective of the Congress Party. I submit, therefore that my Honourable friend, realising what the position is should withdraw the Resolution that he has tabled and support the amendment, because it is not only a practical amendment but because the present Government has been in existence for less than three weeks and it gives Government time to consider all these issues that arise out of the problem of nationalisation as connected with industries either nascent, new-born or about to start or industries that have already been in existence. It is a vast problem. In connection with civil aviation there are certain things to be taken into consideration. I think my Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh and the Hon-

-able lady are unnecessarily suspicious. I think they have forgotten that I were both here on the floor of the House when the last debate on this issue place. The very first debate on civil aviation took place 20 years ago—I think on the 26th February 1927 and I think my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi will remember that. At that time we were against any enterprise of this kind because the Government of the day was utilising Indian finances for purposes of a British company called the Imperial Airways, and therefore we said we would have nothing to do with it. The times have now changed. But I think they will remember that only the other day, on the 11th March 1946, the question was discussed on the floor of this House. The Honourable Sir Gurnunath Bewoor was speaking on this very question, and I on behalf of the Congress Party interrupted and asked why the department did not consider the feasibility of a nationalisation scheme in connection with civil aviation, and his answer was that Government had considered it but they did not think that at present it was feasible. Then we pressed him further and asked why they did not adopt it, and then he gave an explanation as to why it was not done. I mention this for the reason that we have not changed the position, we stand consistently on the same basis. But the position of the country has changed. At that time we could have adopted any weapon at hand to beat down the Government; but now you have to utilise all your wits and all your brain power and all your experience and place it at the disposal of this Government in order that they may go ahead with these large-scale schemes, and go ahead not in an unpractical manner but go ahead in a practical and sensible manner in order that the benefit may come back to the people of this country. That, Sir, in short is the issue and I do not think, as far as I can find from listening to the speeches here, that there is much difference in our point of view and the point of view of the three or four critics of this amendment who have raised their voices on the floor of this House. In view of this and in view of the necessity recognised even by the critics that Government must have some time to consider this matter and come to a considered opinion as to what particular policy they shall adopt in the matter of development of civil aviation, I suggest to Government too that they should give an assurance to the House that a day will be allotted, when they have come to a definite conclusion for consideration of this matter. I take it that it is acceptable to Government that time will be chosen by Government for the purpose of discussion of this matter when Government have come to a definite conclusion as to what particular policy they are going to adopt.
It must be remembered that there are vast issues involved, and they are not only technical issues. Unlike other countries we unfortunately have not got a civil aviation industry here, we cannot produce even one little part of an aerôplane. When you talk of nationalisation in Holland or whether you talk of nationalisation in America or the United Kingdom, unlike India, you have got factories which are feeding this industry, and you do not have to go outside those countries in order to feed those industries. Therefore it is necessary for Government again to consider what subsidiary industries they can set up in order to feed civil aviation if that is to be taken over by Government.

For these reasons, Sir, I should like my Honourable friend Sardar Mangal
Singh to withdraw his Resolution and accept the amendment.

Shri D. P. Karmarkar (Bombay Southern Division Non-Muhammadan Rural).—Sir, I rise to support the amendment. I confess that I had originally no intention of participating in the debate but certain observations made by the Honourable Members tempted me to say a few words. At a certain stage of the discussion Honourable Members of the Treasury Benches were invited to give their definite views on the matter, and the Honourable the Home Member in responding to that invitation made it quite clear that owing to the various difficult and over-shadowing issues confronting Government they have not yet been able to take a decision in the matter. The discussion as it has emerged from different parts of the House has made it perfectly plain that the preponderating opinion in the House is for nationalisation of civil aviation, although from the views expressed by an Honourable Member of the Muslim League Party in favour of private enterprise, it was not clear whether that party has come to any definite conclusion in regard to this problem. But the majority being in favour of nationalisation, this discussion to my mind assumes a somewhat unreal character. The Honourable Mover's Resolution not only commits this House to a recommendation on a principle, it definitely says that civil aviation should be run as a State department like the State Railways and should not be handed over to private enterprise. Had the Honourable Member simply limited himself to a statement of principle and asked for the support of this House to that principle, much of the discussion would have been shortened. The Resolution has been so worded as to be capable of a double interpretation with a double object in view, one, the support of this House to the principle of nationalisation of civil aviation, and second, which is a more serious thing, in view of present conditions the recommendation of this House for the immediate nationalisation and running of the Civil Aviation Department as a department of the Government of India. My Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lall's amendment makes it entirely clear that in so far as the principle of State control or State ownership is concerned he is not equivocal at all, and he has clearly stated his own view and the view of the Congress so far as nationalisation of civil aviation is concerned. And the same is true of the nationalisation of all key industries also. The amendment makes it perfectly clear that so far as the principle underlying the motion is concerned that principle is acceptable to the Mover of the amendment. But what the amendment seeks to do is this. Recognising the difficulties of the situation with which the present Government is faced we give them an opportunity to consider all matters, and in effect that is precisely the view and the appeal made by the Honourable the Home Member on behalf of Government. The issue simply comes to this, assuming that the preponderating opinion in this House is in favour of nationalisation of civil aviation, the question that arises for our immediate consideration is this. Are we or are we not prepared in view of the present circumstances to give Government, taking into full consideration the principle of state control and state ownership, a chance to decide and chalk out a definite policy of action with regard to this matter. That is the one issue that appears to be before the House and when the issue is so clear and so simple I fail to appreciate the variant expressions of opinion expressed from different parts of the House. I found myself quarrelling with my Honourable friend, Khan Abdul Ghani Khan, who has the privilege to belong to the same Party as I do, when he says that the one question which is before this House is whether we are going to decide in favour of nationalisation or not. The issue is simply this—whether we are compelling the Government to take notice of a clearly expressed opinion of this House and in that matter if I might say with best respect to all speakers who spoke on the motion on this particular aspect of the question, it looks as if the Government who are sitting on the Treasury Benches as representatives of the two major political parties of the country by being nominated to these posts by His Excellency the Governor-General or by the British Government and in a technical sense an irresponsible Government.

Sardar Mangal Singh: No one has suggested that.

Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Nobody has suggested that, I know. It looks as if the Government, that is technically irresponsible, is very much more anxious about its own responsibility than we who want a responsible Government. It is as if the Government wants a little time to come to a decision on this most important and complicated issue, partly on account of the political situation and very largely on account of the financial implications involved. They are faced with so many financial problems. They are asked to take up so many rural development activities, activities for the good of the people. The Railways are asked to undertake construction of new lines and on the top of it this House wants to commit the Government here and now to an immediate execution of the policy of nationalization. But they are bound to consider the financial implications—how much money they would have to invest in this enterprise, and whether it would be profitable for the Government to invest that much money, and whether it would not be wise to allow the private companies to continue to function for some time more keeping in view of course that this industry is to be nationalized at some future date. All these questions have to be considered by the Government and all that they have asked us is to give them the indulgence of a little time and I am sure, Sir, that in view of the full explanation given by the Honourable the Home Member the Honourable mover of this Resolution will be in a mood to accept the amendment moved by Diwan Chaman Lal.

There is another aspect of the question—a constitutional aspect. I entirely agree with my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, when he observed that the Government Benchers should have, should seek, and should tolerate a bit of guidance from this House. So far as I know the mind of those who occupy the executive posts in this Government, I can say that they are extremely anxious to abide by the wishes of this House and it is that anxiety that has prompted them to ask of this House to give them a little more time. They cannot stand for one single moment the anomaly of this House passing the Resolution and their not being able to bring it into practice immediately. It is precisely with the ultimate object of bringing into action the principle so ably enunciated by my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, that they are so very anxious not to allow a Resolution to be passed in a manner which will put this Honourable House into disrepute. For a moment, taking into consideration the present constitutional position, the present Government is trying to function as a national cabinet and the first principle by which a national cabinet ought to abide by is to give the best possible respect to the wishes of the House to which they are responsible. Today it may be a Coalition Government—it is to my mind a composite Government—but in any sense of the word today's Government and the Central Legislature must move in harmony and in unison if we are to solve the various problems which are to be tackled. In no way we should prove that the Central Legislature passed a Resolution which the Government of India, which claims responsibility to the House, was not able to implement. The Honourable the Home Member was entirely right when he said that we have shifted from the other side of the House and when we do that we have to move with caution and with a full sense of propriety as to the correct implications of a particular resolution. To my mind when we pass this Resolution we immediately commit the Government to a definite course of action which the Government today are not in a position to implement, and the Government have very honestly come before us with this view that they have not yet come to a conclusion with regard to this matter and when they come to a conclusion it is certainly open to this House either to pass a censure on them or to accept that opinion if it is acceptable. Under these circumstances, all that the amendment seeks to do is to give the Government a fair chance to give its fullest consideration to this matter. Times there were and the Governments of those days used to say that the opposition is an irresponsible opposition. That was partly correct. I admit that it was not exactly responsible in the sense that if we had to change sides we would not have perhaps immediately taken up the measures which we then advocated. The irresponsibility was there, it was nothing more than responsive irresponsibility. It was because the Government in a sense was an irresponsible Government that it provoked irresponsible criticism. That is not the situation today. We have crossed the floor, and we, who claim to be in charge of the affairs of the country, should be in a position at any time to abide by the verdict of this House, and if today we pass this Resolution in the manner in which it has been brought before this House by Sardar Mangal Singh, we shall be committing ourselves to a position by which we shall be embarrassing ourselves and we shall be embarrassing the Government which commands our trust and confidence and which is today charged with very grave responsibilities. In view of that constitutional position also, I support the amendment of my Honourable friend, Diwan Chaman Lal, and in view further of the expressed opinion of this House in favour of early nationalization of civil aviation and other industries, the Resolution loses much of its effect and it has been made clear by hostile parties, if I may say so, also that all that we want by this Resolution is early nationalization. Under these circumstances, the only course which we logically, as a responsible House, could adopt at the present juncture is to support heartily the amendment brought before this House by Diwan Chaman Lall. I am sitting down in the hope that my Honourable friend, Sardar Managat Singh, will rise to the occasion and show his appreciation of the constitutional position by very heartily responding to the amendment moved by my Honourable friend, Diwan Chaman Lall.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang (East Punjab Muhammadan) Although I run the risk of repeating what has become a trite way of beginning a speech, yet I must state what is a fact that I had no intention of taking part in this debate, but it appears to me that the position taken up by the Honourable the Home Member, so often referred to in the course of speeches which have been made after his speech, and the consequent reference to the constitutional position of the present Government, have so confused the whole matter that one feels tempted to offer a few remarks. Several of the speakers who preceded me, notably my Honourable friend the last speaker, have put forward the theory that the present Government of India is for all intents and purposes a responsible Government, responsible to this House, that is to say removable from office by the adverse vote of this House and that therefore we should not put that Government in the awkward position of being forced to resign by passing this Resolution in spite of the declaration of the Honourable the Home Member and in spite of his request to give the Government a little more time to consider the position, to find their feet and then to come to a decision on the issue raised by the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Sardar Mangal Singh.

I think the reference to the constitutional character and position of the present Government is too often made rather lightly. The fact is—although it may not be as pleasant to us as we would wish it to be—that the present Government differs from the previous government only in this—that the members who constitute the Government are members proposed by the major political parties and accepted by His Excellency the Viceroy and His Majesty's Government. That of course is the novel step that has been taken in the direction of reforming the system of government prevailing in this country. But apart from the mode of choosing the members of the Government which was to be constituted there was no change whatsoever. Prior to this also there have been many occasions when in many ways public opinion has been ascertained or borne in mind by those responsible for the selection of members of the Executive Council and suitable candidates have been selected after ascertaining the views of the public in certain ways. Under the constitution a certain number of members had to belong to the I C S. They were chosen in accordance with certain official standards but there used to be always some members outside the cadre of the I C S. Many names can be mentioned. The late Law Member, Sir N. N. Sircar did not belong to the I C S nor did Sir Asoka Roy. Sir Sultan Ahmad was no I C S man and all these people were chosen after considering their status in public and by making sure that their nomination and appointment to the Executive Council would be acceptable to the public or to a very large section of the public and then they were nominated. Now of course a very satisfactory way of making a choice of members for the Executive Council has been adopted. The major political parties were formally consulted. They were given the right to nominate their representatives and when they were nominated they were accepted by the Viceroy and also by His Majesty's Government but they remain under the present Government of India Act, 1935 as members of the Executive Council of the Viceroy holding their office at the pleasure of the Viceroy. There is no difference whatsoever in their status and the status of those whose places they have taken.

Mr. Dutt President: The Honourable Member can continue his speech on the next non-official Resolution day.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 11th November, 1946.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Monday, 11th November, 1946

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr President (The Honourable Mr G V Mavalankar) in the Chair

MEMBER SWORN

Mr Mangalore Purushotham Pai, I C S, M L A (Government of India Nominated Official)

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(a) ORAL ANSWERS

RESTRICTIONS ON EXPORT OF INDIAN CATTLE AFTER LAPSE OF DEFENCE OF INDIA RULES

†353 *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Palwal : Will the Secretary of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state the steps Government have taken and propose to take to restrict the export of Indian Cattle after the lapse of the Defence of India Rules ?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat: Restrictions imposed under Rule 84 of the Defence of India Rules on the export of cattle have been temporarily extended by the Emergency Provisions (Continuance) Ordinance, 1946 (Ordinance No XX of 1946). It is further proposed to undertake legislation during the current session of the Central Legislature to continue these powers, so that restrictions on the export of cattle may be continued under the new law when the Emergency Provisions (Continuance) Ordinance expires.

FREE POSTAGE FOR NEWSPAPERS WEIGHING UP TO FOUR TOLAS

†354 *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Palwal : Will the Secretary of the Communications Department be pleased to state if Government intend to introduce free postage for newspapers weighing four tolas or less with effect from the next financial year ?

Sir Harold Shobert: The Honourable Member may please await the budget statement of the Honourable the Finance Member.

INCREASE OF WHEAT RATION IN WHEAT EATING PROVINCES

†355 *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Palwal: Will the Secretary of the Food Department be pleased to state if Government intend to increase the ration of wheat in wheat eating Provinces ? If so, when, and to what extent ?

Mr. B. E. Sen: Wheat is allowed to be drawn to the maximum of the basic cereal ration of 12 oz per adult per day in all wheat eating areas except the U P and N-W F P. These provinces have been constrained to limit the quantum of wheat that can be drawn under the cereal group ration because of insufficient supplies of wheat. The Government of India are making every effort to import more wheat.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, I have got the authority of Shri Sri Prakasa to ask his questions.

Mr. President: Apart from the question of validity of that authority, they will be taken after the first round is over.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: On a point of order, Sir, may I know if priority is not lost, merely because a gentleman is absent and he has authorised another member to ask on his behalf? It may or may not be reached.

Mr. President: It has been the practice of this House, and if a member remains absent and gives authority, all that he can claim is that he should have a chance, but he should not have the liberty of remaining absent and yet have his questions answered in preference to other members who are present. There are a large number of questions and we never reach the list to the end. If therefore a member remains absent, he should have the chance of having them put only after other members who are present are given a chance.

‡ Could not, however, be reached during question hour

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: But, Sir, the practice has not been that It may be that you rule like that and we accept your ruling, but the practice is that when a member's authority is produced, his name is called

Mr. President: During the last session this practice was followed This question was then discussed a good deal, and it was the unanimous wish of the House also that the members present should have the first chance So I am not calling the questions of Shri Sri Prakasa

MONOPOLY OF CERTAIN FIRMS FOR IMPORTING BRASS SHEETS

†356 *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state

(a) the number of persons or firms who have sole licences for import of all brass sheets in India,

(b) the approximate income of each of these from commissions received from the monopoly of importing these brass sheets, and

(c) if he is considering the desirability of abolishing this monopoly?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a) I presume the Honourable Member is referring to the selected importers who as regular importers of brass sheets were granted special quotas for the importation of brass sheets during 1945 and 1946 The number of such importers in 1945 was eleven and in 1946 is twelve I may add, however, that during the current year licences have also been issued to 42 other importers who were able to secure firm offers within the ceiling prices fixed by the Government Licences will be issued to any person securing such an offer

(b) A statement showing the approximate commission payable to each of the selected importers on the entire quantities allocated to them during 1945 and 1946 is laid on the table

(c) As I have indicated in reply to part (a) of the question, licences are at present being granted to any importer who is able to secure a firm offer from abroad within the ceiling prices fixed by Government There is, therefore, no monopoly in this business

LICENCES FOR SALE OF CLOTH, OILSEEDS AND IRON

†357 *Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that licences have still to be taken for the sale of cloth, oilseeds and iron, both wholesale and retail,

(b) if it is a fact that monopolies have been created whereby only a few persons get the whole trade in their hands,

(c) if it is a fact that small traders and pedlars have all been wiped out, and

(d) how long he expects this system to continue, and if he is thinking of bringing relief to those who have been ousted from the trade or are unable to get into it because of the present system of control and licensing?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai. (a) The answer is in the affirmative as regards cotton cloth and oilseeds. Licences in respect of cloth and oilseeds are issued by the Provincial Governments concerned. As regards iron and steel, selling needs no licence. But supplies from producers reach the various consuming areas only through stockholders registered by the Iron and Steel Controller. Provincial Governments may either issue permits to consumers to purchase from stockholders or make any other retailing arrangements they think necessary.

(b) No, Sir. The general principle which the Government of India have adopted in their commodity controls is that, where licensing is necessary, licences should be given to all dealers who were in the business in normal times. There is thus no question of a few persons getting a monopoly. But I admit that this system does prevent, as long as it lasts, the entry of new people into the commodity trade in question.

(c) No, Sir.

(d) It will be necessary for Government to continue this system as long as supplies of the commodities in question are considerably less than the demand.

LICENCES FOR SALE OF GRAINS

†358 *Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Secretary of the Food Department be pleased to state—

(a) if it is a fact that licences have still to be taken for the sale of grains;

(b) if it is a fact that monopolies have been created whereby only a few persons get the whole trade in their hands;

(c) if it is a fact that small traders and pedlars have all been wiped out; and

(d) how long he expects this system to continue, and if he is thinking of bringing relief to those who have been ousted from the trade or are unable to get into it because of the present system of control and licensing?

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

Mr. B. E. Sen: (a) Licences are required to be taken for the sale of food-grains in wholesale quantities under either the Central Foodgrains Control Order or the Provincial Foodgrains Control Orders in areas in which they are in force. Retailers are also licensed in rationed areas for the sale of rationed foodgrains.

(b) and (c) The number of licencees has got to be restricted if a system of controlled distribution is to work smoothly and efficiently.

(d) The system of controlled distribution will last as long as shortage of supplies makes it necessary. I have no information to suggest that the problem is such as to call for intervention by the Provincial Governments to provide relief, but I will make enquiries.

TELEPHONES DISCONNECTED FOR POLITICAL REASONS

†359 Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Secretary of the Communications Department be pleased to state

(a) the number of telephones that remained disconnected for political reasons at the end of the financial year 1945-46,

(b) if all restrictions passed on political considerations have now been removed and if not, whether Government propose to consider their removal, and

(c) if subscribers are still finding it difficult to obtain new connections or to get their old ones restored, and if so, why?

Sir Harold Shoober: (a) None

(b) Government are unaware of any restrictions of the nature indicated by the Honourable Member

(c) Yes, in several places, due to shortage of stores, exchange equipment and the existing overloads on exchanges

SELECT COMMITTEES ON INSURANCE AND OTHER BILLS

†360 Shri Sri Prakasa : Will the Honourable the Law Member be pleased to state

(a) if any Select Committees on Bills, elected at the last session of the Assembly were able to meet between that session and the current one and if so, which,

(b) the stage which the amending Bill on Insurance Act has reached, and

(c) when he expects to bring the Bill before the Legislature?

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: (a) Three Bills—the Banking Companies Bill, the Insurance (Second Amendment) Bill and the Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill—were under reference to Select Committees when the Budget session terminated. None of the three Committees met during the recess

(b) The next stage will be for the Select Committee to meet and report

(c) I understand that my Honourable colleague the Commerce Member proposes to arrange for the Committee to meet in the interval between the termination of the current session and the commencement of the Budget session and to move for the consideration and passing of the Bill as reported by the Select Committee in the course of the Budget session

PRODUCTION OF CLOTH AND YARN

†361 Mr. Vadial Lalubhai : (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to lay on the table of the House a statement giving figures for the production of cloth in yardage and of yarn in pounds, month by month, from the 1st January, 1945 to the 30th September, 1946?

(b) Has the system of working for eight-hours a day affected the cloth and yarn production? If so, to what extent?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a) A statement showing the production of mill-made cloth and yarn from 1st January, 1945 to 30th September, 1946 has been placed on the table of the House

†Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

(b) Yes, Sir According to the Industry's Committee of the Textile Control Board the extent of the loss is about 700 million yards per annum

RAIL ROAD COMPANIES IN UNITED PROVINCES

†302 *Mr. Hafiz M. Ghazanfarulla : (a) Will the Honourable Member for Transport kindly state how many Rail Road Companies were formed in the United Provinces ?

(b) Who were the promoters of those companies ?

(c) How many motor buses were provided for each company ?

(d) What is the total cost of these motor buses of each company ?

†Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

(e) When were these motor buses allotted and received by these companies ?

(f) Under whose charge are these motors and vehicles now in each company ?

(g) What is the condition of these vehicles now ?

(h) Has any decision been reached to start these companies ?

(i) What action are Government taking to make a start of these companies at the earliest ?

(j) Why has the matter been left undecided for such a long period ?

(k) What expenditure have the promoters incurred in each of these companies ?

When are Government going to decide finally about starting the operation of these companies ?

The Honourable Mr. M Asaf Ali: An attempt has been made to obtain the full information required from the Government of the United Provinces by telegram but as no reply has been received only such material as is available in the Transport and Railway Departments can be given. It is regretted that in some cases this is incomplete.

(a) to (f) A statement is laid on the table. The Railways were unable to invest capital in those companies, as the grant was not passed by this House in the last budget session.

(g) The 235 vehicles in the custody of the East Indian Railway and the 50 held by the G N I T Co on behalf of the G V T Co, are in excellent condition but the condition of those being looked after by the promoters of the S E, U P Transport Co, Ltd, the Rohilkhand Transport Co, Ltd, and the Gogta Transport Co, Ltd, is believed to be less satisfactory since many of the vehicles have had to be kept in the open.

(h) The Government of the United Provinces are reported to be inclined to organising a tripartite company or companies.

(i) and (j) There are two factors to be considered, the framing of policy by the Government of the United Provinces in regard to the continuance of the original companies or the formation of new companies and the voting down of the grant referred to in the answer to clauses (a) to (f). These are the reasons why the matter was left undecided.

(k) Detailed information regarding expenditure by the original promoters is not available. The second part is answered in the reply to clause (i) and (j).

TELEPRINTER NEWS SERVICE FACILITIES FOR CENTRAL PROVINCES AND BERAR

363 *Seth Govind Das : Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state

(a) the steps that have been taken to give teleprinter news service to the Central Provinces and Berar, particularly at Nagpur and Jubbulpore,

(b) whether it is a fact that due to the absence of the teleprinter news service facilities, the newspapers in these provinces cannot supply the news as quickly as the papers from other places like Bombay, Calcutta, Allahabad, etc., can supply and thus their circulation is affected adversely, and

(c) whether Government propose to take early steps to give teleprinters news service to the Central Provinces and Berar?

Sir Harold Shoobert: (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to his Question No 126 which was asked in the Assembly on the 8th February, 1946. Applications have been received from a news agency for teleprinter circuits between Nagpur and Bombay and for similar facilities at Jubbulpore, but it is not possible to provide these circuits at present.

(b) The fact is presumably as stated by the Honourable Member.

(c) The matter is under the consideration of Government.

Seth Govind Das: Since February last about six months have passed and there has been sufficient demobilisation of the military. May I know when it will be possible for Government to give these lines to the Central Provinces?

Sir Harold Shoobert: It is not very easy for me to make a promise on behalf of the Government, but my information from the Posts and Telegraphs Department and from other departments concerned is that we ought to be in a position to know what demands, among those made, can be met by February or March next year.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know how many teleprinters are available in this circle?

Sir Harold Shoobert: I must have notice of that question.

RELEASE OF MILITARY TELEPRINTER LINES BETWEEN ALLAHABAD AND JUBBULPORE FOR CIVILIAN USE

364 *Seth Govind Das : Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state

(a) whether he is aware of the fact that there are six teleprinter lines between Allahabad and Jubbulpore and out of which one is reserved for the Posts and Telegraphs Department and the remainder are with the Military;

(b) whether it is a fact that some of these military lines are to be given up by the military and thereafter to be dismantled, and

(c) whether Government are prepared to direct such lines as are released by the military to civilian's use by handing these over to news agencies which at present have teleprinter lines at other places?

Sir Harold Shoobert: (a) Three telegraph circuits between Allahabad and Jubbulpore are now available for the use of the P and T Department and others will be transferred to that Department when released by the Defence Department.

(b) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. The circuits will not be dismantled but will be converted to civil use.

(c) The policy in regard to renting teleprinter circuits to news agencies and other authorities interested is receiving the active consideration of Government.

Seth Govind Das: Is the Government aware that when I last asked this question there was only one line available to the Postal Department and now as the Honourable Member says there are three lines available, will he consider whether these two other lines which have been released after that time, would be given to news agencies and to other applicants immediately?

Sir Harold Shoober: I think the Honourable Member is aware of the very great congestion in telegraph traffic which still prevails. The matter of giving these lines out on lease is one upon which there has to be a general and consistent policy. We have applications for various important lines not only from various Departments of Government but also from quite numerous news agencies, and Government has felt that it is best that we should decide this question as to how they should be allocated and to whom they should be allocated, when it becomes possible to co-ordinate all these applications by getting out a really definite general policy.

Seth Govind Das: Is the Honourable Member aware that at present there is a monopoly of this line given to the Associated Press and the contract is coming to an end very shortly and is the Government thinking of removing this monopoly and giving these lines to other news agencies as well?

Sir Harold Shoober: The question raised by the Honourable Member is one of policy with which Communications Department is not the only one concerned. The Communications Department is the agent in this matter. But I believe the intention is to give lines as liberally as possible. The monopoly to which the Honourable Member has referred was merely due to the fact that the news agency which holds these circuits was first in the field long before the last war, and during the war it was not possible to give out further circuits. It was not a monopoly created with any particular object.

Seth Govind Das: Will Government now consider the question of removing this monopoly because so many news agencies have sprung up after the war, especially the United Press, which is considered to be one of the best news agencies?

Sir Harold Shoober: As I have already told you, Sir, the whole matter is under consideration, and it is hoped that there will be quite a number of lines available, and I think I am in order in assuring the Honourable Member that there is no question of retaining a monopoly.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if any priority list has been prepared and who has prepared it?

Sir Harold Shoober: No priority list has been prepared.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it open to the Government to give away to the American Newspaper agencies in preference to Indian agencies?

Sir Harold Shoober: The Government has the whole matter under consideration, but I think I can say it is not the intention of Government to give any agency preference just because it happens to belong to any particular person.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: On what principle is the Government going to allocate these teleprinters to various agencies that may apply?

Sir Harold Shoober: The principle has not yet been decided.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Is the Honourable Member aware that the previous member made a recommendation in respect of an Indian agency, the United Press, and how does the matter stand now?

Sir Harold Shoober: I am afraid that that was a matter that had not come to my own notice but as I have said the matter is under consideration and under discussion between the Information and Broadcasting Department and the Communications Department. Perhaps it would be better if I made it clear to the Honourable Members of the House that the matter of policy is one for the Information and Broadcasting Department and not for my department.

Seth Govind Das: May I ask

Mr. President: Next question.

Seth Govind Das: Sir, this is a very important subject. . . .

Mr. President: Order, order. Seven minutes have been already taken over this one question.

PRICES OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE

365. *Seth Govind Das : Will the Secretary of the Food Department please State :

(a) whether prices of the agricultural produce are fixed by the Government of India ;

(b) whether prices of only a few produces like wheat, paddy, cotton, etc , have been fixed while those of others like ground-nut, teora, etc , have not been fixed ,

(c) whether it is more profitable for the agriculturists to grow teora, etc. ,

(d) whether the produces of which the prices have been fixed have become unprofitable of cultivation and the prices of bullocks, fertilizers, manure, wages and iron and wood for implements have become very high , and

(e) whether Government propose to revise the prices fixed, particularly of wheat and paddy, so that it becomes economic for the agriculturists to grow these ?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Prices of all major foodgrains and some of the cash crops are fixed by the Provincial Governments in consultation with the Government of India

(b) Prices have been fixed for wheat, paddy, jowar, bajra, maize, cotton and ground-nuts, but not for teora

(c) It should not be profitable for agriculturists to grow teora as the demand for it for human consumption is limited

(d) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative Prices of bullocks, etc , have undoubtedly risen

(e) No, Sir Government do not consider the present level of wheat and paddy prices uneconomic

Seth Govind Das : Does the Honourable Member know that certain articles are priced differently in different provinces For instance the price of ground-nut differs in U P and Bombay? Will the Honourable Member see that the prices fixed for the same article are the same in different provinces and there is some co-ordination of prices?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The prices of no articles are the same in all provinces There are certain considerations which have to be taken into account in fixing the prices for different provinces

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad : Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that the price index of wheat is higher than the price index of any other commodities mentioned in this question?

Mr. B. R. Sen: Yes, Sir

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad : Will the Honourable Member consider the interests not only of the producers but also of the consumers?

Mr. B. R. Sen: In fixing prices, we take into account the interests of both.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if any steps are being taken by the Government of India to increase the price of paddy and rice in accordance with the wishes and recommendations of the Government of Madras?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The whole question was gone into during the food debate and an answer was given by the Honourable the Food Member

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if it is not a fact that after the food debate was over the recommendations of the Government of Madras were communicated to the Food Department?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The prices of kharif crops were brought under examination only recently and the decision was taken that the prices should remain as they are for the next crop year

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know whether it is not after the food debate that the representations have been made by the Government of Madras that the price of paddy should be increased by half a rupee per maund and of rice by one rupee per maund

Mr. B. B. Sen: That is not correct

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it before then?

Mr. B. B. Sen: Yes, Sir

PRODUCTION OF SUGAR AND TEXTILES IN INDIA AND QUANTITY AVAILABLE OF KEROSENE OIL

366 *Seth Govind Das Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please lay on the table of the House a statement stating.

(a) the total production of sugar and textiles in India and the quantity of white and yellow kerosene oil available for civilian population,

(b) the basis on which these commodities are allotted and distributed to different provinces and their per capita quota for each province, and

(c) whether Government propose to make the allotment, in future to all the Provinces, on then population strength basis after calculating their availability at flat rate per capita basis for the whole of India?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: So far as the question relates to cotton textiles, a statement containing the required information is placed on the table. With regard to sugar and kerosene oil the Honourable Member may kindly address his enquiries to the Departments of Food and of Works, Mines and Power respectively

Statement

(a) In 1945 the total production of textiles in India including handloom production of 1 500 million yards was about 6 200 million yards. Of this 600 million yards were exported and 575 million yards were allotted to Defence requirements. The balance of 5025 million yards was available for the civil population in India. The total production so far this year, up to the end of September, has been 3,068 million yards. Production of yarn for Handlooms has also fallen and against 1,500 million yards of handloom cloth estimated to have been produced in 1945, the production in 1946 may only be 1 300 million yards. In the calendar year 1946 about 400 million yards will go for export and about 80 million yards for Defence requirements. A balance of about 4 900 million yards should therefore be available for the civil population in India in the calendar year 1946 if the present rate of production continues.

(b) The quantity available for the civil population is distributed to Provinces and States on the basis of the following per capita quotas:

Madras	12 yards per head
Bombay	18 " " "
Bengal	12 " " "
U P	19½ " " "
Punjab	18 " " "
Bihar	12 " " "
C P	12 " " "
Assam	11 " " "
N W F P	18 " " "
Sind	18 " " "
Orissa	11 " " "

(c) The Government of India propose to call an inter-Provincial conference to consider whether the present Provincial per capita quotas should be modified.

COMMUNAL CONSIDERATIONS IN ALLOTMENT OF CONTRACTS FOR EUROPEAN STYLE TEA ROOMS AT TANDO ADAM STATION ON N. W. RAILWAY

†367. *Seth Yusuf Abdool Haroon: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that communal aspect is being considered in allotment of contracts for European Style Tea Rooms in the North Western Railway?

†Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

(b) Is it a fact that at Tando Adam Station in the Karachi Division of the North Western Railway such a contract was at first given to a Muslim contractor who was already a contractor for European Style Tea Rooms in the Division, but later his contract was cancelled in favour of a Hindu vendor on the plea that the town had a majority of Hindus?

(c) Are Government aware that the General Manager, North Western Railway Lahore, admitted at a meeting held on the 1st August, 1946, of the North Western Railway Advisory Committee, that injustice has been done to the Muslim contractor? If so, what action has been taken by the Railways to reinstate the former contractor?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) No

(b) The contract for working the European Style tea-room at Tando Adam was first granted to Mr. Mohammad Nazir Khan, vending and catering contractor at that station, but before this contractor actually started work the matter was discussed by the Karachi Railway Local Advisory Committee when it was stated that as the passengers using the station consisted mainly of Hindus the tea-room should cater mainly for Hindus. The contract was subsequently transferred to Messrs. Wadhu Mal Fateh Chand & Bros.

It appears that the change was made as a result of the views expressed at a meeting of the Local Advisory Committee, but further information as to the reasons which led to the change of contractor is being called for on receipt of which the case will be reviewed and a statement will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

(c) The relevant extract from the précis of the 92nd meeting of the N W R Local Advisory Committee Karachi, is as follows:

"The history of the case was explained and the Chairman stated that, while he could not consider cancelling the existing arrangements at this stage, he did agree that the communal considerations should not enter into such matters and this policy would be kept in view in future."

With regard to the second part of the question, the Honourable Member is referred to part (b) of my reply to his question.

RUNNING OF A FAST TRAIN BETWEEN DELHI AND MADRAS

368 *Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddhar: Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state

(a) whether in the last meeting of the Central Advisory Council for Railways a promise was made by the Administration to run a fast train between Madras and Delhi twice or thrice a week, from the 1st October, 1946;

(b) whether any such train has been introduced, and, if not, why not,

(c) if the train has not yet been introduced, when it is proposed to do so, and

(d) whether any steps are being taken to revert to pre-war timings in respect of the principal through trains on the various Railway systems, and, if so, when it is proposed to effect such reversion?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a), (b) and (c) At the meeting of the Central Advisory Council on the 13th April, 1946, a hope was expressed by the Government spokesman that it might be possible to inaugurate a fast bi-weekly mail service between Delhi and Madras by October 1946, but no promise was given. The intention was to start this service when adequate and suitable stock became available. Unfortunately the expectation that such stock would be available by October 1946 has not been realised. Moreover, the Railway Administrations consider,—and Government agree,—that their primary obligation, as more stock becomes available is to restore services which were curtailed during the war and for which the public demand is urgent, rather than to introduce new services which were not in existence before the war. Further consideration of the proposal has accordingly been deferred for the time being and the Railways concerned have been instructed to review the position sometime towards the end of this year with a view to seeing whether the service can be started from next April. In the meantime, it is not possible to give a definite date by which the Service will be introduced. Much will depend on the availability of suitable stock and the ability of the Railways to restore pre-war train services.

(d) There are a number of factors which militate against a complete reversion to pre-war time-tables on the various Railway systems, among them being, heavy loads of trains, poor quality of coal and heavily taxed engines.

Improvements in speeds will be made as rehabilitation progresses but Government considers that under conditions as they are at present and which are likely to continue for some time, it would be unwise to lay down ambitious schedules which experience shows cannot be maintained.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if all these considerations were not before the Honourable Member's predecessor when the suggestion or promise was made that the new service would start on the 1st October 1946?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: All these considerations were before him but no promise was made.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: If not a bi-weekly service, will the Honourable Member start at least one fast service per week immediately?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: It is very difficult for me to make a promise on the floor of the House today. I have stated at length what the difficulties are but we shall try and meet the wishes of the House in this matter.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: How far has the Honourable Member succeeded in trying to speed up the existing service from Madras to Delhi?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: We have made some improvement in that direction already.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Any considerable reduction in the number of hours?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Quite a considerable number of hours. I think the contemplated service will be somewhere in the neighbourhood of 36 hours.

CRY OF 'HINDU PANI' AND 'ISLAMI CHAI' AT RAILWAY STATIONS

369. Mr. Manu Subedar (a) Has the Honourable the Railway Member authorised or permitted the cry of "Hindu Pani" and "Islami Chai" at Railway stations, or has it been spontaneous?

(b) Have Government considered whether such distinction is necessary and should be permitted?

(c) Has it been brought to the notice of Government that no such distinction is made with regard to "Paan", biscuits, fruits, Mithai, toys, books, magazines and newspapers and other items sold to passengers?

(d) Have Government ascertained the sense of the Central Advisory Council for Railways and the Standing Finance Committee on this topic? If not, will they do so at an early date?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Government have not authorised the use of these cries which have been spontaneous.

(b) Government do not consider such distinctions necessary or desirable. They have already issued instructions to Government Railways that the current practice on railways of watermen and vendors of tea, sweetmeats, etc., attaching to the oral announcement of their wares a communal adjective such as "Hindu" and "Mussalman" should cease forthwith.

(c) Government are aware that similar communal adjectives are not used by other vendors on railway premises.

(d) In view of the action already taken there is no necessity to refer the matter to either body.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Is it not a fact that the people who shout 'Hindu Pan!' are servants of the Railway Administration and is it not, therefore, possible that the late Government of which this Government is the successor deliberately designed these distinctions to be shouted like this?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I should not like to go into a post-mortem examination.

Seth Govind Das: Sir, there is one more distinction prevailing on these railway lines and that is European and non-European food. On many lines there are more restaurant rooms which serve European food than Indian food. Will the Honourable Member consider the question that when there are more travellers who take food of Indian style, the food of European style should either be abolished or the food of Indian style should also be provided at various trains as well as stations?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I think my Honourable friend has made quite a little speech on the subject. The whole matter is going to be considered by the Central Advisory Committee quite shortly.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Now that the Government has sent out these pre-emptory instructions for these sort of cries to cease, will the Honourable Member undertake and assume this House that he will send for a periodical report, say, at the end of every four weeks, to see that in spite of Government's instructions this thing does not go on?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I accept the suggestion of the Honourable Member.

Lt.-Col. Dr J. O. Chatterjee: Is it not a fact that it is a question of supply and demand and that these cries arise because people demand 'Hindu Pan!' and 'Muslim Chai'?

Mr. President: Next question.

ELIMINATION FROM DOCUMENTS BY HIGH COURTS OF A PARTY'S CASTE, SUB-CASTE AND RELIGION

370 *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Does the Honourable the Law Member propose to issue a circular to High Courts or take such other steps as he thinks proper for the elimination out of every document describing a party his sub-caste, caste or religion?

(b) Are Government aware that no such practice exists anywhere in the world and that other means of identification of the parties described are found than the mention of caste or religion?

(c) Have Government asked for or received expressions of public opinion on this subject as to whether this is necessary?

(d) Have Government considered the problem? If so, what is their conclusion?

(e) Do Government propose to invite the views of Provincial Governments as to whether it is necessary in communications from or to Government, or any representation or notification that the caste or religion of a party mentioned should be indicated?

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: (a) No. I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the fact that in all documents emanating from a court the description of a person referred to therein is supplied by the party at whose instance the document is issued and is not susceptible of variation by the court.

(b) Government have no information on the subject.

(c) No.

(d) Nothing describable as a problem appears to me to arise.

(e) Government do not consider that a reference to Provincial Governments on this subject would serve any useful purpose, and I would point out that there is nothing whatever to compel a person addressing a letter or representation to Government to specify his caste or religion.

Mr. Manu Subedar: With regard to (b), since this Government is not aware of the practice in other countries, will they make an attempt to find out that on applications, on court documents and on transfer of property and other documents in other countries a man's religion or caste is not mentioned, whereas in India it appears to be the general practice that the description that a man is a Hindu inhabitant of such and such a street or he is a Muslim inhabitant of such and such a city is always mentioned? Will Government make this inquiry and consider the problem which does exist?

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: No inquiry is necessary for the simple reason that the Civil Procedure Code does not provide for the mention of caste or religion or anything of the sort. What the Civil Procedure Code does require is a description of a person. It is due to custom or usage that a person's caste or religion is described. It is not required under any law of the land. Therefore, I feel that no useful purpose will be served by making an inquiry as to whether in other countries the description of a person requires the mention of his caste, sub-caste or religion.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Will the Honourable Member assure this House that this is not required under the rules of the High Court and under the rules of the District Courts, and that when a person goes to affirm his signature before the Registrar of the High Court he is not called upon specifically to state his caste or religion?

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: Yes, Sir, in certain provinces there are some courts in which a person is required to mention his caste and religion, but I do not find it from the Civil Procedure Code that it is at all necessary.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that in the United States of America and also in the United Kingdom

Mr. President: I think there has been sufficient discourse on this subject.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: May I ask a supplementary question, Sir? Arising out of part (a), is the Honourable Member aware that the omission of the mention of religion by a party to a document may later on lead to complications with regard to inheritance law and therefore it is necessary that religion should be mentioned?

Mr. President: That is a matter for argument. Next question.

HEAVY PROFITS TO TEXTILE FACTORIES ON SALE OF CLOTH

371 Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state by what process prices of cloth were fixed in India?

(b) Are Government aware that textile factories were permitted to make very heavy profits per loom, as much as ten times the pre-war profit and that even now the profit per loom is very high?

(c) What steps are Government taking to have an automatic adjustment of this question, instead of infrequent revisions of prices?

(d) What has been the total production of cloth in India during the last five years and how much has been taken by Government?

(e) How is that Government's offtake after the war for certain kinds of cloth still continuing?

(f) How much is now being taken and for what purposes?

(g) Have Government examined carefully that the purposes for which cloth is still being taken, are not for the production of articles some of which are being disposed of by Government?

The Honourable Dr. John Mathai: (a) The basis for fixing prices of cloth and yarn is a schedule of realisation multipliers for certain key counts. These realisation multipliers cover all the various charges involved, such as cost of cotton, all manufacturing charges from the mixing of the cotton and the spinning up to and including weaving, cost of finishing and packing, overhead expenses of mills and profit margin. This schedule of realisation multipliers is subjected to percentage changes from time to time by negotiations between the Government of India and the industry.

(b) The schedule as it stands at present is believed to allow larger profits on cloth and yarn of fine counts than on cloth and yarn of medium and coarse counts, on which the profits are at present relatively small. In fact, there is reason to believe that margins of profit are very small on coarse cloth, and that this is one reason for the fall in production of coarse cloth. Profit margins of course vary in proportion to the efficiency of the management and condition of machinery of each individual mill. The whole question of cloth costs is complicated and is at present actively under consideration.

(c) Automatic adjustment of prices would be extremely difficult for the following reasons:

(i) Conditions of work vary from mill to mill.

(ii) Costs of manufacture (consisting of the cost of raw cotton, wages, stores, fuel, overhead costs, etc.) vary not only from region to region but also from mill to mill.

(iii) These elements in costs are not constant for any predictable length of time, they depend on local conditions, transport charges, etc., and also on the actual number of looms and spindles worked in any month, which varies according to absenteeism, which is of course uncontrollable and unpredictable.

(d) The total production of cloth (inclusive of handloom production) during the five years 1941-45 was in the aggregate about 80,000 million yards, out of which about 3,000 million yards were purchased by Government for the Defence Services and about 1,900 million yards in connection with the Standard Cloth Scheme.

(e) Government's offtake of cloth now is for the requirements of the peace-time establishment of the Defence Services.

(f) Government's offtake during the current year, which is for the aforesaid Defence Service requirements, will probably be about 80 million yards.

(g) Yes, Sir.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that when Government fixed the price on the basis of cost plus, the millowners produced certain kinds of cloth more because it paid them a little better and there was a glut of such things as curtain cloths which were sent to villages. Will Government not only control the price of cloth but the qualities, which any particular manufacturer should manufacture?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: That problem has already arisen in regard to certain varieties of cloth and the whole problem is under active examination.

Mr. President: Next question.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I ask a supplementary question? Is it not a fact that the prices of handloom cloth have soared high because the coarse cloth is not available?

Mr. President: That is a different problem altogether.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: It is with respect to price control, Sir.

Mr. President: Next question has been called.

MILITARY TRAFFIC ON RAILWAYS

372 Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state how much military traffic on the Railways is still there in terms of (i) special trains per day, (ii) the number of tank wagons for the use of the military; and (iii) the number of ordinary wagons for the use of the military traffic?

(b) Is any priority being given to military transport? If so, of which class and why?

(c) Is there any traffic that can be called demobilisation traffic, and is it in connection with the Indian forces or non-Indian forces?

(d) What is the total number of non-Indian troops in India now, and how many of them are to be sent away in the course of the current official year?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) (i) The latest figures available are for the month of September, 1946. These figures show that an average of 20 Military trains per day were run. These include three Military Personnel trains, 14 Military Mail trains, one Stores train, one Vehicle train and one Ambulance train.

(ii) Five tank wagons (one broad gauge and four metre gauge) are allotted to the Military for their exclusive use. In addition to these, during the three months August, September and October, 1946, a total of 704 broad and metre gauge tank wagons were loaded with military traffic.

(iii) Ordinary wagons are not allotted for the exclusive use of the Military. Military demands for ordinary wagons are met from wagons available on railways.

No record is maintained of the number of such wagons loaded daily for the Military.

(b) Yes. Military traffic carried by goods train is ordinarily accorded the following priorities—

(1) Movements of military foodstuffs—Class II(a)—This is the same as the priority accorded to movements of Civil foodstuffs sponsored by Provincial Governments.

(2) Movements of military stores, other than foodstuffs, and movements of military stores from Military Depots—Class III.

(3) Movements of military stores from Military Depots carried out with the object of clearing and closing down such Depots—Class IV.

In addition, movements for which operational urgency is claimed, which are now very few, are accorded Class I priority on specific application.

Priority schedules issued by the Transport Department cover all goods movements in wagon loads and military goods traffic must necessarily find a place in such schedules. Priorities accorded to Military and Civil movements are in keeping with their relative importance and general urgency.

(c) Yes Sir. An appreciable amount of traffic is devoted every month to the moves of Indian and non-Indian troops in connection with demobilization. The number of Indian troops moved in connection with demobilization in September was approximately 80,000 and the number of special trains arranged for these moves was 28. For non-Indian troops, the approximate number was 4,000 and no special trains were arranged.

(d) The Railway Department are not in possession of the figures asked for in this part of the question.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that during the last session the Honourable Member's predecessor assured this House that only 27 trains were being run daily as military specials, now my Honourable friend says, they are 20 trains.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The number varies.

Mr. Manu Subedar: May I know whether it is a fact that some of these trains go partly empty and that civilians are not admitted in them?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: No, Sir, that is not the information of the Government. I can assure my Honourable friend that we are pressing it upon the attention of the Defence Department, that if ever any accommodation is available even on these trains, it should be made available for civilian travelling public.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that civilian population was treated like dirt during the war period, is it not high time that Government considered whether priorities to military traffic should be discontinued? In fact the Honourable Member's predecessor assured the House that these priorities will not now be given.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I am not quite sure whether any assurance was given by my predecessor. All I can say is that these priorities operate.

absolutely normally and I do not find any difficulty in the way of civilian population on account of these priorities

Mr. Manu Subedar: Will the Honourable Member enquire whether Disposals Directorate are not taking too much of these priorities to the prejudice of the movement of coal and other essential articles for the civilian population?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: No, Sir

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Is the Honourable Member aware that apart from special trains, even in ordinary trains where compartments are reserved for the military, ordinary civilians are not allowed?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: It is quite possible. If any such instance is brought to my notice, I shall institute an enquiry Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Will the Honourable Member at least see to it that while these military personnel get into particular compartments or carriages reserved for them, they do not encroach upon those that are reserved for ordinary civilians?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Well, Sir, I shall note that point and bring it to the notice of the administrations concerned

SUPERSESSION OF COMPETENT ASSISTANTS IN RAILWAY BOARD BY OUTSIDERS AND JUNIORS

373. *Mr. Tamizuddin Khan (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state whether Government are aware of the fact that senior and competent Assistants in the Railway Board's office are dissatisfied on account of their supersession by outsiders and juniors?

(b) Is it a fact that the genuineness of this grievance was recognised by the Directors of the Board and that it was decided by them that the recent promotions to supervisory posts should be reviewed?

(c) Is it a fact that this decision of the Directors was turned down, without any valid reasons, by two members of the Board, and that no reference was made to other members of the Board or the Chief Commissioner of Railways?

(d) Is it a fact that the Financial Commissioner is never consulted in such matters and that the Directors and Secretary of the Board are the final authority on all questions relating to the staff of the Railway Board office? If so, why was a departure made in this instance?

(e) What steps are proposed to be taken to remove the legitimate grievances of the staff in this matter?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Certain representations from senior Assistants have been received in connection with promotions. Promotion to all posts in the Board's office, particularly to supervisory posts, is, however, made by selection and not by seniority, it is also permissible to draw upon outside sources for filling posts of Superintendents and Assistants-in-Charge, as well as Assistants

(b) A meeting of the Directors recommended by a majority that certain promotions should be reviewed, but this did not imply recognition of the claims of senior men

(c) Two Members of the Board considered the recommendation of the Directors. It has been decided that promotions should be made on the recommendations of a small committee consisting of three Directors and the Secretary, Railway Board. It was not necessary for the other Members of the Board to have seen the papers, but the Chief Commissioner has subsequently seen them.

(d) The Financial Commissioner is consulted where necessary, the Secretary, Railway Board and not the Directors is the authority in charge of the staff of the Board's office and he exercises the necessary control under the supervision of the Board. The last part does not arise

(e) It is not admitted that the staff have any legitimate grievance. As I have already stated, a small committee has been set up who will make recommendations for promotion and if as a result any changes in the existing arrangements are indicated, the matter will be considered afresh.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if these selection posts are being reviewed by the Honourable Member himself from time to time inasmuch as there is much scope for nepotism in this matter?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: All the higher categories come up to me but I cannot possibly undertake to review all the selection posts that are being considered by the various administrations because their number is large.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if the posts of General Managers are selection posts?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Yes, they are. These higher posts come to me straight.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it a fact that some posts of General Managers will soon fall vacant? In view of the fact that there are very few Indian General Managers at present, will the Honourable Member investigate into this matter and see that in filling up the vacancies that would arise shortly, Indians are not overlooked?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I can assure my Honourable friend on that point. I shall see to it that no Indian is overlooked. I assure him that even now I am taking every conceivable step to see that no Indian is overlooked.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Will the Honourable Member give an assurance that in the case of persons who are serving already in railways which have been taken over from companies recently, the priorities that have been given under the companies' regime whether they were right or wrong will not be continued?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I am afraid I must ask for notice. But there is one little point on which I can say this much. It is rather a difficult question. Certain lists of seniorities were made out by the companies, when these administrations were taken over by the Government, naturally we had to adopt those lists. It is difficult for us now to re-open these lists and go into the question of seniority as it was determined by the companies before we took over these railways.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I ask whether at least with respect to higher grades, he will review the question of seniority in all cases of railways which have been taken over by the Government from companies?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: As I have already said the principle is this, that wherever selection posts are concerned, seniority is overlooked if necessary.

CORRUPTION IN THE DISPOSALS DEPARTMENT

374. *Seth Sukhdev: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state whether Government are aware that there is widespread corruption in the Disposal Department? ;

(b) If so, what steps are being taken to prevent corruption and the disposal of Government material at low prices?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a) Allegations to this effect, mostly anonymous, have been made from time to time, but none has so far been so specific or supported by such prima facie evidence as to justify formal enquiry.

(b) Government are fully alive to the necessity of eliminating corruption wherever it exists. In the case of the Disposals Organisation, in particular, an Enquiry Committee has recently been set up and its Terms of Reference include inter alia

(1) to advise whether the methods of disposal in themselves are suited to producing results which are (i) in the interests of the public, (ii) expeditious

“(2) to advise whether, in their view, there are definite indications of corruption

The Government will take such action in the light of the Committee's recommendations as may be necessary both as regards revision and methods of disposal and organisational changes and in the further investigation of any particular cases brought to notice. Copy of a Resolution setting up the Disposals Enquiry Committee is placed on the table

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND SUPPLIES

No

New Delhi, the 11th October 1946

RESOLUTION

In order to have the advantage of some outside study of the problems and difficulties so far encountered in the disposal of war surpluses, the Government of India have decided to appoint a small Committee which will operate on the terms of reference below —

(i) To review the problems of the Department and to advise whether the organization, personnel, and class of officer and staff are adequate and suitable for handling these problems

(ii) To advise whether the methods of disposal in themselves are suited to producing results which are

(a) in the interests of the public

(b) expeditious

(iii) To advise whether, in their view, there are definite indications of corruption

(iv) And in general to suggest methods of improving the performance and standards

2 The Committee will be called the DISPOSALS ENQUIRY COMMITTEE and will consist of Sir Maurice Gwyer and Dewan Bahadur Sir T. Vijayaraghavachari. Mr. S. Bhoothalingam, O.B.E., I.C.S., will act as Secretary to the Committee

3 It is expected that the Committee should be able to report within one month

ORDER—Ordered that this Resolution be communicated to all Provincial Governments and Chief Commissioner, Delhi, all Departments of the Government of India (including the Financial Adviser, Military Finance, and Political Department) and the Secretary, Cabinet Secretariat

2 ORDERED also that the Resolution be published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary, dated the 14th October 1946

M. W. M. YEATTS,

Secretary to the Government of India

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Have Government fixed up the terms of reference and the constitution of this Committee?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Yes, the terms of reference and the constitution have both been settled and I think have been announced

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if Government will be willing to set up influential non-official committees in each centre of disposal to be associated with the Government Department, to give them advice with respect to all major disposals beyond a particular value?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I expect the report of this committee to be available to Government in a very short time, and the suggestion made by the Honourable Member and other suggestions of a similar kind will be taken into account when we examine the report

Seth Govind Das: Are there any non-officials on this Committee?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: The Committee consists of only two persons, Sir Maurice Gwyer and Sir T. Vijayaraghavachari, both of whom are non-officials

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: May I know if the allegations about corruption were made in writing?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Anonymous letters have been received.

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Did Government take any steps to make inquiries regarding the finances of these particular officers?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Such consideration as these anonymous letters deserved was given to the matters raised in them.

Mr. Leslie Gwilt: Will the Committee be able to examine witnesses? If so, will the evidence of witnesses in such examination be taken in a privileged place?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I understand the procedure of the Committee is going to be this. They have examined a large number of officials who hold responsible positions in this particular Directorate, and the further step they are going to take is to meet Chambers of Commerce, business associations of various kinds, and hear their views.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it a roving Committee?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: They mean to make an extensive tour.

EMPLOYMENT OF SUPERANNUATED OFFICERS IN INDUSTRIES AND SUPPLIES DEPARTMENT

375. *Seth Sukhdev. (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state how many officers who have already reached the age of 55 are still being continued in service in the Departments under his control?

(b) How many persons were re-employed during the war and still being continued? How many of these superannuated men were specialists and technical men?

(c) When will the services of these men be dispensed with?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a) Fourteen.

(b) Thirteen. Out of these five are technical men.

(c) The services of superannuated officers will be terminated as soon as possible within a period of about a year.

All of them except two will be dispensed with by 30th May 1947 and the services of the remaining two will be dispensed with by December 1947.

EXPRESS TRAIN BETWEEN DELHI AND MADRAS

376. *Mr. R. O. Morris: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please indicate when the promised new Express Train will run between Delhi and Madras?

(b) Will air-conditioned coaches be provided on the Express train?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply I have just given to parts (a), (b) and (c) of Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddiar's starred question No. 368.

(b) The current proposals do not contemplate the provision of air conditioned accommodation. The matter will however be considered in connection with the general question of provision of air-conditioned coaches on the various routes.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: As the first and second class coaches very often go empty will the Honourable Member consider the advisability of reducing the number of these carriages in this train and increasing the accommodation for third class passengers by increasing the number of coaches?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The question will be examined according to the requirements of the travelling public.

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: In view of increased facilities of travelling by air will Government consider the advisability of discontinuing air-conditioned first class coaches?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: That is a matter of larger policy which I do not think can be discussed by way of supplementary questions and answers.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Is the Honourable Member aware that in the last railway budget debate this House expressed more than once the view that it was against increasing any facilities for upper class passengers, specially those who travel in air-conditioned coaches?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I am not quite sure that this question was specifically dealt with during the budget debate. It is quite possible that a certain suggestion may have been made, but, as I have said before, it is a question of policy and there will be plenty of time for the House to discuss it at length in the budget session and give us a definite policy. If it is desired to abolish the upper classes I am quite prepared to abolish them.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Meanwhile do not spend anything on them.

Mr. President: Order, order, next question.

PENALTY ON REFUND OF FARE ON UN-USED RAILWAY TICKETS

377. *Pandit Balkrishna Sharma: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that in case a passenger is not able to travel by a particular train for which he has purchased a ticket, he is allowed to deliver back the ticket and get a refund on payment of only one anna as penalty, on the East Indian Railway,

(b) whether a deduction of 10 per cent is made on the fare paid if a ticket had been purchased a few days earlier and the reservation of seat made, when the passenger is not able to utilise the ticket,

(c) the reasons for this difference of treatment between the two categories; and

(d) whether Government propose to take steps so that the latter class of tickets may also be accepted on payment of the penalty of only one anna?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) If a passenger is unable to travel for want of room in a particular train, he can obtain at the station refund of the fare paid without any deduction, provided he gives up the ticket within three hours after the departure of the train. When for any other reason a passenger is unable to travel, he can, if he has not reserved accommodation, obtain refund of the fare paid less a clerkage charge of one anna, provided he gives up the ticket within two hours after the departure of the train.

(b) Yes

(c) The distinction is made primarily with the object of preventing abuses such as speculative reservations.

(d) The present practice is intended to meet prevailing circumstances. When the pressure on reserved accommodation eases and the incentive for making spurious reservations has ceased to exist, Government intend to consider some relaxation of the rule under which a 10 per cent deduction is levied in cases of refunds following cancellation of reserved accommodation. In the meantime to provide for genuine cases of hardship, Railway Administrations have discretion to waive the levy of the 10 per cent deduction where circumstances warrant.

Seth Govind Das: Is the Honourable Member aware that if the application for refund is not made within the prescribed hours, as the Honourable Member said, it takes the Railway Department about six months to return the money?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I think those who want a refund should be a little quicker than they generally are.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Has it come to the notice of the Honourable Member that the provision for the exemption of the deduction of 10 per cent has been abused by the railway servants themselves by purchasing tickets for long distances and then returning them and getting exemption? If not, will he kindly make inquiries?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Certainly, Sir But I should like some specific instances to be brought to my notice

VALUE OF GOODS LOST IN TRANSIT ON RAILWAYS

378 *Pandit Balkrishna Sharma. Will the Honourable Member for Railway be pleased to state :

(a) the approximate value of goods lost in transit on various Railways, the amount claimed and the amount refunded, and

(b) the reasons for such losses ?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) A statement showing the net amount of claims paid by all Class I Railways for loss, destruction or deterioration of goods for the last five years is placed on the table Similar information in respect of claims repudiated is not available

(b) The principal factors contributing towards these losses are

(i) Heavy expansion of traffic, leading to congestion in goods and parcel offices and in yards, and to difficult operating conditions

(ii) Inferior quality of packing used

(iii) Low standard of marking and labelling of packages

(iv) Increase in thefts due to general scarcity, rise in the level of prices, and bad lighting on account of "black-out" conditions

(v) Indifferent calibre of some of the temporary staff recruited to handle the heavy war-time traffic

Statement showing the net amount of claims paid by Class I Railways

Year	Net amount paid Rs
1941-42	7,80,712
1942-43	14,45,989
1943-44	39,22,656
1944-45	1,13,60,910
1945-46	1,59,18,565

NOTE.—These figures refer to year ending 31st March

Mr. Mann Subedar: In view of the fact that Government servants or ex-railway servants are alleged to be concerned in these thefts, will the Honourable Member set up a special machinery for investigation and allay the serious discontent which exists among the public?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The Watch and Ward are as active as they should be, and I can assure the Honourable Member that we are trying to strengthen our Watch and Ward in order to catch out those to whom my Honourable friend referred

Mr. Mann Subedar: In view of the fact that the Honourable Member is unable at this stage to give us the amount of claims made and rejected by railway administrations, may I know whether he has not received representations from the business community from time to time as to the unsatisfactory character of the responsibility of the railway administrations for losses of goods sent by railway?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: There is no doubt that complaints are received from time to time But my Honourable friend ought to feel satisfied that the amount paid by the railways in 1941-42 was something like seven lakhs 80 thousand odd and now it has risen to one crore and 59 lakhs odd. Can we pay more?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know from the Honourable Member if any policy has been evolved to appoint Superintendents of Police from Government service? Take them on a tenure basis for Watch and Ward

Mr. President: What is the question?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: My Honourable friend said he is trying to improve the Watch and Ward system of the Railways so as to prevent the losses on Railways

Mr. President: The Honourable Member may ask for any information, but he is going to make suggestions

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: If my language is suggesting suggestions I will try to make an amendment. May I ask the Honourable Member to inform the House if there is a proposal to have Superintendents of police serving in the Government transferred to the Railway Department for Watch and Ward once in every three years on a tenure basis?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: According to my information, on some Railways there are Superintendents of Police working in the Watch and Ward, and on others they are not

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Will the Government consider the desirability of assessing these losses in accordance with the actual complaints made and justified, or the capacity of Government to pay? Whether it is 16 lakhs or 16 crores is immaterial. If I have lost money or goods, it should be paid. Will Government kindly reconsider its policy?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The Government try to do justice in every case, and I assure the Honourable Member that the Government will continue to do justice to everybody

Mr. M. A. F. Hirtzel: The Honourable Member informed the House that the Watch and Ward Department were working satisfactorily. Would he kindly arrange to make available to the House the number of cases instituted as a result of their activities and the number of successful convictions?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I should like the Honourable Member to put down a question

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know from the Honourable Member if it has come to his notice that there are a number of bogus parcels and bogus complaints? Parcels are first sent without indicating what they contain and later on claim is made for some other article which was actually not sent. Will the Honourable Member kindly see to it that proper investigation is made to see what exactly the article is before parcels are accepted?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: No parcel is accepted by the Railways until the Railway officers have satisfied themselves that it contains what the declaration says it contains

RESPONSIBILITY FOR GOODS ENTRUSTED TO ONE RAILWAY FOR DESPATCH TO A STATION ON ANOTHER RAILWAY

379 *Pandit Balkrishna Sharma : Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state .

(a) whether it is a fact that when goods are entrusted to one Railway for a station that happens to be on another Railway, the original Railway takes no responsibility for the goods if lost;

(b) whether on complaint for loss of goods, the original Railway refers the sender to the Railway to which station the goods were despatched and declines to take any further action in the matter, and

(c) whether Government propose to instruct the Railways originally receiving goods for despatch, to hold themselves responsible for the tracing of the goods if they are lost, and ensuring the payment of costs to the sender?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) No. The Railway which books a consignment for a station on another railway remains responsible as the contracting railway, although each railway over which the consignment passes is responsible for the safe transport of the consignment while in its custody

(b) On receipt of a complaint for loss of goods, the forwarding railway refers the applicant to the railway on which the destination station is situated, which railway is responsible for accepting and dealing with the claim on behalf of all the railways concerned. Each railway, however, takes action to trace the passage of the consignment over its own length

(c) Government do not propose to vary the present practice which they believe to be the most convenient to the trading public, since it is consignees who normally hold Railway Receipts and prefer claims and they can deal more conveniently with the destination Railway

DISPOSAL OF JEEP MOTOR CARS

390 *Pandit Balkrishna Sharma : Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state

(a) the number of Jeep motor cars that were in the possession of Government at the close of the war,

(b) the manner in which they were disposed of or are being disposed of, and

(c) the prices at which they have been sold and the conditions, if any, that were attached as regards their further sale by firms that bought the cars from Government?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a) 10,508

(b) Surplus Jeeps declared to the Disposals organisation have been disposed of partly by sale to Provincial Governments and Indian States for security and Famine Relief purposes, partly by inclusion in bulk sales of quantities of various vehicles, and partly by advertised tender, auction, or negotiation of small quantities to different parties

(c) The prices varied with the condition of Jeeps sold. Jeeps in good condition were generally sold for Rs 4,000 each. Jeeps in fair condition fetched Rs 2,250 to Rs 3,000, and those in poor condition Rs 1,000 to Rs 2,000

In the case of fair and poor vehicles, the wide range of conditions within the broad grouping has accounted for the considerable variation in prices

No conditions governing resale were attached in any transaction

POLICY re RETENTION OF ROYAL ENGINEERING OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN RAILWAYS

381 *Hajee Chowdhury Mohammad Ismail Khan : (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railway please state if it is a fact that Royal Engineering Officers are employed in Transportation and Engineering branches of the Railway although they are essentially military Officers?

(b) Will Government state their future policy as to retention of these Royal Engineering Officers in Railway Services and state whether their services will be returned to the military?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes. The employment of a limited number of Royal Engineer Officers in civil employ, including the various branches of Railway service, is a part of the general set-up of the Army. The terms governing their employment on railways will be found in Appendix I to the State Railway Establishment Code, Volume I, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

(b) Government have not so far considered the question of the future drafting of Military Officers into Railway employ. As regards such officers already in Railway employ, their return to military service has not been considered, while those whose services were replaced at the disposal of the Army during the war and are still with the Army, have been given an opportunity of returning to Railway employ provided they are considered suitable and they do so not later than 31st March 1947

QUALITY OF MATCHES PRODUCED IN INDIA

* 383 Mr. Manu Subedar : (a) What steps has the Honourable the Member for Industries and Supplies taken for the improvement of the quality of matches produced in India ?

(b) Is it a fact that matches are produced under controlled conditions at prices fixed by Government ?

(c) Is it a fact that these prices leave magnificent profits to the principal producing companies ?

(d) How do Government account for the fact that the quality of matches on the market is the same as the war quality ?

(e) What steps do Government propose to take in order to remedy this matter ?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai : (a) and (e) The quality of matches depends upon the quality of wood and of potassium chlorate. Good quality potassium chlorate is produced in adequate quantities at present in India, but the match manufacturers have not been able to get the right type of wood in sufficient quantities. Before the War the Andaman Islands were an important source of supply for match-making wood for the Indian industry. After the Islands were taken over by the Japanese, the Indian match industry had to face the problem of arranging supplies of wood from indigenous sources. Some of these sources provided good substitutes, but due to excessive war time fellings in the Forests, supplies of the particular varieties required were considerably reduced and timbers of inferior quality had to be used. Government of India intend to ask the Provincial Governments to reserve exclusively for the manufacture of matches certain species of wood available in some parts of India. Steps are also being taken to improve supplies of timber from the Andamans.

(b) and (c) Matches are not produced under controlled conditions at prices fixed by Government. Until 30th September 1946 the prices of match boxes were fixed in relation to the cost of production and handling charges, manufacturers were allowed a reasonable profit. However, with the expiry of the Defence of India Act, the Central Government have no longer the power to fix the retail price of matches.

(d) The quality of matches is improving with the improved supply of match chemicals and better quality of wood. It will be sometime before the pre-war quality is attained, as transport and other difficulties still hamper regular supply of raw materials to the factories.

Mr. Manu Subedar : In connection with the statement of the Honourable the Finance Member during the last Budget, was not an assurance given to this House that the price of matches will be fixed at half an anna—the retail price—and do I understand that Government will not make an attempt to see that the public is not overcharged by the producers who are a monopoly foreign company ?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai : I believe an assurance was given by the Honourable the Finance Member in his last budget statement. But it has not been possible so far to implement the suggestion he made wholly.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Are any facilities being given for producing matches as a cottage industry ?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai : That question was gone into in great detail when the Tariff Board Enquiry into the match industry took place. It is possible to do so, but whether it would stand up to competition against highly organized, large-scale concern, is a problem that admits of doubt.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir : Isn't it a fact that the price of match boxes has been reduced according to the undertaking given by the Finance Member in the last budget session and that boxes now of 50 matches are supplied to the public at a lower rate and the undertaking has been carried out ?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai : I should like notice of that.

Mr. President : Question hour is over.

FAST EXPRESS TRAIN BETWEEN DELHI AND MADRAS

383 *Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth : Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state :—

(a) what steps have been taken to speed up the Grand Trunk Express which was definitely promised in the last session of the Assembly, and

(b) when the fast Express train between Delhi and Madras which was promised in the last session is going to be started ?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) The Railways concerned have been instructed to take special measures to ensure more punctual running of this train and to subject it to periodical checks by Traffic and Locomotive Inspectors, so that prompt action can be taken to eradicate all avoidable delays. There are however a number of causes of unpunctuality which it is difficult to overcome, such as heavy loads, poor quality coal and engines which are no longer in first class condition.

A copy of the Honourable Member's question and my reply thereto will however be sent to the Railways concerned to ensure that they will redouble their efforts to secure a greater degree of punctuality.

(b) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply just given to parts (a), (b) and (c) of Sri Venkatasubba Reddiar's starred question No. 868.

EXTENSION OF SERVICE TO MEN IN LOWER AND HIGHER SELECTION CLASSES IN SIND AND BALUCHISTAN CIRCLE OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

384 *Seth Sukhdev : (a) Will the Secretary of the Communication Department please state the number of men separately in the Lower and Higher Selection Grades in the Sind and Baluchistan Circle of the Posts and Telegraphs Department who have been granted extension of service during the last two years ?

(b) What are the periods of extension granted in each case ?

(c) What are the reasons for granting such extensions ?

(d) What is the effect of such extensions on those immediately below them and on the general position of unemployment ?

(e) Do Government propose to grant such extensions also to those who have now been adversely affected by Government's present policy of granting extensions ? If not, why not ?

(f) What steps Government propose to take to safeguard the interests of those now adversely affected ? If none, why ?

(g) What is the policy of Government in granting extensions in future to the officers and staff of the Posts and Telegraphs Department in general and the Sind and Baluchistan Circle in particular ?

Sir Harold Shoberg: (a) None

(b), (c), (d), (e) and (f) Do not arise

(g) I would request the Honourable Member to refer the general question of policy regarding the grant of extensions of service to the Home Department. The present Fundamental Rules upon the subject are being followed in the Posts and Telegraphs Department.

INDIAN RADIO AND CABLE COMMUNICATIONS COMPANY LIMITED

385. *Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan (a) Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state if the Government of India have completed arrangement to take over the Indian Radio and Cable Communications Company Limited on 1st of January 1947, in accordance with the notice served on the Company in the beginning of this year ?

(b) What is the total number of officers and the employees of the Company who are drawing a salary, including personal allowance —(i) of Rs. 450 and over, (ii) between Rs. 250 and Rs. 450, and (iii) between Rs. 150 and Rs. 250 ? How many are Muslims in each category ?

(c) What is the scale of pay, as given in the Grading Schedule of the Company for the grades of—(i) Deputy General Manager, (ii) General Traffic Manager, (iii) Chief Engineer, (iv) Assistant Traffic Manager, and (v) Engineer-in-charge? How many officers have been promoted to these grades during last 3 years? What initial salary and special allowances, if any, have been granted in each case?

Sir Harold Shoobert: (a) The Government of India are making arrangements for taking over the service of the Indian Radio and Cable Communications Company, Limited, with effect from the 1st January, 1947

(b) and (c) A statement is laid on the table of the House

Statement

(b) The required information so far as it is available is given below —

(i) Number of employees 40—Muslim, One

(ii) Number of employees 157—Muslims—3

(iii) Number of employees 75—Muslims—12

(c) (i) Deputy General Manager—scale, Rs 1,500—50—1,750

(ii) General Traffic Manager—scale, Rs 1,200—50—1,500

(iii) Chief Engineer—scale, Rs 1,200—50—1,500

(iv) Assistant Traffic Manager—This grade has been abolished and replaced by Assistant Managers—scale, Rs 625—35—800

The information regarding number of officers promoted to these grades during the last three years and the initial salary and special allowances granted in each case is given below —

(i) Number of officers promoted to grade—One and initial salary granted Rs 1,600

(ii) Number of officers promoted to grade—One and initial salary granted Rs 1,200

(iii) Number of officers promoted to grade—One and initial salary granted Rs 1,500

(iv) Number of officers promoted to grade—Three and initial salary granted Rs 700

(v) Number of officers promoted to grade—Five initial salary granted Rs 600, in four cases with free quarter at Kirkee or allowance of Rs 75 at Bombay in lieu of free quarters, and initial salary granted in the fifth case Rs 560 at Delhi with an allowance of Rs 300

METHOD OF FIXATION OF PRICES OF YARN AND CLOTH

386. *Mr. P. B. Gole Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state

(a) the method by which the prices of yarn and cloth are fixed,

(b) the relation that they bear to the controlled price of cotton,

(c) whether Government are aware that the Textile Mills are making huge profits on account of the abnormally high prices of cloth fixed by the Textile Commissioner, and

(d) Whether any representation has been made by the East India Cotton Association for raising the minimum prices of cotton if the prices of cloth and yarn are not reduced?

The Honourable Dr. John Mathai: (a) The basis for fixing prices of cloth and yarn is a schedule of realisation multipliers for certain key counts. These realisation multipliers cover all the various charges involved such as cost of cotton, all manufacturing charges from the mixing of the cotton and the spinning up to and including weaving, cost of finishing and packing, overhead expenses of mills and profit margin. This schedule of realisation multipliers is subjected to percentage changes from time to time by negotiation between the Government of India and the industry.

(b) It is not possible to specify the exact relationship between the controlled prices of cloth and yarn and the controlled prices of cotton, because, as indicated in the reply to part (a) of the question, the schedule of realisation multipliers takes into account all the relevant cost factors. But changes in this schedule are so effected as to take into full account cotton prices.

(c) The schedule as it stands at present is believed to allow larger profits on cloth and yarn of fine counts than on cloth and yarn of medium and coarse cloth on which the profits are at present relatively small. In fact there is reason to believe that margins of profit are very small on coarse cloth, and that this is one cause for the fall in production of coarse cloth. Profit margins of course vary in proportion to the efficiency of the management, and condition of the machinery of each individual mill. Some make large profits while others on the margin even work at no profit. The whole question of cloth costs is complicated and is now actively under consideration.

(d) The East India Cotton Association did make a representation that the floor prices of cotton should be raised, but there was nothing in their representation relating to the reduction of the prices of cloth and yarn.

PRICES OF COTTON

387. *Mr. Manu Subedar. (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state how much cotton did Government of India purchase under the scheme to prevent cotton falling below a certain price?

(b) When were these prices fixed and what were the considerations for fixing the price of cotton as low as they were fixed?

(c) Have Government examined the position of cotton and gone into the reason why the price of Indian cotton should be lower than pre-war price, whereas the American cotton is two to three times the pre-war price?

(d) What steps are Government taking in order to see that the cotton cultivator gets the full value for his exertion?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a) During the 1943-44 season Government bought 277,854 bales. During the 1944-45 season Government bought 22,588 bales. There have been no purchases since then.

(b) The prices for the 1943-44 and 1944-45 seasons were fixed in October 1943 and August 1944 respectively. The considerations that weighed with the Government in fixing these prices were (i) to ensure that the cotton floors were less attractive than the food floors, so that the production of cotton surplus to requirements was discouraged and the production of food maximised, (ii) Government's anti-inflationary policy. The very fact that Government had to buy as many as 300,437 bales in order to sustain these floors shows that the prices fixed were not unduly low.

(c) Current cotton prices are not below the pre-war levels.

(d) Government have recently increased the floor prices of fine Jarilla 3/4" staple by Rs. 80 and the floor prices of other descriptions pro rata.

"FLOOR PRICES" OF COTTON

388. *Prof. N. G. Ranga. (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state what was the "floor price" for cotton in September, 1946, and new "floor price" fixed in October, what is the percentage of difference between them?

(b) Is it a fact that this increase in "floor price" does not effect the ultimate cost of cotton cloth?

(c) For how long have the cotton growers been complaining against the earlier "floor price" of cotton? Why was all the delay caused in setting right the position? What is the departmental machinery available to continually watch the trend of the respective prices of cotton, yarn and cloth and to see that the cotton growers are not exploited by the millowners?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a) The floor price for Fine Jarilla in September was Rs. 350 per candy, and the new floor price fixed in October is Rs. 430 per candy. The percentage difference is roughly 23 per cent. The floor prices of other cottons have been increased by roughly the same percentage.

(b) Government do not consider that this increase in the floor prices will affect the cost of cotton cloth. The market price which was round about

Rs 440 per candy for Fine Jarilla previous to the change is round about Rs 460 now

(c) For some years representatives of cotton growers have been complaining that the floor prices were much too low. That they were in fact not unduly low is shown by the fact that market prices have touched the floor on only two occasions. The recent decision to increase the floors was taken because Government decided that it would serve the interests of the grower to narrow the margin between floors and ceilings and give less scope for speculators. They are of the view that this would tend to stabilise market prices at or about current levels, and give more confidence to the cotton trade, who it is expected by reason of their increased confidence will be likely to allow better prices to the cotton grower. There is a section of the Textile Commissioner's office concerned exclusively with cotton matters, which watches the trend of prices and whose duty it is to see that the prices fixed by Government give a fair return to the cotton grower. Government's Honorary Adviser on Cotton has many years experience of cotton matters in India and the Cotton Committee of the Textile Control Board comprises experienced business-men actively interested in the cotton trade. Government believe that the guarantee of a floor, and the careful adjustment of supplies against internal needs and export markets, will stabilise the grower's price at a fair level.

BAN AGAINST PRODUCTION OF COTTON IN MADRAS

389. *Prof. N. G. Ranga Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state whether in view of the new policy of the Congress Ministry of Madras to make that province self-sufficient in Khadi, yarn and cloth production and help peasants to raise as much cotton as possible in their own villages, Government propose to withdraw their "Ban orders" against the production of cotton in a number of Madras Districts?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat: The ban on cotton cultivation in certain tracts has been imposed by the Provincial Government and not by the Centre. The question of the continuance of the ban is being examined by the Government of Madras in consultation with their officers.

ASSEMBLING OF AGRICULTURAL TRACTORS IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES

390. *Sri V. C. Vellingiri Gounder Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state

(a) the number and place where Government ordnance factories or other agencies have undertaken the manufacture or assembling of agricultural tractors and their ploughing sets and spare parts,

(b) how many tractors have so far been secured or fitted as complete ploughing units and how many given to each province,

(c) what are the countries from which these tractors and ploughs have been got so far and the number of plough and tractors expected to be delivered and when,

(d) whether Government have arranged to secure experts from foreign countries to manage the factories engaged in the manufacture of tractors and ploughing implements, and

(e) the number of agricultural implement factories in India, where are these situated and when started, what help is given by the Government?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat: (a) Government have set up a tractor reconditioning and repairing station at Delhi. A private firm is taking up the manufacture of tractor drawn implements at Bombay. The question of starting the manufacture or assembling of agricultural tractors is being looked into by the Automobile and Tractors Panel set up by the Planning and Development Department. It is however considered that such a plant will not be a commercial proposition until the demand is of the order of 4,000 tractors a year.

(b) A statement is laid on the table.

(c) The tractors and ploughs so far received have all been imported from the U S A. Against our outstanding indents we are still to receive 388 tractors and 481 ploughs (all types) from North America and 30 tractors and 244 ploughs (all types) from U. K. These are expected to be delivered before December, 1947

(d) Does not arise

(e) The exact number of factories for the manufacture of animal and hand operated agricultural implements is not known but a list of the more important factories is laid on the table. There is only one factory for the manufacture of tractor drawn implements situated in Bombay and started in 1946. Help is given by Government to these factories for the procurement of iron, steel, coal, coke, etc

Statement I

[In reply to part (b)]

128 tractors and 25 Mould board Ploughs have been received from the U.S.A., since 1944, and distributed as follows —

Bombay	52 Tractors and 20 Ploughs
Baluchistan	6 Tractors and 3 Ploughs
Baroda	6 Tractors and 2 Ploughs
Bihar	5 Tractors
Bundi State	1 Tractor
Central Schemes	4 Tractors
Hyderabad State	5 Tractors
I A R I	2 Tractors
Madras	8 Tractors
Mysore State	8 Tractors
Patiala State	1 Tractor
Rampur State	5 Tractors
Sind	1 Tractor
Travancore State	1 Tractor
U. P.	10 Tractors
In hand	4 Tractors

In addition 315 used tractors and 8 Ploughs have been acquired from U.S. Army surpluses in India. Of these 12 tractors have been sent to Bombay, 41 tractors and 3 Ploughs to Madras and 15 tractors and 3 Ploughs to Mysore. The remaining machines will be repaired in a special workshop being set up for the purpose, before they can be put to any use.

TRANSPORT OF FISH BY ROAD AND RAIL

391. *Mr. R. C. Morris Will the Secretary of the Agriculture Department please state whether, with the expected increase of supplies of fish, improved freezing arrangements for transport by rail and road into the interior will be effected?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat: Improved freezing arrangements for fish during transport by road and rail will be effected with due regard to the expected increased supplies of fish resulting from development of additional fishery resources, and the supply position of ice and of essential cold storage equipment, which may have to be imported from abroad.

CONTROL ON FUEL OIL IMPORTS

392. *Mr. Vadial Lalubhai : (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state if it is a fact that due to control on fuel oil imports and its prices foreign combines are charging very heavy prices which are out of proportion to the cost in the manufacturing countries?

(b) Is it a fact that Government was being charged more prices for fuel oil than private consumers before the war?

(c) Is it a fact that foreign combines show calculations at the high pre-war price on which they have based their present calculations?

(d) Is it a fact that even the present price calculations shown to Government are also on the higher level?

(e) Do Government propose to see that this charging of higher prices is put a stop to?

(f) What are the reasons for continuing control on fuel oil?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a) The existing control is over physical distribution of supplies of fuel oil to consumers, not on price.

The sale prices of petroleum products are fixed on the basis of prevailing f o b Gulf of Mexico prices plus current freight and other charges from a Gulf port to a port in the country of consumption, irrespective of the source of supply. In the case of furnace oil however, the Government have secured prices fixed on the basis of f o b Gulf of Mexico price plus the actual freight and other incidental charges from Abadan—the source of supply. As these charges are lower than the corresponding charges on supplies from the Gulf of Mexico, the Indian prices are in fact lower than what would have been ordinarily charged in accordance with the normal price policy of the oil companies. There are no reasons to believe that f o b Gulf prices are not fixed in relation to the cost of production or that the Abadan costs are lower than the Gulf costs.

(b) An instance has been brought to notice where the oil interests, with the probable intention of inducing industries in India to convert their plant from coal-fired to oil-fired furnaces, and thereby establishing new and expanded regular business for oil, had sold furnace oil during the years 1938 and 1939 at prices below those charged to Government. This does not, however, indicate any flaw in the price basis accepted by Government.

(c), (d) and (e) In view of the replies to parts (a) and (b) above, these questions do not arise

(f) Fuel oil is in world short supply and 90 per cent of India's requirements are obtained from Abadan against quotas allotted by H M G Continuance of control over the distribution of fuel oil is considered necessary in order to ensure equitable distribution to essential customers. Putting this item on the free list, as suggested by the Honourable Member, will enable non-essential consumers who command a large amount of cash, to buy up the major portion of the available fuel oil, thus depriving the more essential consumers, such as those employed in connection with Food production, of their due share

CONTROL ON SALE OF MOTOR CARS

393 *Mr. Madandhari Singh : Will the Honourable Member for Transport be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that the Bengal Government has lifted the control over the sale of motor cars,

(b) if it is a fact that the Bihar Government is still having the control over the sale of motor cars,

(c) whether it is possible for customers from Bihar to go to Calcutta to purchase cars without permits, and

(d) if so, the reason for retaining the control over the sale of cars in Bihar ?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) to (d) The question relates to a matter which is now the concern of Provincial Governments. It is understood that the Government of Bengal have not re-imposed control while the Government of Bihar who did re-impose control over distribution and prices of motor vehicles from 1st October, 1946 have abolished it with effect from 1st November, 1946

PROTECTION OF RAILWAY PASSENGERS FROM LAWLESSNESS IN CALCUTTA

394 *Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal : Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) whether the attention of the Government has been drawn to the serious disturbances and dislocation in Railway transport due to the state of lawlessness in Calcutta and other parts of Bengal,

(b) what steps have been taken or are being taken for ensuring safety and protection of Railway passengers on board the train (and steamer) and at stations of Railway employees and of Railway rolling stocks and of other kinds of property of the Railway and of the passengers and the public, and

(c) what are the obligation of the Provincial Government with regard to the above, and the guarantee for the fulfilment of the said obligation ?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes

(b) I would refer the Honourable Member to my replies to Mr K C Neogy's starred questions Nos. 30 and 31 given on the 28th October, 1946. I may add that all action that could be taken by the railway administrations for the protection of railway property and personnel as well as railway passengers in the affected areas was taken by them. Government are also considering the provision of a Special Armed Force for the protection of railway property, staff and the passengers and are also examining the question of enhancing punishments for offences under certain sections of the Indian Railways Act of 1919

(c) The provision of protection for railways is one of the functions of the Provincial Governments concerned. As, however, the normal strength of the Police under a Provincial Government cannot be expected to be sufficient to meet an emergency of such magnitude as now exists, Government are proposing the measures referred to in my reply to part (b) above

ALLOTMENT OF TEXTILE MILLS FOR THE COTTON PRODUCING PROVINCES

395 *Captain Syed Abid Hussain : (a) Will the Honorable Member for Industries and Supplies please state whether it is a fact that while allotting 124 new textile mills to various Provinces of India, no consideration and preference was shown to the cotton producing Provinces?

(b) Do Government propose to sanction a few more new textile mills exclusively for the cotton producing Provinces?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai : (a) It is not correct to say that no consideration was given to the factor of raw cotton availability in Provinces. If the Honourable Member will refer to paragraphs 19 and 20 of the Report of the Post-war Planning Committee (Textiles) he will see that, in arriving at their recommendations regarding allotments of spindles to Provinces, the Committee took into account availability of cotton along with other relevant factors.

(b) No, Sir. But Government will give due weight to the advantages of the availability of raw cotton, as has been done even now, when the next stage of expansion is reached.

SHORTAGE OF THIRD CLASS TICKETS ON MALAKWAL-SHORKOT ROAD LINE ON N. W. RAILWAY

396. *Captain Syed Abid Hussain : (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that at many Railway Stations on the Malakwal-Shorkot Road line (North Western Railway) third class tickets are not available to passengers?

(b) Is it a fact that the Railway Authorities issue Passes to passengers in batches which causes great inconvenience to the travelling public and specially to the lady passengers?

(c) Is it also a fact that if the holder of a pass of a particular batch disappears on the destination then the other fellow passengers are liable to be charged against as ticketless travellers?

(d) If the replies to parts (a) to (c) above be in the affirmative, then do Government propose to take immediate steps to remedy the inconvenience, and to take disciplinary action against the staff?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Information regarding the complaint of shortage of third class tickets on the Malakwal Shorkot Road line is not available at the headquarters of the North Western Railway. This information is being obtained from Divisional headquarters and a detailed reply will be placed on the table of the House when the information becomes available.

RIVAZ BRIDGE ON N. W. RAILWAY

397 *Captain Syed Abid Hussain : (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Rivaz Bridge between the Railway Stations Thatta Ma'a and Chund (North Western Railway) is used by the Railway and is also open to public traffic?

(b) Is it a fact that the important Jhang Shahpur Road also crosses the Chanab River through the above mentioned bridge?

(c) Is it a fact that within a radius of thirty miles there is no other bridge open to public for crossing the river and that there are thousands of people and animals and lorry loads of commercial commodities crossing the bridge every day?

(d) Is it also a fact that the Railway Authorities who are in charge of this bridge close it from sunset to sunrise as also from 11-30 A.M. to 1-30 P.M., thereby limiting the time of the public crossing only to a few hours of the day?

(e) In view of the changed time and conditions and in view of the great difficulty with which the public is faced, do Government propose to open the bridge to the public traffic throughout day and night closing only half an hour before the train timings?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali : The information asked for is being obtained from the Railway Administration concerned and a reply will be laid on the table in due course.

LIVESTOCK IMPROVEMENT BOARDS AND FODDER AND GRAZING COMMITTEES

398 *Sri V. C. Vellingiri Gounder (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state in which provinces Livestock Improvement Boards and Fodder and Grazing Committees are working, and since how long?

(b) Do Government know that there have been frequent cattle fodder famines in several parts of the country where best breeds of cattle are reared, thereby causing difficulties of timely agricultural operations in those areas? What steps have so far been taken by Government to tide over and solve the fodder problems?

(c) Has the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research suggested any scheme and advice and made grants towards schemes to solve these fodder famines? If so, what are they?

(d) What are the post-war schemes suggested under the Forest Department to improve the fodder and grazing facilities in the forest?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat: (a) Committees or Boards were set up in Assam, Bengal, Bihar, the C P, Madras, Orissa, the Punjab and the U P in 1938 or thereabouts

(b) Government are aware of the fact that fodder famines occur from time to time in different areas. In the current year arrangements were made for the supply of baled hay to the deficit areas but were only availed of by a few areas. A certain amount of cattle feed has also been imported. Rotational grazing has been introduced in certain areas to make more fodder available. Forest areas are thrown open to grazing in times of fodder scarcity. Research has also been carried out for using articles like Munj, Kans, Mango Seed Kernel, etc., as fodder after suitable treatment.

(c) A statement is laid on the table.

(d) The post-war plans aim at establishing rotational grazing schemes on scientific lines and at developing waste, desert and derelict land for the production of grass, tree leaf-fodders and pods.

Statement

Two schemes were sanctioned in 1941 in Bombay and the U P for the improvement of grass lands by rotational grazing but these could not be started because of non availability of fencing material. A scheme for the improvement of pasture land in Baroda financed by the Council is still under operation. Two schemes for the improvement of pastures by rotational grazing and reseedling in the Punjab and Bengal have recently been sanctioned. A similar scheme has been received from Assam and is under the consideration of the Council. A Desert Farming scheme is in operation in Sind since 1942 for the introduction of various drought resistant cereals and fodder crops, new grasses and xerophytic trees for shade and emergency fodder.

PAY OF EMPLOYEES OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT FOR STRIKE PERIOD

399 *Sjt Seth Damodar Swroop (a) Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state if Government are aware of the fact that the pay of the employees of the Posts and Telegraphs Department for the strike period was withheld by the Caretaker Government. If so, do Government propose to consider the question afresh and allow the employees of the Posts and Telegraphs Department their pay for the strike period in some form or other, as the poor employees are already hard hit by the economic distress?

(b) Are Government aware of the fact that in the last Bengal Nagpur Railway Strike the employees were allowed their pay for the strike period and this fact furnishes a precedent?

Sir Harold Shobert: (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Question No. 22, asked by Miss Mamiben Kara on the 28th of October 1946.

(b) It is a fact that when employees of the Bengal Nagpur Railway at Khargapur went on strike in 1927, pay was allowed for the strike period, but this cannot be regarded as a precedent since there were special circumstances to justify the concession. I may add—the Railway at that time was not a State concern.

SUGAR, GUM, SALT AND DAL QUOTA IN ASSAM

400. *Sreejuti Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri. (a) Will the Secretary of the Food Department please state if Government are aware that owing to damages done by a series of devastating floods from July to October this year in Nowgong, Sylhet, and some other Districts of the province of Assam, there is an inadequate quantity of imported foodstuff, such as Sugar, Salt, Gum (molasses) and Dal? If so, have Government either sanctioned increased quota of these commodities for Assam or have taken other steps necessary to provide for the increased supply?

(b) How many Biscuit Factories are there in the different towns of Assam?

(c) Is it a fact that most of them are lying idle for want of adequate quantity of sugar and flour?

(d) Is it a fact that roughly speaking a monthly supply of one hundred maunds of each of these commodities would enable these Factories to work? If so, do Government propose to sanction the additional quota for the Province?

Mr. B. R. Sen. (a) No complaint has been received from the Assam Government regarding shortage of salt, sugar and Gum in Nowgong and Sylhet as a result of floods. Assam's Gum quota was recently increased by 1,500 tons. There is a shortage of pulses in Assam, 3,500 tons of Moong and Masur were allotted to Assam in September and October and more will be allotted as further supplies become available.

(b) (c) and (d) An enquiry has been made from the Government of Assam about Biscuit factories and the question of allocation of additional quantities of flour and sugar required by these factories will be considered on receipt of their reply.

LOW CONTROL PRICES OF PADDY AND RICE IN ASSAM

401. *Sreejuti Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri. (a) Will the Secretary of the Food Department please state whether Government of India have fixed control prices of paddy and rice in Bengal and Assam. If so, what are these prices?

(b) Is it a fact that the Government of Assam had requested the Government of India to permit them to increase the control prices of paddy and rice? If so what was the decision of the Government of India?

(c) Are Government aware that on account of comparative low prices fixed for paddy and rice, the producers have been hard hit and that they are not in a position to purchase adequate quantities of necessaries of life as also the husbandry implements?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) The prices of paddy and rice in Bengal and Assam have been fixed by the Provincial Governments in consultation with the Government of India. Statements showing these prices are laid on the table of the House.

(b) Yes, Sir. The Government of India have decided that there should be no change in the existing prices of paddy and rice.

(c) The Government of India do not consider that the prices of paddy and rice are too low.

ALLOTMENT TO ASSAM OF QUOTA OF DIRECT SUPPLY OF BRASS SHEETS, CYCLES, CLOTH AND CORRUGATED IRON SHEETS

402 *Sreejit Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (.) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state what quota of direct supply of the following materials, if any, has been allotted to the Province of Assam: (i) Brass sheets, (ii) cycles, their parts and accessories, (iii) cloth and other materials necessary for the manufacture of umbrellas, and (iv) corrugated iron sheets?

(b) Are Government aware that the quantity of each commodity allotted is quite inadequate and that the Government of Assam had asked for its increase without any success?

(c) Are Government aware that the method of distribution adopted in Assam is unsatisfactory?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (a) (i) Assam has been allotted a quota of 10 per cent of the brass sheets landed at the port of Calcutta which represent about 80 per cent of the total imports into India

(ii) and (iii) As the Consumer Goods (Control of Distribution) Order 1944 expired on the 1st October 1946, there is no Central Control now over the distribution of cycles, their accessories and parts and umbrella ribs

As regards umbrella cloth, one lakh yards was allocated to Assam for the 1946 season, the quantity actually supplied being in excess of that allocation by 5,000 yards. The allocation for 1947 has not yet been made

(iv) Hitherto there was no separate quota of corrugated iron sheets allotted to Assam. Assam together with Bihar and Orissa and neighbouring Indian States was provided for under the allotment to the Bengal Circle

(b) Government are fully aware of the inadequacy of supplies as compared with the demand. This is true not only of Assam but of all Provinces

(c) The method of distribution is as follows

(i) Brass sheets—The manufacturers in Assam draw their supplies through the East India Metal Merchants Association, Calcutta, which also serves Bengal, parts of U P and C P, Bihar, Orissa and Cooh Bihar State. No representation has been made to Government that this method is unsatisfactory

(ii) and (iii) Cycles, their parts and accessories and cloth and other materials for the manufacture of umbrellas.—The question does not arise in respect of cycles, their parts and accessories and umbrella ribs in view of the reply I have given to part (a) of the question

As regards umbrella cloth, the supplies are placed at the disposal of the Provincial Government. The Government of India are not aware of the detailed method of distribution which the Provincial Government has adopted

(iv) Corrugated iron sheets—There was no control of distribution to small consumers from the 1st April to 31st July 1946. As far as Government are aware most of the dissatisfaction arises from the shortage of steel rather than the method of distribution. In any case, control of distribution has now been re-established and powers have been given to Provincial Governments to distribute steel within their respective Provinces. It is hoped that this will remove dissatisfaction regarding methods

EXTENSION OF BENGAL ASSAM RAILWAY LINE FROM RANGAPARA TO TEZPUR TOWN

403. *Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state if Bengal and Assam Railway Line will be extended from Rangapara North to Tezpur Town in the near future? If so, when?

(b) Are Government aware that the service rendered between the aforesaid stations by the T B Railway is most unsatisfactory and the passengers availing themselves run a great personal risk of loss of life or property or both?

(c) Has any step been taken to construct a bridge on Brahmaputra between Jogghopa and Pancharatna near Goalpara town in Assam? If so, by what time does the Railway Administration expect to complete the construction?

(d) Are Government aware that in the Assam Zone of the Bengal and Assam Railway roofs of most of the compartments leak from the roof and that all of them are not provided with lights even on the main lines? If so, do Government propose to have the Railway compartments running in the abovementioned area repaired and to issue instructions to fit them with lights?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) The conversion of Rangapara-Tezpur Tramway line to metre gauge and its amalgamation with the Bengal Assam Railway is a long-term project which will be considered when the contract with the Tezpur-Balpara Steam Tramway Co., Ltd. who are at present working the line, expires in 1952. According to the terms of the agreement with the said Tramway Company, Government could terminate the contract 15 years after the opening of the line and every seven years thereafter. The next option occurs in 1952

(b) Government are not aware of the position and are having the matter investigated

(c) A rail-road bridge across the Brahmaputra has been sited at Jogigopa in connection with the projected line between Goalpara and Bongaigaon, but a preliminary report shows that the line will not be commercially remunerative. The matter is under correspondence with the Defence Department with a view to ascertaining whether they would agree to its construction as a strategic line. If and when the construction is decided, the bridge might take about four years to complete from the time the work is taken in hand

(d) Due to the shortage of supplies during the war, some carriages on the Railways had to be re-roofed with painted canvas. Supplies of standard materials are now being received and carriages are being re-roofed. It is expected that before the beginning of the next monsoon, all carriages will have been re-roofed with standard material.

There have been frequent thefts of bulbs in the Assam zone of the Bengal Assam Railway, making it difficult for the Administration to provide adequate lights in trains. Orders have already been issued to fit wire cages to the roof lights to prevent pilferage and to provide at least 50 per cent of the pre-war number of bulbs in each compartment. Each lavatory is treated as a compartment for this purpose. As and when the supply position improves, it will be possible to provide the full complement of bulbs.

INCREASED PRODUCTION OF MILK AS RECOMMENDED BY BHORE COMMITTEE

404. *Mr. P. K. Salve (a) Will the Secretary of the Agriculture Department please state if Government are aware that the Bhore Committee Report has pointed out that one of the reasons for the poor health of the people of India is want of milk?

(b) Do Government propose to lay on the table of the House a statement giving the number of milk dairies in India, both Government and non-Government, and also the number of milch cows and milk buffaloes in them?

(c) What is the number of persons who are able to obtain milk from Government dairies?

(d) Are Government aware that the Bhore Committee has definitely stated that production of milk must be increased 110 times the present quantity? If so, what steps are Government taking to solve this problem?

(e) Have the Government of India got any scheme for the supply of a large quantity of milk to the inhabitants of this country for improving their health? If none, do they propose to prepare a scheme now?

(f) Will Government be pleased to take drastic measures to stop the sale of adulterated milk?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat: (a) Yes, Sir

(b) There are 89 military dairies with 6,400 cows and 34,800 buffaloes. The number of civil government and private dairies and the number of animals in them are not known, but an enquiry conducted in 1939 showed that there were then 33 government or state dairies and 220 organised private dairies. The latter include many firms which do not maintain animals but only collect milk from villages while gwalas and other cattle owners who are unorganised are not included in the figure.

(c) This number is not known but it is comparatively negligible.

(d) and (e) The Bhore Committee have recommended that the target should be an increase in milk production to the extent of at least 110 per cent. The steps that are being taken to increase milk production are stated in my reply to part (g) of question No. 146 asked by Mr. Manu Subedar on the 11th February, 1946.

(f) It is for Provincial Governments to adopt suitable measures for stopping the adulterations of milk and their attention has been invited to the matter.

GRANT FOR IMPROVEMENT AND PRODUCTION OF PETTI NUTS

405. *Sri A. K. Menon (a) Will the Secretary of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state what grant was allotted for the purpose of financing measures designed to improve the production and marketing of betel-nuts for 1946-47? And what is the amount spent so far for the purpose?

(b) Were any applications for help received from duly constituted Co-operative Societies or other recognised bodies of betel-nut growers of the Malabar District received by Government? Was any help given to them?

(c) Do Government propose to call for a report from the Madras Government on the working of the above Society or Societies, and if the reports are favourable, to render them aid before the betel-nut season is over?

Sir Pheroze Kharegat (a) A grant of Rs. 5 lakhs is proposed to be made for this purpose subject to the vote of the Assembly. An intensive survey of the growing and marketing conditions of betelnuts in India has been conducted with a view to framing a scheme for the improvement of production and the organisation of betelnut marketing. About Rs. 22,300 have so far been spent on this survey.

(b) One application for assistance was received from the Malabar Accanutt Growers' Association. No help was given in response to this request as it was considered that any piecemeal action was inadvisable and the whole position with regard to the marketing of accanutt was the subject of special investigation.

(c) An enquiry will be made from the Madras Government as suggested and the question of giving aid will again be looked into.

PURCHASE OF COTTON BY U. K. GOVERNMENT

406. *Mr Manu Subedar (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state how much cotton has the Government of the United Kingdom purchased from India?

(b) Have Government any information as to the price at which such cotton has been purchased?

(c) Has permission been given for the export of such cotton to the United Kingdom?

(d) For what quantity has permission been given for the export of cotton to (i) China, (ii) Japan, and (iii) other countries?

(e) Have Government helped U. K. Government with finance in rupees for this purpose?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (a) During the current cotton year, viz., 1st September, 1946 to 31st August, 1947, 67,540 bales of short staple cotton have so far been purchased by the U. K. Government.

(b) No, Sir. The purchases have been made through the normal commercial channels.

(c) Yes, Sir.

(d) The following quotas have been fixed for export of cotton stapling 11/16" and less to various destinations for the period September—December 1946:

United Kingdom	50,000 bales
Australia	1,000 "
European countries other than the U. K. and Germany	50,000 "
U. S. A.	15,000 "
China	65,000 "
Other countries	13,700 "

A quota of three lakh bales of raw cotton has also been fixed for export to Japan during the period September—December 1946.

(e) No, Sir.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

IMPROVEMENT OF OLD BENARES ROAD BETWEEN CHANDITALA AND SHEAKHALA

44. Mr. Nagendranath Mukhopadhyay : (a) With reference to the reply given on the 27th February, 1946, to my unstarred question No 48, will the Honourable Member for Transport be pleased to state the result of the discussion with the Government of Bengal in connection with re-starting of suspended work for metalling and improvement of the Old Benares Road between Chanditala and Sheakhala ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta and the Indian Jute Mills Association, Calcutta through the European Group Corporation, Calcutta in their letter in June, 1946, the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta in their letter in April, 1946, the Marwari Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta in their letter in July, 1946 and the Modern Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta in their letter in July, 1946, have written to the Bengal Government urging the immediate necessity of metalling and improving the road in question which has been the life-line of trade and communication for merchants, jute growers and jute suppliers ? If not, do Government propose to take the views of the said commercial bodies from the Bengal Government and state what action was taken on them ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state how much money has been spent from the Central Road Fund for manufacturing brick ballasts, for making Cement concrete (D shape size) Culverts and for acquisition of surplus lands for the improvement of the said road and for construction of cement concrete road of 1/8th of a mile at Kri-torampore and 1/8th of a mile at Sheakhala ?

(d) Will Government please state when the suspended work will be re started by the Bengal Government and when it will be completed as the matter is pending since 1935 ?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali : (a) and (d) The Government of Bengal have abandoned the idea of improving the old Benares road between Chanditala and Sheakhala as it passes through a very heavily built up area to acquire which would involve Government in considerable expenditure. They are now considering a new alignment which would form a common route for several systems of roadways and would also be less expensive to build. Pending finalisation of the scheme the Provincial Government are taking steps to maintain the existing road in a state of repair.

(b) The Government of India have no information and in view of the reply to parts (a) and (d) they do not think it necessary to call for this information.

(c) Against an expenditure of Rs. 1,78,000 reported by the Government of Bengal, the Accountant General Bengal has accounted for Rs. 71,507 from the Central Road Fund to the end of March 1946. Full details of expenditure under different items mentioned by the Honourable Member are not available.

COAL FOR RAILWAYS

45. Mr. Nagendranath Mukhopadhyay : (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state whether it is a fact that Railway Board have advised the Coal Commissioner to stop taking Grade IIIA, IIIB coals for Railways altogether ? Did the Railway Board consult the Honourable Member in charge ? If not, why not ?

(b) Do Government propose to direct the Railway Board to use at least 40 per cent of their consumption in Grades II, IIIA, IIIB coals, which are all owned by Indians and also to stop using the Coking coal once for all for the future benefit of India, Growing Industries ?

(c) Are the Government aware of any blackmarket prevailing in the country with regard to distribution of Softcoke (domestic fuel) ? If so, what steps do Government propose to take to stop it at once ?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali : (a) No Sir. It is not a fact that the Railway Board advised the Coal Commissioner to stop taking Grades IIIA and IIIB of coal for Railways. Grades IIIA and IIIB are being supplied to Railways up to five per cent of their monthly orders.

(b) Government do not propose to direct the Railway Board to use at least 40 per cent of their consumption in Grades II, IIIA and Grade IIIB. The Railway Board have agreed to take 30 per cent of their requirements in these grades. While the design of some existing engines does permit of the burning of low grade coal, the design of the majority of engines does not allow a higher percentage of such coals to be consumed without loss of efficiency, due to their high ash content.

Regarding the use of coking coal, it is the considered opinion of Government that all possible measures should be taken for the conservation of high grade coal. The Railway Department, being one of the major consumers of coal, have, therefore, been called upon to consider the possibility of using, to the maximum extent possible, coal other than that which can be used for metallurgical purposes, and where possible some types of low grade coal. This policy is being implemented by the Railway Department and future designs of engines will be such as to make possible the use of the maximum quantity of other than metallurgical coal.

(c) No, Sir. The Central Government allot quotas to the Provinces and the Provincial Governments are responsible for the actual distribution amongst consumers.

GRAIN SHOP FOR EMPLOYEES OF EAST INDIAN RAILWAY

46. Mr. Nagendranath Mukhopadhyay : (a) Is the Honourable Member for Railways aware of the fact that the East Indian Railway is giving the benefit of cheap ration to its employees which is 50 per cent, less than the rate of prices of civil ration?

(b) Are Government aware of the fact that in the East Indian Railway in six divisions there are six Controllers of Grain shops in each division drawing the salary of a senior scale officer of that railway? If it is so, do Government propose to abolish the grain-shops of that railway by paying the amount of cheap ration to the staff and order the staff to take ration from civil ration shops?

(c) Are Government aware of the fact that in the said railway about three lakhs of rupees are spent for the maintenance of the huge establishment for grain shops every month? If so, do Government propose to make an economy of about one lakh per month from that railway by abolition of the grain shops in the said railway paying the amount of ration to the staff?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali : (a) Indian Government Railways including the East Indian Railway, are authorised to sell rationed cereals at a rate which is 30 per cent less than the market prices prevailing in February, 1943. The rates thus fixed are admittedly below those charged by the civil ration shops, but the difference, in no case, exceeds 40 per cent.

(b) and (c) The details regarding the number and grade of the Controllers of Grainshops on the E I Railway are not as stated in the question. In addition to one officer in the junior administrative grade, there are two senior scale officers and eleven lower gazetted service officers in the Grainshop organization of that Railway. The cost of all categories of staff of the Grainshop organization including gazetted officers is, on the average, 2½ lakhs of rupees a month. The question of the abolition of the Grainshop organization and substituting the relief afforded through grain shops by a cash allowance is under consideration of Government.

CASUALTIES AMONG RAILWAY STAFF DURING COMMUNAL DISTURBANCES IN BENGAL

47. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to refer to his answer to starred question No 29 of the 28th October, 1946, giving the number of persons amongst the Railway staff that were killed, or are missing, or whose belongings had been destroyed or looted during the communal disturbances in Bengal, and state how many of the persons of the different categories mentioned are (i) Hindus, (ii) Muslims, and (iii) those belonging to other religious communities?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The available information so far as the Bengal Nagpur and the East Indian Railways are concerned, is given below:

Particulars	Bengal Nagpur Railway			East Indian Railway
	Hindus	Muslims	Other religious communities	Hindus	Muslims	Other religious communities
Railway staff killed					1
" " missing		2	1		1
" " whose belonging destroyed or looted				14	4

Information in regard to the Bengal Assam Railway as well as the details of property, belonging to staff of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, destroyed or looted, is being collected and will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

EFFECT OF COMMUNAL DISTURBANCES IN BENGAL ON THE WORKING OF RAILWAYS

48. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to refer to his reply to starred question No 29 of the 28th October, 1946, relating to the effect of the communal disturbances in Bengal upon Railway working etc. and lay on the table a further statement on the different points covered thereby bringing the information up-to-date as far as possible?

(b) Will the Honourable Member particularly deal in this connection with the working of the Sect on of the Bengal Assam Railway serving the districts of Noakhali and Tipperah in so far as it was affected by the communal disturbances that broke out since the 10th October last?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) On the East Indian Railway 1 Up and 1 Down workmen's trains between Dobson Road and Lillooah Shops were cancelled for three days from the 26th October, 1946. On the 27th out of eleven Calcutta Chord Railway trains, seven were cancelled. Nos 13 Up and 14 Down Express trains originated from and terminated at Howrah instead of Sealdah. On the 28th, nearly all trains had late starts ex Howrah due to Guards failing to turn up for duty. On the 29th three morning locals and one evening local were cancelled ex Howrah. 208 Up workmen's train ex Belur to Burdwan was cancelled till 2nd November, 1946. Nos 13 Up and 15 Up were cancelled from Howrah. No 23 Up was terminated at Sahibganj. No 13 Up and 15 Up were re-introduced from 3rd November, 1946, but No 23 Up and 24 Down continue to run to and from Sahibganj. On the 5th November, 53 Up and 54 Down, 55 Up and 56 Down originated from and terminated at Jamalpur.

On the Bengal Nagpur Railway reception of trains at Chitpur was stopped from 27th October. On the 28th booking of all goods traffic, including coal and military traffic, was restricted. Dock loads for Kidderpore Docks were forwarded by the Shalmar Garden Reach Ferry and not over the Willingdon Bridge. On the 30th October all goods traffic to Shalmar, except in Class 1 and 2, was restricted.

Up-to-date information regarding the Bengal Assam Railway has not yet been received but will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

Beyond what was stated in my reply to part (b) of the Honourable Member's starred question No 29 asked on the 28th October, 1946 there has been no further loss of life or damage to railway property on the East Indian and Bengal Nagpur Railways, resulting from the communal disturbances in Bengal. Information from the Bengal Assam Railway has not yet been received but will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

(b) Information required by the Honourable Member with regard to the Districts of Noakhali and Tipperah has been called for and will be laid on the table of the House in due course

PARTICULARS OF PUBLIC KILLED OR INJURED WHILE TRAVELLING ON RAILWAYS DURING COMMUNAL RIOTS IN BENGAL

49. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) With reference to the statement made by the Honourable the Railway Member in reply to starred question No. 29 of the 28th October, 1946, to the effect that particulars of the public killed or injured during communal troubles, while travelling in trains or while within Railway premises, are not available, is there any rule or instruction issued by the Railway authorities prohibiting the ascertainment of any particulars of this character? Will the Honourable Member make an effort to obtain the relevant figures from the Railway Police concerned and lay them on the table of the House?

(b) Is there no information available in relation for instance, to the case in which the wife of a Ticket Collector of the Bengal Assam Railway was brutally murdered after being dragged down from the Surma Mail train on the 29th August last between Talhar and Ashugung Stations? Is it a fact that in this case the husband, who is a Railway employee, and other members of his family, were also injured besides being robbed of their belongings? Will the Honourable Member be pleased to lay on the table a full statement giving particulars of this case, if available, together with an indication as to the action taken to bring the miscreants to book?

(c) Will the Honourable Member lay on the table a statement showing in how many cases members of the Railway staff in the different Sections of the Bengal Assam Railway made appeals for help and protection either to the superior Railway officers or the Police during the prevalence of communal troubles since August 16 1946? On which dates were appeals received, and with what result?

(d) What special steps, if any, are the Railway authorities taking to ensure a vigorous investigation in all cases where Railway property, or property in the custody of Railways on behalf of customers, was looted or destroyed, or where Railway Officers or members of their families were either killed or injured, in the course of the communal disturbances in Bengal?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) The reply to the first part is in the negative. Authentic information is always obtained by the Railways through the Railway Police who submit their final report after they have completed their enquiries. Final reports have not so far been received from the Bengal Assam Railway Police, and every effort is being made to obtain full information as expeditiously as possible. I may, however, mention that owing to disturbed conditions in Calcutta it is very difficult to obtain detailed particulars regarding all incidents particularly from Districts lying at some distance from the headquarters of the Railway. On receipt of fuller information I shall lay a statement on the table of the House.

(b) The Railway Police have not yet completed their investigations and submitted their report in regard to the case mentioned by the Honourable Member but full particulars are being collected by the Bengal Assam Railway Administration and a statement will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

(c) Members of the railway staff on the different sections of the Bengal Assam Railway made a number of appeals to the Police, the Magistrates and the Railway. Full details of these appeals showing when actually help came from the military or other authorities are being collected and will be laid on the table of the House in due course. Government, however, understand that some of the appeals made were based on rumours.

(d) The responsibility for investigation rests with the Police and there is no reason to believe that this investigation is not being vigorously pursued. Government will, however, draw the attention of the Provincial Governments to the need for a thorough and speedy investigation in such cases.

PROTECTION OF RAILWAY STAFF IN NOAKHALI AND TIPPERAH DISTRICTS

50. Mr. K. C. Neogy (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to refer to his answer to starred question No 30 of the 28th October, 1946 relating to Police precautions on the Railways affected by communal disturbances in Bengal, and lay on the table a further statement on the different points covered thereby, bringing the information up-to-date as far as possible?

(b) Will the Honourable Member particularly refer to the communal disturbances that broke out in the districts of Noakhali and Tipperah since 10th of October last, and indicate the steps taken for the protection of the Railway staff and property and passengers throughout the Section of the Railway affected thereby?

(c) Were any warnings given or complaints made, by any member of the Railway staff regarding the situation either to the District or Police authorities or to superior Railway Officials, at any time? If so, on which dates, in which areas, and to what effect? Will the Honourable Member please lay on the table copies of all such written warnings or complaints that may have been given or made by Railway Staff, and indicate the action taken in each such case?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) and (b) On the Bengal Assam Railway, in addition to the Armed Guards which travelled on each train of the Dacca Section, patrol trains were introduced on the Noakhali Section. Further details are being collected and will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

On the Bengal Nagpur Railway for the protection of railway staff and their dependents in the Calcutta area, additional Gurkha Watch and Ward staff and Armed Police Guards have been posted at Shilmanai, Santagachi and Tikiapara. Watch and Ward Gurkha escorts are travelling in the brake-vans of goods trains working through the Kidderpore Docks and Chitpur. Emergency Bus Services with Watch and Ward Gurkha escorts have also been arranged to convey staff posted at the Railway's headquarters at Garden Reach to and from work.

So far as the East Indian Railway is concerned, the police arrangements mentioned in the reply to part (a) of starred question No 30 continue to remain in force and Police was available to be deployed at short notice as required to deal with any situation which may arise.

(c) I would refer the Honourable Member to my reply to part (c) of the preceding question in which I have undertaken to collect the necessary information and to lay it on the table of the House in due course.

INSTALLATION OF TELEPHONE LINES IN ALL TOWNS WHERE ELECTRIC SUPPLY IS AVAILABLE

51. Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Communications be pleased to state whether Government are contemplating installation of telephone line and service in all towns where electric supply is already in existence?

(b) How far have things proceeded in this matter in respect of the towns of Berhampur, Krishnagar, Kustha, Rajshahi in Bengal?

Sir Harold Shoobert: (a) No.

(b) In the post-war plan of the P & T Department provision exists in the form of proposals to instal telephone exchanges at Berhampore, Krishnagar and Rajshahi but not at Kustha.

TRANSFERS OF TEACHERS IN RAILWAY SCHOOLS FROM ONE PROVINCE TO ANOTHER

52. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state

(a) whether the teaching staff employed in schools maintained by the East Indian Railway Administration are governed by the rules applicable to the teaching staff of the particular Province in which the school is situated;

(b) whether the teachers serving in the East Indian Railway schools cannot be transferred from one Province to another; and

(c) if it is a fact that in contravention of the above decision of the Railway Board the East Indian Railway authorities are contemplating the transfer of a few teachers including a Head Master from one Province to another in the near future ?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The information asked for in Questions Nos 52 to 56) has been called for and will be laid on the table of the House in due course

SELECTION BOARD FOR THE POST OF HEADMASTER, MOGULSERAH SCHOOL OF E I RAILWAY

†53. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state whether the procedure adopted by the East Indian Railway Administration for filling the post of the Head Master of the newly raised High School of Moghalsarai was in conformity with the practice followed either by the Education Department of the United Provinces or by the East Indian Railway for filling posts of similar categories ?

(b) Is it a fact that as early as February 1945, the General Manager of the East Indian Railway formed a Selection Board consisting of the Divisional Superintendents of Dinapore, Moradabad and Asansol ?

(c) Was a Selection Board of this quality and composition ever held ? If not, why not ?

SELECTION BOARD FOR THE POST OF HEADMASTER, MOGULSERAH SCHOOL OF E I RAILWAY

†54 Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state why instead of a Selection Board of the usual composition, a Selection Board consisting of officers far junior to the Divisional Superintendents, was formed ?

(b) Is it a fact that this Selection Board too was held one year after the Moghalsarai Railway School had been raised to High School status ?

(c) Is it also a fact that the Divisional Superintendent Dinapur, was opposed to the idea of holding a Selection Board ?

APPOINTMENT OF JUNIOR OFFICERS ON SELECTION BOARD FOR SELECTION OF HEAD-MASTERS

†55. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal. (a) Is the Honourable the Railway Member aware of the fact that it is high officers such as the Director Public Information and Secretary, Education Department, United Provinces, that form the Selection Board for the selection of Head Masters for the Provincial Schools ? Why was a junior officer viz the Inspector of schools, Benares included in the Selection Board appointed by the Railway authorities ?

(b) Is it a fact that a representation in protest of the inclusion of the Inspector of Schools was sent to the General Manager ? Was the representation considered by the General Manager ?

POST OF HEADMASTER IN PROVINCIAL SCHOOLS

†56. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state whether the post of the Head Master in a Provincial School is a Gazetted Post ? If so, was the selection of candidates for such posts ever made in Divisional Offices by officers junior in rank to the Chiefs or Deputy Chiefs of the Head Office ?

(b) What steps do Government intend to take to remedy the grievances ?

PERMITS TO BOMBAY BROKERS TO IMPORT GLASS BANGLES FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA

57. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state

(a) whether it is a fact that some Bombay brokers have been granted permits to import glass bangles from Czechoslovakia,

(b) whether Government propose to cancel these permits in the interest of the Indian Glass Bangles Industry at Ferozabad and other places,

(c) the steps Government have taken to prevent the selling of the imported bangles in the black market by the permit holders, and

(d) whether Government propose to take the imported bangles under Government custody and distributing them to the dealers to be sold at control rates?

The Honourable Dr. John Mathai: (a) Government have no information whether any of the parties to whom licences to import Glass Bangles from Czechoslovakia have been granted are Bombay brokers. Licences are granted on the basis of actual imports of parties concerned during the basic period.

(b) No, Sir. A small proportion of the imports of Glass Bangles in pre-war years is now permitted and Government do not consider that this small quantity of imports will be detrimental to the indigenous industry.

(c) and (d) The Hoarding and Profiteering (Prevention) Ordinance 1943 and the Consumer Goods (Control of Distribution) Order, 1944 lapsed on the 1st of October, 1946. The Government of India have, therefore, no power to fix prices or margins of profit or to issue instructions with regard to the distribution of imported Bangles. It is, however, open to Provincial Governments under their own powers of legislation to introduce laws to control prices and distribution as are required by local conditions.

ACTION OF GOODS INSPECTOR, BELANGUNJ STATION, AGRA IN THE MATTER OF SHORT SUPPLY OF FUEL AND COAL

58. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state whether Government are aware

(a) that the Goods Inspector of the Belangunj Station, Agra, frequently prevents the arrival of fuel and coal at that Station by wiring to the District Traffic Manager, Jhansi that there is no space for unloading these things at the Station,

(b) that the lack of space is due to about hundred wagon goods of Timber Merchants lying there at the Station, and

(c) do Government propose to remove this disability in respect of the delivery of fuel and coal at the Belangunj Station so as to help the general public in getting the needed supply of these basic necessities?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The G. I. P. Railway Administration have been asked to conduct an enquiry into this matter, the result of which is awaited. A detailed reply will be placed on the table of the House as soon as information is available.

HARIANA EXPRESS TRAIN BETWEEN DELHI AND HISSAR

59. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if Government are aware that till about four years ago a train called the Haryana Express used to run between Delhi and Hissar via Rewari (metre gauge) which was most convenient to the travelling public and least expensive to them in time and money?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Yes, the service was discontinued in 1941 in pursuance of the general policy of curtailing all but the most essential passenger services during the war.

DIRECT TRAINS BETWEEN DELHI AND BHATINDA VIA REWARI.

60. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if Government are aware that previously direct trains ran between Delhi and Bhatinda via Rewari, whereas there are no such trains now and that the absence of such trains causes much inconvenience to the travelling public?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Yes, one train a day each way was run on the metre gauge line between Delhi and Fazilka via Rewari, Hissar and Bhatinda. This service was discontinued in April 1941. It is realised that the curtailment of this service causes inconvenience to certain sections of the public but the curtailment of any service must necessarily result in inconvenience.

THIRD CLASS TICKETS FROM DELHI TO BHATINDA BY THE AHMEDABAD EXPRESS.

61. Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava: Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if Government are aware that no tickets are issued to travellers from Delhi towards Bhatinda side by the Ahmedabad Express though direct bogies (third class) are attached for Bhatinda?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: This is not now the case as with effect from 1st September 1946 through tickets have been issued to passengers from Delhi to Bhatinda and other stations in that direction by the Ahmedabad Express, to which through third class bogies are attached for Bhatinda.

COMPOSITE CARRIAGE IN NIGHT TRAIN BETWEEN HISSAR AND DELHI

62 Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava: Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if Government are aware that previously a composite of first and second class and a third class carriage used to be attached to night train between Hissar and Delhi and that at present no such arrangements is in existence?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Yes, a bogie composite 1st, 2nd and 3rd class carriage was formerly attached to each of the following trains between Delhi and Hissar:

From Delhi	Dep. 22 35 hours
From Rewari	Dep. 1 55 "
From Hissar	Dep. 20 12 "
From Rewari	Dep. 3 48 "

This arrangement was cancelled due to the shortage of coaching stock.

EXPENSES OF JOURNEY BETWEEN HISSAR AND DELHI

63 Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if it is a fact that previously a person travelling by the Haryana Express from Hissar to Delhi and back used to spend Rs. 2/4 and about five hours in time, whereas at present double the money and time are spent to perform the said journey?

(b) Do Government propose to affording again the conveniences extended by the Haryana Express Service to the travelling public between Hissar and Delhi?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes, the single fare between Delhi and Hissar by the Haryana Express, which carried only third class passengers, was Rs. 1-2-0, and the return fare Rs. 2-4-0. The scheduled time, however, from Delhi to Hissar was 6 hours and 10 minutes and from Hissar to Delhi 6 hours and 1 minute. The present third class single fare is Rs. 2-11-0. The current scheduled timings from Delhi to Hissar are 8 hours and 25 minutes by one train, 9 hours and 22 minutes by another, and 8 hours and 35 minutes by a third. In the reverse direction, the timings are 8 hours and 16 minutes, 9 hours and 22 minutes, and 10 hours and 5 minutes respectively.

(b) This will not be possible in the near future. At a recent meeting of the Ajmer Branch Local Advisory Committee, the Administration's proposals regarding the order in which pre-war services should be restored on the metre gauge as stock becomes available, were considered and the Committee agreed that the restoration of the Haryana Express should be given a relatively low priority since war-time cancellations had been more seriously felt on other sections of the railway.

DIRECT TRAIN BETWEEN DELHI AND BHATINDA via KWARA

64 Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if Government propose to take steps to arrange that at least one direct train runs between Delhi and Bhatinda via Kwarā and that a bogey, and composite of second and first class are attached to night trains between Delhi and Hissar as before?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The Railway Administration have stated that these matters will be investigated.

FACILITIES FOR IMPORT INTO GUJRAT OF BUILDING STONES FROM STATIONS ON THE NIZAM STATE RAILWAY, THE G I P AND THE M & S M RAILWAYS

65 Mr. Mohammad M Killedar Will the Honourable Member for Transport be pleased to state

(a) whether a large quantity of stones from Tandun, Navagi and other stations on the Nizam State Railway Wadi and Shahabad on the G I P Railway and Araguntla on the M S Railway was imported into Gujrat for building purposes,

(b) whether the traffic was closed during the war time,

(c) whether the Honourable Member is aware that there is a great demand of these stones in Gujrat, and that merchants are not granted facilities for import,

(d) the reasons for not allowing the stones to be imported into Gujrat, and

(e) whether there is any special reason for not opening the traffic though the war is over for more than a year?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Assuming that the stations meant are Tandun and Navagi on H E H the Nizam's State Railway, Wadi and Shahabad on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and Yerraguntla on the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway, then it is confirmed that these are stone producing centres whence stone is despatched to many parts of India. The normal sources of supply for Gujrat, however, are the Kotah and Dhaura areas which are conveniently placed and movements from further south were never heavy.

(b) Yes, Sir, in the sense that preference was given to 'short-distance movements in the interests of conserving transport.

(c), (d) and (e) The position is that movements of stone ordinarily carry Class V(b) priority. Movements on account of Government, however, as also programmed movements shown to be urgent and essential are accorded Class III priority. Class III priority is accorded on application to the Regional Controllers of Railway Priorities concerned. There is no embargo on movements of stone to Gujrat from the stations mentioned in (a) and it is free to move in Class V(b), but it is a fact that movements in Class V(b) into the Gujrat area have been difficult for some time, partly as a result of civil disturbances. Until a few days ago the Transport Department had received no application for the traffic to be accorded any higher priority. Certain applications have just now been received, however, and these are under consideration.

SHORTAGE OF MATCHES IN BENGAL

66 Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state—

(a) whether Government are aware of the acute shortage of matches in Bengal

(b) the reasons for such shortage; and

(c) what steps are being taken for relieving the situation?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: (a), (b) and (c) With your permission, Sir, I would reply to parts (a), (b) and (c) of the question together. Government have ascertained that the shortage of matches in Bengal is not really acute. The difficulties that have been experienced in obtaining matches recently are probably due to the disturbances in Calcutta and the mofussil rendering it difficult for retailers to obtain their stocks and also inducing purchasers to obtain supplies in excess of their needs for hoarding. There was some fall in output due to labour trouble at the Wimco Works and shortage of coal. The labour troubles are now over and the production centres have resumed or will soon resume normal production. Messrs Wimco are also taking steps to obtain an extra allocation of coal.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER

POLICE RUNNING GUARDS ON TRAIN SERVICES ON E I AND O T RAILWAYS IN BENGAL AND BIHAR

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state whether Government propose to issue a statement about the dislocation of train service and difficulties of booking goods on the East Indian and 12 Noon Oudh and Tirhut Railways in Bengal and Bihar areas?

(b) Have the Railway authorities increased the Police Running Guards in train services for safeguarding the lives of the passengers? If not, why not?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) There has been very serious dislocation of both Passenger and Goods services on the East Indian Railway as a result of the disturbances in Bengal and Bihar.

As the Honourable Member is aware, the disturbances in Bengal started in the middle of August and continued during September. There was a recrudescence of the disturbances in Calcutta in the last week of October and at the same time serious disturbances started in Bihar causing considerable dislocation of Passenger and Goods services on the Dinapore Division. From the 17th to the 19th August a number of Calcutta Local trains and trains on the Calcutta Chord Railway were cancelled and the Workmen's train for Lillooah Workshops was also cancelled on the 17th August.

During the period 16th August to the 9th September, the Up and Down Delhi Express trains started from and terminated at Howrah instead of Sealdah. From the 20th to 23th August, there was also a heavy exodus of up-country inhabitants from Calcutta and the East Indian Railway was called upon to run 16 special trains to cope with this traffic.

There was considerable loss of merchandise due to non-delivery of consignments valued at about Rs. 50,000 and 100 consignments of perishables and luggage valued at about Rs. 12,000 were stolen.

Throughout the disturbances, there was also a very high percentage of absenteeism amongst the staff.

From the 26th October to the 9th November 1946, a large number of trains were cancelled on the Calcutta Chord Railway and a number of trains from Howrah were either cancelled, diverted or suffered very heavy detentions.

As regards the dislocation of train services in Bihar during the recent disturbances, from the 1st of November to the 9th November, nine Express and Passenger trains were stalled for the night at various stations on the Dinapore Division and five trains were diverted from the Main Line to via the Grand Chord. A number of Passenger and Goods trains also had to be cancelled.

Between the 30th of October and the 4th November, three trains were attacked by riotous mobs resulting in deaths of several railway employees. The worst instance of this was when the workmen's train from Sultanganj was attacked between Jamalpur and Bararpur on the 4th November and ten women and one child were killed.

As a result of the cancellations and delays to Goods trains, a complete restriction has been imposed on booking of Goods on the Main Line between Jamalpur and Moghalsera, on the Grand Chord between Gaya and Moghalsera and on the Patna-Gaya and other Branches in Bihar. Booking has also been stopped to Bhagalpur, Jamalpur and Monghyr stations and stations between Jamalpur and Kiul. These restrictions do not, however, apply to food grains and piece goods.

Trifre between the East Indian Railway and O T Railway has also been seriously affected by the disturbances.

The O T Railway has also been affected by the disturbances in Bihar but the difficulties experienced have been caused by acute nervousness on the part of the staff, particularly the running staff, rather than to actual incidents. There has been some dislocation of Goods services by the cancellation of night running of Goods trains on the Main Line for a short period, but there has been no dislocation of Passenger train services.

The main centres of tension have been at the important Junction Stations of Chupra, Barauni and Mokamehghat. The riots in the Chupria area started on the 25th October and caused considerable nervousness among the running staff serving that station, resulting in serious detentions to and cancellations of Goods trains between the 26th and the 31st October.

At Mokamehghat which is the main transshipment point between the East Indian Railway and O T Railway, on the South Bank of the Ganges, there has been great difficulty in getting the staff to report for duty and the transshipment work has suffered and is still suffering in consequence.

Barauni Junction, an important station on the O T Railway which deals with traffic via Mokamehghat on the north side of the river, was also affected, and the staff was nervous due to continual tension.

Apart from detentions and cancellations of Goods trains on the Main Line between Barauni and Savan, it has not been found necessary to restrict Goods booking and Passenger services have been more or less normal.

(b) All action that could be taken by the Railway Administrations for the protection of train services in the affected areas, was taken by them. Additional police has been obtained where available for protecting passenger trains.

On the East Indian Railway, Armed Police Guards have been provided as required on platforms of certain stations in the affected areas in Bengal. These Guards were provided after the first few incidents had taken place. Armed Police Guards are escorting all passenger trains in the affected areas in Bihar. On the outbreak of disturbances in Bihar and when train services were interfered with the Bihar Government were approached for additional protection for trains. As soon as the necessary force could be deployed such protection was given, and trains are now running with armed escorts.

On the O T Railway, Police protection has been provided on all goods trains, but it is not considered necessary to provide such protection for passenger trains. Sheds and other key points in the affected areas have also been protected. Owing to the difficulty of working of Ferry service at Mokamehghat due to high percentage of absentees, Police and Military authorities concerned have been asked to provide an Armed Guard of 25 men in order to strengthen confidence amongst the staff.

I may also mention that Government are actively considering the provision of Special Armed Forces for the protection of railway property, staff, and the travelling public, and are also examining the question of enhancing punishments for certain offences against the safety of Railways.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Did the Honourable Member receive any information that the railways staff at Mogulserai gave notice to the authorities that they would not travel unless better provision was made for safeguarding their lives?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I have already covered that point very fully.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: Is the Honourable Member aware that on the Bengal Assam Railway on the 27th October at a place only a furlong off from the Dacca railway station, a passenger train was stopped by pulling the chain and a large number of persons armed with deadly weapons attacked passengers belonging to a particular community and killed 40 of them and injured a large number of others and also kidnapped and abducted away a large number of women and children?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I should like to have notice of that question for the simple reason that the information asked for rather concerns the Provincial Government. I said that I could not tell the House the number of times the alarm chain was pulled to stop trains. As to what happened afterwards is entirely beyond my province. It is for the Provincial Government to find out and give the information.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: May I know whether the Railway Department has in its possession up to date information and estimate regarding the losses that have taken place in the different railways in respect of human lives, in respect of property and in respect of railway employees?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I have fully dealt with that point in my reply to a question by Mr Neogy. Probably it was in my answer to question No 30 or 31. I would refer my Honourable friend to my reply to that question.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know if the Honourable Member's attention has been drawn to the press report that an attack was made at Dasna the other day on a train carrying pilgrims from Garhmukteshwar? If so, what has been the death toll and the number of injured and whether any relief measures were taken by the Railway Administration in that connection? May I also know what is being done about the property of those persons which was left behind?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: My Honourable friend has already sent a short notice question on the subject which I shall answer either tomorrow or the day after.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: May I enquire, Sir, and seek your guidance on a point? You were good enough to tell us in connection with a notice of an adjournment motion that these matters related to the Provinces. Is the Honourable Member right in answering these questions with all these details?

Mr. President: There are two questions. Some are matters relating to Delhi Province and some refer to incidents outside the Delhi Province. So far as Delhi province is concerned the Government of India would be responsible, but so far as other matters relating to provinces are concerned, the other day I made a distinction between the responsibility of the Railways so far as any accidents or loss of life or property on account of anything inherently defective in the Railway Administration and the preservation of peace or matters relating to police, which will be matters within the jurisdiction of the Provincial Governments. That distinction has been kept up even today by the Honourable Member while replying, when he said that so far as other incidents such as pulling of chains are concerned, they will be a provincial matter.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Stealing goods from station yards and so on would come under the police administration of the provinces.

Mr. President: I do not propose to enter into a discussion over this matter. The questions are hypothetical and problematical. If such questions do arise, I will then consider as to how far they are admissible or otherwise.

Maharajkumar Dr. Sir Vijaya Ananda: Dasna station is in the U P. and not in Delhi Province.

Mr. President: If that is so, it further strengthens my case. I suppose Gh. Zahad is also in the U P. Then of course it is more clear. I was told that it was in Delhi Province. But I was not referring to any particular station. I was making a general statement, viz. whenever a question comes within the province of Delhi, the Central Government will be responsible.

LECTION OF A MEMBER TO THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan (Finance Member) Sir, I move:

"That the non-official members of the Assembly do proceed to elect, in the manner required by rule 51 of the Indian Legislative Rules, one member to be a member of the Committee on Public Accounts in place of the mover whose elected seat on the Committee has become vacant."

Mr. President: The question is

"That the non-official members of the Assembly do proceed to elect, in the manner required by rule 51 of the Indian Legislative Rules, one member to be a member of the Committee on Public Accounts in place of the mover whose elected seat on the Committee has become vacant."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President: I have to inform Honourable Members that for the purposes of election of one Member to the Committee on Public Accounts, the Notice Office will be open to receive nominations upto 12 Noon on Wednesday, the 13th November and that the election, if necessary, will be held on Friday, the 18th November. The election, which will be conducted in accordance with the Regulations for the holding of elections by means of the single transferable vote, will be held in the Assistant Secretary's room in the Council House, between the hours of 10-30 A.M. and 1 P.M.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

RESERVE BANK OF INDIA (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan (Finance Member) Sir, I beg to move

"That the Bill further to amend the Reserve Bank of India Act 1934 be taken into consideration"

Sir, with regard to this motion there is not very much that I have to place before Honourable Members. The case for passing such a legislation has been clearly stated in the Objects and Reasons of the Bill.

Section 31 of the Reserve Bank of India Act provides that no bills of exchange payable to bearer on demand will be issued by any bank or any other private association. It was noticed at the beginning of this year that a certain bank had issued what it called negotiable saving certificates which was for a certain period after which it became, like a promissory note, payable on demand. It was felt that the Government should prohibit the issue of such promissory notes, and consequently an Ordinance was promulgated on the 18th May 1946. This Ordinance expires on the 18th of November this year and it has been considered necessary to make permanent provision against the issue of such artifices or promissory notes. It is undesirable that such notes should be allowed to be issued by banks or other firms which may ultimately become like the government currency of the country. Apart from that, it would help those who want to practise fraudulent methods and in this way they would be able to evade taxation because they could go to the bank, hand over a certain amount of money and get these promissory notes payable to bearer, which really becomes payable on demand after the period stated therein has expired and therefore it would be difficult to get hold of such people. Apart from that, the issue of such notes would be an encouragement to black marketeers because this would be the easiest way of doing away with the money and hiding it from being accounted for. Therefore in the interests of the country it has been considered necessary that a provision should be made in the Act itself as a permanent measure prohibiting banks or other institutions from issuing such promissory notes. I hope that the House will agree with me that it is necessary that such a provision should exist, and as I stated before there is not very much for me to say in support of this proposition which I have placed before the House.

Mr. President: Motion moved.

"That the Bill further to amend the Reserve Bank of India Act 1934 be taken into consideration."

Mr. Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce) : Sir, I rise to support the motion.

Mr. President: Before the Honourable Member rises, may I know whether honourable members who have tabled amendments are going to move them? Mr. Jaffer is absent. Mr. Sanyal.

Mr. Saganka Sekhar Sanyal (Presidency Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) : No, Sir.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Sir, I rise to support the motion which has been moved by the Honourable Finance Member. I think the grounds which he has stated for taking such measures are there. It is not only tax-dodgers who do not wish to disclose to government their full assets and the black-marketeers who want to lock up their funds in something of value as when the thousand-rupee notes were withdrawn. There is a third aspect to it which I would just mention in passing, and that is, that the public itself must be protected against the issue of anything which savours of promissory notes payable on demand, because if these notes are in circulation in large numbers, through the ignorance of the public and that particular institution issuing these notes gets weaker and weaker, as it has happened in other countries, the public who hold and the final holders of these notes are also prejudiced, and therefore I consider this particular provision is absolutely essential, and I trust that this House will pass this motion without sending it to Select Committee or for circulation.

There is only one other aspect of it which I would like to bring to the notice of the government that there are other documents which could be put to the same use, to which the documents referred to in this Bill could be put. These are bearer bonds and bearer securities on the one hand, and there are fixed deposit receipts which ought not to be transferable but which in many cases, by the usage of the banking business in this country, are made transferable to specific names or to blank names, so that any name can be put in on the last date and the party can secure, after the due date when the deposit receipts mature, payment thereof any party whose name might appear can get payment, but if the name is blank any third party could put his name and cash the thing and it would serve the same purpose. I would request government to let the Reserve Bank examine thoroughly the position of documents which are either transferable in themselves as bearer documents or of fixed deposit receipts which become transferable by the inscription at the back "Pay to blank", as soon as the holder of the fixed deposit receipt signs that way. In fact, the House may know that at present the fixed deposit money is collected by my bank—if I have a fixed deposit receipt with a bank A, I tell blank B

"Please collect this money " I merely endorse "Please pay to such and such bank", and bank A has got to pay to my bank That is a legitimate use of the facility of transfer But there is an illegitimate use of the facility of transfer in the direction in which the Finance Member referred, and I commend to government that suggestion I trust the House will pass this Bill without delay

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan (Dacca cum Mymensingh Muhammadan Rural) Sir, while supporting the passage of this Bill like my predecessor, I would like to draw the attention of the Honourable Finance Member to one thing which I do not clearly understand I refer to clause 2(2) which reads

"Notwithstanding anything contained in the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, no person in British India other than the Bank or, as expressly authorised by this Act, the Central Government shall make or issue any promissory note expressed to be payable to the bearer of the instrument "

I refer to the expression "as expressly authorised by this Act " Why are these words necessary here? If those words are omitted, I think the meaning will be the same Unless explained, this phrase seems to me to be awkwardly redundant If this phrase is omitted then I think the meaning is quite clear I would like to have an explanation of this

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, there is nothing novel in the words "as expressly authorised by this Act " Under the Reserve Bank Act, the Reserve Bank has been given powers to issue bearer promissory notes, all the currency notes we have are bearer promissory notes payable on demand When the Central Government is advised or is authorised to issue notes, it must be expressly authorised in a particular manner It is not as if the Central Government can issue bearer promissory notes payable on demand with all the latitude as the Reserve Bank has been given in this particular matter That is why it is suggested there "as expressly authorised by this Act "

There is another point as to why we ought to support this Bill You will remember that during the end of the last Assembly session, the budget session, the previous Finance Member introduced a Bill to levy duties on estates, as death duties This is a device—bearer bonds payable to the bearer on demand—to get over it and to avoid death duties That device was sought to be prevented by the provisions of section 31 in the Reserve Bank Act already, if it is payable on demand, but there a further device was invented by making payable on demand pronotes after a particular period, and this Bill is seeking to avoid such payments on demand even after particular periods Therefore there ought to be no objection to the passage of this Bill

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: There is nothing much I have to say except that the wording that is here with regard to section 2 is exactly the same as it is in the Reserve Bank of India Act, clause 31 It also struck me in the same way as it struck my Honourable friend over there but when I examined it, it was all right and did not require any change

"That the Bill further to amend the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, be taken into consideration "

The motion was adopted

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill

Clause 1 was added to the Bill

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I move

"That the Bill be passed "

Mr. President: The question is ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES (TEMPORARY POWERS) BILL

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Member for Industries and Supplies).—
Sir, I beg to move

"That the Bill to provide for the continuance during a limited period of powers to control the production, supply and distribution of, and trade and commerce in, certain commodities be taken into consideration"

Briefly what this Bill tries to do is to put in the form of an Act of the Legislature the provisions which are already contained in an Ordinance which deals with the same matter. There is only one point regarding which the Bill proposes to vary the provisions of the Ordinance. That provision is in regard to control being exercised over actual undertakings. At present as the Ordinance stands, that control relates only to the subject of coal but in the Bill the control if and when the necessity for it arises might be extended also to the other articles covered by the Bill. Personally I do not think that the occasion would necessarily arise in respect of the great majority of those commodities but in order to make the control effective and comprehensive it is desirable that this provision should be put into the Bill.

Now, Sir, the House has, more than once, when questions relating to control arose, expressed its concern regarding the whole subject, that is to say whether in principle control should be continued now that the emergency of war ceased and whether its administration has been on the whole to the benefit of the community. I propose therefore to deal with the general subject of control in the few remarks which I wish to place before the House. The thing to remember with regard to control is that the whole case for it rests on the fact that the problem of inflation is still with us. We see no indications that it is going to be less acute in the very near future. The indications are that it is going to remain with us for a longer period of time than many of us had anticipated. What inflation amounts to is briefly this, that when you have a large amount of money in circulation and therefore a high degree of purchasing power concentrated in the hands of a relatively small number of people and over against it you have an acute shortage of goods, then the inevitable result is that unless the community steps in and exercises control those whose resources are limited are likely to be left out in the scramble. That, I think, is a situation which the Government cannot possibly tolerate and that in a nutshell is the whole case for control. Now, last year many of us had hoped that with the cessation of war expenditure it will be possible for us to have in this country on the whole a downward trend of prices and the problems connected with inflation would not be so severe as they still are. That anticipation for various reasons has not materialised. We see no indication that the general level of prices in the country has fallen or is falling. On the other hand the shortage of goods still continues to be acute. Our productive capacity has not been increased and what capacity there is has not been wholly in operation. Although the import position is slightly better, the conditions prevailing in other countries are such that in regard to essential commodities the surplus available in a country like ours are likely to be limited and therefore we are up against the same problem as that which faced us last year and the years before and that is the reason why this control should continue. The provision of Parliamentary legislation, in pursuance of which it is possible to pass this Bill prescribes a certain limited period for measures passed under it. The period is briefly this—this will continue for a period of 12 months from the official declaration of cessation of hostilities unless the Governor General by public notification extends it for a further 12 months. If thereafter it becomes necessary to continue it there should be a Resolution by both Houses of Parliament. The period could be extended by a Resolution of Parliament but then the whole period will be subject to a limit of five years altogether from the cessation of hostilities. Sir, I submit that the conditions in India are such today that in regard to commodities which are essential in the sense that they enter into general consumption or they are commodities which are essential to the production of such commodities it is necessary in view of the fact that the capacity for purchasing these things is relatively concentrated in the hands of a small number of people, that the State should continue to be armed with powers for rectifying the serious inequalities which otherwise might result. Now, as far as I can understand the position, the objection to the system of control has not so much been to the principle of it. It has been very much more to the way in which the control has been administered. It has often been said when you introduce control you are providing room for black marketing. If you did not have a system of control, there would be no incentive for people to drive goods underground and to pass them into the black market. Therefore, if you want to eliminate black marketing you ought to eliminate control. I have heard this argument used over and over again. May I say with great respect that that argument does not really touch the essence of the matter. That argument is generally used by people who, if I may say so, do not see far enough. The real point is this. Whenever you have a law there is bound to be breaches of that law. Crime in a sense is a corollary to law and in the same way black marketing is a corollary to control. If because of black marketing you want to eliminate control, you must just as well argue that because of crime you must eliminate law altogether. Personally, I do not think the argument goes deep enough.

But the real objection which practical people have raised is, that in the way in which control has been administered, it has been administered unfairly to certain groups or sections of the community. It has probably been administered not merely unfairly, but it has been administered ineffectively.

I quite recognise from what examination I have made of the subject of control that it is possible to maintain that in certain respects our administration of control has been ineffective and that it has caused unfairness to certain interests in the country. My reply to that is that whatever unfairness and whatever ineffectiveness there has been in regard to the administration of control, these inconveniences, this unsettlement and dislocation, are things which the Legislature and the country have got to put up with in the larger interests of the country. In all countries control has been difficult to administer satisfactorily. It is particularly difficult in a country like ours, and I will tell you why. In our country we have got to put into operation system of control through an administrative system which has grown up through the years upon a tradition which has been largely negative in character. That is to say, we have at present an administrative organisation built up over a period of years whose main business has been to prevent things being done that is to maintain law and order. It is a police government on the foundation of which you have got to erect a system of regulation rather than prevention. It is going to be a difficult business. But if because of that you are going to surrender the whole principle and system of control, then it seems to me you are choosing a bigger evil in preference to a lesser one.

It is not merely that our administrative system has essentially a negative outlook and is incapable of handling the more positive side of administration with the success which the difficult conditions of today call for. There is another difficulty. After all is said and done, to people who have studied the systems of public administration in different parts of the world one of the most striking things about Indian administration is that the quantum of Indian administration is much smaller than the problems of the country require. The trouble in our country is not so much that we are badly administered as that we are under-administered. It is possible to remedy the under-administration of the country by the institution of an effective system of local self government. Local committees of various kinds with the necessary public spirit and organisation could do a good deal to supplement the deficiencies of administration. There is no doubt about that. In a country like England, I suppose, what makes up for the relative small quantum of administration is the successful local self-governing system they have there. In regard to controls of this kind, it will be a very great help if we could muster sufficient local help to assist the bureaucracy to administer them. But the fact remains that at present we are short of that kind of thing. But, as I said at the beginning, we have got to put up with it for some time to come and all that I can say in reply to these criticisms is this. We are trying in the matter of controls a process of ~~very~~ experimentation. We have not tried this thing before. The fact is that we are proceeding in this matter by trial and error. If Honourable Members have read the note which I circulated along with the Bill, they will find that in many cases we are still groping in the dark.

In regard to the scope of these controls, in some cases it is possible for us with reference to the circumstances of the commodity in question to institute control right from the point of origin to the point of ultimate consumption. In regard to other commodities, we are not in a position to do that and therefore control has got to stop at some intermediate point. It is unsatisfactory to that extent, but the difficulties of the situation have got to be reckoned with. Similarly, if you take the methods of control, they also vary from commodity to commodity. In regard to the very important matter, for example, of the method of pricing, you adopt one method of pricing regarding cloth and you adopt another method of pricing regarding steel and a third in regard to other commodities. The thing cannot be helped. It seems to me that in a matter of this kind, the wisest thing to do is to proceed empirically, that is to say, to proceed by experience. It is only on a basis of actual experience in this very difficult field of organisation that we shall be able ultimately to have a system of control which will be really effective.

Since this Bill, if passed into law, is not likely to last for more than a very limited period, I hope the House will accept my assurance that while we are engaged in this process of experimentation if any complaints and criticisms come from Honourable Members of the House, so long as I am in charge of the Department I will make every effort to see that the complaints and criticisms are adequately met. Every suggestion which Members may make in this matter will be welcomed by Government.

May I conclude on this note? I see that there is an amendment on the paper suggesting that the matter might be referred to a Select Committee. I would beg my Honourable friend not to press his amendment. Considering the terrific inequality that prevails in the country, particularly at present, in the matter of income and purchasing power, and the difficulties and hardships to which the poorer sections of the community might be put unless the Government as the organised expression of community was armed with necessary powers, I feel that when matters of this kind come up before the House, the House, is really on its trial. I think by its attitude to measures of this kind the House will be judged as regards its truly representative character. If I may say so in conclusion, if the attitude of the House is going to be that this Bill, so limited in scope and in its duration, is to be rejected or impeded or delayed, I venture to say very respectfully that it would not merely stultify but condemn itself.

Mr. President: Motion moved.

"That the Bill to provide for the continuance during a lun control the production, supply and distribution of, and trade in commodities be taken into consideration."

May I have the position made clear about the amendments? There are two alternative amendments in the name of Mr. Jaffer.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer (Bombay Southern Divisions Muhammadan Rural). In view of the assurance given by the Honourable Member, I do not wish to move my amendments.

Mr. Leslie Gwilt (Bombay European). Sir, on behalf of the European Group, I support the Motion before the House. I do so with certain reservations to which I shall make reference later, though, I admit that the Honourable Mover in his very lucid speech has dealt with some of the difficulties which I foresaw, but that will not deter me from making further reference to them. I support the Bill because whilst my Group consider that in times where supply and demand are more or less equal factors, the economic life of the country should be unfettered by official interference, nevertheless when there is disparity between these factors of supply and demand, when, because of a short fall in supply, encouragement is given to the individual to exploit his neighbour, then we agree that controls are not only desirable but absolutely essential. If, Sir, there is any Member of the House who would condemn the provisions of this Bill out of hand, I would draw his attention to what happened when the control of steel was removed as early as, I think, April this year, what happened to the supplies that were previously available when that control was removed. But, Sir, as necessary as controls are under the circumstances, I have described, they can only achieve their purpose and bring credit to the administration operating them if such administration is efficient and has clean hands. Is Government confident that its administrative machinery in this respect is efficient and incorruptible? If not then, Sir, I suggest that the whole machinery is overhauled and the sooner it is the better it will be for the good of the country and for the prestige of the Government. While at this juncture, I do not propose to deal with any provisions of the Bill, there are one or two matters to which I would like to draw attention. The tenor of the Bill is, as is described in Clause 1(3), and as the Honourable Member has asserted, the tenor will be as is provided in section 4 of the India (Central Government and Legislature) Act, 1946. Now, Sir, I think that that may have confused some Honourable Members of the House, and I must admit that until I saw this, I did not know that it was an Act of the Imperial Legislature. I think I am correct in saying that my Honourable friend Mr Joshi was in the same ignorant category as myself. The Bill provides that certain things be done under a Notified Order and as clause 2(d) of the definition shows, 'notified order' means an order notified in the official Gazette. Now, Sir the Bill provides for penalties for those who disobey these provisions, and many of the people affected by the Bill will not know what the official Gazette is nor are they likely to understand it if they were to see it, and as it is desirable that good relations should exist between the administration and the persons who will be affected by the provisions of the Bill, many of whom are illiterate, I suggest that directions be given to administrative officers and particularly to subordinate officers who will be in personal contact, particularly with cultivators and producers, that the provisions of the Bill when it is placed on the statute book should be administered intelligently and sympathetically. I make reference to this because many of us who live in Bombay will recollect what I think can justifiably be described as a very stupid action on the part of the Government of Bombay some two or three years ago in regard to returns of foodgrains from grain shops of industrial concerns. The firms that were concerned had, and at some considerable expense to themselves, started grain shops for the benefit of their employees and in a number of instances before official rationing was commenced. When the official rationing orders were passed, individual communications were sent to the firms, giving them various directions as to how the foodgrain returns were to be submitted to Government. Without any warning, the Government abandoned these individual communications and resorted to notified orders. These orders were, of course, issued in the Government Gazette. One of the orders related to the submission of returns weekly instead of monthly as had been the practice heretofore and because a number of firms were unaware of the altered provisions, although they were submitting their returns monthly and with complete accuracy, wholesale prosecutions against managers of foodgrain shops many of them old and respected employees of the companies concerned, were launched, they were brought before the courts and fined. An appeal was subsequently lodged in the High Court and Government was ordered to refund the fines. If that could happen with intelligent people, people who can afford the expense of preferring an appeal what is going to be the lot of illiterate people, producers and cultivators I hope, Sir, that whilst Government will impose with utmost rigour the provisions of the Bill against those who deliberately offend its provisions, they will nevertheless issue orders that intelligence and sympathy is exercised in dealing with such persons as have the spirit to help, but have not got the education to appreciate

In this connection, Sir, may I ask Government whether they will study the provisions of the Australian law which lays down minimum sentences on certain classes of offences and particularly for blackmarket offences. I feel, Sir, that frequently the judiciary impose far too light sentences in case of black-marketing, which after all is an anti-social crime of the most heinous order. Usually it is the small men who are prosecuted, but when the big operators are caught, the sentences they receive are frequently extremely light for very serious offences. As I have said, Sir, with these reservations, I support the Bill.

Mr. Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce) You will notice, Sir, that all of us have put a voluntary restraint on our usual loquacity with regard to Bills, otherwise a Bill of this magnitude would be debated in this House for about five or six days. I congratulate the Honourable Member on not only a very lucid and clear exposition of the problem of controls, but what is much more noticeable, on the very disarming speech from the point of view of Members of the Assembly who are jealous of the powers of this House and who are generally suspicious of wide powers being taken by Government. And, not only, Sir, is the personnel of this Government one which we fully trust, but the particular attitude taken by the Honourable Member on this occasion on this very debatable and big subject is one which as I said is completely disarming and reassuring. He did not, for instance, claim that Government's control measures were all successful. On the contrary he said that it was a matter of trial and error that we must use the empirical method and we must keep on at it until we strike the right note, and that is the only method. The other alternative of abandoning these methods is one which by implication he deprecated and I join in the note. This country has

I. F. M. to make up its mind whether it wants the so-called economic freedom, that is to say, complete economic anarchy, leaving it free for anybody to do anything he likes to anybody else, whether we want economic freedom of this kind internally or whether we want a planned economy, whether we want a state of affairs in which it is for the Government with such assistance as they can get from informed opinion, to lay down which objectives come first, in what priority this country desires to achieve certain results, which is the class most ground down and therefore deserving of the utmost and immediate help. It is in a system of planned economy in which a plan and programme is made as to what must be done here and now in the matter of a few months and what must be done and must be achieved and looked for in a period of five years and ten years. If this country accepts the principle that we shall be dealt with on the basis of a planned economy we must eschew the idea that economic freedom from interference by Government, is the best and proper method of building up the economic life of this country. I do not wish to emphasise the antagonism too much, I am sure planned economy does not mean that Government regulates at what time I shall drink a glass of water and what I shall do at 2 o'clock. Planned economy must imply interference with the people to the extent to which it is considered necessary in the community's interest. And therefore I take it that while Government may arrogate to themselves the powers which they are taking from this, they will not interfere where they are not definitely convinced that it is necessary. On the other hand they must interfere and it is their duty to interfere where they think that but for such interference there will be confusion or there will be exploitation of one particular section or there will be the creation of high prices, which is also a factor that they must keep in mind.

Now, Sir, in the past—and this is an accusation which I have made in this House several times—controls were put very largely in the interests of the allied Governments and of the United Kingdom Government who wanted to buy enormous quantities of goods in this country and in order to see that those goods did not cost them too high. That was—I allege again—the principal objective of the past Government when they put some of these controls. The consumer and the producer came in incidentally. The poor producer did not get anywhere in some cases and the consumer came in incidentally. I will illustrate my point. The producers of tea got 5½ to 8 annas per pound when the world price was 6 to 8 rupees, the producer of rubber missed the world market and his goods were taken away at 12 annas when the world price was Rs. 10, today again rubber has fallen to 14 annas. In other words, the controls were there, as I said, in the interests not only of the bulk purchases by our Government which would be justifiable, but also in the bulk purchases by foreign Governments not only for army purposes but for their civil populations. Now, therefore, I would urge on this Government to use these controls with discrimination and see whether it is necessary to use them in the interests of the producer and in the interests of the consumer and lastly—the most dominant consideration—to see whether they must be used in the interests of the community as a whole.

Now, Sir, the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies has not claimed a very marked success for these control measures in the past, and we only trust that the measures taken hereafter in peace time, with less distraction from military urgencies and so on, will function better. In particular I would emphasise the same point that my Honourable friend Mr. Gwillt emphasised that the human machinery should be overhauled. I have always advocated, and I have found it as a mistake of the past administration, that when important and delicate points like these controls came, they did not use their trusted and tried old employees but recruited new staff for this purpose, which was a stupid mistake. They should have put their old employees who were in Government service or ten or twenty years and had a good record. They should have put these old and tried and trusted servants in charge of these delicate matters, instead of which what they did was to recruit ad hoc for this purpose. Whoever came was taken in, he was given wide powers and there was a continuous racket. I may point out a racket which has happened in this connection. The inspectors of this department are going round the market finding out cases where there is a small technical breach of the kind that my Honourable friend Mr. Gwillt referred to. In that particular case I suppose the inspector did not get something from the firms which did not put in weekly returns instead of monthly returns, and in other cases it has become an absolute racket and a vested interest with these inspectors to go round and say, "Look here I have found you doing this and I am going to put you up." But I will come day after tomorrow, you think it over and let me know." In the meanwhile the party thinks it over and says it is worth while giving him a hundred rupees so that he may overlook this small and in many cases purely technical breach which has occurred. This is the human machinery which I am mentioning, and I again commend the suggestion which I have made, namely, that Government should have for this inspectorate staff not new persons whom they have picked up from the sort of men available in the general labour pool of the so-called educated population of this country. It is this particular set which has disgraced the education which they have received and this has been so widespread throughout the country that we are bound to commend to the Honourable Member that while using the powers which he is asking the House to give him he will look into this particular subject. Sir, I was told by a resident of Delhi who is not at the moment in the gallery, that an inspector of gur in this place who is getting a salary of Rs. 100 per month has built three houses in three years. That is the human machinery they have got. I therefore say that for these places please pick out the best of your civil servants—I do not mean the I.C.S.—the best of your other servants who had a good record in the past and who are proud of their reasonable service and who will not demean themselves to the extent these men are doing. These men are only squeezing out all advantages to themselves during the period for which they are inspectors, and they expect definitely to be dismissed in due course.

[Mr. Manu Subedar]

In the meantime they want to make what they can. Now he is asking for the same powers—not excessive powers,—and he is asking them for a short time and as an experiment, in the sense that the whole system is one which is in constant process of adjustment. I would suggest another thing, namely, that the information as to the requirements of the public concerned may be spread through the Chambers of Commerce and also on the functioning of each control, and a report may be sent for, or some authority or body concerned with the department may go round the country and meet the Chambers of Commerce people and see whether they have got to say anything about the operation of a particular kind of control and if they have got any suggestions to make.

Then, Sir, in regard to the control in this country we have to see what is happening in other countries. We have this difficulty. As the Honourable Member said, we had a negative administration in the past. Previous Governments were more concerned with just the control of law and order and they did not mind what happens to the chickens in the chicken coop or what happens to sardines in the box. They did not mind what happened to any particular layer of society or population. That is not so with this Government. The greater the weakness of a particular set, the bigger is their obligation to help them.

The only other point on which I would like to detain this House for a minute more topsyturvy than the marked in attention of this Government to longer is with regard to the effect on prices. Sir, there is nothing the state of general level of prices in this country. Our general level of prices is 300 per cent or more than pre-war and in America and England the level is only 147 and 174. The House has heard that President Truman is removing all controls over prices and wages, and people are expecting two consequences—one is that certain prices will tumble down as soon as the controls are removed, and in other cases the expectation is that as soon as the controls are removed, certain prices will go up. I understand both these things can happen. I want our Government also to see to the course of prices of controlled articles. More particularly may I refer to the case of building materials. There is a pent up demand for the last four years and if there was no control over steel and cement or other articles, the prices will soar up very high. In such cases what is needed is consumers' priority so that there may be an orderly disposal of such quantities which are available and the guarantee that these quantities which are available do not fall into the hands of the middlemen because the direct consumer is there ready and willing to take it from you and to pay for it in advance. Therefore, Sir, it is necessary to fix priorities, to eliminate middlemen with regard to these commodities which are definitely declared to be short, and it is necessary to regulate the orderly disposal of such commodities as we have got. I would, Sir, ask the Honourable Member in charge of Industries and Supplies not merely to take the control issue in the departmental sense in which unfortunately all our affairs are,—the control issue does not concern him alone—it is the concern also of the Finance Member, it is the concern of the Minister of Food and Agriculture, and so on,—and to see the general trend of prices. Have this Government any deflationary measures already in mind? Have they declared any? Have they thought out what deflationary measures should be taken in order that the general level of prices may fall? If you do not take those deflationary measures, then I submit, that this control proposition will be a permanent thing and it would be very harmful to this country. Therefore, I suggest that the matter should not be thought out compartmentally, but should be taken as a whole and I suggest that the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies should go into the issue which he thoroughly well understands, I am sure, as to what deflationary measures should be taken generally which would affect all prices and which will also incidentally affect the prices of the articles controlled.

Sir, I support the motion.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock.
Mr President (the Honourable Mr G V Mavalankar) in the Chair

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non Official) Mr President, while supporting the motion that this Bill be taken into consideration I do not wish to speak much about the necessity of continuing the control. The Honourable Member in charge of the Department of Industries and Supplies has spoken so well on this subject that I do not think I shall be able to add much in support of his measure.

My justification in rising on this occasion is that in the first place I want to express my dissatisfaction that the Government of India removed prematurely many of the controls which were in my judgment still necessary and deprived themselves of powers which they should not have done.

Sir, if you watch the trend of prices in this country, you will easily find that the prices in this country are still rising. The Honourable Member in charge of Industries and Supplies admitted that there still exists inflation in this country. I watch very carefully the cost of living index for the working classes. The index has reached 270 points, more than 25 or even 30 points than what it was at the time of the end of the war. I therefore feel that the Government of India was not justified in removing the controls which they had removed. My special complaint is that they allowed to lapse the Hoarding and Profiteering Prevention Ordinance. That ordinance in my judgment, Mr. President, was absolutely necessary, even at this time, and Government has done a great deal of wrong to the people of this country, especially the poorer sections of the people of this country, by removing the powers which they possessed to deal with hoarding and profiteering. I also feel that the Government of India should have before they removed these controls, and before they divested themselves of these powers, consulted the Legislature on this point. But they have failed to do their duty by the Legislature in not consulting it before removing these controls and divesting themselves of these powers.

I feel, Sir, that the Government of India has failed to do what they should have done. Now, Sir, I am glad that they are bringing forward this Bill and giving an opportunity to this Legislature to consider this question and taking advantage of this Bill, I would like to make some suggestions to the Government of India.

Sir, the controls are necessary and I am glad that the Honourable Member agreed that these controls are necessary. If these controls are to be useful, these controls must be effectively used and applied. The Honourable Member in charge of Industries and Supplies agreed with that also. I want also to suggest that these controls should be fairly used. The Honourable Member also agreed with that. I feel, Sir, although the Honourable Member has agreed with these principles, that these controls should be effectively applied and there should be no discrimination and unfairness. I would like to draw the attention of the Honourable Member to the fact that as the controls at present exist, they are used ineffectively and there is also a great deal of discrimination.

As regards the effectiveness, we were told that there are difficulties in the way of effectively applying these measures. I would like the Honourable member to remember that although there are difficulties it is for the Government to overcome those difficulties. You certainly require an honest staff and you require the co-operation of the public as the Honourable Member has stated. But it is not beyond the power of the Government to employ good, efficient and honest staff. You may have to pay more and Government should not hesitate to pay the staff whatever is due to them. If you pay your staff well, I think it is possible for you to get good effective, efficient and honest staff.

In the matter of the controls being fairly used, it depends upon the Government of India themselves not to make any discrimination. I do not wish to go into the details of these controls, but one can easily see that the Government of India is afraid of the richer section of the population and they easily do injustice to the poorer people. They are willing to put restrictions on the poorer sections but they are prepared to let go the richer classes. Take sugar; sugar control is absolutely necessary. He agrees with it. Why then exempt the lump sugar? Is there the least justification for exempting lump sugar? The excuse given is that the lump sugar is a separate industry. You have to have one or two more machines in order to make lumps out of the sugar. That may be an excuse but it is not one which can really be accepted. The object was clear, vis, that the richer sections of society should have sufficient sugar to eat while the poorer sections should not have. It is not a different kind of industry that required encouragement. The object was that the richer classes should have enough sugar by paying more. I understand that the cubes cost much more than ordinary sugar but they are uncontrolled. This is only a small instance of what I consider to be discrimination.

I may even give you another small instance of this kind of discrimination. Take newsprint, for example. I see that newspapers, especially the influential daily newspapers, publish every day large numbers of pages full of advertisements. I cannot understand why all these advertisements are necessary when newsprint is so very scarce. But if it is a question of some small paper then the control applies and they will hesitate to give sanction for even a small increase in quota. I am not making a complaint which I have to make on the floor of this House but the instance comes to my mind very easily. I have a small paper called The Trade Union Worker, which is only 8 or 10 pages of a small size. The number of trade unions which are interested in this paper has increased and on account of the various kinds of legislation which are coming before the legislature I asked that a few more pages be added. It takes a long time for Government to give me sanction to increase those pages. It would almost require a few more pounds of newsprint, not even a few maunds or tons of paper. I am not suggesting that the control is unnecessary. I have pleaded for controls and therefore I do not want to be exempt from these controls but I want fairness. If you can spare large amounts of paper, tons of paper, for these influential dailies, which contain a very large amount of advertisement, then certainly small papers which are useful to a very large number of people should be treated fairly at least. They should not be starved for want of paper.

As regards newsprint, compare India with England. The English newspapers are much smaller even today than the Indian papers. I do not wish to dwell on that point but this is also, another example of discrimination.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Are there any Diwali and Pujā Numbers in England?

Mr N. M. Joshi: There are many such things but I do not want to waste the time of the House. Those who have influence get more paper and those who have not, find it difficult to get the paper necessary.

The Government is also not fair in the application of these controls. They give, I think, too much freedom to the provinces. I shall give you instance of my province decontrolling things when there was absolutely no justification. In my own province gur has been decontrolled with the result that the poorer people in my province are paying today twice the price for gur, while sugar has become practically cheaper than gur. This is the way in which controls have been applied. I would like therefore that the Honourable Member should take very vigorous steps to see that the controls which he is applying are effectively used, fairly used and not too much latitude is given to provinces or to different interests. I am glad that the Honourable Member in theory at least agrees with me in all these matters but he will have to take more vigorous steps to see that the controls are properly used. I am not saying this to plead that if he cannot do this he should remove the controls. That is not my standpoint. I quite realise that in spite of his best efforts the Honourable Member may not succeed in removing all the complaints which we have regarding the controls. I would certainly have controls with some inefficiency and with some defects rather than have no controls at all. I know it is said that controls lead to bribery and corruption among public servants. I would certainly like honest public servants to be in charge of these controls and in view of that I would like the Government of India to pay its servants much more, especially because they have to overcome very large temptations. Let the public servants be paid more and let Government see to it that they get honest service. What those who speak about corruption and bribery of public servants want is that they should profiteer. So I want to make it clear to the Honourable Member that I would like to have controls in spite of a little corruption and bribery which may exist, because I feel that if there is bribery and corruption the public servants may take away some money and it may not be good for the morale of the public services in this country.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadan Rural)
That is a redistribution of wealth!

Mr. N. M. Joshi If there is control the public servants may take away some money but if there is no control then private merchants and private capitalists may take away ten times more. Therefore if I were to make a choice between allowing the merchants and capitalists to exploit the people and having some corrupt public servants, I would prefer corrupt public servants to allowing the capitalists to exploit the masses to a ten times greater extent.

One point which my Honourable friend Mr. Mannu Subedar referred to is this and in that connection I would like to ask the Honourable Minister in charge of Industries and Supplies for some information. Mr. Mannu Subedar stated that in view of the fact that we are going to have planned economy these controls are necessary and I have no doubt that the country as a whole wants planned economy. We do not want to leave the development of this country to chances and to the goodwill and efforts of private capitalists and private enterprise without any plan. But it is quite clear that if we are going to have planned economy we shall require controls. I want to know from the Honourable Member in charge of Industries and Supplies whether he is making any provision for applying controls where they are necessary on account of our introducing a planned system of economy. I learn from the newspapers that the Government of India have appointed a committee over which my Honourable and esteemed friend Mr. Neogy is to preside, to prepare a plan in two months time for a planned development of this country. If Mr. Neogy is preparing a report in two months time for a planned economy, certainly the Government must be prepared to impose the necessary controls within two months time. I want to know what are the plans of the Government of India in, not only for continuing these controls—because mere continuance will not be sufficient for a planned economy—I want to know what they are doing in taking those powers to exercise controls over the whole of the economy, if we are going to have a planned development. So far as I can understand this legislation, I am told that the Government of India have got power to continue these controls for a year; they may get power again to continue it for a year more, but the power will not exist beyond five years, and then, within this period, the Government of India can by notification remove these controls. I am anxious that the Government of India, if they have no power today, should take steps to secure those powers. If the powers are to be given to them by Parliament—if within a short time we do not get a really independent government and if unfortunately the powers are to be given by Parliament—I would like the Government of India to get from Parliament those powers to not only continue these controls but to apply new controls wherever the application of new controls is necessary. This Bill gives them the power to continue the controls, but they have already decontrolled many articles. I want to ask the Government of India what power they possess to reimpose those controls which they have removed, and if they have got no power to reimpose those controls which they have removed, I want to know what they are going to do to secure power to reimpose controls which they have in my judgment wrongly removed. I want the Government of India to consider this question very seriously and very urgently, because I feel that if we neglect this problem of control the whole economy will be in a state of chaos.

suffer, and in that suffering the suffering of the poor people will be greater. That is what concerns me more. Therefore, while approving and supporting the measure which is before this legislature, I would like the Government of India in the first place, not to commit the mistake which they have committed before, namely, removing these controls prematurely, secondly, removing these controls without consulting the legislature. If any controls which are to be continued by this Bill are to be removed, I would like the Honourable Member in charge of Industries and Supplies to promise us today and to give us an assurance that these controls will not be removed without the sanction of the legislature, without at least consulting the legislature. That assurance I want. I also want an assurance from the Government of India that they will exercise these controls thoroughly and vigorously, impartially, without any discrimination, and fairly.

Lastly I want the Government of India to assure me that in view of the fact that we are going to have a planned economy soon, what steps they are going to take to secure those powers of exercising control which are necessary for making a planned development successful. I support this Bill.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Sir, in spite of the very bitter and bad experience of control regime during the course of the last seven years, I support the Bill that has been introduced and is now for consideration before this House. My main reason is that I see no other alternative before me. If the controls are removed I see nothing but black marketing infact all marketing gone and economic anarchy succeeding. In that case what will happen will be that things will go underground and consequently famine will be the order of the day, the rich will get everything and the poorer sections of the community will have to go without most of the things which they feel essential for the maintenance of their lives. Under a controlled system, however badly it may be worked, as I said just now to the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill privately, there is some hope for some people at some time to get something somewhere. On that hope I lay great stress.

Now, I want to tell the House that in certain matters at least, the Government should not decontrol anything by mere notification, unless as Mr Joshi said they consult this House previously and they are also convinced that as a result of decontrol the poorer sections of the community will not suffer. The great Chinese philosopher Confucius was once asked by the Chinese king as to what were the tests of a good government, and the philosopher said that if there is sufficient food and sufficient clothing and a belief that justice will be done, then it is a good government. I am not today referring to the last, but I do want that this government will at least answer the first two tests and give sufficient food and sufficient clothing to every citizen in this country. As regards food, during the last three or four years there has been some sort of system, and although there is much to complain about, speaking for myself, if there had been no rationing in my city, at least I and my family would have been starved to death absolutely. For I remember in the year 1942 beginning, I just wanted to purchase a few seers of wheat, I visited three shops and they gave me three different quotations. I tried the experiment three times in the course of the day and none talked with the other. But since the rationing system was established, it may not be a balanced diet as was enunciated by my friend Mr Masani, but anyway I am getting at least half a pound of rice a week and a little more by way of wheat, jowari, bajra somehow or other, and most of us can keep our bodies and souls together.

As regards cloth, you will remember that during the discussion on the Finance Bill, when I and most of the members of our party complained against the abolition of the Excess Profits Tax and I asked a specific question of the Finance Member then, whether on the removal of the Excess Profits Tax, the prices of cloth would be reduced, and his answer was that the manufacturers or the millowners themselves in their own interests would do it. Our experience during the past six months has been very different and very bitter. You will be surprised to know that this textile industry has made profits beyond expectations. If the rate of profit in 1928 is considered 100, the increase has been 761 per cent during 1943-44. Who has suffered as a result of this? Even today, if we closely scrutinise the system under which cloth is distributed, it is the consumer who suffers. The millowners get all they want, and if the Honourable Member in charge were to scrutinise the cost schedule he would find that sometimes the same item is included three times. I am prepared to give him such information, because I am not in the habit of making any statement unless it is well documented. They have been successful in getting the ear of the Government always whenever it is a question of raising the prices. The poor consumer and every one of us is a consumer, although every one is not a producer or a trader, but the pity is that every one of us does not stand up to the situation and frankly speak out what we feel.

In the scheme of control there is practically no limit on profits. If food, if clothing is an article of necessity, without which nobody can live, I think I will be voicing the inmost feelings of most of us that the whole of the industry should be taken over by the Government here and now. It is the primary duty of the Government to feed its citizens and clothe them and if there is the slightest failure in that sphere I think it is a condemnation of the Government. It would have been otherwise if it was the same old government which functioned before a few months. Now that the Government is a popular government with the backing of the people's representatives, whatever may be the form, much is expected of it. I think they have had enough of what is called 3 P M in England the honeymoon period—enough of it. They can now come down to brass tacks and at least secure us two things which are absolutely essential for human life, namely, enough food and enough clothing.

Now, Sir, the history of control in so far as this poor country is concerned is one of sadness. It comes late. During the time it remains, it is operated. I do not suggest to say deliberately, objectively to the detriment of poorer sections of the community. Then it goes all of a sudden with the result, as has been stated in the very fine note that has been kindly supplied to us by the Honourable Member, that things go out of the market. Cement has gone. In whatever articles we have followed this policy of sudden decontrolling the result has been not what you contemplated. In the budget session during the discussion on the Finance Bill, the Finance Member was good enough to tell us that if houses were built in the course of these two years, their income would not be taken into consideration for the purpose of income tax but where is the material to build. Iron sheets are not available. Iron bars you cannot get although in order to get it you have to spend stationery worth Rs. 20. Cement, you yourself agree, is not there. About non-ferrous metal, after the control is over, it is the same tale. I therefore respectfully submit that this Bill is an attempt let there be no apology for that, to start some control. Some well thought out scheme of control. I would request the Honourable Member boldly to say that this is the first attempt to introduce what may be called a regulatory regime leading ultimately to planned economy. Let him not be apologetic. Let him say boldly, and he will have the verdict of the House in his favour, that the country as a whole stands for nationalisation of most of the industries, at any rate those which concern the necessities of life and this Bill will prepare the way.

Now, Sir, I want to say one thing more, because I do not want to take a long time of the House, for I believe that there must be control of one's speech also. One thing I want to bring to the notice of the Honourable Member. We all stand for democracy. I do not believe merely in association of the people's representatives during one stage, namely, the stage of the formulation of the policy. I want him to see that the negative aspect of the bureaucracy that he emphasized today disappears and it assumes a positive social service aspect. That is possible by means of a well thought out system of distribution in which the people's representatives even in the smallest village could be associated, so that much of the middlemen's profits and much of the possibility of black marketing would be removed. Just imagine for one minute as to how many middlemen there are between a mill and the actual consumer and one would find that at least half of them are absolutely unnecessary, except for the fact that at one stage of our country's history or in the history of that particular industry they were there. They are playing no useful function. In fact they are playing anti social role if, Mr. President, you will permit me to use that expression. You are well aware how things are happening in the city from which you are elected. Therefore if the controlled economy is to be successful, it can only be successful if there is co-operation of the people. It does not mean that everything is to be left to the permanent official. In fact the attempt so far has been to put new wine in old bottles. The consumers never counted in the past. He must pay whatever he is asked to pay. Who approaches the officers—the merchants and the middlemen who want to get some permits here and there and if there is any source of corruption of the worst type, it is the trader who is so anxious to get a permit and having got it is very much anxious to sell it to another. If corruption is to be removed, it can only be removed by the co-operation of the people and not otherwise. It is really most shameful for every one of us to refer every now and then to corruption among our officials—our merchants and so on. In fact, it virtually comes to this that the bulk of the community is corrupt. I only wish that this thing should be a matter of history. We are now entering a new order of things and let the services also understand that whatever may have been their outlook up till now they are servants of the people. I remember one of the greatest Englishmen said that the ideal of public service should be integrity, industry and anonymity. Nobody can put it higher than that. I only wish this. So far they have been extremely loyal, even going out of their way, to a Government which was foreign in personnel and in spirit. Now, they have a Government entirely Indian in personnel and in spirit. Would it be too much of them to say that they will rise up to the occasion, will be less bureaucratic, less given to red tape, more prompt to hear the grievances of the people and will show to the world that here in India they have a service which is absolutely incorruptible and claims the confidence and respect of the people? I therefore submit that the task that lies ahead for the Honourable Member is not merely to control but during the three or four or five years during which this order as it is embodied in this Bill stands he will evolve such a spirit in the services and such a spirit in the public that ultimately the inauguration of planned economy will be easier. With these words, I support the motion.

Mr. Tamiruddin Khan (Dacca cum Mymensingh Muhammadan Rural) Mr. President, I must congratulate the Honourable Member for Industries on the happy position that he enjoys today. His Bill, controversial as it is, is going to be passed without any opposition. That is certainly a happy position. But we, some elected Members, are not in such a happy position. Our position is rather unenviable because the people whom we represent are fed up with these controls. They want an immediate withdrawal of all controls. That is the opinion of the man in the street. If I may tell the House about a demand that was made of me by a section of the people who sent me here, it was that the controls must be abolished as early as possible.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) They are all wrong.

Mr. Tamiruddin Khan: I am not giving my views, but their views. We shall have to satisfy these people about the necessity of these controls. Our position is not, therefore, as happy as that of the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill. Again, our position has been made all the more difficult on account of two factors. One was the public pronouncement made by the predecessor of the Honourable Member, I mean Mr. Rajagopalachariar who in a speech that he delivered some time ago said that the day was not perhaps far off when there will be an end of these controls. The people about whom I have already spoken looked upon that pronouncement with a good deal of hope but they are going to be disappointed. Again, we see that in America, as a result of the last elections which have sent the Republicans in a majority in both the Chambers of the American Legislature, the controls are going to be abolished. The world has become so narrow nowadays that the happenings in America also will have their own repercussions in our own country. That is also another disquieting circumstance. But I admit that controls in our country cannot be given up at the present stage. The controls are a necessary evil. Abolish the control of foodstuffs today and there will be famine the next week. There is no doubt about that. The two classes of people whose interests are otherwise mutually antagonistic will co-operate to bring about a famine. They are the wealthy consumers and the profiteers. Wealthy consumers will be in a panic and there will be a scramble to purchase and the profiteers will have their day. These two will co-operate to make a famine sure if the control of foodstuff is abolished. Therefore, controls will have to remain unfortunately. But I do not agree with my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi that there should be more control than there is at present and also that the controls that have been abolished should be re-imposed. Of course there may be some reason which has guided him to make that statement but I would submit that the controls being a necessary evil should be gradually abolished. If we are to swim back to the shore of normality, we shall have to go into the water. Therefore in certain respects we shall have to take risks. But those risks must not be of a character fatal to the existence of the community. Gradually these controls will have to be abolished and they should be abolished last of all on foodstuffs, cloth and perhaps coal. Other controls may be abolished earlier. How that will be done is not an easy task. My Honourable friend Mr. Manu Shetkar has said that it will be the duty of the Government to see that the present state of inflation is properly tackled, and that there should be deflation. Everyone agrees that there should be deflation, but how to bring that about is a very difficult question. As my Honourable friend Mr. Manu Shetkar has raised this question I would like to sound a note of warning.

There are people who think that in order to bring about deflation, foodgrains should be touched first of all. The prices of foodgrains they urge should be reduced, and if that is done all other prices will be reduced automatically and correspondingly. Whatever logic there may be in that I think it will be too risky a business. You may bring about deflation, if you do that but you may also bring about an end of our country if you thoughtlessly tackle the prices of foodgrains in that way, because we are still short of foodstuffs and it is the endeavour of the Government and also of everyone else to see that more foodstuffs are grown in the country. The one incentive to grow more foodstuffs is the incentive of good prices and it must be ensured that the cultivator gets proper prices for his products. If the prices of other things remain as they are and the prices of foodstuffs are reduced, the cultivator will find himself in a very difficult position. He will not have the incentive to grow more food, he will not even grow that much food that he normally does. He will only probably grow what he requires for his own needs and nothing more. That is a warning which I should like to give to the Government. But, as I have already said, it is a vicious circle and we have to begin somewhere. Where to begin and how to begin is a matter which will task the ingenuity of the present Government. There is no doubt about that.

Sir, I think that one way of tackling this problem was for the Government to take as much out of the floating money in the country as possible. But is the Government doing that? I think the late Government, instead of doing that, took rather a reverse step. I refer to the abolition of the excess profits tax. I do not think that that was the proper time to abolish that tax. Whether it will be possible to re-impose it or not, I do not know, because the people who were affected by that tax are so influential that I am afraid they will see that there is no re-imposition of a tax like that. But I am definitely of opinion that the abolition of that tax was a blunder. If the Government could accumulate as much money out of the floating money in the country in its own hands and then distribute it that would have been one way of tackling the present inflation. Look at our low paid Government servants. How can they make both ends meet

[Mr Tamizuddin Khan]

No doubt you have given them dearness allowance, but having regard to the fact that prices have gone up by 300 per cent, have you given them enough in the shape of dearness allowance? Certainly not. If the proceeds of the excess profits tax could have been set apart for increasing the pay of the low paid Government officers, that would have been perhaps one way of tackling the problem. However, this is a thing which is too difficult for a lay man to deal with and we shall look at the efforts of the present Government with anxiety so far as this difficult matter is concerned.

There is only one other thing that I should like to refer to. Many of the provisions of the Bill affect the activities of the Provincial Governments. Before this Bill was introduced I do not know whether it will be possible for the Government of India to consult the Provincial Governments. It would have been far better if Government could consult them previously. However, if even after the Bill is passed the Government of India can consult the Provincial Governments concerned before they take decisions that will be desirable from all points of view. So I support the motion.

Shri D. P. Karmarkar (Bombay Southern Division Non-Muhammadian Rural) Sir, I do not wish to discuss the principle underlying the controls or the history of the operation of these controls during war time. Such a study would be extremely fascinating from the legal point of view, but the problem which confronts us is one which is very difficult of solution. If on the one hand Government try to move with the times and reduce the number of controls to the minimum it is naturally accused of neglecting the interests of the public by decontrolling articles which should not be decontrolled. If on the other hand they continue to exercise control it extends the period of suspense under which the country has naturally to suffer after the period of the war. Therefore it is, I think, that Government have restricted themselves to the minimum number of commodities to be controlled and that also as the Honourable Member in charge has made it clear they want to have for a minimum period in the first instance, namely one year after the end of hostilities, which means—if I am correct—till the 30th April.

Now Sir, when we are considering the question of controls, it is obvious that we have to consider it from the point of view of the effect of such controls on the country. There can be no difference of opinion that owing to conditions created by the war, controls are an absolute necessity. There is also another question to be taken into consideration and that is the method of operation of these controls. To my mind one of the most important aspects of these controls is this,—what is the effect of these continued controls on the poor man and the man belonging to the lower classes? In so far as these two sections are concerned, I think the heaviest burden has fallen on their shoulders during the period of the war and during this period which has succeeded the war. Taxes have come without number, most of them falling on the poor and the lower middle classes. Then again owing to the abnormality of the war things have been scarce, food has been dearer, cloth also has been dearer and sometimes not available. The poor man and the lower middle class man as a result of conditions created during the war are today suffering an agony which is perhaps very easily conceivable. A man with a budget of less than Rs 100 is today not yet free from the sufferings created by the war, if at all, as the rising price indices show he is suffering more after the war than he did during the war. And when such a thing is there and when so many other complicated problems require solution, though perhaps they are not admissible of a very easy or immediate solution like the question of sterling balances and inflated currency, other financial factors, it is perhaps cloth—I put foodstuffs first because that is a daily and hourly necessity and cloth comes next—Government should find out some way or other by which to effect an artificial reduction. I call it artificial because naturally they cannot afford to sell a thing for less than what they have paid for it, but if they can by some measure effect a substantial reduction—say about 25 per cent—in the price of foodstuffs in the case of the poor and lower middle classes such relief would come very handy and would be a very great relief indeed. With the change from an irresponsible Government to a national Government the one thing that people are looking forward to and the one thing by which the ordinary man in the street will judge this Government is the price of foodstuffs in the country. And in that matter I venture to suggest as an experiment for a limited period—six months or a year—the grant of a certain kind of subsidy to the consumer by working out a scheme which I am told was practised in the U P under which certain things were available at a reduced price for people drawing a certain income below a particular margin. If that experiment were tried and the price of rice, wheat and gur could be reduced by a certain percentage in the case of certain classes of the population and the deficit borne by Government as a general charge on the revenues, that surely would be a step which after all the turmoil and the agony suffered by the poorer classes of the population during the war would be very highly appreciated. The indices supplied to us as average indices, but in particular areas things are otherwise. For instance, in an important commercial place in my constituency in the Bombay province, gram which was selling at Rs 1-13 per maund in the pre-war days was in 1944 selling at the rate of Rs 12 a maund. Gram and pulses are some of the things which have almost disappeared from the market. If that is the condition the Government of India should be able to take steps to see that such of the commodities as are rare in a particular area are supplied in that area from another surplus area. Take coconuts for instance. Many of us may not feel or even know what a coconut costs in these days. But coconuts which used to cost anything between Rs 15 and Rs 20 per thousand today stand at the fabulous price of Rs 180 per thousand. The poor or lower middle class man in whose diet coconut occupies a small but important place would find it absolutely impossible to go to the bazar and buy a coconut at six or eight annas each.

Then, Sir, according to the latest trade bulletin issued by a department of the Government of India we find that gur has become scarce. In fact when gur used to cost less in manufacture than sugar it was more popular than sugar with the poor and lower middle classes. Anomalous as it may appear, today in the constituency I represent gur is priced if at all it is available at four times the price of sugar, and with regard to gur there was a anomalous see-saw. The Bombay Government put a control on gur to see that it can be purchased at some normal price, but immediately the control was established gur disappeared from the market altogether to quarters which are known but cannot be traced. And then we find people clamouring and urging upon Government to remove the control because they wanted plenty of gur though at a higher price. Now in regard to gur which is a daily necessity with the poorer classes conditions should not arise which make it difficult to obtain it at all or obtain it at a reasonable price. With regard to all these matters I think the House and Government should see that the poor man's lot is made better than it is. Then, with regard to cloth, I am not a statistician but this much I have come to know from a layman's point of view that if the cloth that is manufactured in the mills were to be made fully available to the consumer things would not be as bad as they are today. And very likely one of the leakages occurs not inland but in the coast line. A merchant in my constituency was complaining that much of the cloth that goes to the southern Bombay area goes out by the minor ports to some foreign parts. And very recently a merchant offered to sell back cloth worth about Rs 80,000 at Malwan a negligible port, for a loss. He had bought it with the idea of sending it to East Africa but failed and he wanted to make it available to any other merchant who would purchase it, even at 10 per cent loss. Now Sir, with regard to cloth, one method out of this vicious situation would be this

[Shri D P Karmarkar]

I may be extreme in my suggestion. But I suppose big national issues require big decisions also. If the craze for finer qualities of cloth is made less by education or else by non-production, I think the quantity of cloth required for the poorer and middle class population would be more and more available. Connected with the question of cloth is the question of transport. Cloth that has been allotted to South Bombay presidency still lies in Bombay, because of some reason or other, cloth refuses to move out of Bombay. According to the rules framed I speak subject to correction, after a certain period, the wholesale dealer in the Bombay City can make my sale whatever if the cloth that has been allotted to a particular area remains in Bombay city itself owing to reasons beyond his control. That leads to leakage.

The next commodity under control is paper. I really wonder whether there is any necessity for control of paper. Any control these days ought to be restricted to any commodity the absence of which would be a very great hardship to the consumer. Assuming, as we are told, that paper controls remain as they were before, any man in the end of India wishing to manufacture an exercise book would have to write to New Delhi or come up here. Any publisher who had the misfortune of being born in the publishing trade after 1942, the basic year, would have very little chance of getting any permission at all. Then again with regard to newspaper, there is a recurring complaint on behalf of new venturesome would be newspaper publishers that the present control with regard to newsprint is virtually a monopoly in the interest of people who are already there in the field. With regard to all these matters, I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member in charge to see to it that he keeps control to a minimum, to see whether some rules could not be relaxed. For instance—keeping control with regard to publication of text books which certainly are a necessity for the whole population—whether the rules relating to a publisher before 1942 could not be relaxed. A copy of a representation has been sent to me, obviously it was originally addressed to the Honourable Member for Industries and Civil Supplies sent from a responsible Association of Publishers of Dharwar. I find there are various suggestions in it which are very useful. I will not repeat those suggestions to the Honourable Member, as he has invited us to take up these matters with him. I will not deal with them extenso on the floor of the House. Finally I think that even for the short period for which these controls are to be in existence it would be better from the point of view of minimising any possible defect in the working of these controls to set up in the first instance a type of central non-official advisory committee and to have its replica in the provinces and in each of the districts just as we have got food supply advisory committees right through the provinces and in the districts also. It would serve a good purpose if such committees are set up with the definite object of bringing to the Government's notice any possible defects in the working of these things. One of the defects certainly in the working of the present controls especially during the war time was—it was a huge joke in which we were indulging in—if a big man broke the law, he would be acquitted on some legal flaw or in the last resort under Rule 119 of the Defence of India Rules under which a certain notification had to be published. The result is that most of the major offenders could with impunity take wagon loads of corn from one district to another and would escape the clutches of the law, whereas the law is so vigilant as in the case which I know of, namely a lady taking two seers of jowar for Nagapanchami. She innocently brought two seers jowar to the market to prepare jowar-flour and she was hauled up for infringing the law. It would behove the Government to see that the law was not brought into such disrepute by indulging in such frivolous prosecutions. The law should descend very heavily on major offenders, but it should not drag small technical offenders like the lady I mentioned just now into court. That is all I have to say by way of suggestions. I have still a number of other suggestions which I shall take up with the Honourable Member and I have no doubt that in view of the assurance and in view of the approach he has made in regard to this question, he will consider very sympathetically all suggestions put by us Sir, I support the Bill

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Leader of the House) Sir, we are anxious to dispose of as much as possible of the legislative business included in the current list in the course of the present session. We have also certain supplementary demands in respect of General and Railway Budgets to be placed before the House. In the circumstances, I request you, Sir, to direct the House to sit for the transaction of official business on Monday, the 18th November. We do not in any event propose to ask for further sittings after that date.

Mr. President: I take it that there is no objection to that from any side. The House will sit on Monday, the 18th instant.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadian Rural) Is it enough Sir?

Mr. President: Perhaps that will depend upon the length of the speeches that Honourable Members will make. If they shorten the speeches it would be enough to sit on Monday only.

ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES (TEMPORARY POWERS) BILL—contd

Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division Non-Muhammadian) Sir, I listened with great attention to the speech of the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies. I have no hesitation in saying that in so far as the question of controls of essential supplies are concerned there is no disagreement in the House. But all the same, I would have been happy if this Bill was referred to a Select Committee and the objectionable features of the Bill were removed. I sent in a number of amendments to this Bill, by post but unfortunately, it appears they have not been received in the office. I would request you, Sir, to kindly allow these amendments to come before the House. Sir, I, for one, am in agreement with most of the speakers who have preceded me in thinking that these controls are necessary in the interest of the poor people as well as in the interest of the big people. They are a necessary evil. What I feel is this, that in the working of these controls there has been much harassment of the general public. So much so that the public in general are tired of these. We expected that with the cessation of the war, or at least six months after the cessation, controls would be removed. It appears that the condition of the country even now is such that some emergency controls are still necessary. I do not want to cite before the House many illustrations how these controls have worked harshly on the people. I happen to be a legal practitioner and I have done many cases under the Defence of India Act. I have found that in many cases innocent people have been sent to jail, and many guilty people have got away from the meshes of this law by hook or crook. There is so much corruption rampant in the country. In all my life I have never seen the public servant so dishonest and corrupt as he is today. The operation of the Defence of India Act has not contributed a little to this state of affairs. So far as the clauses in the Bill are concerned I find that there is control not only over foodstuffs, but there is control over procedure of courts and of justice also. Those who practice law know how justice is throttled in various ways. I may cite certain examples. But before I do so, I wish to refer to section 15 of the Defence of India Act which was an appropriate safeguard in the Defence of India Act 1939. Section 15 lays down:

"Any authority or person acting in pursuance of this Act shall interfere with the ordinary avocations of life and the enjoyment of property as little as may be consonant with the purpose of ensuring the public safety and interest and the defence of British India."

Now, Sir, it so happens that under the guise of the provisions of these rules, many dishonest people have tried to further communal interests and taken away trade in cloth, foodstuffs etc., from those hands who were already in these trade and given it to other people. And this principle, of Section 15 which is a very salutary principle has not so far been observed by those in authority, and I apprehend that in so far as this section is not even present in the present Bill it is likely that the provisions of this section will not be kept in observance while this act operates. I would, therefore like that the principles contained in this section 15, should be incorporated in the Act and should be before the eyes of every officer who has to administer this Act.

[Having said this, I will just call your attention to certain legal aspects of the Bill, I would refer you first of all to Section 1(3). I understand according to law if there is any Act before the House which has to expire automatically and which has got a limited period of existence, it is not usual to find in such an Act any provision like the one which is contained in this Section. The words are

"and section 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, shall apply upon the expiry of this Act as if it had then been repealed by a Central Act".

You will be pleased to see that even in the old Defence of India Act such a provision did not exist. It means that liabilities incurred during the period when this Act is in force shall continue even after this Act has expired, and any person who has incurred any liability shall, even after this Act has expired, be chargeable with the consequences.

I understand that under Section 4 of Act 9 and 10 George Chapter 30 which gives the powers to the Legislature to enact, it does not lie within our power to enact a provision like the one which is contained in section 1(3). I do not think that the Legislature will be within its right to provide, for the future after this Act has expired that certain provisions of this Act shall continue to operate and even the liabilities which have been incurred shall continue as before.

A reference was made by the previous speaker to the case of innocent ladies who were taking jowar somewhere and to big persons who were even taking wagons with immunity. In this connection I would refer you to the definition of 'notified order'. Unless and until a person knows what the orders is how is that order to be complied with? According to the principles of Criminal Law, it is absolutely necessary that every person should know what the orders are and the accused in the dock should be proved to have knowledge of the order contravened. If an order is published in the official Gazette, how will the general public know about it? You know, Sir, that in India people are illiterate, and therefore if orders are published in the official Gazette it will not be sufficient at all. Unless an order is promulgated and brought to the notice of everybody I would submit that mere notification in the official gazette should not be enough to prove knowledge.

Similarly as regard penalties, I submit that the punishment provided is three years for all offences. Now the offence may be trivial or very big, but there is one provision for all of them. I understand that this Act will expire after a year or so, or may be it may be extended for one year more or at the most for five years, but at any rate we understand from the speech of the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies that the provisions of this Act will not last for more than a year. Therefore I submit that the punishment provided is too much and in any case the same punishment for all offences is against the principles of Criminal Law.

Under clause 9, you will be pleased to see that every director, manager, secretary or other officer or agent thereof shall unless he proves that the contravention took place without his knowledge, be deemed to be guilty of such contravention. This is against all known canons of criminal law. The burden of proof is never on the accused. I think that this provision is too wide. The offence may take place at a place other than where the officer is stationed, and yet he is to prove that the contravention took place without his knowledge or that he exercised all due diligence to prevent such contravention. This is topsy-turvy. Supposing I am Director of a company and some order is contravened by some one connected with this company am I to be held responsible for that? According to the meaning of this Section I will be held guilty. The principles of criminal law should not be contravened in this matter.

If you refer to clause 11, you will be pleased to find that

"No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under this Act except on a report in writing of the facts constituting such offence made by a person who is a public servant

A Police constable is a public servant and a patwari is a public servant as defined in section 21 of the Indian Penal Code. So all those subordinates who now make the operation of the present Act so harsh and tyrannical are the very persons who are competent to report. Now that the National Government is in office, I would suggest that no case should be allowed to go to a Court unless and until it is examined by a competent authority—a public prosecutor for instance. The accused should be given full liberty to defend himself. Each and every case should not be chalanced and only selected cases should go before the courts. Justice demands that there should be some safeguard here.

I for one shudder to think of clause 12 which provides

"Any magistrate or bench of magistrates empowered for the time being to try in a summary way the offences specified may, on application in this behalf being made by the prosecution, try in accordance with the provisions contained in

Under Section 260, it is the Court which decides whether any particular case should be tried summarily or not. Generally speaking cases in which punishment of more than six months imprisonment can be given are not tried summarily. Here a very strange procedure has been adopted, namely that it is for the prosecution to decide whether the case is to be tried summarily, or not. Who will be the accused under this law? They will be traders, factory owners, Secretaries, managers and responsible people. Why should they be tried summarily? They should be tried under the ordinary provisions of the law. I do not plead mercy for these people but I want justice to be done to them. We know how things are done in the mofussil. National Government is in power now, and we have full confidence in them. But all the same the patwari is the same, the sub-inspector is the same, and the C. S. O. is the same. Before the new spirit pervades among these people, this law which is being enacted shall have expired. The subordinate judiciary as well as the police being the same, we should take every possible precaution to see that the hard provisions of the Act are done away with. Similarly in Clause 15 the burden of proof has been laid upon the accused. I have submitted these points to indicate that while I am for seeing that these controls are kept up and this Bill is passed into an Act, such provisions as are hard upon the accused and contravene fundamental principles should be done away with. As a matter of fact the general circumstances which lead to these controls have been discussed in this House. I have submitted the case from the point of view of those who are to be controlled by this Bill and I would submit that now as there is no great emergency, and at the same time the circumstances of the country are not so bad as they were during the war—it is but fair that the harsh provisions of the Bill are done away with.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi (Calcutta and Suburbs, Muhammadan Urban)

I had no intention to speak on this Bill but the novel theory of corollaries the Honourable Member tried to establish led me to the view that I should place before the Government an aspect of the problem which might lead them to think twice before they rush pieces of legislation through this House of an Interim Government which may be purely for a limited period of time.

Sir, the first casualty of war was morality and here the Honourable Member in charge, led us to believe that controls created corruption and corruption entailed controls. Sir, I should like to have some sort of control over the tendency of the new Government to bring these Bills, sometimes of one section and sometimes of two lines, galore, by the dozen and by the hundred. We are asked to put into the field of our national economy that which after all may be upset by decisions taken by the Constitution-making body.

I cannot understand the professorial point of view the Honourable Member in charge placed before us. If controls mean corruption, then why extend them? We used to live in a world before the war in which there were no controls. Let economic forces work and let us forget controls. If we have controls, then we shall have labour members talking of the rights of peasants and workers. The merchants will begin to think of their rights. The Honourable Member who preceded me discussed the legal aspects of this Bill, an ill-advised and ill-considered Bill, before us. The fundamental rights of citizens in various grades and strata of society are being interfered with in a most callous manner. I am asked to prove things which the other fellow should. I had expected that the new Government had come with the idea of freeing us not only of these controls but of the bigger control against which we are trying to fight. Here I see imitation. I hear arguments which I used to hear from Members of the Government, with a different hue. I would respectfully urge upon the Members of the present Executive Council of the Governor-General to forget that they are a Government. They have to rise and remove the controls or terrors as I call them—or horrors, if you like, which existed before. Take us out of this terrible position, or wait until we are in a position to stand on our own feet and talk in our own way. Here we talk of an Indian Government but the law and the traditions left by its predecessor do not seem to have changed. I would, therefore, request the Honourable Member in charge to forget these controls. Let some Indians die of starvation, if necessary, and let some merchants go into bankruptcy, but give back the freedom to the Indian citizen in every strata of our society because, Sir, you will agree with me that whenever a law restricting our liberties is passed, either as an Order in Council or under a different name, ultimately it has found its place in the Statute Book. Similarly here these controls which created corruption as well as multi-millionaires have to be removed and not perpetuated or prolonged for one, two or five years. I cannot understand why economic forces are not allowed to take their normal course. Millionaires and multi-millionaires will see to their own interests. If this is a National Government and if we all talk of the nation, not controls but the moral influence of the Government and the moral influence of our leaders which will make merchants, whether they are non and steel merchants or textile merchants of wool and cotton and not the jute merchants of Calcutta, forget their selfish interests. Let the public opinion of the country be allowed to tell the Government what to do.

...g them at the expense of the poorer sections among our people. The country needs millions for its own use. It is as I said earlier, in this session the liaison between the merchant and the Government official that has to be broken. The paraphernalia which the Honourable Member will create to see his new Bill succeed, whether it is for one year or five years, it does not matter at all, and the whole army of officials he will create for the purpose will undo his good intentions if there are any in this Bill.

I would again, most earnestly request the Honourable Member and his colleagues to visualise, if possible, a period of misery for our countrymen if the controls are reimposed. Other countries are doing it. Where the influences are great people will call them capitalistic others will call them labour and communistic and so on and so forth. They will go on. That is the normal of human society today. But here, and I again used the word, let us forget imitation. Let us think out our problems in our own way. What London does need not suit us. What Washington does need not be copied. Let us create, if possible, a moral sense in those who are making money, in those who are trying to rob the poorer men.

I heard the Honourable Member telling us that Government should do this, Government should do that and Government should punish the poor man or alternatively the merchant. Can we, Sir, get out of that old mentality of asking the Government to do everything for us? Why should the nation not punish these money-making machines called merchants? Why should the present Government not give back to India the normal life it needs—the life of freedom. Sir, the Honourable Member for Labour from Bombay would perhaps want everything to be done by the Government, by way of "nationalization." I do not wish to enter into the controversy of private enterprise versus nationalization but I do want that the merchant as well as the worker should be allowed to have a free existence and the busy bodies who will work on behalf of the Honourable Member under this Bill had better be eliminated for all time to come. If decontrolling means the merchant trying to raise his prices, let us have harkats against them, let us have even riots as we have now but let the Indian citizen be free. In this session I have been worried a good deal. Are we going to be demoralized altogether by the huge majority that we have—the whole House as against nine or perhaps a few more members? Will the Honourable Member and his colleagues consider the question of manufacturing and Opposition to keep them on the right path? If this is delayed I am afraid this House will become something like the totalitarian parliaments we have heard so much of. I know the time left for us is about a week. We may add a day or two more to it but even in this limited period if an Opposition could be created or manufactured, I would welcome it. They could safeguard their position in the Viceroy's Executive Council by compelling the Opposition, of which I should like to be a member, to see that in any no-confidence motion we shall stand behind them. Otherwise without criticism there would be a sort of permanent surrender of our rights. I now belong to the same group as the Government and therefore I must keep quiet and silent, and allow them to run away with my rights and my interests as a citizen. Under these conditions and in these circumstances, I hope that if the Honourable Member is not prepared to withdraw his Bill, he will, I plead, give us back some of the rights which he is so callously trying to take away from us. I do hope that he will punish the cringing merchant, he will punish those who robbed us during the war years but I also hope that he will see that the fundamental principles of the criminal law of the country are not interfered with.

Several Honourable Members: The question be now put.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions, Muhammadan) Sir, it is a very important debate we ought to speak.

Mr. President: I have no alternative but to put the question.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad. It is in the discretion of the President to accept or not to accept the closure.

Mr. President: I think that the matter has been sufficiently debated. That is my own feeling in the matter. There has been a long debate covering many points and I found that practically there were repetitions of the same points, though the illustrations may be different.

The question is

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. John Mathai: Sir, I would not take up the time of the House at this late hour. The discussion has ranged over a very wide field and what I propose to do is to take up a few of the more important criticisms which have been made on the Bill and make what reply I can to them. Before I do so, I should like to express my appreciation of the constructive and patriotic line that the House as a whole has taken with regard to this measure.

One of the things which apparently has worried practically every speaker who has spoken on this Bill is that now that the war emergency is over, why has a Bill with such drastic provisions put into law?

My reply to it is this. The emergency of war is over now but the economic emergency created by the war still continues in exactly the same form, probably slightly worse, and unless something is done by Government to prevent the serious abuses which are possible under the conditions which prevail today, I do not think the Government would be discharging its responsibilities.

A great deal has been said about the severity of the provisions contained in this Bill. I am aware that in certain respects these provisions are severe. A great deal has been said also about corruption among public servants who have been handling the instruments of control. I just say this. I do not think that enough has been done in the contract of a large number of public servants.

with the production and distribution of goods. The emergency conditions created by the war have been used in directions which do not reflect credit upon large numbers of people in the country and I think if the National Government is at all true to its purpose it must not allow this kind of conditions to continue any longer.

Mr Manu Subedar raised a very relevant point. This control measure is necessary because of the continuance of inflation but what exactly is Government doing in order to prevent the inflationary position getting worse and possibly to get the price level back to a more normal trend? Well, that question is very much under the consideration of the Government. It is a matter which is receiving anxious attention at our hands. As Mr Manu Subedar realises, it is not a simple problem. It is a problem which has got to be attacked simultaneously upon a very large number of fronts. You have got to tackle it on the monetary front, you have got to tackle it on the front of goods and services and in between you have to tackle it on a basis of direct controls.

It has been suggested that if in America they have lifted all controls why should we not lift our controls also? There is a very vital difference between America and India in this respect and that indeed is the whole case for maintaining this control in India. If we were to be left entirely to the operation of economic forces, supposing the whole question of adjustment of supply and demand is to be brought out by the operation of the price factor, what would happen under present conditions in India is this. We cannot increase the supply of goods to anything like the extent we want. We have not got the productive equipment in this country, even now we have not got the machinery-making industry in this country and we are not in a position to increase our supply by imports because manufacturing countries have not got enough surpluses. Therefore, supposing you allow normal forces to operate, what would happen is that prices would go up, they would go up further and further. It would make no difference to the supply position, and therefore prices will continue to remain at that higher level. In America, with a productive capacity so large, which has been greatly enhanced during the war years, what might happen is this: that if controls are removed and prices go up, it is possible that the productive equipment of the country will meet the situation by increasing the supply of goods. We are not in that position today, and that, I submit, is the whole case for this Bill.

A good deal has been said about planned economy. I do not want to discuss that subject in connection with this particular measure, for a very obvious reason. I said in my opening remarks that the whole purpose of government in introducing this Bill is to meet an emergency situation which is likely to last for a limited period, and I would therefore confine my reply strictly to that aspect of the problem. I personally think that, within a period of eighteen months it may be, or two years, the forces which are relevant in this connection may operate in the direction of bringing down our prices to a level considerably lower than the present. Supposing within that period, we find that the inflationary position has lost its tension, its acuteness, then it will be time for government so far as this particular Bill is concerned, to consider a relaxation of its provisions.

As regards planned economy, the controls necessary for instituting a planned economy are of an entirely different character. Their purpose would be different, their method of operation would be different, and the whole objective would be different. So I do not want in this connection to raise the question of the control machinery that would be required for instituting and promoting a planned economic development, but I have not the slightest doubt that if this country is going to make any real progress in the matter of economic development, it would be necessary to adopt a fairly extensive system of controls, whether you organize your economic development on an all India basis or on a regional basis or on a provincial basis. It is no use getting away from that fact.

The first speaker referred to the importance of bringing the orders issued in connection with this measure to the notice of the authorities who work on these measures actually on the spot. It is a suggestion, which I would accept. I really think there is a great deal to be said for measures of this kind to be interpreted in an intelligent and sympathetic manner by those who are in charge of them, but may I say this, that in regard to most of these controls the ultimate operating authority is the provincial governments, and all that we at the centre could do would be to advise the authorities, the provincial governments, as regards the best way in which these controls can be administered. But I certainly would keep the suggestion made by the Honourable Member in mind and do whatever I can to bring this matter to the notice of the provincial governments concerned.

I think reference was made to the fact that in the important matter of house building, a question to which I think honourable members are entitled to attach very great importance, not enough progress has been made. I should like in that connection to say this: it is not merely in regard to house-building, but in regard to all plans of development which the government of this country have been considering, we have been held up not so much by financial considerations as by the fact that the necessary material resources have not been available. It is an unfortunate situation but it can be tackled only on the basis of increased production in the country and by a more suitable kind of distribution. One of the purposes of this Bill is to see that the distribution of these materials is arranged on lines which are in the best interests of the country.

Sir, I do not want to take up any more time.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That the Bill to provide for the continuance during a limited period of powers to control the production, supply and distribution of, and trade and commerce in, certain commodities, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy President: I have just received notice of some amendments by Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava. I do not know whether the Honourable Member has received them or not.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I have just received them. I regret I am not in a position to accept them.

Mr. Deputy President: I am afraid it is rather too late in that case.

The question is

"That clauses 2 to 16 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 16 were added to the Bill.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, we can speak on the motion and oppose it. We want to speak on certain clauses, even if there is no amendment.

Mr. Deputy President: Certainly the Honourable Member was entitled to speak when I put the question that these clauses do form part of the Bill and asked those in favour to say 'Aye', the Honourable Member could have got up. Now, the question has been put and a decision given on it. Clause 17.

Sir George Spence (Secretary, Legislative Department): Sir, I move

"That to clause 17 of the Bill the following sub-clause be added, namely

(3) For the removal of doubts it is hereby declared—

(a) that for the purposes of the said Ordinance and this Act an order of the nature referred to in section 5 of the said Ordinance made before the commencement of the said Ordinance and not previously rescinded shall be deemed to be, and always to have been, an order in force immediately before such commencement, notwithstanding that such order, or parts of it, may not then have been in operation, either at all or in particular areas,

(b) that for the purposes of this Act an order made or deemed to be made under the said Ordinance and not rescinded prior to the commencement of this Act shall be deemed to be an order in force immediately before the commencement of this Act, notwithstanding that such order, or parts of it, may not then be in operation, either at all or in particular areas."

[Sir George Speuce]

Sir, section 5 of the Ordinance which clause 17 of the Bill proposes to repeal provided that an order made under the Defence of India Rules in respect of any matter specified in section 3 of the Ordinance, which was in force immediately before the commencement of the Ordinance shall continue in force and shall be deemed to be made under the Ordinance, and sub-clause (2) of clause 17 of the Bill further continues in force orders which were made or were deemed to be made under the Ordinance. This amendment has been tabled as a result of a query by the Punjab Government as to whether these provisions would have the effect of continuing in force certain orders of the nature referred to in section 5 of the Ordinance, which were made under the relevant Defence of India Rules, before the commencement of the Ordinance, but which contained a provision whereby they were not to come into operation in any district or other local area until brought into operation by notification, and which were not in fact brought into operation in any area until after the commencement of the Ordinance. The object of the amendment is to leave no room for doubt that orders made before the relevant date but not brought into operation till after that date have and always have had the status of orders in force immediately before the relevant date for the purposes of section 5 of the ordinance and sub-clause (2) of clause 17 of the Bill. I may mention that the provision sought to be made in this amendment closely follows the provision made in clause (1) of sub-section (1) of section 1 of the India and Burma Existing Laws Act, 1937, which enacted a like declaratory provision in relation to the reference in section 292 of the Constitution Act to the law in force in British India immediately before the commencement of Part III. Sir, I move

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That to clause 17 of the Bill the following sub clause be added, namely

'(3) For the removal of doubts it is hereby declared—

(a) that for the purposes of the said Ordinance and this Act an order of the nature referred to in section 5 of the said Ordinance made before the commencement of the said Ordinance and not previously rescinded shall be deemed to be, and always to have been an order in force immediately before such commencement, notwithstanding that such order, or parts of it, may not then have been in operation, either at all or in particular areas,

(b) that for the purposes of this Act an order made or deemed to be made under the said Ordinance and not rescinded prior to the commencement of this Act shall be deemed to be an order in force immediately before the commencement of this Act, notwithstanding that such order, or parts of it, may not then be in operation, either at all or in particular areas "

The motion was adopted

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That clause 17, as amended, stand part of the Bill "

The motion was adopted

Clause 17, as amended, was added to the Bill

Clause 1 was added to the Bill

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I move

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed "

Mr. Deputy President: Motion moved

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed "

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, during the war, we lived in peace. In peace time we are at war. During the war we at least had the liberty of speeches in the Legislature. When the war is over, we are denied the liberty to speak. Our mouths are shut up by the motion that the question be now put by the Government. They think that we have no alternative but to accept this motion but at least they ought to have given us some opportunity to express our opinion on such big issues before us. I am rather surprised that this motion has come from one of the most eminent economists of India, Dr John Matthai. He knows all the principles of trade. He said very clearly the other day that they would take steps to reduce the price level or increase the purchasing power of the rupee but may I ask this question—whether by this Act he is really raising the price level or he is lowering the price level? Will the purchasing power of the rupee be increased or diminished? We know as much as anybody else that the very important thing by means of which the prices can be reduced is competition. Competition is one of the biggest factors in trade for the reduction of the prices and the biggest enemies of trade are monopoly, combines and hoarding. Here in this particular Bill, there is the monopoly of one individual, namely, the Government. There is no question of combine because there is only one power in the field. Trade like industries requires expert knowledge. Not every man in the world is an expert in trade. It is rather unfortunate that the Government of India thinks that the I.C.S. people who are running the government are also great experts in trade. The civilians think that they are all-knowing persons. Now, you are leaving the whole question of trade in their hands, a thing to which they are not accustomed. May I just remind the Honourable Member that the I.C.S. had once a great reputation in the world. Ever since Lord Macaulay made his famous speech in the House of Parliament right up to recent times the I.C.S. had a brilliant record. May I ask, is the Civil Service the same as it was some years ago, before the war? We have now made them tradesmen, commercial men and given them powers of monopoly. During the war with one third salary you put them in position of great temptation and protected them by rules under the Defence of India Act. Even after the war, I am surprised that the old state of affairs is sought to be perpetuated by this Act which is now before us. I would like to have made certain amendments. If you really want the thing to work smoothly and if you want the people to live comfortably and make them feel that they are living in a time of peace, then you must go back to the trade channels and they are the only people who will be able to restore the distribution of the available materials among the people. You cannot expect any administrative civilian or official to understand the niceties of a tradesman which the tradesmen alone can understand. Now, the tradesman is very careful because if he makes a mistake, it will fall on his purse but if the official makes a mistake, it will fall not on his purse but on the taxpayers or the consumers, he can not exercise the same care as an ordinary tradesman would do. You are now putting one person in charge of the whole affair. Formerly his actions were protected by the Defence of India Rules and now they will be protected by an Act of the Legislature. During the war we had the satisfaction that this thing was done by Ordinances on account of war conditions but it is our misfortune that we are now made a party to it, we have to put our seal to this economic crime in the name of the representatives of the people. I am sure the Members of the Government who have been in opposition for a long time know the condition of the people of this country. They are well aware that there is corruption all round. They are well aware that the corruptions are of such an order that they never existed in the administration of this country ever since the British came here. I have no doubt they have also considered their causes. The first they ought to have done when they came into power was to eradicate all these causes of corruption and restore normal conditions so that there may be peace in the country. You may rest assured that however efficient and honest a Government servant may be, if you reduce the purchasing power of his salary to one quarter and give him this power and protect his actions by an Act of this kind, his efficiency will soon change into inefficiency. It is a great mistake to vest our administrators with such functions and such duties which tradesmen alone can perform. If mistakes are made by a tradesman, there is some authority to control him and there is also the law of the land. But what is the law of the land in the case of Government officials? You say no action can be taken against any District Magistrate who is discharging his duties as a controlling officer or any other officer. And these enormous powers you are giving at a time when the war is over and when we were expecting all the advantages of peace after having been through all sorts of privations for nearly six years during the war. Is this the fruit of our war efforts? I think it is not fair for the Honourable Member to state that...

the mouths of the Members of the Assembly by moving a motion for closure. We know that the closure which is moved by the Government will be accepted because there is no opposition. They have got our confidence and they are not afraid of any opposition. When the previous Government was in office and if two or three persons had stood up to speak, I am sure they would not have dared to move for a closure. But now there is no fear. But you should allow us at least the freedom of speech. It is not fair that you should take away our conscience as well as the right to speak. I should say that I pity those officials who will be using these enormous powers which the Honourable Member is putting in their hands, because you are placing them under temptations which very few human beings can afford to resist. Once an administrative officer is tempted to do these shaky things, then you may rest assured that his efficiency will disappear. He will be a very strong administrative officer who will not be tempted because he can do whatever he likes without any fear of being criticised by any outside person. Look into the clauses and you will see what powers of protection are being given to them. Under clause 12 the District Magistrate can try summarily, there is no appeal. Under clause 15 the burden of proof will lie on the accused. This is rather an innovation in the law and I am sorry that the Law Member has accepted it. Then, clause 16 also requires very careful consideration. I do not mind if all these powers were given by an Ordinance, but you are asking us to be a party to this legislation and you do not want to give us a chance to express our objections. This is very unfair and we did not expect this treatment from a National Government. When there is opposition, the Government is much more careful and at least consult the persons who are interested before the introduction of the bill. Let us now visualise how it will work.

In the case of cloth, it is quite possible that a number of people will come forward and there will be a competition for securing licences. He has got to get a licence and before he gets it he has to spend an enormous amount of money. How is he to recover that amount? He will not sell the cloth at the market price. He will probably avoid the sale to persons who are entitled to buy and he will probably sell it at the black market rates. This has been a source of trouble and fight all over the country. Our troubles in Aligarh began on this very reason. The man was in charge of cloth refused to sell it. He did not sell it because he knew all the time that the District authorities will support him. Now, the person who wanted to purchase happened to be a son of a police officer and he relied on the influence of his father. So, with these two persons on either side the fight began which developed enormously in March 1946. Therefore, you are now creating a bone of contention everywhere with the great advantage to the seller because he has got the whole weight of Government behind him.

Then, there is another thing also. In the case of textiles and also in the case of steel and iron you have created a certain number of stockists, but there is no guarantee that these stockists will sell these commodities to the consumers. Several cases, in fact, came to me and I brought them to the notice of Mr Waugh, who was then in charge of this Department. These salesmen refused to sell their articles to the ordinary public in spite of their permits. In the case of iron and steel all the five persons who were appointed are non-Muslims. I approached Tatas, I approached the Government and represented that at least one of these five posts should go to a Muslim. They wanted cash security which was also offered, but in spite of all that, our request to appoint a Muslim was turned down. That is the atmosphere in the country. When all these feelings are rampant in the country, is there any chance for us to get iron and steel at the present moment under the rules which the Government of India have framed? I wanted to purchase iron and steel for charitable institutions, but in spite of the recommendation of the Education Department, I could not possibly get iron and steel because the conditions which were created by ordinance and which you try to perpetuate under this Bill will only help the black marketeers. Are we not, as citizens of this country entitled to a share in the industry of this country? Under the law which you have framed, we have no share. That is the reason why I cannot possibly support this particular Bill that is now before the House. As I was saying these five persons whom you have appointed as salesmen will have the sole monopoly to sell iron and steel. They all belong to one particular class. It is really left to their whim whether they sell to anybody or not. Whenever any customer goes there even with a permit, the reply comes that the article is not in stock. Therefore what is the chance for us, who are not in that class? It will be extremely difficult for any Honourable Member to take the monopoly out of the hands of certain privileged class. I know this from personal knowledge. I am myself the sufferer in the case of one article. I have been waiting for the last 24 months for the construction of a hostel, but we could not possibly get iron and steel. We wanted some girders but on account of the monopoly in the hands of five individuals we were denied access to girders. They could not be released. I am sure even if my Honourable friend should issue special orders even then these materials will not reach our hands, because after all these monopolists have got such a great hold on the Government that instead of Government being masters over them, they are the masters of Government. They are really ruling the Government instead of being ruled by the Government. I have not come across a single official who has not been in the pockets of textile magnates. Not only the case of textiles but the case of iron and steel is equally bad. Some officials were showed special favour and after retirement they got high salaries from those Companies. Is it not a form of corruption? My Honourable friend knows the figures. He knows what is the price of iron and steel. What is the value of Tata shares? What is the dividend which the Tatas are declaring? They are declaring such fat dividends at the expense of the hard worked labourers. These are the people who control the Government. This is the difficulty which we are experiencing. It is difficult for common people to get this stuff. It is difficult to get permit, it is still more difficult to get the permit honoured. Most of the stuff will remain hidden and will be sold in black market.

Next I come to the question of control of textiles and the question of control of cotton. I gave notice of a Bill for abolition of all exchanges, cotton exchange, bullion exchange, general exchange—these are really gambling houses. Instead of abolishing these gambling dens, the Honourable Member is trying to perpetuate them. He makes the price of cotton soar high. The textile people under the excuse of high price of cotton raise the prices of textile to still higher figures. I think that after centuries of experience, the trade has learnt what particular class of people consume which variety of goods. The trade supplies these articles accordingly. Here the Government officials go on changing. One day, 'A' is in charge of Supplies, probably six months afterwards, 'B' takes charge. The control administration really lies in the hands of the traders who are able to influence the Superintendents and clerks in the office. It is these clerks and Superintendents who wield enormous powers, they enjoy enormous privileges and powers of patronage. From this point of view, this Bill requires careful consideration. I wish my Honourable friend tells us the effect of this bill on price level, whether it will rise or fall by the passing of this enactment. If he says, the price will be lowered, he must give us some cogent arguments in what way he contemplates the price to be lowered. I say the price will not be lowered because there is monopoly and no competition the whole time. There is corruption all round.

The next topic which is causing great trouble to the country is yarn. There is competition between handlooms and textiles about which my Honourable friend Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar is perhaps a great expert. He has studied the problem. I can tell him this yarn problem is as acute in U.P. as it is in Madras. There is a great shortage of yarn. The necks of these handloom weavers is in the hands of the textile manufacturers. These textile manufacturers can make or mar the life of the handloom weavers. Textile manufacturers are the only persons who produce yarn. There is a great shortage of yarn. There is competition between handlooms and textiles about which my Honourable friend Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar is perhaps a great expert. He has studied the problem. I can tell him this yarn problem is as acute in U.P. as it is in Madras. There is a great shortage of yarn. The necks of these handloom weavers is in the hands of the textile manufacturers. These textile manufacturers can make or mar the life of the handloom weavers. Textile manufacturers are the only persons who produce yarn.

sweet will to supply or not to supply yarn to the weavers, in right quality or in proper quantity. I suggest that in order to help the handloom weavers, the Government should establish government owned and managed spinning factories all over India. We are always insistent on this reform. I expected that the first measure that this Government would bring forward would be to nationalise the textile industry, at least in yarn. Nearly one crore of poor weavers are now at the mercy of the textile manufacturers who number only few lakhs. Five lakhs are supported by the textile industry while the handloom industry supports one crore of people. It should be duty of a National Government to look after the people.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member should confine himself to the Bill and not discuss the policy which is outside the scope of the Bill.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: It is an important thing to nationalise the industry. I thought the Honourable Member would move a Bill to nationalise the textile industry, instead of which he has adopted the reverse process. He should start factories at Government expense all over India, owned and managed by Government and distribute yarn in fair quantities, so that our cottage industry may prosper. If they prosper the price of textiles will surely come down because there will be some kind of competition. At present there is no competition in textiles and so they can fix whatever prices they like. My friend may say he will fix prices for a particular type of cloth, but there are so many different varieties of cloth that it is impossible for one who is not in the trade itself to control the prices. If you fix prices for 80 articles the manufacturers will bring out 70 kinds of cloth which are outside the control, and further they will produce more of these 70 varieties and very little of the 80 controlled varieties. So your control does not affect the manufacturers but really helps them. My friend must know who the people are who advocate prohibition, it is the sellers of wine who get better prices during prohibition. The same is the case here and it is the manufacturers who will benefit out of this control. If you take the figures of textiles.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member must know that he can only deal with control of production, supply and distribution of certain articles.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: I am dealing with the production of textiles without which there can be no control.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Nominated Non-official) At what stage of the Bill are we now?

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: We are now at the third reading.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: I thought you were giving it a fourth reading.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Gladstone was asked by Queen Victoria why he travelled third class, and his reply was because there was no fourth class. My reply will be the same.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, my Honourable friend has only dealt with two controls out of 27 mentioned in the Bill. May I know if he wants to speak on all the other 25?

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: I will speak about those of which I have got personal knowledge.

Then about textiles, my Honourable friend knows the value of the shares, how much reserve the companies have got and that dividends are given. Knowing this he must know that they can dictate terms as they like. The only way to bring down competition will be to have competition among the millowners. If there is a combine among the millowners and Government the country must come forward and break it. But we find that one crore is the share capital, 18 crores are in the reserve fund and 25, 30 and even 40 per cent are given in dividends. So you cannot expect prices to come down and these contemplated controls will only raise the prices higher.

In his first speech I was glad to hear this session by my Honourable friend Dr John Matthai that he will try to lower the price index. When I referred to the question in the case of the food debates they referred me to the report of the Price Control Board. I read that report very carefully but found that it contains only some economic platitudes but not one single practical suggestion. So I thought the Honourable Member would offer some practical suggestions about lowering the price-level. My friend knows that the millowners have made enormous profits during the war and now after the end of the war they have devised various methods by which they may continue to have those profits. But it is now the turn of the poor people to derive some advantage after the sufferings during the war. But after the Bill I am sure the price level will go up further. My friend says 'No', he perhaps thinks prices will go down. I should like to know from him in his reply how he thinks the prices will go down by his Bill. He has given a monopoly of distribution to individuals, he has opened the door to corruption and hoarding and intermediate knots have been created. Even after all that he thinks the prices will go down. I hope he will explain it fully.

Sir, I will now come

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan (Finance Member) Sir, I will point out to my Honourable Member that there are a number of measures dealing with the economic life of the country and the House will always welcome a speech from him. He has entered his protest in a strong manner and he may be good enough to speak on other measures too. Unless my friend has really something which concerns this Bill particularly, we will be very grateful if he finished his speech now. If it was something that could be postponed for some other measure which may come before this House . .

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: You mean the Finance Bill?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Yes, certainly. I promise that my Honourable friend can have ten minutes more on the Finance Bill.

Mr. Deputy President: Has the Honourable Member finished his speech?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: He has

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: I have not finished my speech

Mr. Deputy President: It is now 5 O'clock. The House stands adjourned.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday the 19th November 1946

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Tuesday 12th November 1946

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr President (The Honourable Mr G V Mavalankar) in the Chair

MEMBER SWORN

Mr Henry Douglas Cayley, O B E, M L A (Government of India, Nominated Official)

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(a) ORAL ANSWERS

Dr Zia Uddin Ahmad: I have the authority to put Shri Sri Prakasa's questions. That will come in the end †

Mr. President: I understand the authority is wanting (After a pause) The authority was for the last week

SITINGS OF THE FEDERAL COURT DURING THE YEAR

1407. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state

(a) the number of days the Federal Court sat during the financial year 1945-46,

(b) the number of cases that were filed in the Court,

(c) the number disposed of and the number still pending, and

(d) if the Federal Court is fully authorised to regulate the number of days it will sit and the number of hours it will work?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) Thirty days

(b) I presume the Honourable Member is referring to the same period, that is, the financial year 1945-46. Seventeen cases were filed during the said period.

(c) Seven (being the total number of cases ready for disposal up to 31st March 1946) were disposed of. Ten (not being ready for hearing) have remained pending. In addition to the above-mentioned seven cases, the Court disposed of a number of applications and petitions of various sorts.

(d) The Federal Court is authorised by section 214 of the Government of India Act, 1935, to make rules of Court, with the approval of the Governor-General in his discretion, regulating the practice and procedure of the Court. In pursuance of this provision, the Court has framed rules, known as the Federal Court Rules, and these rules provide, among other matters, for the sittings of the Court.

PRIVILEGES OF THE JUDGES OF THE FEDERAL COURT

1408. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state if the Judges of the Federal Court can take part in politics and express their opinions on political subjects freely, inside and outside India? If so, are all the Judges of High and Subordinate Courts equally privileged?

† Could not be reached during the question hour

‡ Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The judges of the Federal Court and the same may also be said of the judges of High Courts—are appointed by His Majesty in pursuance of statutory provisions. They are not prohibited by any statutory or other provision from taking part in politics and expressing opinions on political subjects. They however recognize the well established judicial convention that judges should not take part in controversial party politics and therefore they do not generally express opinions on such political subjects, save when such subjects form matters of dispute coming before them for adjudication. The position of judges of subordinate courts is different. They are appointed by the local Government and as such are governed by the relevant Government Servants' Conduct Rules, which contain a prohibition against Government servants taking part in politics.

EXPORT OF BENARES SILK TO CEYLON AND HEJAZ

†409. Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state

(a) the exact position with regard to the export of Benares silk goods to Ceylon and Hejaz,

(b) if licences are freely granted to persons in Benares for the export of such cloth to the two countries, and

(c) the conditions under which the licences are granted?

The Honourable Mr I I Chundigar: (a) and (b) Export of Benares silk sarees of hand-reeled silk yarn is permitted freely without any quantitative restrictions to all permissible destinations including Ceylon and Hejaz. Other Benares silks are not allowed to be exported.

(c) Does not arise.

DETENTION OF AFGHAN SARDARS IN POONA

†410. Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state whether his attention has been drawn to the condition in which the four Afghan Sardars, namely, Sardar Inayatullah Khan, Sardar Hafizullah Khan, Sardar Habibullah Khan and ex-Afghan Army Brigadier Sayyed Yaqub Khan are now staying at Poona for the last more than six years, being detained there without trial under Rule 36 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation?

(b) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether he intends to review the case of the Afghan Sardars referred to in (a) above?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) These persons are not detained at Poona and are free to move about anywhere in British India with the exception of the N.W.F.P. and Baluchistan.

(b) Their case is under review in consultation with the Afghan Government. As soon as a reply is received to the reference to the Afghan Government the whole case will be fully considered.

REPRESENTATION OF INDIA ON THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR OFFICE

411. Mr. P. B. Gole: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) whether Government propose to press on the International Labour Office the necessity of giving better representation to India including some important posts on its staff, and

(b) whether Government propose to press on the International Labour Office the necessity of opening a branch in India for Asiatic countries?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: (a) Government are continuously pressing on the International Labour Office the necessity for giving adequate representation to Indian nationals on the International Labour Office staff.

(b) There are branch offices of the International Labour Office in India, and China. Government of India have pressed on the International Labour Office the necessity for opening a Regional Office for Asia and locating it in India.

Mr P. B. Gole: Who are the Indians on the establishment of the Labour Office at present?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: There is one Principal Chief of Section. Then there is one Counsellor. There are three members of sections. In all there are five on the staff of the International Labour Office.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Where are the Headquarters of the Branch Office in India?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: In all there are six officials. All of them are Indian Nationals.

Mr. P. B. Gole: With regard to (b) is there any Branch Office of the International Labour Office in India? Where is it located?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: It is located in New Delhi.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Is the Government of India aware that the International Labour Office has appointed a committee of enquiry on the recruitment of staff and the conditions to be given to the staff? May I ask whether the Government of India have sent any memorandum or made any representation to that Committee as to how the International Labour Office should recruit an adequate number of Indians on that staff?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: The Government of India have been pressing for the appointment of Indian nationals on the staff of the International Labour Office, and at the recent conference that was held in Montreal their claims were pressed by all the delegates, including those of workers and employers, and as far as the Committee is concerned, I think that the matter is being taken up by the Government of India.

Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable Member tell us whether the Government have pressed the claim of India for having more representation on the Governing Body in view of the discussion which we have had on the floor of this House?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: The answer is in the affirmative.

INDIAN INTERESTS re TRADE WITH CEYLON IN COPRA AND COPRA OIL

412. *Mr. P. B. Gole: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state

(a) whether India has given preferential treatment in regard to goods imported from Ceylon while Ceylon is not extending similar preferential treatment to Indian Goods,

(b) whether the Ceylon Government has given preference to agencies from the United Kingdom for trade in copra and copra oil, although India has been the principal buyer of these commodities for years together, and

(c) if so, whether Government propose to issue instructions to the Trade Commissioner, Ceylon, to guard the interests of India especially in connection with trade in copra and copra oil?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) Preferential tariff treatment is accorded to certain goods of Ceylonese origin imported into India from Ceylon. This preference is accorded on a basis of reciprocity, and certain articles of Indian origin exported from India to Ceylon also enjoy preferential tariff treatment in that country.

(b) and (c) Yes, Sir. The Ceylon Government have agreed to the Ministry of Food of H. M. G. purchasing the entire output of Ceylon copra and coconut oil for the five years ending December 1960. It may however be added that copra and copra oil are subject to international allocation and the relevant Committee of the I E F C (International Emergency Food Council) allots quotas to all countries including United Kingdom and India. The Honourable Member's attention is in this connection invited to the Press Note dated the 15th October 1946 issued by the Industries and Supplies Department, a copy of which is placed on the table. In view of the foregoing, the question of issuing instructions to the Indian Government Trade Commissioner in Ceylon does not arise.

PRFSS NOTL

SHORTAGE OF COPRA AND COCO OIL (Government Assistance to Soap Industry)

The Government of India have for some time been considering the question of instituting a control over the price of Indian copra and coconut oil in consultation with the Government of Madras, Travancore, Cochin and Mysore. Such a control will become necessary if prices do not fall substantially with the arrival of the new crop which is expected to be good both in India and Ceylon.

Prior to the outbreak of war India used to import 200,000 tons of copra per annum. Internal production largely confined to Madras Province and Travancore and Cochin States is in the region of 200,000 tons. There is no supply of coconut oil from Far Eastern sources because of dislocation in production caused by the war and the demands made on the limited quantities available as a consequence of general shortage all over the world in oils and fats. The Ministry of Food H. M. G. have purchased the entire output of Ceylon copra and coconut oil for the five years ending December 1950. Of the total Ceylon production, a quota of 65,000 tons in terms of copra has been allocated to India for the year 1946. It has not been possible to obtain a larger quota for this year but there is reason to hope that the quota will be larger in succeeding years.

Of the 65,000 tons allotted to India for 1946, only a small quantity has arrived so far, on account of a short fall in the Ceylon crop for 1945-46. But it is hoped that the bulk of the quota will be received by the end of the year. Indian copra would also arrive in large quantities by then and internal price should fall substantially.

Since the entire Ceylon crop has been purchased by H. M. G., it will not be possible for some time to import Ceylon coconut oil over and above the quota obtained is a direct Government to Government transaction. Should any importer however, find it possible to import the oil from other sources, any reasonable assistance to secure it will be given. Copra and coconut oil are now on the Open General Licence.

Indian demands for coconut oil as a raw material for industry have increased largely on account of the expansion of the soap industry which developed considerably during the war. The only alternative to coconut oil in the manufacture of soap is hydrogenated oil, of which only small quantities are available at present. Provision has been made for such supplies in the prospective expansion of the hydrogenated oil industry.

Quotas for Soap Manufacturers

Numerous applications are being made to the Government of India for assistance in the matter of supplies. The only oil which the Government are in a position to distribute is the imported oil, which is at present very limited in quantity. The Government of India have already allotted the meagre supplies of Ceylon coconut oil for industrial purposes particularly to the Soap Industry, which is largely dependent on coconut oil and is, therefore, likely to be at a disadvantage compared with the foreign soap industry, which is able to get coconut oil at lower prices than those prevailing in India today. With the exception of a few special cases, direct quotas have been granted only to soap manufacturers whose average production of soap over the last few years has been over 30 tons per month. The Government of India have placed substantial portions of the imports at the disposal of the Government of Bengal, Bombay and the Punjab and Bihar for purposes of distribution, at their discretion, for domestic consumption and small-scale industry. Applicants in these areas who have not been allotted any oil quota should, therefore, approach the Provincial Governments. They should take note of the fact that the bulk of the available coconut oil is of Indian origin and that the distribution of this is not controlled.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES & SUPPLIES,
New Delhi, October 15, 1946

Mr. P. B. Gole: Has the attention of the Honourable Member been drawn to a recent telegram in the Hindustan Times of the 11th in which the Ceylon Government is thinking of revising the contract with the United Kingdom regarding the five years' Copra Contract?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: That is a matter in which we are not interested at this stage. The present position is, as I have stated, that the Ceylon Government have entered into an agreement to export all the surplus coconuts and coconut oil to the United Kingdom and as soon as it is received by the United Kingdom, the allocations are made by the International Emergency Food Council who have given an allotment of 65,000 tons to India. If that agreement is set aside, the position will be reconsidered.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the fact that before the war when copra was in a bad way, India helped Ceylon and permitted imports of Ceylon copra and oil into India. Will the Honourable Member take it up with the Ceylon Government to release larger quantities of copra and oil for India in the present emergency when India needs these goods?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I think the Honourable Member has not followed my reply. The Ceylon Government have no power over the allotment which will be made to India. They have already entered into an agreement with His Majesty's Government to supply all the surplus to that Government who places it at the disposal of the International Emergency Food Council, which in turn, according to the requirements of the various countries makes allocations and the allocation to India is 65,000 tons.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I understand the answer. The Ceylon Government has recently threatened the United Kingdom with the termination of this agreement and in the event of that happening will the Honourable Member take it up with the Ceylon Government and press for a large supply of coconut oil?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: As soon as the agreement is terminated we shall certainly press for larger supplies.

REPORTS OF THE LABOUR INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE ON THE CONDITION OF LABOURERS IN MICA MINES AND RIKSHA AND HAND-CART PULLERS

413. Mr. P. B. Gole. Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) the action that Government have taken on the several ad hoc reports made by the Labour Investigation Committee under the Chairmanship of Mr. D. V. Rege, I.C.S., and how many of them have been printed,

(b) whether Government propose to place on the table of the House a copy of the steps taken by Government to improve the conditions of labourers in mica mines,

(c) the steps that Government have taken to ameliorate the lot of the labourers in plantations, and

(d) whether Government propose to bring to the notice of the Provincial Governments the report of the Labour Investigation Committee concerning the plight of riksha pullers and hand-cart pullers and ask them to take suitable steps to put a stop to such labour?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: (a) 38 Reports have been printed. The main defects noticed by the Labour Investigation Committee are the low level of basic wages in a number of industries, absence of standardisation of occupational terms and wages, lack of uniformity in the rates of dearness allowances, unsatisfactory systems of recruitment, promotion, discharge and dismissal, bad working conditions due mostly to the inadequate enforcement of the Factories Act, a tendency on the part of smaller employers to exploit the ignorance of workers with a view to escaping their liability under the Workmen's Compensation and Maternity Benefit Acts, prevalence of 'sweated conditions' in unorganised industries like shellac, mica splitting, coir matting, glass bangles making, cornet making and bidi making, and bad housing. Government have taken up the revision of the Factories Act with a view to the prescription of proper standards in regard to lighting, ventilation safety, health and welfare of workers. The question of strengthening factory inspection services for securing an adequate enforcement of the Act was discussed at the Conference of Provincial Labour Ministers held on the 14th and 15th October. The Minimum Wages Bill which will eliminate 'sweated' wage conditions is already before the House. Workmen's State Insurance Bill making provision for a combined scheme of sickness, accident and Maternity benefit insurance and medical care and treatment for factory workers has been introduced in the Assembly. The provision of housing for industrial workers was also discussed at the recent Provincial Labour Ministers' Conference and Government will be shortly addressing the Provincial Governments on the subject. These measures will remove a great many of the defects to which the Committee have called attention. A five-year programme of work was discussed at the Labour Ministers' Conference and it is proposed to place it before a meeting of States Ministers on the 29th of this month. Thereafter it is proposed to discuss the programme with representatives of employers and workers so that we may have an agreed programme of action. I hope to be able to make a statement to the House at the next session.

(b) As the Honourable Member is aware, the Miles Miles Welfare Fund has been set up. The Minimum Wages Bill will also considerably benefit labourers in mica mines. Other measures for bringing about an improvement in the conditions of labourers in mica mines will be included in the five-year programme on which I hope to, as I have already stated, make a statement to the House at the next session.

(c) The Labour Investigation Committee's report on plantations is being studied and I shall make a statement on what we propose doing at the next session.

(d) Copies of the reports have been sent to Provincial Governments and I should trust the Provincial Labour Ministers to take adequate remedial action.

Mr P B Gole Will copies of these reports be supplied to the members of this House?

Mr S. C. Joshi: A few copies have been sent to the Secretary of the Legislative Assembly and members who desire to have copies can get them from the Assembly office.

Mr N M. Joshi, May I know whether Government is aware that copies of all the volumes of these reports are not available at all and whether Government is taking steps to make the copies available?

Mr S C. Joshi: I am not aware of the shortage of copies but enquires will be made and if copies are not available the matter will be looked into.

Lt.-Col. Dr. J. C. Chatterjee, May I know whether Government will take steps to prevent the pulling of rickshas and handcarts by human labour in Delhi?

Mr S. C. Joshi: That matter will be looked into.

Mr M A F. Hirtzel: Is it a fact that the reports of this Labour Investigation Committee have appeared in the names of individual members and, if so, are we to understand that the whole Committee takes responsibility for all the reports or why has such procedure been adopted?

Mr S C. Joshi, For the sake of convenience it was found necessary to give the investigation work to individual members and the investigations made by each individual member resulted in the submission of a report by the individual member concerned. There is a final consolidated report also, which will be published.

Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable Member inform the House whether the Rege Committee was appointed for getting the data necessary to make a plan for social security of the workers and if so, whether Government have decided upon a plan with the co-operation of the workers' organisations?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: I have already given the answer in the latter part of my answer to the main question. So far as the first part of the question is concerned the main object of the Committee was to collect full data on the working conditions in various employments.

Miss Maniben Kara: May I know whether social security and unemployment of the working classes was one of the terms of reference of this Committee?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: That was one of the things to be enquired into by this Committee.

Miss Maniben Kara: May I know whether any such plan for social security and unemployment has been contemplated by the Reg. Committee?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: So far as health or sickness insurance is concerned that has already been taken up and so far as other matters are concerned as I have already indicated in my reply, they are being looked into.

SUPPLY OF KEROSENE OIL

414. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state

(a) the latest position regarding the tanker and supply of the kerosene oil,

(b) if Government intend to increase the supply to Provinces if so when and how much, and

(c) if the ration of kerosene oil is to be increased in the near future?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) A statement showing the imports of kerosene for the years 1942-43 to 1945-46 is laid on the table.

Kerosene is in short supply not only in this country but all over the world. The supply of kerosene for internal consumption which fell to about 50 per cent of the average consumption of 1941 on the occupation of Burma and Netherlands East Indies by the Japanese has recently substantially increased as a result of the representations made to His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom.

The tanker position is unsatisfactory, but no difficulty is anticipated in obtaining the tanker required for the needs of quantities now made available to India.

(b) As a result of the increased quota made available by His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom the supply to Provinces has been increased with effect from 1st October 1946. They are now receiving on an average 7/8th or then 1941 winter oiltake.

(c) With the increased supply to Provinces it should be possible to increase the ration of kerosene oil to individual consumers. Rapid easing of the position will, however, depend on imports of tin plates which are now in short supply, as increased bulk and semi-bulk distribution cannot be undertaken unless the tin plate stock position improves quickly.

The matter has been taken up with the United States of America through the Agent General to the Government of India in Washington.

Imports of Kerosene from 1942-43 to 1945-46

Seth Govind Das: What is the percentage of the increase in the import of kerosene oil since 1940?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: The situation roughly is this. Before the war, India used to receive on an average 700,000 tons of kerosene. The figure then went down, the lowest figure in 1943-44 being 291,000 tons. That was roughly about 40 per cent. of the normal. The figure for 1945-46 was 578,000 tons and since then we have received an additional quota of 10,000 tons per month. So we are now likely to receive the same quantity as we were receiving before the war. But in the meantime the population has increased and consequently the demand has also increased and therefore although we may now be receiving about the same quantity that we were receiving before the war, kerosene will still be in short supply.

Seth Govind Das: Do the Government expect any more increase in the near future?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: That is very doubtful.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Has the Honourable Member any information to give to the House as to whether petrol and kerosene were not offered by the American Government working in the Middle East and whether this Government did not refuse such an offer on the plea that dollars must be conserved?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: I must ask for notice. I have no information on the point.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know what is the quantity of the local output of kerosene?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: I believe it is about 5 or 10 per cent. of the total.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What is the prospect of increasing it?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: That is a very large question of mineral development on which I cannot give any answer now.

Seth Govind Das: Are any efforts being made to increase the output in our country?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: Every effort is being made to increase the quantity allotted to us, as also to increase local production, but as I stated at the beginning, both petrol and kerosene are in short supply throughout the world.

KIDNAPPING OF HINDUS BY PEOPLE OF TRIBAL AREAS AFTER TERMINATION OF WAR

415. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state whether it is a fact that during the last war, there had been no cases of kidnapping of Hindus by the people of Tribal Areas, and that such cases have started again after the termination of the war? If so, what are the reasons for the same?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Kidnapping of both Hindus and Muslims by the inhabitants of the tribal areas in the Frontier unfortunately did not stop during the war and has continued since the war. The actual number of Hindus kidnapped (as distinct from Muslims) is—

1941	87
1942	55
1943	16
1944	21
1945	12

Upto October 1st 1946

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know whether the Honourable Member is satisfied that these are acts of individuals committed for the sake of ransom or is there any hidden hand behind these kidnappings?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I am not at all satisfied about the position, and I do not know about any hidden hands, that would require a great deal of secret service and other investigation, but it is a most unsatisfactory position.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is the matter receiving the special attention of the Honourable Member and is he taking steps to see that these kidnappings are stopped?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Obviously this question is a part of the larger question of the frontier. It cannot be isolated and separated from it. That larger question, including this question, is receiving our earnest consideration.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Has there not been a proposal to arm all the inhabitants of the outlying areas so that they may defend themselves against such inroads and attacks?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: There may have been such a proposal—I do not know exactly, but I imagine that most people there have got arms.

PASSPORTS FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES TO INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESSMEN

416. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state whether Government are aware of the fact that the general practice hitherto followed by the Local Government of Delhi has been to refuse or delay applications of persons connected with the Indian National Congress, for the grant of passports for visiting foreign countries? If so have Government issued clear instructions to the effect that no such distinction should be made in future? If not, do they propose to do so now?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: So far as the Government of India are concerned no such practice was authorised and no distinctions will be tolerated. The Government are prepared to investigate specific complaints.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is the Honourable Member aware that it is almost impossible even today to get a passport to the U S S R?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: If the Honourable Member will bring any specific cases to my notice, I shall certainly inquire into the matter.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is there any secret or other circular issued to a local government that passports to U S S R should not be granted?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The Honourable Member refers to some local government—I do not know which.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Delhi Government.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I ask from my own experience of some cases why there is this delay in issuing passports to persons wishing to go to Persia and Afghanistan? Has not this Government got the powers to issue such passports?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I could not tell the Honourable Member, except that we have inherited a very dilatory procedure of Government.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it necessary to obtain the consent of the other government before passports are issued?

(No answer was given)

LOAN OF SERVICES OF AN OFFICER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ARCHAEOLOGY FOR APPOINTMENT AS DIRECTOR OF ARCHAEOLOGY, BY HYDERABAD STATE

417. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state if it is a fact that some time back the Hyderabad Durbar asked through the External Affairs Department for the services of a certain officer in the Archaeological Department on loan for appointment as Director of Archaeology in that State?

(b) What action was taken by that Department in this matter, and how does the matter now stand?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The question should have been addressed to the Honourable Member for Education. It has accordingly been transferred to the list of questions for the 16th November, 1946, when it will be answered by the Honourable Member for Education.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: On a point of order, Sir. I tabled a short notice question to my Honourable friend the Railway Member, he said it has been transferred and it would come in the usual course on the 11th but it was not printed on the 11th or 12th or 13th?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I may inform my Honourable friend that he did not repeat his notice and that is why it was not put down on the order paper. He ought to repeat it for a stated question in any case he is getting a reply from me.

EXPORT OF JUTE CLOTH AND BAGS FROM INDIA TO U.S.A. AND RE-EXPORT TO SOUTH AMERICA

418 *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state

(a) whether it is a fact that jute cloth and bags exported by India to the United States of America were subsequently exported to the Union of South Africa by the United States of America,

(b) whether in view of the fact that India has adopted retaliatory measures against the Union of South Africa the export of this commodity and its products was deliberately and purposely stopped to the Union of South Africa, and whether Government propose to launch an emphatic protest with the Government of the United States of America for this act of theirs, and

(c) whether Government propose to stop all exports of jute and its products to the United States of America except on an explicit undertaking from the Government that no part of it will reach the Union of South Africa either from there directly or through any other countries.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) and (b) Government have seen a Press report to the effect that 350 bales of jute goods of Indian origin have been re-exported from the United States to South Africa. This report has on investigation, been found to be correct, and Government have instructed their representatives in the United States to take up the matter, and to lodge a protest, with the appropriate authorities.

(c) Owing to the scarcity of jute manufactures in the United States, the authorities concerned have already taken action to stop leakages at the ports, and also to suspend the issue of export licences for used bags for South Africa and certain other destinations.

Seth Govind Das: Are jute bags still being exported to the United States of America?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Yes.

Seth Govind Das: To what extent?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: According to the quota allotted

INDIANS IN GOA AND OTHER FOREIGN SETTLEMENTS IN INDIA

419 *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state

(a) what steps Government are taking to safeguard the interests and civil liberties of Indians in the Foreign Settlements in India and particularly in Goa, and

(b) whether Government are aware of the fact that at present civil liberties in Goa are demonstrated by the recent repeated arrests of Dr. Rammanohar Lohia, a prominent political leader?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (a) and (b) Government take all necessary steps to protect the interests of their own nationals. Regarding the particular case of Goa, attention is invited to the replies given on November the 7th to Mr. Masani's short notice question and to Mr. P. K. Salve's question No. 315-A.

PROPOSED INCLUSION OF EAST AFRICA IN THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA

420. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) whether Government are aware of the fact that East Africa is at present directly under the British Colonial Office,

(b) whether it is a fact that at present Indians have better rights of entry into acquiring of citizenship and property rights as also status under the law as human beings in East Africa than in the Union of South Africa,

(c) whether Government are aware of the fact that the Premier of the Union of South Africa, General Smuts, has recently built up a case for the inclusion of East Africa in the Union of South Africa, and

(d) whether Government propose to give an assurance to this House that they will take all steps in their power to see that East Africa is not merged in the South African Union?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) Yes

(b) Yes

(c) The Government of India are not aware of any definite move on the part of Field Marshal Smuts for the inclusion of East Africa in the Union of South Africa.

(d) The question of any action in regard to East Africa does not therefore arise.

Seth Govind Das: Is the Honourable Member aware that during the last session press reports had appeared in various papers of this country that General Smuts is making an effort to devour East Africa and to annex it with South Africa and is the Honourable Member aware that as far as South-West Africa is concerned an effort is being made by Field Marshal Smuts even now?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The Honourable Member is getting slightly mixed up between South-West Africa and East Africa. There is no doubt about South-West Africa and the matter is now in issue before the United Nations General Assembly. So far as East Africa is concerned, Government are not aware of any definite move by General Smuts, but it is a fact that the European settlers in East Africa have made a move on their own behalf, but the question related to Field Marshal Smuts and not to European settlers in East Africa.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Is the Honourable Member aware of the great theory of the all-red route from Cairo to Cape Town and is he aware of the fact that the efforts of British imperialists are to devour, as the Honourable Member said, the whole of Africa from Cairo to the Cape?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Yes, when the Honourable Member and I were both much younger, we both heard of the attempt to have an all-red route, and, as he has used the word, to devour various parts of Africa. There is no doubt that such attempts are being made by various persons and various groups and interests, but the present position is this in regard to East Africa, that efforts are being made by European settlers there to have a kind of federation. This has been opposed stoutly, not only by the Indians in East Africa but by the Arabs and Africans there, they have jointly opposed this and they will continue to oppose it, and I have no doubt that any person seeking to devour these portions is liable to get digestion.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: The External Affairs Department may therefore be expected in its international aspect to support the efforts of these non-Europeans to safeguard their own countries?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Absolutely

DEVELOPMENT OF MINERAL, THERMAL AND HYDRO-ELECTRIC RESOURCES OF NERBUDDA TERRITORIES OF CENTRAL PROVINCES

421. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please state

(a) what steps Government are taking to develop the mineral, thermal and hydro-electric resources in the country in general and in the Nerbudda territories of the Central Provinces in particular,

(b) whether Government are aware of the extremely rich mineral deposits of the said Nerbudda territories and if so, whether they propose to take early steps for making an exhaustive and intensive geological survey of the areas covered by the said territories, and

(c) what steps Government propose to take for surveying and exploiting the huge bauxite deposits, in particular, manufacture of aluminium?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the statement placed on the table of the House on the 1st November, 1946 in reply to part (a) of question No. 135, showing the various steps taken for the re-organisation and expansion of the Geological Survey of India, in order to enable the Survey to undertake extensive exploitation of the country's mineral and water resources

The development of the mineral, thermal and hydro-electric power resources of the country lies primarily within the sphere of the Provincial Governments. The Central Government organisations viz. the Geological Survey of India, the Central Waterways, Irrigation and Navigation Commission, and the Central Technical Power Board, are offering assistance to Provincial Governments where necessary. It is understood that the Central Provinces Government propose to establish a Hydro-Electric Section to study all hydro-electric resources in the Province. All necessary assistance will be given to this section by the Central Technical Power Board.

(b) Government have some idea of the mineral resources of the said Nerbudda territories and the Geological Survey of India is taking steps to undertake necessary survey and investigation, subject to the limit of its resources. It is, however, not possible to undertake exhaustive and intensive geological survey of all these areas at once.

(c) The bauxite deposits in various parts of India have been investigated and are now being re-examined in detail. The manufacture of aluminium is at present undertaken by two private companies. There is no proposal for Government to undertake any such manufacture.

COMPLAINT RE EXPORT OF TIMBER, STEEL, CLOTH AND COTTON FROM INDIA

422. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state whether Government have examined the complaint that the export of materials useful for the country has been permitted?

(b) What is the amount of the export for timber, steel, cloth and cotton from India during 1945-46 and 1946-47 (upto the 30th of September 1946)?

(c) In the case of cotton how much quantity has gone to (i) China, (ii) Japan, and (iii) the United Kingdom?

(d) In the case of cloth how much has been given strictly against food supply and how much otherwise?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) Yes. Generally export of only such of the materials as are surplus to internal requirements or cannot be absorbed in the country has been permitted.

(b) to (d) The information is being obtained and will be laid on the table of the House.

Mr. Manu Subedar: There is an acute shortage of timber and steel in this country for building houses and I have specific information that stocks of timber in the possession of Government themselves in the Disposal Department have been transferred to the United Kingdom—heavy stocks. Also steel is being exported from this country—steel which would be useful for building houses in this country.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The question was about timber, steel, cloth and cotton. Some exports have been permitted in the past but in view of the allegation which the Honourable Member has made, I will examine the question and see that any exports of commodities or articles which are required in India will not be permitted.

Mr. Manu Subedar: With regard to cloth, may I get an assurance from the Honourable Member that cloth will be given only in substitution or barter in payment for food and that essential commodities will not be allowed to be moved to India past a certain date?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Generally that is the policy, subject to the exception that the requirements of some of the neighbouring countries, to their bare minimum, have got to be satisfied by India as a neighbouring country.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I have Australia particularly in mind. May I know whether the Honourable Member will look into the question as to whether we should go on exporting cloth to Australia at the very low Indian price of cloth and whether we should go on importing from Australia goods which are very heavily priced against us, including food?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The Honourable Member himself suggested in the earlier question that we should export cloth to countries from which we can procure food. Australia is one of the countries which supplies wheat to India and when the Australian Delegation recently came to us, we had a thorough discussion with them and all their requests for increasing the exports of cloth to Australia were turned down.

Mr. Manu Subedar: My question was with regard to the relative prices of these two commodities—whether we should buy wheat at the highest price and sell cloth at the lowest price—whether the prices could not be adjusted in a manner which will bring the full realisation of the value into the pockets of Government?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Food is purchased from Australia at the current export price and cloth is also exported at our current export prices. If there is any disparity in the price or the percentages of increase over the pre-war level, the question will be examined.

EXPORT OF GROUNDNUTS

424. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state what was the total amount of groundnut export permitted in 1943-44, 1944-45 and 1945-46?

(b) Why was the groundnut export permitted in spite of the intention of the Assembly that such export should not be permitted so long as there was any apprehension with regard to famine?

(c) What was the specific negotiation with the United Kingdom authorities in the matter of groundnuts?

(d) Were the groundnuts exported to the United Kingdom purchased on British Government's account in India?

(e) Is it true that such purchases went on even after Government announced that they were not permitting any further exports?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (1) The total export during the three years was 670,828 tons

(b) Exports were prohibited from the 27th February 1946 and no exports have been allowed after that date

(c) There was no such negotiation

(d) Ministry of Food, who are the sole importers in U. K. purchased the groundnuts from the London offices or the London Agents of the established shippers in India

(e) We have no definite information but it is understood that some purchases were made. No quantities were however allowed to be exported. The unshipped holdings with the shippers are being re-sold in the market for internal consumption

Mr. Manu Subedar: Is it a fact and can the Honourable Member give information to this House that the British Ministry of Food go on purchasing in the Indian market even after the prohibition was announced and is it further a fact that considerable quantities of groundnut were exported from Indian State ports subsequently to the prohibition mentioned by the Honourable Member?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The allegation is not correct. At the end of February when the export of groundnuts was suspended, H. M. G. had in their stocks in India about 35 thousand tons of groundnuts which were not allowed to be exported by the Government of India. 33,000 tons of these have been resold by them to the people from whom they were purchased and the small remaining quantity of about 2,000 tons is also not allowed to be exported and they contemplate reselling it in India.

EMPLOYMENT OF SUPERANNUATED PERSONNEL IN COMMERCE DEPARTMENT

425. *Seth Sukhdev: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state

(a) how many officers who have already reached the age of 55 are still being continued in service in the departments under his control,

(b) how many pensioners were re-employed during the war and are still being continued,

(c) how many of these superannuated men were specialists and technical men, and

(d) when will the services of these men be dispensed with?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) Three officers

(b) Ten

(c) Seven of them are either specialists or technical men.

(d) The services of four of them are likely to be dispensed with by the end of February 1947. The services of the other officers will be dispensed with as soon as qualified men to hold their posts are available.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is there any attempt by these special officers to train Indians under them, so that there may be no need to get other specialists from abroad?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The training will take considerable time. In a recent conference, for example, about the training of engineers and surveyors for our Mercantile Marine Department, when we went into the question, we found that the training will take several years. We have already commenced the training of our own officers. As soon as our officers are trained, we will see that the British officers are replaced as soon as possible by Indians.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know for how many years the Honourable Member will still go on indenting upon foreign specialists?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: For some of the Departments where technical men are required, it will take five to ten years.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Has the Honourable Member considered the desirability of asking such German internees in this country as are qualified to be released so that they may be useful for some of the Departments?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: That is an entirely separate question and I require notice of it.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Has the Honourable Member considered the training of some of the officers of the Indian Navy whose services have been dispensed with by the Defence Department and whether some of these men could not be trained up as they would want shorter training than the general public? Will the Honourable Member consider whether some of them cannot be absorbed in the services?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Very few such officers are available. As a matter of fact we require eleven officers and in spite of our best efforts, we have not been able to get more than four so far for training. Attempts are being made to get such persons and we are approaching all sources to find people who could be recruited for further training. If there are any Indian Naval officers, we will be only too glad to have them.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Is the Honourable Member aware that there are several hundred officers—their number is of the order of 2,200—of the Indian Navy who have served Government faithfully for five years and whose services have been dispensed with from the Indian Navy? As these men had worked on the water, would they not be found suitable by Government for training up some of the jobs which he has mentioned?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: None of these 2,200 men mentioned by the Honourable Member have got any elementary training for engineering or surveying. If any of them are available we will be only too glad to have them. We have sent advertisements to the newspapers and we have sent information to the Association of the Dufferin old cadets and various other bodies. If the Honourable Member has got any officers in his mind, he has only got to request them to apply to me.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqui: May I ask who has fixed this period of seven years for training? Were they Indians or non-Indians?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I think it was a Committee consisting of both Indians as well as non-Indians.

Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable Member tell us the reason why the Indian officers, particularly of the Merchant Navy, are so difficult to be had? Is it not on account of a lot of difference in the wages of the officers employed by the Indian Companies and by the European Companies? Is the Honourable Member aware that in the Foreign companies the Indian officers, though qualified in the same manner as European officers, are not paid the same wages?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The difficulty is that there are so many shipping companies in existence and so many new shipping companies under formation that all available personnel is recruited by them and we feel the difficulty in recruitment.

IMPORT AND EXPORT CONTROL DEPARTMENT

426. *Seth Sukhdev: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state

(a) how many officers were employed in the Import and Export Control Department at the end of war and how many are employed now;

(b) whether it is a fact that main work of issuing licences has been transferred to Ports? If the reply to (a) above is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state why so many officers are still kept in the Import and Export Department in New Delhi; and

(c) whether it is a fact that the number of officers issuing import licences in New Delhi is now five against three in the last year?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) The number of officers in the Import and Export Control Organizations was 25 and 20 respectively at the end of the war as against 32 and 21 at present

(b) As export licences are as a rule issued by the Export Trade Controllers at ports, there was no occasion to transfer any work in this connection from the headquarters to ports

As regards import licences, Import Trade Controllers at the ports had all along been dealing with the bulk of the items falling in Part IV of the Import Trade Control Schedule. As a result of the liberalisation of the licensing policy and in order to save time and facilitate the work of issuing licences Government of India considered it advisable to transfer licensing of all items in Part IV of the Schedule referred to except certain items, to ports beginning with the July—December 1946 period. The Chief Controller of Imports at the headquarters has still to deal with the licensing work connected with excepted items in Part IV. He is also responsible for licensing of all items falling under Part V of the Schedule.

His office has still to deal with a substantial number of applications for licences and the present strength of the officers is considered just sufficient for the efficient and speedy disposal of the work that comes to be dealt with here. It may be added that with the end of the war and with the re-opening of trade with more and more countries there is an unprecedented increase in the volume of work at the headquarters as well as at the ports. Position will however be reviewed as soon as conditions warrant and any surplus staff found as a result of the review will be released.

(c) No. The number of Deputy Chief Controller of Imports authorised to issue Import Licences was five last year and that number has since been reduced to four.

PAY OF JUNIOR READERS IN GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, NEW DELHI

427, *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: (a) Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Lower Department be pleased to refer to the reply to parts (a) and (b) of starred question No. 740 of the 6th March, 1946 and state what action has been taken in regard to the fixation of pay of Junior Readers in the Government of India Press, New Delhi.

(b) Is it a fact that Labour Department letter No. A773(1), dated the 22nd March 1946, addressed to the Manager, Government Press, New Delhi, states that "the Governor General in Council has decided that the pay of a copyholder in unified scale on promotion to the post of a Junior Reader be fixed at the next stage of the Readers' grade, as his pay in the unified scale was substantive?"

(c) If so, why has this not been given effect to so far?

(d) Are Government aware that on account of the delay the copyholders concerned are suffering a loss of Rs. 10 to 12 p.m.?

(e) Is it a fact that in spite of the reply given to part (b) of starred question No. 1636, dated the 8th April, 1946, wherein he had said that "in certain cases a temporary copyholder in the unified scale, if appointed Reader is entitled to Rs. 67 p.m." they are being paid Rs. 55 p.m. only?

(f) Do Government propose to direct that they be paid at the revised rate with retrospective effect from 1st September, 1944?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) and (b) Orders have been issued in letter No. A774(1), dated the 22nd March 1946, that the pay of a Copyholder under the unified scale on promotion to the post of Junior Reader may be fixed at the next stage of the Readers' grade as if his pay in the unified scale was substantive. This was subject to the condition that as and when the unified scale of pay was abolished, the pay of the persons concerned should be re-fixed in the scale of Junior Readers on the basis of the orders which may be issued regarding the abolition of unified scales.

(c), (d) and (e) Effect has already been given to these orders, but cases which involved anomalies or difficulties of interpretation are still under consideration

(f) If it is found that any particular person is entitled to the revised rate, he will no doubt get the benefit of it with effect from the date from which he became so entitled

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: How long will it take the Honourable Member to revise those cases which are at present anomalous?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: Each one of these cases is under the separate consideration of the Controller of Printing and Stationery. I do not know how long he will take and how many cases he may have to refer to the Government; but I hope they will be finished very soon.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I ask if this matter is pending before the Pay Commission for inquiry?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: The Pay Commission is certainly looking into the cases of all the employees of the Press along with other cases

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What is this interim investigation into it? Is it by the Press Manager or by the authority of the Press?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: It is a question of applying the orders which were issued by Government on the 26th March 1946. These orders have been given effect to in most cases, but in some cases there is some doubt or dispute and these individual cases are now being considered

SUB-DIVISIONAL OFFICERS IN THE CENTRAL PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT

428. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that some Sub-Divisional Officers have been employed continuously for over fifteen years under the Central Public Works Department in New Delhi; if so, then names and reasons for continuous employment for such a long time,

(b) whether Government propose to lay down a rule that the maximum period of service at a stretch at a place will not exceed five years, and

(c) whether it is a fact that there are a number of unqualified overseers employed in New Delhi, if so, their number and reasons for same?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Yes. A list containing the names of 14 such officers is placed on the table. These officers were kept in Delhi on administrative and other grounds.

(b) The principle underlying the Honourable Member's suggestion has recently been enunciated and accepted by Government but the exact rules to be issued are now under consideration.

(c) Yes. The number of unqualified overseers employed in New Delhi is 135, out of a total of 424 overseers at present employed in New Delhi. Unqualified men were engaged owing to the difficulty of obtaining suitable qualified candidates during war-time when there was an unprecedented expansion of the Central Public Works Department. It is now proposed to replace these unqualified men by qualified persons as far as possible.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is it a fact that besides Delhi and New Delhi there are two more Circles consisting of eight divisions and 48 sub divisions where these Sub Divisional Officers could be posted or could be transferred?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: These officers could be transferred anywhere in India where the C P W D have got their divisions

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is the Honourable Member aware that when persons remain in charge of such offices in one place for 15 years this leads to corruption and most of the corruption today is due to the fact that some officers have become almost fixtures in particular places?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: As I told the House, Government have already accepted the principle that people should not be in one place for more than five years. Whether long continued stay in one place leads to more corruption than otherwise is a matter of opinion. I might add for the information of Honourable Members that these 14 officers have not always been in the same division. There are a number of divisions in Delhi and they have been transferred from one division to another. Out of all these people who have been continuously in Delhi I find three have been in the same division for over 15 years, one for over ten years and others for less than five years.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Member now go into the cases of persons who have been there for over 15 years and see that they are transferred to some place outside Delhi?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Why did the Honourable Member say "suitable qualified candidates"? Does he contemplate people who are qualified but who are not suitable?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: I did not say 'suitable qualified persons'. I merely said 'It is now proposed to replace these unqualified men by qualified persons as far as possible'.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: In the earlier portion of his answer the Honourable Member said, if I remember aright that qualified persons were rejected because they were not suitable and therefore unqualified persons were engaged.

Mr. President: It is all a question of the interpretation of the phrase.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is it a fact that some of the buildings or at least one of them which had lately fallen was under the supervision of some of these unqualified sub overseers and that the Government have incurred a loss of Rs. 50,000 on account of the negligence of some of these inefficient members of the staff or unqualified sub-overseers?

Mr. President: This does not arise out of this question.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: There are as many as 135 unqualified overseers working in New Delhi and Government have so far taken no steps to see that qualified persons are placed in these posts and the result is Government is incurring a loss.

Mr. President: That question does not arise.

INTRODUCTION OF UNIFIED SCALES OF PAY IN OFFICES UNDER CONTROLLER OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY

439. Mr. Tahiruddin Khan: Will the Secretary of Works, Mines and Power Department kindly state

(a) whether the Finance Department of the Government of India by their memos No F/44 (12-W-44), dated 19th August 1944 and F/44 (12) 1/44, dated

25th January 1945 introduced unified scale of pay for clerical personnel and proposed to place them in 3 grades viz, 'A', 'B' and 'C' the maximum qualification for entry to the grades being the Matriculation certificate,

(b) will Government kindly state why the benefits of the unified scale were denied to the non-matric junior clerks who were holding appointments in the superior clerical establishment prior to the issue of the Finance Department memoranda referred to above, and

(c) whether it is a fact that non-matric typists and non-matric clerks under the Controller of Printing and Stationery, India (Calcutta Branches) holding appointments prior to the issue of the Finance Department memoranda referred to above are not barred from the scope of the unified scales of pay though they have actually refused to elect the scale as they are already in receipt of pay higher than that of the 'C' grade of the unified scale of pay?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Yes, but the matriculation certificate was the minimum qualification and not the maximum

(b) The unified scale is not applicable to the junior clerks grade, as junior grade clerks are not required to be matriculates

(c) The unified scale of pay is only applicable to certain specified grades for which matriculation is the minimum educational qualification. Old entrants to such grades are also eligible to elect the unified scale of pay even if they are non-matric. It is a fact that some people have refused to elect the unified scale as they are already in receipt of pay higher than what the unified scale would give them. It was for this reason that option was given to people whether to elect the unified scale or not.

PROMOTION OF NON-MATRICULATES TO 'B' OR 'A' GRADE OF UNIFIED SCALE

430. *Mr. Tamisruddin Khan: (a) Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please refer to Labour Department U/O No A/481/88 S, dated 11th April 1945 and the Home Department U/O No HD/U/O, 1837-D/45/Estts (S), dated 17th April 1945 and state whether in reply thereto it was remarked by the Federal Public Service Commission in their U/O No F/11/18-45 (S), dated 25th May 1945, that non-matriculいたes in the inferior establishments should not on principle be allowed promotion to 'B' or 'A' grades of the unified scales of pay, and

(b) if answer to (a) above be in the affirmative, will Government please state why the non-matric junior clerks holding appointments prior to the introduction of the unified scale and belonging to the superior clerical establishment under the Controller of Printing and Stationery, India (Calcutta Branches) were deprived of the benefit of 'C' grade in the unified scale of pay?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) There appears to be some misunderstanding as the unified scales of pay cannot apply to inferior establishments, irrespective of whether the persons holding the appointments in the inferior establishment are matriculates or non-matriculいたes. The unified scales of pay are only applicable to those grades of the superior clerical establishment for which matriculation is the minimum qualification, subject to the reply which I have already given in answer to the previous question.

(b) The question regarding non-matric junior clerks has already been answered in reply to part (c) of the previous question.

UNIFIED SCALE OF PAY FOR NON-MATRIC CLERKS UNDER THE CONTROLLER OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY.

431. *Mr. Tamisruddin Khan: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please state whether.

(a) the Department of Labour in their U/O No A/481/88/S, dated 7th August 1945 to the Controller of Printing and Stationery India confirmed that the non-matric junior clerks should be brought on the unified scale of pay irrespective of the fact whether they are promoted to the next higher grade or not;

(b) whether the decision of the Labour Department at (a) above was duly communicated by the Controller to the Heads of the Presses and to the Deputy Controller of Stationery, Calcutta with reference to latter's U O I No G2/, 18619, dated 18th June 1945 for necessary action;

(c) if the answers to (a) and (b) above are in the affirmative, will the Government please state why the junior clerks under the Controller of Printing and Stationery, India (Calcutta Branches) have not so far been brought on to the unified scale of pay and allowed to draw the pay described for 'C' grade clerks; and

(d) whether Government propose to investigate into the matter and bring the junior clerks on the unified scale of pay with retrospective effect?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) No, Sir Government decided that if suitable matrices cannot be found, temporary promotion may be given to such non-matriculates as are considered fit to perform the duties of a clerk

(b) The decision of Government was communicated to the Deputy Controller of Stationery, Calcutta

(c) The unified scale of pay is not applicable to junior clerks

(d) Does not arise

BASIC SALARY OF JUNIOR CLERKS UNDER THE DEPUTY CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY CALCUTTA

432. *Mr. Tamisuddin Khan: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please state:

(a) whether the abnormal rise of prices specially in the case of essential necessities of daily life has ranged between 3 to 4 times the pre-war level, in Calcutta,

(b) whether the Central Pay Commission according to the ratio of high prices of essential foodstuffs has already awarded their views and expressed through daily newspaper that the basic salary for the junior clerks, no matter they are matrices or non-matrices should be Rs 100 minimum,

(c) whether the Deputy Controller of Stationery, Calcutta, has recommended the basic salary at Rs 50—8—80 for the junior clerk to the Controller of Printing and Stationery, India, New Delhi under his reference No G 8/2503, dated the 18th September, 1946, and

(d) if the answers to (a), (b) and (c) above be in the affirmative, whether Government propose to investigate into the matter and state the ratio calculated by the Deputy Controller of Stationery, Calcutta and the recommended basic salary for the junior clerks referred to in (c) above?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Prices of essential necessities of daily life have increased in Calcutta as in other places, but I am not aware of the exact percentage

(b) I am not aware of any such expression of views by the Central Pay Commission

(c) I understand that the Deputy Controller suggested this scale on a preliminary enquiry by the Controller of Printing and Stationery in connection with the work of the Central Pay Commission

(d) It is difficult to follow this question but the Honourable Member is no doubt aware that the entire question of scales of pay is under investigation by the Central Pay Commission

REMARKS OF M. MOLOTOV RE INDIAN DELEGATES IN PARIS PEACE CONFERENCE

†433. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state:

(a) whether the attention of Government has been drawn to the remarks of M. Molotov upon the attitude and the role played by the Indian delegate in

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

Paris Peace Conference and Sir Samuel Ranganadhan's reply that the Indian representatives acted independently of Great Britain's Delegation, and

(b) whether Government of India has asked for full information about the statement made by their delegate?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) Yes

(b) Government received full information from their delegation during the Conference on all points of importance

REPRESENTATION OF TRIBAL PEOPLE IN THE ADVISORY COUNCIL OF CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY

†434. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state

(a) if the tribal peoples will be given full and real representation in the concerned Advisory Council of the Constituent Assembly, and

(b) how do Government propose to do this?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) and (b) I invite the attention of the Honourable Member to paragraph 20 of the Statement dated the 16th May, 1946, issued by the Cabinet Mission and the Viceroy. It will be for the Constituent Assembly to set up an Advisory Committee and to determine its composition in terms of that paragraph

REPRESENTATION OF TRIBES IN EXCLUDED AND PARTIALLY EXCLUDED AREAS IN THE ADVISORY COUNCIL OF THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY

†435. *Prof. N. G. Ranga. Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state

(a) whether Government propose to give representation on any Advisory Council of the Constituent Assembly to the tribes inhabiting various areas known as Excluded and Partially Excluded areas,

(b) if so, in what Advisory Council and in what strength, and

(c) if so far, no decision has been taken, whether Government propose to give adequate representation to the All-India Excluded Areas and Tribal Peoples Association to champion their case?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a), (b) and (c) I invite the Honourable Member's attention to my reply to his question No. 434

REPRESENTATION OF WEAVERS, ETC., ON THE ADVISORY COUNCIL OF CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY

†436. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state if the forty million handicraftsmen, including the ten million weavers will be given adequate and proportionate representation on the Advisory Committee to the Constituent Assembly?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I invite the Honourable Member's attention to my reply to Question No. 434. It is not clear how handicraftsmen or weavers can be included in the Advisory Committee which is meant to deal with Tribal areas, Fundamental Rights and Minority Rights

RATIFICATION OF CONVENTIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATION CONCERNING MARITIME WORKERS

438. *Miss Maniben Kara: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state how many conventions of the International Labour Organisation concerning maritime workers have been ratified by Government?

(b) Are Government aware of the dissatisfaction among maritime workers because of the non-ratification and non-application of these conventions?

(c) If the answer to (b) above is in the affirmative, do Government propose to take steps to speed up the ratification of the conventions and make their application effective within a short period of time?

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) Three out of 13 conventions, excluding those which were adopted at the last Seattle Conference in June 1946

(b) No, Sir

(c) This does not arise

Miss Maniben Kara: I did not quite follow how many conventions of maritime workers have been ratified by Government?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Three out of 13 conventions, excluding those which were adopted at the last conference in June 1946

Miss Maniben Kara: Is the Honourable Member aware that all India Seafarers' Federation passed a Resolution demanding that the Government of India should ratify the conventions already passed because there is great dissatisfaction amongst the seafarers for not having this convention ratified?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The question of ratifying other conventions is under consideration. I may mention that though the Government of India have already adopted three out of 13 conventions, the Government of the United Kingdom have so far ratified only two out of 13

Miss Maniben Kara: In view of the fact that the Resolution has been passed recently at the maritime conference calling upon the Government to consult and invite the co-operation of the organisation of seafarers before any such ratification takes place, do I have the assurance of the Honourable Member that that procedure will be followed here also?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Their opinion also will be taken into consideration when the Government considers the question of ratification.

INTERNATIONAL MARITIME CONFERENCE AT SEATTLE, U S A

439. *Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state

(a) whether Government are aware that a number of conventions, recommendations and resolutions concerning the conditions of work and living of maritime workers were adopted by the International Maritime Conference at Seattle, United States of America in June this year,

(b) whether in view of the fact that the Government delegate to the above Conference voted for the recommendations, resolutions and conventions it is the policy of the Government to immediately ratify them, and

(c) what steps Government propose to take to speed up action on these resolutions, recommendations and conventions?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) Yes, Sir

(b) It will be the aim of Government to ratify or accept as many of the Conventions, Recommendations and Resolutions adopted at the Seattle Conference as possible after consultation with the various interests concerned

(c) The various Conventions, Recommendations and Resolutions adopted at the Seattle Conference are being examined departmentally and will, in accordance with the Constitution of the International Labour Organisation, be placed before the Legislature as soon as practicable

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I know whether the Government of India will place their decisions before the legislature for its consideration?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I have mentioned that as soon as Government decides to ratify any of the conventions, they will place the matter before the legislature

Miss Maniben Kara: With reference to part (a) of the question, is the Honourable Member aware that on the accommodation committee, Mr Mungat, one of the Advisers who attended this conference very strongly protested against the inadequate and most inhuman conditions of life which the seafarers in India are subjected to. Do I have the assurance of the Honourable Member that looking at the appalling conditions of the seamen in this country, particularly about accommodation, that something will be done immediately?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The Government are desirous of improving their conditions as soon as possible. But the Honourable Member will realise that it will require a number of changes before their lot can be improved and the question is therefore being examined as to how this can be done.

Mr. Mann Subedar: Will Government take the precaution of not ratifying any conventions in advance of such ratification by other countries who have resources and can go ahead? Is there any reason why India should—as she did about 15 years ago—ratify labour conventions in advance of countries which were competing with her, like Japan, Belgium, etc? Will the Honourable Member tell this House that Government will keep this consideration in mind?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: We will have to look to our own conditions and we cannot always go on the lines adopted by other countries.

(b) WRITTEN ANSWERS

CULTIVATION OF TEA IN INDIA

440. *Sri M. K. Jinachandran: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state if it is a fact that the Government of India propose to grant licences or give facilities for increasing the area of cultivation of tea in India? If so, what is the extent of the area or the nature of the facilities proposed to be given?

(b) Do Government propose to grant the licences and facilities to Indian newcomers instead of the established plantations?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) and (b) Extension of tea cultivation is governed by the provisions of the Indian Tea Control Act, 1938, section 26 of which empowers the Indian Tea Licensing Committee to issue permits for planting tea in any land not planted with tea on the 31st March 1943. The total permissible area for which permits could be issued during the period ending 31st March 1948, has been fixed at 9904 acres. Permits are granted by the Committee in accordance with the Tea New-Planting Rules, 1943, published in Part II, Section 3 of the Gazette of India, dated the 7th April 1945. These rules do not provide for the grant of permits to new-comers.

HOUSING ACCOMMODATION IN PROVINCES FOR OFFICERS OF THE CENTRAL PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT

441. *Seth Sukhdev: (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Works, Mines and Power please state whether the officers working under his Departments in various Provinces have housing accommodation provided for by Government?

(b) If the reply to (a) be in the negative when do Government propose building quarters for their employees?

(c) Is it a fact that the Executive Engineer in charge of Central Buildings, Karachi, had half of a bungalow during the beginning of war, and that now the whole bungalow has been requisitioned for him in a Co-operative Housing Society?

(d) Will Government please issue instruction to put a stop to this?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Only in certain cases.

(b) There is no general programme for construction of residential accommodation for Central Government officers working in various provinces. Each case, when it arises, is considered on merits.

(c) The information is not available, but is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

(d) Government have no authority to requisition any new buildings and hence the question of issuing instructions does not arise.

REQUISITIONING OF HOUSES AFTER THE TERMINATION OF WAR.

442. *Seth Sukhdev: (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Works, Mines and Power be pleased to state why houses are being requisitioned when the war is over?

(b) Do Government propose to pass orders, preventing the requisitioning of newly-built houses in order to encourage construction of a large number of houses?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Presumably the Honourable Member refers to requisitioning by the Government of India. Requisitioning of private buildings was stopped so far as the Central Government was concerned shortly after the war with Japan was over.

(b) Government have at present no authority to requisition any new property.

REPORTS OF THE REGE INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE ON ABUSES IN INDUSTRIES

443. *Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Labour Member please state—

(a) what steps Government have taken to remedy the many abuses existing in a number of industries brought to light by the reports of the Rege Investigation Committee,

(b) if no steps have been so far taken, whether Government propose to take early steps in that connection,

(c) if so, the steps that Government propose to take,

(d) whether it is a fact that the Rege Investigation Committee was appointed with a view to collect data for drawing up a plan of social security in pursuance of a resolution of the Standing Labour Committee,

(e) whether Government propose to take steps to draw up the plan of social security, and

(f) whether Government propose to appoint the mixed Committee as recommended by a unanimous resolution of the meeting of the Standing Labour Committee? If so, when?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: (a), (b) and (c) I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to my answer to question No. 413.

(d) Yes.

(e) and (f) I have in my answer to questions put by Mr. Gokhale given an indication of the steps that Government have taken. I hope to be able to make a full statement of the action that we propose to take on the Labour Investigation Committee's reports to the House at the next session.

RECALL OF GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES FROM SIMLA AND CALCUTTA TO NEW DELHI AND PRESSURE ON HOUSING IN NEW DELHI

444. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Works, Mines and Power please state how many Departments of Government have been recalled from Simla and Calcutta into New Delhi, which are they and why were they recalled?

(b) Has the pressure on living space in New Delhi increased on account of such action, and what steps do Government propose to take to relieve this pressure?

(c) What is the total square area released by (i) reduction in the Army activities and personnel, and (ii) withdrawal of the American Army and other personnel?

(d) How many houses belonging to Indian States in New Delhi were taken and which of them still continue under requisition?

(e) How many houses belonging to private individuals were taken and are still under requisition?

(f) When and by what process do Government intend to relieve the pressure on housing?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) A statement is laid on the table giving the names of sections or branches of Departments or offices of the Central Government brought to Delhi from Simla and Calcutta. This was done in the interests of efficiency and smooth working of the Departments concerned.

(b) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, attention is invited to the reply to part (b) of Starred Question No 48 to which a reply was given on the 29th October 1946

(c) (i) 1,53,893 sq ft

(ii) 3,27,181 sq ft

(d) 19 houses belonging to Indian States in New Delhi were placed at Government's disposal, of which 18 are still with Government

(e) 869 houses in Delhi and New Delhi belonging to private individuals were requisitioned by the Central Government of which 297 are still under requisition

(f) The whole question is now under the active consideration of Government

RECOMMENDATIONS OF TARIFF BOARD RE PROTECTION TO WAR-TIME INDUSTRIES

445. *Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state why nothing has been done so far to implement the recommendations of the Tariff Board as regards the protection to war-time industries?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Government's orders on eight of the Tariff Board's report out of the 15 received so far, will be issued shortly. The departmental examination of four more reports has been completed and steps have been taken to complete the examination of the remaining reports with the least possible delay. I may assure the Honourable Member that all possible steps are being taken to expedite the issue of orders on the Tariff Board's reports.

BAN ON ANY SECTION OF POPULATION ENTERING A PARTICULAR TRADE IN BRITISH INDIA

446. *Captain Syed Abid Hussain: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state whether it is a fact that within the limits of British India there exists no ban on any section of the population entering into a particular trade?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The question should have been addressed to the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies. It has accordingly been transferred to the list of questions for the 14th November 1946, when it will be answered by the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies.

INDIANS IN MAURITIUS

447. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) whether it is a fact that the Indians in Mauritius are not able to enjoy their legal rights due to the racial favouritism of the Government there,

(b) if it is a fact that only thirty minutes are assigned for Hindustani classes in Primary Schools, although the number of Indians in that country is more than fifty per cent of the whole population,

(c) if it is also a fact that, while teaching of French and English is compulsory, that of Hindustani is not so, and

(d) if it is further a fact that Indian girls after passing sixth class in Primary Schools are not allowed to pursue further studies in a Middle School or College unless they change their names into Christian names and their dress into European dress?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) The Government of India are not aware of any racial discrimination against Indians in the exercise of their legal rights

(b) Government have no information on this point

(c) The common medium of instruction is Creole or a corrupt form of French Indian languages are used occasionally. In the higher schools the teaching is conducted in English. The use of French and of the vernacular is allowed where it is found necessary

(d) The Government have no definite information on the point. Mr. Ridley, who was deputed to Mauritius to inquire into the condition of Indians there, however, reported in 1940 that there were practically no Indian girls attending secondary schools and that the fact that the present State-Aided Schools were denominational acted as a strong deterrent to Indian parents

REPRESENTATION OF INDIANS ON PUBLIC BODIES IN MAURITIUS

448. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) whether it is a fact that Indians are not given representation according to their population in the public bodies of Mauritius like the Municipalities and District Boards, and

(b) whether it is a fact that they are given only ten per cent representation on the above-mentioned representative bodies while their population is more than fifty per cent?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) and (b) According to the Report of Mr. Ridley, who visited Mauritius in 1940, there were two nominated Indian members in the Legislative Council which consisted of the Governor, eight ex-officio members, nine nominated members and ten elected members. There was no Indian elected member. Indians in Mauritius number about 270,000, that is, 64 per cent of the total population.

There were two Indian representatives on the Municipal Council of Port Louis, although Indians own no less than two thirds of the property in the Municipality.

The Township Boards at Curepipe, Beau Bassin and Rose Hill are nominated by the Governor. There was an Indian Member in two of the Boards. But this did not satisfy the needs and aspirations of the Indian residents, and the introduction of a more democratic system was being demanded.

RESTRICTIONS ON PROPAGANDA OF HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE IN MAURITIUS

449. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations be pleased to state

(a) whether there are any restrictions on the propaganda of Hindustani languages and Hindustani reviews in Mauritius; and

(b) whether it is a fact that Prof. Basudev Bishan Dayal, a Hindu Missionary in Mauritius, was twice sentenced for defying the restrictions imposed upon him for carrying on his missionary work?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) The Government are not aware of any such restrictions.

(b) According to the information available with the Government of India Mr Basudev Bishan Dayal was prosecuted under Defence Regulations on February 22, 1944, for holding, in breach of Regulations, a public meeting without having previously applied to the Commissioner of Police for authorisation to do so. Before prosecution he had been warned both orally and in writing of the consequences of persisting in his course of action. In July 1944, as a result of a reference by the Government of India, information was received that he had been released before expiration of the full sentence.

The Government of India have no information about any later prosecution.

INDIAN LABOURERS IN MAURITIUS

450. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Palwal. Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) whether it is a fact that Indian labourers in Mauritius get a small wage ranging from one rupee four cents to one rupee fifty cents only,

(b) whether it is a fact that in Indian labourer in that country with five or six children is given only two unventilated small rooms made of sugar cane straw,

(c) whether it is a fact that Ayurvedic or Unani medicines are not allowed to be sold in the market of Mauritius, and

(d) whether it is a fact that Indians are given fresh posts in Government Department if they change their names into Christian ones?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. (a) The Government understand that wages of labourers in Mauritius are in that neighbourhood. In July 1946 an island wide increase of 25 per cent. was sanctioned by the minimum wages Board.

(b) According to Mr. Ridley, the commonest type of house on the estates is made of cane trash. In some cases also stems, bamboo and tamarind are used for walls and partitions, and cane trash for the roof. The houses visited were clean and kept in good repair, and housing in general was quite satisfactory.

Off the estates the housing condition of Indians was not so satisfactory. The houses were usually of an inferior type. Only about 13 per cent. of the labour employed in the estates resided on the estates.

According to the report of the Commission of enquiry into the disturbances which occurred in Mauritius in 1943, in some estate camps in the North the old cheap type of hut built of loose stone walls plastered with cow dung, with a low thatched roof and poor ventilation, was being replaced by rows of more modern rooms with concrete walls and corrugated iron roofs. The living space, however, provided in these rooms to labourers who had families of several children was inadequate.

(c) The Government have no information on the point.

(d) The Government have no information to this effect. But Mr. Ridley said that it was not possible to give an accurate list of Indians employed in the various Departments since it was a common custom in Mauritius that when an Indian adopted another religion or European ways of living he ceased to regard himself as an Indian and was classed as a member of the general population. Moreover, not infrequently Indians adopted French names.

In dealing with applications for appointments, matters of transfer and promotion there was no proved racial discrimination. Certain leading members of the Indian community had alleged such racial discriminations but the allegation was difficult to prove or disprove.

HINDUSTANI TEACHERS IN MAURITIUS

451. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state

(a) whether it is a fact that Hindustani teachers in Mauritius get a very low pay as compared to teachers of French and English,

(b) whether it is a fact that the property qualifications in Mauritius to become a voter are as high as Rs 25 per mensem as rent or Rs 50 per mensem as salary or Rs 3,000 worth of property,

(c) whether it is a fact that Indians holding degrees of Indian Universities to practise law and medicine are not allowed to do so in Mauritius;

(d) what are the steps which Government propose to take to redress the above-mentioned grievances of our Nationals in Mauritius, and

(e) whether Government propose to send their ambassador to Mauritius to look after the interest of our Nationals there?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) The Government of India have no information on the point

(b) Yes

(c) Government have no information on the point

(d) No discrimination is involved in (b) above since the qualifications for Registration in the Electoral Roll are the same for everybody. As regards (a) and (c), Government will make enquiries and will take up the matter with His Majesty's Government if found necessary.

(e) There is no such proposal at present. The Government will, however, consider the suggestion.

LICENCES FOR EXPORT OF CASTOR OIL

452. Mr. Vadial Lalubhai: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state

(a) whether Government are aware that due to the present food shortage, all kinds of seeds and its export policy are controlled by the Food Department as a result of which, the control on the export of castor oil, which is not edible, affects the interests of the castor seed oil industry, as licences for the export of castor oil are not freely granted,

(b) if so, whether Government propose to consider the desirability of placing castor oil on the free list so that castor oil may be freely exported to the advantage of the local castor seed crushing industry and agriculture which would in turn benefit by the production of oil cakes,

(c) whether Government are aware that during pre-war times, India was exporting castor seed in large quantities and that during war time castor seed crushing industry had prospered, which is now going down as a result of the policy of Government to restrict the export of castor oil and also of not using it for locomotive lubrication, and

(d) if so, what steps do Government intend to take to avoid any harm being done to the oil seed crushing industry and to agriculture?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) to (d). The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given in this House on the 7th November 1946 to his starred question No 285

NUMBER OF INDIANS IN GERMANY

453. Mr. G. B. Dani: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state how many Indians are in Germany, and since how long?

(b) Are Government aware of the fact that Indians in Germany do not get food, clothings and any jobs according to their qualifications?

(c) Have the Government of India taken any steps either to relieve their difficulties or to call them back to India?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) There are estimated to be 92 Indians at present in Germany of whom 69 have hitherto been traced. It is not known exactly how long each has been in Germany but it is thought that most of them were living there at the beginning of the War

(b) and (c) The Government of India are aware that conditions in Germany entail hardship for the entire civilian population of all nationalities. The Indian Military Mission in Berlin is taking all possible steps to relieve distress among Indian nationals in Germany, to secure them extra food and clothing when necessary and to assist them in every way possible. They are also making every effort to secure passages as quickly as possible for all those desiring to return to India

NATIONALIZATION OF PETROLEUM COMPANIES

454. *Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state what policy has been adopted by the Government of India regarding nationalisation of established Petroleum Companies, such as Assam Oil Company and Burma Oil Company now operating in Assam, and whether under the present policy the Government of Assam has any authority to nationalise the Industry so far as operations in the Province itself are concerned?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: First part—No policy has been adopted by this Government in regard to nationalisation of established Petroleum Companies now operating in Assam or elsewhere

Second part—Does not arise. The question is for the consideration of the Government of Assam

HYDRO-ELECTRIC PROJECTS IN ASSAM

455. *Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state whether the Government of Assam asked for any assistance from the Government of India in the matter of carrying out their Hydro-electric projects in the Province? If so, do Government propose to grant any assistance?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: The reply to the first part is in the affirmative

The Central Technical Power Board have made a preliminary survey of all the potential loads in areas which could be commanded by hydro-electric projects in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills at the end of September 1946 and they hope to send in the near future a Project Officer to make a reconnaissance survey of sites in these Hills in consultation with the officers of the Assam Government. They also propose to send another Project Officer shortly to start the examination of the prospects for nursery power developments to the north and south of the Brahmaputra and to the west of Gauhati in the Kamrup District. The Central Technical Power Board will then be in a better position to advise the Government of Assam how they might best proceed in the matter

REGISTERED TRADE UNIONS IN TEA ESTATES

456. *Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state how many registered Trade Unions are there in Tea Estates, showing separately unions in the Indian and European-owned Tea Estates?

(b) Are the Government aware that Tea plantation labourers are mostly illiterate, and that they are themselves unable to form a Trade Union?

Mr. S. C. Joshi: (a) According to information available with the Government of India it appears that there are six registered trade unions in Tea Estates. No information showing whether they are in the Indian or European owned Tea Estates is available

(b) Yes.

REPEAL OF "CHIN HILL REGULATION"

457. *Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state whether it is a fact that British Indian Subjects are not allowed to go beyond Nihugarad in Naga Hills without a permit from the Political Agent of the Manipur State?

(b) Are Government aware that Naga Hills is a British territory and that permits are required even for a journey to Kohima, which is the headquarter town of Naga Hills?

(c) If the replies to (a) and (b) above are in the affirmative, under what provisions of law are such permits demanded, and do Government propose to abolish this restriction immediately?

(d) Are Government aware that under an ancient Regulation called "Chin Hill Regulation" introduced by the Government of India the district and Police Officers known as Superintendents are competent to evict British Indian Subjects from Hill districts and Hill areas within twenty-four hours? If so, do Government propose to repeal this Regulation forthwith?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a), (b) and (c) It is a fact that under the Eastern Frontier Regulation of 1873 no one other than officers on Government duty and British Indian residents of Manipur and the Naga Hills may go beyond a certain line in the Naga Hills without a pass. The territory in point is part of an Excluded Area and is therefore in the charge of the Governor of Assam acting in his discretion. The restrictions have already been relaxed in the case of members of any political groups wishing to visit the areas concerned, and the question whether they should be further liberalized or removed is under consideration.

(d) Yes. Under Regulation V of 1896, which has been extended to the Hill areas of Assam, the Superintendent or Deputy Commissioner if satisfied that the presence of any person who is not a native of such area is injurious to the peace or good administration of the area, may for reasons to be recorded in writing order such person to leave the area within a given time.

Government are considering what steps should be taken in regard to or modification in this regulation.

RETURN TO IMPHAL IN MANIPUR STATE OF EVACUATED INDIAN TRADERS

458. *Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state if the British Indian Traders who had evacuated from British Reserves of Imphal in the Manipur State and whose land and other properties were forfeited by the Political Agent of Manipur have been allowed to return to Imphal and resume their business?

(b) Have all of their landed properties, buildings and movables been returned to them? If so, when?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) and (b) I am placing on the table of the House for the information of the Honourable Member a copy of the Orders passed by His Excellency the Governor of Assam on August 14, 1946, which inter alia make it clear that British Indian Traders are free to enter the British Reserve in Manipur and also provide that the houses, other properties and any available money due on account of rent, etc., should be made over to the traders concerned. Detailed information of the dates on which the various houses and other properties etc. were returned is not readily available.

ORDERS OF THE GOVERNOR OF ASSAM

Shillong, the 14th August 1946

Read—Petitions of certain Indian merchants as in the enclosed list and from other persons for permission for return to the British Reserve in Manipur

Order—His Excellency the Governor is pleased to order that

(1) As there is no law excluding foreigners the petitioners and other Indian traders including those who never forfeited their right to the patta held by them, should be allowed ingress into the British Reserve in Manipur,

(2) Applications for new leases of lands they formerly held should be considered sympathetically by the Political Agent if the land is not required for other purposes

(3) Such of the petitioners and other persons, already given permission to return to Imphal, as may be granted new leases should be liable to pay their land revenues and taxes in arrear, if any, for old ones, and this should be a condition precedent to the grant of a new lease

(4) Only one shop site should be settled with each trader with an additional site for a garage where necessary.

(5) They should be allowed possession of their houses and other properties in the British Reserve in Manipur and, those who present such claims, be given any available money due to them, e.g., rent collected from the Military authorities or other tenants. But they should be left to claim for further redress if there are any parties whom they can sue and to file judicial applications in the Court of the Political Agent in Manipur

(6) The above orders should take effect immediately

R W GODFREY,

459. [Cancelled].

UNSTARRED QUESTION AND ANSWER

CENTRAL MARITIME BOARD FOR INDIA

67. Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state

(a) whether Government propose to set up a Central Maritime Board composed of representatives of seafarers, shipowners and Government on the lines of such bodies in the United Kingdom and other countries,

(b) if the answer to (a) above is in the affirmative, when do Government propose to take this step, and

(c) what procedure do they propose to follow?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The U. K. National Maritime Board is not a tripartite organisation but only a bipartite one, comprising representative of shipowners and seafarers. The Government of India do not propose at present to set up a Maritime Board in India along the lines of the U. K. Maritime Board. They have, however, under consideration the question of setting up a Maritime Labour Advisory Committee comprising representatives of Government shipowners and seafarers to advise Government on maritime labour problems.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

AMERICAN SURPLUS FOOD STORES HANDED OVER TO GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Secretary of the Food Department please state when the American officials handed over the surplus food stores to the Government of India?

(b) Who took charge of these stores on behalf of the Government of India?

(c) Has the Food Department accurate list of the stores handed over the Government of India and the places where this foodstuff is lying?

(d) Is it a fact that the foodstuff is still in the possession of the Army personnel and the Food Department has not the correct record of the quantity available for disposal at a particular place?

(e) Are Government aware that the purchasers are often disappointed to find that the articles they have purchased are not at the place mentioned in the sale document?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) The U. S. A. Army handed over the surplus food stores to the Government of India during the period 20th March to 6th May 1946.

(b) The Army accepted transfer of charge on behalf of the Director General of Disposals, Government of India.

(c) The Food Department is in possession of the stock-lists for various depots as made out by the U. S. A. Army authorities.

(d) The stocks are still in the custodial charge of Army personnel. It is true that the quantities in some instances do not agree with the stock lists with the Food Department.

(e) In some instances articles sold are not available in the depot mentioned and for this reason of sale orders are made specifically subject to the stocks being actually available.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state what is the quantity that is not accountable, that is, the difference of the quantity handed over by Americans as in their books and the quantity which is now in the books of the Disposals Directorate?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The total quantity mentioned in the stock list was 58,000 tons, and the quantity not accounted for is about 8,000 tons.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Was no one from the Food Department present to verify the stocks and the lists when the stocks were handed over?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The stocks were handed over in a very short time in a summary way. The items handed over were very large in number and scattered. It was not possible for the army personnel to verify the stocks before they were actually taken over.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Has this been communicated to the army authorities and the American authorities who handed it over and who might be under the impression that they handed over 8,000 tons more than was actually handed over?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The accounts are now being made up and if will be seen what the deficiency is and what it is due to, and then the matter will be taken up.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: What is the value of the foodstuff that is lost?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The total value is about 8 crores of rupees. I cannot say what the value is of these 8,000 tons because they refer to various items.

APPOINTMENT OF MR V K KRISHNA MENON AS AMBASSADOR FOR WESTERN COUNTRIES

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that he has appointed Mr V K Krishna Menon as his personal travelling Ambassador for the Western Countries,

(b) if the answer to (a) above be in the negative, will Government please state in what capacity he was sent to interview M. Molotov and now to the United States of America,

(c) the terms of his appointment, his salary and allowances, and

(d) will Government place on the table of the House a copy of his report which he is said to have submitted to Government on his recent discussions with the Soviet Foreign Commissar M. Molotov?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) The question of appointing Mr V K Krishna Menon to explore possibilities of establishing diplomatic relations with certain countries in Europe has been under consideration. It was considered desirable to make an informal and semi-official approach at first before a formal approach was made. Meanwhile he was asked to meet various representatives of foreign Governments in London and elsewhere on behalf of the Vice President to convey the greetings of the Interim Government and to state that we desired to develop friendly relations with those countries.

(b) In view of the food scarcity in India it was decided to approach the Government of the U S S R and to request them to send wheat or rice to India. This request was sent direct to Moscow and as M. Molotov, the Foreign Minister of the U S S R, was then in Paris for the Peace Conference, Mr V K Krishna Menon was requested to pay a personal visit to him to convey this request as well as the greetings of the Interim Government. He carried with him a personal letter from the Vice-President to M Molotov. Mr Krishna Menon is now functioning as an alternate delegate with the Indian Delegation to the United Nations General Assembly.

(c) Mr Krishna Menon has been working in an honorary capacity and has been paid only his travelling expenses. While acting as a member of the Indian Delegation to the United Nations General Assembly, he will receive the same allowances as other non-officials on the Delegation.

(d) It is not customary to place confidential reports on the table of the House. It may be stated, however, that the conversations with M Molotov were very friendly and he expressed his willingness to exchange diplomatic representatives with India. It was proposed that this might be gone into further in Moscow in December next.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: In view of the known pro-communist views of Mr Menon and his close association with the Communist party in Great Britain, may I know whether Mr Menon was the right man to have been selected for negotiation with the Russian Government?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Mr Menon was chosen obviously because he was considered an excellent person for this kind of work. I will not go into the Honourable Member's insinuation about his communist views, etc., I also hold communist views in a large number of matters. As a matter of fact the result of Mr Menon's visit to Paris to meet M Molotov has been very fortunate for us, as Honourable Members might see from what is happening in the United Nations Assembly where a large number of countries are supporting us in our stand in South Africa, and in other matters.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Will the Honourable Member tell us whether any party other than the head of the State can send such personal and unofficial ambassadors on the diplomatic plane?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Obviously, it has been done by me.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Will the Honourable Member kindly consider the desirability of consulting international lawyers as regards international etiquette?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The Government of India follows international etiquette and also chooses to function, as far as possible, as an independent Government.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Facts are different from fiction.

Mr. President: That is an argument.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I ask the Honourable Member whether it was a Cabinet decision or a decision taken by the Honourable Member himself?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: It was a decision taken by me in consultation with all the members of the Cabinet.

REDUCTION IN PRICES OF MATCHES

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please explain how the prices of matches have been reduced, since the Honourable the Finance Member made his statement in this connection during the last Budget Session?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I am glad to be able to answer this question. Yesterday there was a supplementary question on this subject by my Honourable friend Mr Manu Subedar which I rather misunderstood and to which I think I gave a misleading reply. The correct position is this. The size of match box most commonly produced in India contains 50 to 60 match sticks. At the time the Finance Member made his budget announcement, a box of 60 matches was priced at 9 pies. Subsequent to it the match companies agreed to place on the market a box of 50 matches priced at 6 pies. There were no changes in the prices of other sizes but these are not produced in any appreciable quantity.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Being a very inveterate smoker I am a very heavy consumer of matches. May I know whether the Honourable Member has noticed persistent deterioration in quality, so that while the price position is as the Honourable Member said the quality has gone down. Will Government take some steps in order to get this wood impregnated and have the quality improved?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I think I explained the Government's position on this subject in a reply I gave to the Honourable Member yesterday. We are looking into the matter.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Is the Honourable Member aware that there is a black-market even in matches?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I am not aware, but it is quite conceivable.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Is he aware further that one box of matches is being sold at 8 to 12 annas in the city?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: It is scandalous.

PUBLICATION OF REPORTS AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF TARIFF BOARD

Maharajkumar Dr. Sir Vijaya Ananda: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state whether Government propose to publish in full all the 14 reports and recommendations submitted by the Tariff Board before passing final orders on them?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: No, Sir. The publication of Tariff Board's reports in advance of the announcement of Government's decisions thereon may lead to the encouragement of speculative activities in anticipation of action to be taken by Government.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I ask the Honourable Member if before taking decision the Government will place the views of the Tariff Board in particular matters before the Standing Committee which advises him?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: What the Government propose doing is this. There are two stages at which they will invite public criticism. At the time when the Tariff Board is making enquiries, they consult both the manufacturers and the consumers about the nature of protection or subsidy to be given to some industries, and secondly, after Government take the decision and before they introduce legislation for the purpose of granting protection or subsidy Government propose to consult public on the point.

Maharajkumar Dr. Sir Vijaya Ananda: Are Government prepared to consult the industries as well?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The industry concerned has got full opportunity of placing its case before the Tariff Board when the enquiry is held.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I ask the Honourable Member to inform the House whether Government will consult the Standing Committee on this Department with regard to any particular recommendation of the Tariff Board before they come to final decisions?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The Standing Committee, as the Honourable Member is aware, meets about twice a year and we cannot keep the recommendations of the Tariff Board pending till the meetings of the Standing Committee are held, as by doing so, we will be defeating the very object of giving protection to industries which stand in need of protection. If at the time when a meeting of the Standing Committee is called, certain recommendations are pending, we will consider the suggestion of placing such recommendations before them.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Is there any rule which the Standing Committee should meet only twice a year? Is it not possible for the Government to hold the meetings of the Standing Committee as often as the necessity arises?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: It is difficult to call the meeting every time because you may be aware that over 100 applications have been made to Government for protection and the policy of Government is not to keep the matter hanging. As soon as a report is received, it is examined by the Department and as soon as the departmental examination is over, Government reach a decision and it is not always practicable to consult the Standing Committee. But if a meeting of the Standing Committee is called and at that time certain matters are pending decision before the Government, Government will consider the advisability of placing these matters before the Committee.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Will the Government also consider the desirability of placing any negative decisions they may come to before the House in order to give the House an opportunity to consider the recommendations of the Tariff Board?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: That is a matter which the Honourable Member can raise by questions.

ANNOUNCEMENT RE THE SUPPLY OF ASSEMBLY AGENDA ETC TO MEMBERS ON ACCOUNT OF THE IMPOSITION OF CURFEW ORDER IN DELHI

Mr. President: I have to inform Honourable Members that on account of the imposition of curfew order in the city of Delhi, the members of the menial staff, most of whom live in the affected area had to leave office yesterday before dusk. It was, therefore, not possible to circulate the supplementary agenda for to-day as well as certain other papers to Honourable Members at their residences last night. I may add that if the situation does not improve the papers instead of being circulated to Members at their residences will be supplied to them in the chamber, as far as practicable.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) When will the papers be circulated?

Mr. President: During the course of the day.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO STANDING COMMITTEE ON PILGRIMAGE TO HEJAZ.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Member for External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations) Sir, I beg to move

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in such manner as the Honourable the President may direct, one Muslim member to serve on the Standing Committee on Pilgrimage to the Hejaz vice Sir Hassan Suhrawardy deceased, for the unexpired portion of the life of the Committee constituted on the 1st April, 1944 and due to expire on the 31st March, 1947."

Mr. President: The question is—

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in such manner as the Honourable the President may direct, one Muslim member to serve on the Standing Committee on Pilgrimage to the Hejaz vice Sir Hassan Suhrawardy deceased, for the unexpired portion of the life of the Committee constituted on the 1st April, 1944 and due to expire on the 31st March, 1947."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President: I have to inform Honourable Members that for the purpose of election by means of the single transferable vote of one Muslim member to the Standing Committee on Pilgrimage to the Hejaz, the programme of dates will be as follows

1. Nominations to be filed in the Notice Office upto 12 Noon on Wednesday, the 13th November
2. Election, if necessary, will be held on Friday, the 15th November in the Assistant Secretary's room in the Council House between the hours of 10-30 a.m. and 1 p.m.

ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES (TEMPORARY POWERS) BILL—concluded

Mr. President: The House will now proceed to further consideration of the motion moved by the Honourable Dr. John Matthai, namely

"That the Bill to provide for the continuance during a limited period of powers to control the production supply and distribution of, and trade and commerce in, certain commodities, as amended, be passed."

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions Muhammadan Rural) Sir, I do not want to continue my speech further, but I will simply ask a few questions, and I would request the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies to reply to them when he gets up for his final speech.

My first question is this The Honourable Member himself is anxious to lower the price level of articles, but will not the method he has adopted in this particular Bill raise the prices instead of lowering them? We know that the prices can only be lowered by competition in the trade, and what creates an enemy of the trade is monopoly, hoarding and combines, and it is this decision which he is now introducing in this particular Bill

My second question is this There has been a good deal of complaints about corruption of officials which has never in the past, since the time when Queen Victoria took charge of Indian Administration in 1858, been on such a large scale as it is at present This is due to the fact that Government has exposed its officials to great temptations Their fixed purchasing power is lowered and the temptation is increased Has the honourable gentleman done anything to reduce the temptation?

My third question is that all the supporters of my honourable friend to-day in the Assembly have been vigorously opposing the introduction of control through the period of four or five years Now they are asked by vote to put it on the Statute Book We will no doubt drink the cup but it will be Socrates cup Still we will drink it cheerfully

My fourth point is that the difficulty of the stockists is there The stockists really raise the price level They are a source of great nuisance In spite of the fact that a permit is given to them, they refuse to supply, and raise the question that the article is not there, and they sell to those persons to whom it is convenient to sell for one reason or other Will he now take steps to abolish these intermediaries both in iron and steel as well as in the textile trades? These intermediaries are a source of great trouble to everyone.

My fifth question is this Isn't it a fact that in the case of the cotton quota, at least in the United Provinces the big manufacturers who use cotton as their raw material have taken up the entire quota The result is that the smaller industries are altogether starved So when the quota is given in the manner dependent on the Government, then the men who always secure the deal are the persons who are very rich and who can afford to approach the Government and secure the quota I know in the case of the United Provinces the quota has been exhausted and taken up by a few manufacturers of cotton and the poorer people who really carry on the cotton industries and the smaller trades have nothing left

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadian Rural) I would like to ask the Honourable Member why mica has been included in clause 2 Mica is an article of export Why should we not be allowed to export it freely to other countries?

As regards the Act itself, I would like to make three or four suggestions Sanction under Section 1 can be given under Clause 11 by any public servant for prosecution. This is a very important matter. I would urge upon the Honourable Member to issue instructions that a person not below the rank of a District or First Class Magistrate should be empowered to give sanction

Then as regards the summary proceedings for which provision is made in clause 12 to try offences summarily It has no doubt been copied from the [Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar] previous Ordinance or rules made under the Defence of India Rules. But this may not be necessary in peace time. Except in exceptional cases, summary proceedings should not be allowed. Those instructions may kindly be sent by the Department.

Thirdly, in various cases in which some of us have had to appear, we have not been able to find the copies of the latest rules and orders, and at the time of the prosecution of a man, the judge did not have a copy of the orders which the accused was supposed to have contravened. The various prohibitions and injunctions have not been made available to the public and without knowledge of these they have been charged with various offences. The Bill says the Gazette notification is enough. But various other orders are also issued and they must be made public from time to time.

Lastly, the Honourable Member is fully aware that this Bill which is a short one embodies 27 other orders, each one of which is a Statute by itself. These orders have got extensive operation and value. I do not know whether the Honourable Member himself has had sufficient time and opportunity to look into every one of these orders and as to how they have been worked during the war and after the war. A number of these orders went up to the High Courts and the Courts suggested modification in them. I would urge the Honourable Member to review these matters and if necessary create small committees of this House to sit with him in respect of every one of these orders, with respect to future orders. He may kindly place them before his own departmental committees or small sub-committees of this House to find out whether those orders are oppressive or harsh.

These are the suggestions I place before the Honourable Member, because this measure is a copy of the Ordinance which itself is a copy of the rules framed under the Defence of India Rules and other rules, to which we were not a party. I am not condemning the authority of the sponsor of this Bill. Now that war conditions are over let us be a little more careful and not allow this Act and the rules to be oppressive to the general public.

Mr. President: I might just remind the Honourable Members of the limitations of this debate. This is the third reading and the debate should be restricted only to the amendments and the alterations made during the consideration stage. Further I find the same thing is being repeated by Member after Member. I was not present in the House yesterday from 4 to 5 O'clock in the evening. But it appears the discussion is again going to be repeated. I should warn Members against this kind of repetition. If I find it so, I do not propose to allow it.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: At the third reading we can throw out the Bill.

Mr. President: That is present to my mind.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: These are all the implications. Whether they have been touched in the second reading or not, I can still appeal to the House to throw out the Bill. Of course, I am not going to do that!

Mr. President: That is exactly the point, if a Member wants to oppose the Bill and vote against it. But Members who wish to support the Bill should not again repeat arguments by a further speech.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: We are not opposing. But we must have our say.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadan Rural). The scope of discussion must be the same whether a person opposes it or not.

Sreejuti Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam Valley Non-Muhammadan). I draw the attention of the Honourable Member to Clause 11 of this Bill and ask whether the words "public servant" includes a police officer. In the past it has been interpreted that a charge sheet of a police officer is also a complaint so far as these clauses are concerned. This point ought to be made clear. The whole object of the Defence of India Rules was to take these cases out of the jurisdiction of the ordinary police. But it has been interpreted in the past that this 'report in writing' includes the charge sheet of the police.

Mr. President: What clause is he referring to?

Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Clause 11.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Guntur cum Nellore Non-Muhammadian Rural) I do not feel inclined to support this Bill. I am not generally opposed to such controls but the way in which these controls have been working in this country, does not recommend a Bill like this for the acceptance of this House. I think my Honourable friend, Mr. Ayyangar was right when he said that the time has come when the Government should review with the help of a few scientists, administrators, as well as economists, the way in which the various controls that had been instituted under the former Government had worked. It is more than a year since the war was over and I do not know why Government have not taken care to study the working of the Act and see that they are advised properly. Very recently the predecessor of my Honourable friend, Dr. John Matthai, and one of my leaders, Mr. C. Rajagopalachari, had expressed the view in a conference that he was personally in favour of removing some of these controls, especially those very important controls on textiles. There were so many criticisms of this view and I was wondering who was right among these two parties. The then Honourable Member on one side or the business people who were clamouring for these controls. Generally speaking we find in any country, even so in this country, business people are opposed to these controls but extraordinarily enough I find a number of businessmen coming forward as champions of these controls and I begin to wonder whom these controls were benefiting. It must be that these businessmen were being benefited by the controls. Has my Honourable friend Dr. John Matthai given sufficient care and study to this particular subject after Mr. Rajagopalachari had made his speech and before he gave his consent to this proposition of moving this Bill in this House? I know for a fact in actual practice in our villages these controls are being condemned by every body. It is true that controls are needed and they are being tolerated in England too. But what was the purpose behind the controls? To achieve equitable distribution of scarce goods as between different sections of the people in order that the poorer classes may be assured of their due share of the goods and in order that the rich people who have plenty of loose cash might not be able to run away with all the goods. What is happening in this country. The rich man can get whatever he likes in spite of these controls and in whatever quantities he likes. He has no value for money and there are people who have value for money and these are the black marketeers and police officials and various others who are supposed to administer these controls. They take away the money from these rich people for whom money has no value at all and give them all the goods that they want. Who suffers in the bargain? It is the poor people. Let us go into our villages and you will find that there is terrible scarcity. Go to a town you will find that every thing is to be found in abundance and the rich people in those towns are able to have all that they want but not the poor people. Therefore the primary object of these controls has been and is being defeated today. Therefore it is the duty of my Honourable friend to institute immediately an enquiry into this matter and see that the results thereof are obtained as soon as possible and see also that the controls to be continued under this Bill are either stopped or amended or properly administered, so that the primary object with which these controls are to be continued is really enforced and achieved.

Then there is the question of distribution between areas and areas. Take kerosene, for example, or match boxes. What is the manner in which these things are distributed between urban and rural areas? The other day the question of the distribution of sugar was raised and also the question of jaggery and gut. And we were told that those were matters of provincial concern. It is in this way that the ordinary people are being dismissed or tossed from pillar to post, between provincial government and the Central Government. The provincial governments already operate under this Act in regard to all these controls. The rural people have been suffering very badly. I have myself been a witness to the way in which rural people have been suffering. I am a rural man myself and I live in the village unlike many of my Honourable friends here and I know how it has become almost impossible for our villagers to go to a town and get their quota of kerosene or matches. Even in this regard an enquiry is most necessary.

Then there is the question of fighting the black marketeer. Under the instructions of Mahatma Gandhi a very large number of our Congress people have been trying to fight these black marketeers. I know for a fact that there are black marketeers in every group of people. I know that even within the Congress fold there are a number of people who are only four-anna members in name but who are carrying on black marketing. So also in the Muslim League and in every political organisation. Our duty is to fight them but how to fight them that is the most important consideration. The police are not our allies in fighting the black marketeers. So we have to fight the police also if we want to put down the black markets. There were cases where I was told that whenever our people tried to get hold of black marketeers redhanded, cases were instituted against these very same social workers who were catching the black marketeers by the very same policemen who were taking bribes from the black marketeers.

Then there are the revenue officials who had come to be appointed to various positions under these controls. In the Madras Presidency I was told that in the 25 districts where there used to be 75 Deputy Collectors there are today more than 500 Deputy Collectors. All sorts of temporary and probationary tahsildars, unconfirmed tahsildars and raw deputy tahsildars have all been promoted as Deputy Collectors over night and all these people have been entrusted with these very responsible positions with the result that every one of them within a year has come to make tens of thousands of rupees as black marketing profits. I know of a head constable who made 10,000 in one year. There was a tahsildar who made Rs. 65,000 in one year.

Then again how is it that while during the war our weavers in South India were able to get yarn enough to employ them for 20 days in a month, after the war they have come to be supplied with yarn which will give them only seven days work and for three weeks in the month they are obliged to be unemployed. What has happened after the war was over? It was not necessary for the Textile Department and its committees and officers to continue to supply cloth to the troops. Therefore all that supply should be available to the people as additional supply. But is that so? There must be somewhere some hole, somebody is burrowing into it and stealing the whole lot. This stuff may or may not be in circulation, but if it is it goes for the use only of the rich people. If it is not, I do not know what is happening to all that is being produced in our country.

The other day at question time it was said that there were cases where on the removal of these controls prices had gone up. But there are also cases where on the institution of these controls prices had gone up too. How do they fix these prices? I am glad that my Honourable friend Dr. John Matthai happens to be a distinguished economist. Therefore I would like him to apply his knowledge of the science of economics to this matter rather than his knowledge of administration. What is the manner in which these prices are fixed? Is it a fact that these prices are fixed at the cost price of the marginal firm or the firm which has got to be kept going, however inefficient, 16 may be, merely because we are so much short of supply and therefore this supply also is needed? If that is so, then immediately it happens that all other firms above this margin get a windfall of profit. Who benefits thereby? Not the consumer, not certainly the poor consumer, but only these fortunate producers above the marginal firm. Is it not necessary that some system should be instituted in regard to these price controls whereby it would be possible for the Honourable Member and the government to see that it is not the cost price at which the marginal firm is producing but the cost price of a normal firm of normal standards of efficiency should be taken into consideration, and if need be, all the other firms below this particular normal standard may be subsidised to some extent in order that they may keep going and might be enabled to go on producing and adding to our total surplus?

The other point has already been referred to—that is clause 11. It only means this, that there is a possibility for zulum by these policemen and various other officers—my Honourable friend suggests other than policemen—to be employed against the public. There has been any amount of zulum. Unfortunately it is on the wrong side, if this zulum had been used against these real black marketeers, it would have been something, but very often that is not the case. It is used against those people who are obliged to go and purchase these things in spite of the present short supplies and in spite of the high prices charged by these black marketeers and taking the stuff to their own homes. Whom are we to punish? The consumer? I think it was in this House sometime ago, somebody stated that every one has got to purchase these things whether one likes it or not. Every one necessarily becomes consciously or unconsciously, an abettor of this black marketing. Why? Because you have got to have these things. You cannot very well, if you are a smoker, get on without matches, the other day—and that was how I came to know of this particular piece of news which I gave to the Honourable Member this morning—I had a friend who wanted a match box, he wanted to purchase it but he was made to pay 12 annas for a small match box. Am I to condemn him? I may condemn him because he could afford to wait for a little longer. But the villager goes to town. He can spare only one day and not more within a month or couple of months,—I cannot condemn him merely because he is pressed for time and therefore he pays the black market price and purchases his cloth or jaggery or even his tobacco or matches or any of these things, which are under controlled prices. Therefore it is necessary for us to take care to see that these officers do not use their zulum against these consumers but against those who actually sell these things. It is also necessary to see that these supplies are apportioned properly so that each one has his share of his own supply, however small it may be, and he should not get more than that. If he gets more than that, he must be caught hold of.

There is only one other point I wish to make and that is this—in regard to these false statements—clause 10 whose false statements do you wish to punish? We want to make statements against various merchants and various officers whom we believe to be guilty in this wretched trade of black marketing. After all we cannot have completely authentic information in our possession.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Statements required of individual merchants and others—statistics.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I would like my Honourable friend to say that we would not come within the mischief of this particular clause.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: The general public giving information would not come.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I want an assurance anyhow from the Honourable Member that the general public which used to give information about any one who is dealing in this black market—either a merchant or any one of these rich people who take too much quantities for themselves, or the officers themselves—will not come within the mischief of this clause 10.

Mr. President: The language seems to be very clear it refers to a person who is giving information when required by any order

Prof. N. G. Ranga: If that is the explanation I am satisfied. It is for these reasons that I want the Honourable Member to bestow much greater care than what we are given to understand, and see that as soon as possible supplies are increased, so that either the controls will not become necessary, or the administration and controls can be carried on with much less trouble to the public than is the case at present.

Some Honourable Members: The question may now be put

Mr. President: The question is

"That the question be now put"

The motion was adopted

The Honourable Dr John Mattha: (Member for Industries and Supplies)
Sir, I do not wish to speak at this stage, because most of the general points that were raised this morning are already covered by the remarks I made yesterday. As for the practical suggestions which have been made regarding the moderation of the severity of the executive orders which may be issued, I will give the matter my most careful consideration.

Mr. President: The question is "That the Bill be amended by passing"

The motion was adopted

FOREIGN EXCHANGE REGULATION BILL

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan (Finance Member) Sir I move

"That the Bill to regulate certain payments, dealings in foreign exchange and securities and the import and export of currency and bullion, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal, Mr. K. G. Anbesagkar, Mr. H. D. Casley, Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad, Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi, Khwaja Mohammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson, Mr. P. J. Griffiths, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, Mr. Manu Sekhedar, Mr. P. B. Gole, Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddiar, Shri D. P. Karmarkar, Shri Satya Narayan Sinha and the Mover, with instructions to report on the opening day of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Sir, this Bill establishes a system whereby the foreign exchange transactions and connected payments may be regulated. At present the legal basis of foreign exchange control is contained in certain of the financial provisions of the Defence of India Rules which have been incorporated in the Emergency Provisions (Continuance) Ordinance. The Ordinance is due to expire on the 31st March 1947, and it is therefore necessary, if control over foreign exchange transactions is to be continued, for the required authority to be incorporated in a legislative measure. The Government have given very careful consideration to this matter and they have come to the conclusion that it is necessary to continue exercising control over foreign exchange transactions, not only in the interests of India but to ensure that the best use is made of our foreign exchange resources in implementing our programme of industrialisation and development of the country. Sir, apart from this, it is also necessary in virtue of our position as a member of the International Monetary Fund to promote exchange stability and to maintain orderly exchange arrangements. Before 1939 no exchange control existed in India. It was in September 1939 that the control was introduced as a war measure, in order to mobilise the foreign exchange resources of the country and to restrict the expenditure of foreign currencies. The object of this control was to enable us to make the fullest use of all available supplies for purposes directly connected with the prosecution of the war. When exchange control was introduced as a war measure it was accepted as a necessary restriction but prior to that date any proposals for the introduction of such a system would have been strongly resisted, as likely to cause great interference with normal trade and business and the freedom of the individual, but the special circumstances that existed because of the war made the position quite different and there was not that opposition to this proposition which might have been otherwise. Experience of exchange control properly administered during the past few years has led to a general appreciation of the fact that basically the system is sound. It is highly illogical that a country should not attach the same importance to balancing its overseas payments as balancing its internal revenue and expenditure. For many years a balanced budget has been the criterion of sound internal finance. Yet for long it was considered that any attempt to take preventive action, to forestall or adjust an adverse balance of overseas payments was an unwarranted interference with the rights of foreign merchants and financiers, so that the correction of any disequilibrium that might arise in a country's balance of payments had to be left to economic forces. While they achieve their purpose it was at a heavy cost to the inhabitants of the country in the form of deflation and unemployment and decline in prices. The right of a country to regulate its external balance of payments has now been recognised but this important feature of exchange control was so long obscured, because of the abuse of the system by countries such as Germany and Japan in the years between the two wars. It is obvious and very clear that had a system of exchange control been in existence in France and the United Kingdom during those years, so that the movement of short term capital between London, Paris and New York was subject to regulation, the large scale transfers of hot money for reasons of security with their disastrous repercussions on the stability of the exchanges would have been avoided. One country's adverse balance of payment would not have resulted in a large deficit necessitating devaluation by the weight of these capital transfers and its foreign exchange reserves would not have had to be dissipated in providing facilities for this idle money to fly into what its owners considered a safer currency.

Now, Sir, I would like to say a few words about the International Monetary Fund. Two of the principle objectives of the International Monetary Fund of which India has now become and will continue to remain one of the most important members in virtue of her large overseas trade are the promotion of exchange stability and the elimination of foreign exchange restrictions which hamper the growth of world trade. It is the restrictions which hamper the world trade that are to be removed by members of the fund while restrictions on movements of capital are permitted because such restrictions may in fact serve to promote exchange stability. The articles of agreement specifically prohibit the imposition by members of restrictions on the making of payments for what are described as current transactions. These are defined in Article 19 and cover trade payments, income on investments and family remittances. A member is not prohibited from giving facilities for transfers of capital and there is nothing to prevent him allowing such transfers as long as he can meet them out of his own favourable balance of payments. The system of exchange control authorised by the Fund therefore is one that is intended to prevent and control those unrestricted movements of capital which did so much to disrupt the exchange stability of the leading countries during the years between the two wars while at the same time the blocking of payments for current transactions is expressly prohibited thereby eliminating the evils of the exchange control system as developed by Germany and Japan.

The reasons for the introduction of this legislation have been given at very great length in the Statement of Objects and Reasons and every clause of the Bill has been examined and the reasons and arguments for inclusion of different clauses have been given but with your permission I would like to refer to some of the important clauses in the Bill. As Honourable Members would notice, clause 3 empowers the Reserve Bank to issue licences to deal in foreign exchange. Under the present system of exchange control, certain scheduled banks are licensed to deal in foreign exchange and the general public conduct all their transactions in foreign exchange through their medium. These authorised dealers are permitted to buy and sell foreign currencies and approve payments to non-residents under conditions laid down by the Reserve Bank to whom all transactions are reported or referred. The arrangement enables the Reserve Bank to delegate authority to bankers experienced in foreign exchange to make normal trade payments under certain conditions without prior reference to them. By these means facilities will be provided and are provided for the mercantile community and the general public to make payments in foreign currencies arising out of bona fide business transactions without the delays inherent in a centralised system, while, at the same time, the Reserve Bank is able to exercise a general superintendence over all foreign exchange transactions and is kept fully informed of receipts and expenditure of foreign currencies and the balance of payments position of the country.

Now, Sir, I come to clause 4. It provides that foreign exchange transactions in British India may only be entered into with authorised dealers in foreign exchange. As the conditions under which authorised dealers

1 P. M. may sell exchange are laid down by the Reserve Bank, this ensures that no remittances of foreign currency will take place except for approved purposes and thus it makes the control complete. Incidentally, in this clause is a provision giving the Reserve Bank the right to fix exchange rates. This is necessary to enable us to comply with the rules of the International Monetary Fund which lay down that transactions in the currencies of other members may only take place within certain fixed limits.

The following clause, clause 5, deals with restrictions on payments, and is based on the present Defence of India Rule 92A with certain modifications and additions and places restrictions on payments to, for or on behalf of, persons resident outside India. Such payments are the counterpart of purchases and sales of rupees against foreign currencies in foreign centres. The same limitations have to be placed on payments of this type as on actual remittances of foreign currencies as otherwise, persons who are refused permission to purchase foreign exchange in India will evade the restriction by selling their rupees in a foreign market.

In clause 6 provision is made for payment to blocked accounts on terms similar to those in Rule 92B. A system of blocked account is necessary to enable the Reserve Bank to control payments of a capital nature due to non-residence for which permission for conversion into foreign exchange has been refused.

Now, Sir, I would next like to say something about clauses 9 and 16 in the Bill. Under these clauses the Central Government has taken powers to issue orders to vest private holdings of foreign exchange and securities. I hope Honourable Members will note that these clauses do not prohibit private persons from holding foreign currencies and securities but they give the Central Government powers to issue orders to require such holdings to be surrendered if it is deemed necessary for the purpose of strengthening its financial position. At the present time the only order requiring the surrender of foreign currency is that in respect of U.S. dollars, but it may be necessary in future in order to prevent the growth of illegal markets in foreign currencies and to mobilise the foreign exchange resources of the country to require the surrender of private holdings of other currencies in addition. In the United Kingdom, it may be noted, not only the U.S. dollars but all foreign currencies in which the Bank of England deals have to be surrendered.

The next clause which needs mention is clause 18. It relates to transactions in securities and is considerably wider in scope than the corresponding security measures in Defence of India Rules. The restrictions imposed thereunder are intended to prevent transfers of funds from India of a capital nature taking place through the medium of transfers of rupee securities against payment in foreign currency. It is also useful as a means of recording and regulating foreign investment in India.

Clause 14 gives power to the Central Government to require all bearer securities to be deposited in authorised depositories. It is a new measure and is intended to prevent transfers on capital account evading the control imposed by the previous clause. The transfer of bearer securities is by hand. No transfer deed is completed nor, indeed, any indication is given as to who is the transferee. The requirement that bearer securities must be deposited has the effect of removing the bearer character of bearer securities as the depository is responsible for seeing that transfers to non-residents do not take place except in accordance with the rules laid down. Sir, the volume of bearer securities in India is not at present large enough to necessitate the issue of orders under this clause. But it is thought advisable for Government to have these powers in reserve in case a market in bearer securities should grow up in this country which might be used to evade our restrictions on transfers of capital. Similar measures regarding the deposit of bearer securities are contemplated in the United Kingdom and other European countries where the existence of facilities for illegal transfers of capital through the medium of bearer bonds has become a serious exchange problem.

The next clause is 15, which gives powers to the Government to prohibit the issue of bearer securities. This power, I may assure the Honourable Members, could only be availed of should it be found that the issue of bearer securities was having undesirable effects in the country.

Now, Sir, there is another clause on which I would also like to commend and that is clause 19. It gives the Central Government the right to call for information. Under our obligations to the International Monetary Fund we are required to provide that institution with a considerable volume of information in respect of holdings of foreign exchange by persons other than banks, of foreign investment in India and of Indian investment abroad for which particulars can only be obtained by inquiries from banks, business houses and individuals. The clause will give the Government the necessary legal powers to call for this information. In addition, information regarding the transactions of persons or firms in India with their foreign agents or branches may be required in order to ascertain that irregular dealings in foreign exchange and illegal transfers are not taking place through book entries and accounting practices. In view of the difficulty of detecting such illegal transactions it has been considered necessary to provide for powers of search and the seizing of account books should there be reasonable grounds for suspecting that infringements of the Act are taking place. Now, Sir, as regards other clauses, they do not really require any special mention. The reasons for their inclusion in the Bill have been stated in the Bill itself. While commending the Bill to Honourable Members for their consideration, I would impress upon them the desirability and the necessity of having control over foreign exchange and foreign currency. We must by every means control all the economic factors which are for the benefit and for the good of our country. I believe that control of foreign exchange and foreign currency is one of the important factors in the economic life of India. I have made this motion for reference of this Bill to the Select Committee and I hope that the House will accept this motion and accept the principle that it is necessary for India to exercise control over foreign exchange and foreign currency. Sir, I commend this Bill for the consideration of this House.

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That the Bill to regulate certain payments, dealings in foreign exchange and securities and the import and export of currency and bullion, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal, Mr. K. G. Ambegakar, Mr. H. D. Cayley, Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad, Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi, Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson, Mr. P. J. Griffiths, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, Mr. Manu Subedar, Mr. P. B. Gole, Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddier, Sri D. P. Karmarkar, Sri Satya Narayan Sinha and the Mover, with instructions to report on the opening day of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Mr. Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants, Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce). Sir, after the uncontrolled speeches on controls, I shall try to be as [Mr. Manu Subedar] brief as possible, particularly because I consider the Bill is a very well drafted document and also because the Honourable Member in moving it has made a very lucid and clear statement and also because the Bill is being sent to the Select Committee where any little points which may be left over or which might want co-ordination will be attended to.

Mr. President: The House will now adjourn for Lunch. The Honourable Member can resume his speech after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (the Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Sir, the first contract that India had, the first experience of exchange control came, as the Honourable Finance Minister said, in 1939. It was in respect of dollars, and I well remember that I was compelled to sell off some of my dollar securities at a loss because Government said they wanted dollars. This was exercised I maintain, in the interest of the United Kingdom, and it is high time that we learnt to exercise exchange control in the interests of India. And I therefore welcome this measure. This measure has become necessary because of the membership of the International Fund who will not only ask for information which would have to be supplied to them but who have so provided that in case Indian purchases abroad exceed Indian sales abroad, the method of settlement would be such that except a relief for a short time we may have to find gold or dollars to settle them. In other words, unless we looked out from now on, very carefully at the trade balances and the balances of payments, we would be in a very difficult position. Sir, owing to famine, owing to the desire to purchase enormous quantities of capital equipments abroad, both for Government departments and for private industry, and also owing to the desire of every small trader to order whatever he can, a position has been created now of some anxiety for India with regard to its balance of trade during the next three or four years. It is during this period that we shall have to husband our resources and to go very carefully in order to see that such exchange as is available is used for essential articles, for those articles which this country needs first and which are of some importance. For example, the hipsticks referred to by my Honourable friend Mr. Ayyangar, who keeps observing the hipsticks everywhere would have to be checked. Sir the present position is that every shopkeeper in this country has made enormous money like what he had never seen before, he has got money in the bank and his shop is empty. He is therefore running amuck, and I want to draw the attention of Government to the fact that the reckless purchase of things abroad might actually result in a glut of commodities in this country in certain directions and in the total it might make the position very embarrassing for Government. These powers are not therefore taken one day too soon. Though they exist in the Ordinances, legislative sanction for them would be proper, and I trust Government will use these powers with all the moral authority which this legislature can give them.

Another reason for the need of these powers was that while the dollar and hard currency were under control under the Ordinances there was no such control with regard to sterling. I drew the attention of the House the other day—as far as such attention can be drawn in a short question—to the fact that this Government had no information with regard to large capital payments and movements which were taking place. Britishers had sold, and some notorious big cases were reported, they had sold big capital assets for crores of rupees to people in this country. These crores of rupees which were paid to them have, I maintain, been transferred through the normal operation of the exchange banks and against current trade. In other words, the difference between current and capital movement is one which has been frequently emphasised and which finds a definite place in the working of the Fund. Such distinction must therefore find a place in the functioning of our central institution. I inquired about this and there was no information as to who bought how much sterling and for what purposes, and whether it was all necessary. Speculative purchase of sterling has been going on for some time, as soon as the Finance Minister declared that something would have to be done about the gold put of exchange. Even here, though I was assured that the Reserve Bank generally watches out and does give instructions to exchange banks not to sell on speculative account, in practice I know it is done daily and that on the plea that they are merely hedging against future transactions, many people have been able to have dealings in sterling.

Now, Sir, there was no information with this Government with regard to the assets of foreigners in this country. This was another great lacuna. As the Honourable Industries and Supplies Minister said the other day the previous Government were not concerned with these things, they were only concerned with the maintenance of law and order. But a change has come not only in this country but all over the world. Under this change every Government is compelled by force of circumstances and by the very necessities of the case to keep an account of what is going on. If it did not do so it would be at its own peril, and there would be serious difficulty. It is true that these new institutions which have been set up in the international field may to some extent enable people to tide over a temporary difficulty, but these institutions cannot in my opinion possibly help any Government which neglected a full account of what the activities of other people are in this country, and in particular a full periodical revised statement of what the assets of other people are. We in this country are very much interested in these assets in connection with the settlement of the largest possible question in volume of money which any country was called upon to settle at any time in a single sitting—the sterling balances.

Now, Sir, this Bill is welcome because it is a sign that India is going to manage her own affairs from India and no longer from London. The world situation has itself compelled this position, and it is only right that Government should arm themselves with powers which they could use here without any reference to any third party and on all occasions for the welfare and in the interest of the people of this country. Sir, the war has left many bad legacies from which we are suffering and I fear we shall suffer for the next few years, but in so far as the exchange control is a legacy of the war I must say that it is a very good legacy, that it was necessary and it has come at the proper time, and India will have now in her armory powers with which she will be able to protect the interests of the people of this country. Sir, it is frequently said in other fields that India has no aggressive designs on anybody, I say in the field of finance the position is the same, but we were not able at all times to safeguard the interests of our own nationals. And let me give an illustration. It was in 1937 and 1938 that Japan kept on purchasing enormous amounts of cotton from this country. The moneys which were payable and which became due to the sellers of this cotton were blocked by Japan. The purchasers said they could not remit the money as their Government had asked them not to remit and they claimed that it was a forced majeure and that they were not responsible. While the Japanese purchasers of cotton were repudiating or holding back the funds which were due to Indians from whom they had purchased the cotton, the Japanese agents were going on purchasing galore in this country. It was then that I raised this point on the floor of this House in the form of questions which was the only remedy open to us. I raised this point on the floor of this House and even the then Government was induced by me to take a strong line and to threaten that if the position was not put right they will block every Japanese rupee which may be in this country, collect all the Japanese assets towards the payment of the blocked money belonging to Indians. This would not have happened if the Government at that time had the powers which are now being taken in this manner. It is true, he all powers these powers could be abused as they certainly were abused in Germany. What Germany did was it borrowed right and left—long term credit—short term credit—and then comfortably and quietly said, "We are unable to pay you the moneys, but you come to Germany use the Marks which are blocked here

[Mr. Manu Subedar] and spend them in Germany if you like, we will not permit you to take away these assets elsewhere ! In other words, the supreme need of the German Empire at that time was that they should not pay anybody anything, and as a matter of fact they got away with it. As I say these are very wide powers which may be abused, but they are necessary in the autonomy of every nation and every country, and since India is marching towards her own freedom this I regard as one of the most important fulfilments and symptoms of that march.

Now, Sir, in this connection let me mention one more point. Nationalization has been a very pet theme in this House. There have been suggestions for the nationalization of land, of coal, of jute, of textile, of civil aviation, and may be many other items which I am omitting. But may I bring to the notice of this House generally, and more particularly to those friends who are very fond of the principle of nationalization, that I would give absolutely the first place to the nationalization of the Reserve Bank. In this case we would be following a very good example which has been already followed in the United Kingdom. In other countries private Banks were never given the powers which this particular institution enjoys. As a matter of fact the whole of this Bill places in the hands of the Reserve Bank much wider powers than it has had hitherto, but it is a question—I will not detain the House long on this issue because it does not directly arise out of it—as to whether holders of $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent paper—one particular set of men who hold $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent paper guaranteed by Government—have any special significance or importance or intelligence to be entrusted with the big task of central banking and all the wide and extensive powers which are enjoyed under it. Sir when the Reserve Bank of India Bill was passed, it was Sir George Schuster who told this House that it was a private institution because in the case of need, Government cannot stampede it. If Government owned this institution, Government could use the machinery for financing themselves to any extent and in order to safeguard this they had put this as a private institution so that there is a brake on Government in case Government wanted to abuse the machinery of currency. But in spite of this assurance given by a British Finance Member in this House, has that assurance been kept? Has not the machinery of the Reserve Bank been abused for excessive note issue and for the purchase galore of commodities and services in this country to the very great privation of the population of this country? And has not that conduct left us one of the biggest problems which this country has to face? Therefore, I say that there is no sanctity with regard to some holders of $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent papers or other holders of Government notes and why one particular set should be picked out and entrusted with all these enormous powers I have never been able to understand. I commend this idea of the nationalization of the Reserve Bank to this House and through the Members of this House to the country.

This Bill raises many other questions on which I do not wish to take up the time of the House, but in spite of the fact, as I said before, that it is a very carefully drafted document, there are loopholes some of which I shall point out later in the Select Committee. But there are one or two which I would like to mention now. There may be loopholes such as the private barter between two individuals one sitting here and one sitting abroad, there may be loopholes with regard to trusteeship. In one direction this is provided, but I will point out several directions in which the loopholes still remain. There may be loopholes with regard to partnership which may be declared, may be undeclared, may be registered, may be unregistered. And there are other loopholes such as private trading in bullion. This is one of the points which I commend to the notice of the Honourable the Finance Member. In the Central Banking Committee's minority report, I had made it very explicit that in the interest of this country it was important that the right to import gold should be concentrated in the hands of the Central Banking Authority. Sir, normally India is an importer of gold. All the gold which is coming in and is awaiting distribution would be in the hands of the Central Authority and in the event of any emergency they could promptly stop the sale of gold in this country and they would have a certain amount left in their hands. I find in this Bill there is a provision permitting and recognizing private trading in gold. It is this private trading in gold which is going to give the Honourable the Finance Member and the Reserve Bank authorities a big headache in future because so long as you permit this private trading in gold transactions will take place in arbitrage and transmission of funds from one place to the other could not be done with greater facility than through the earmarking of gold at this end or at the other end against payments which may be made. This is one of the loopholes which I want the Select Committee to consider very carefully.

Then, Sir, there is another small point which I would like to mention, and that is in Section 1 (2). This Bill does not apply and technically this Legislature has indeed no power to make law for territories in India which are part of the economic system of India but which are under the Indian States. This is a loophole which I regard as a very serious one and I would request the Government of India to promptly negotiate with the Indian States and to get their voluntary adherence to the laws and restrictions and controls which are involved therein. I would tell this House a case which came to my notice. It is an old case—about 12 years old—and therefore it does not hurt the parties concerned. An income of Rs 27 lakhs, which was made by certain parties in the United Kingdom and abroad, and an income which was taxable if it was brought into British India, was transferred directly to an Indian State and the income-tax on Rs 27 lakhs was lost to the Government of India by this dodge of pretending that there was a transfer to one of the inland States. Aeroplanes were not used in those days. How a transfer could take place without its coming into the operation of any of the other banks, passes, my understanding. Even the Imperial Bank branches which are located in the Indian States have got deposits and pay out interest of which the Government of India have no information, let alone use of this information for the purpose of tax collection. I think this is a loophole which ought to be done away with and which ought not to be permitted to continue if it can be brought about under the present situation by negotiation and a voluntary acceptance by the Princes of the purport and objective involved in this legislation, which is as much for their safety as it is for the safeguarding of the economy of British India.

This Bill I consider is very essential in the matter of planned economy, which is now the order of the day. Whatever some people may think with regard to freedom of the individual, I have very great respect for the views my honourable friend Mr Siddiqi mentioned yesterday. I would like all necessary evils, not only all controls, but all governments to be abolished if we can reach that simple Utopian condition in which there would be no regulation. But regulation is primarily in the interests of the community as a whole. Regulation which interferes with private rights is in the interests of the whole country, of the whole society, of all the masses, and therefore planned economy a word which was debated yesterday, is something which would arise out of this control itself. You cannot control exchanges properly unless you control trading. You cannot control trading properly unless you interfere with the amount of volume of goods which we shall sell abroad and purchase from abroad. If you have to distinguish what quantity and quality we shall purchase, by the time you do it and correlate it with your internal economy, you have a system of regulation which may be slightly in excess of what we are living in now, but which has become necessary in the changed situation in the world.

One last word the Honourable the Finance Member said that we are securing the fixity of exchange for future purposes. Now fixity of exchange is very desirable but it is not valuable in itself. It is well known, and the Honourable the Finance Member accepted the position, that we were surrendering certain authority and certain powers from our own hands in order to secure this fixity. I say there is a more dominant object to be considered, namely, the level of internal prices and the internal value of the rupee as compared with the external value of the rupee. Sir it is very easy to control the external value of the rupee in the way in which the Honourable the Finance Member proposes to do, but it is incumbent on him and on the whole Government to take up this issue as an urgent one—as to what can be done in order to check a further spiral of rise in prices and wages in this country. Unless it is done in that way, even the external control will not be easy. So long as prices in this country are high we shall be able to sell less and we shall be compelled to buy more. We shall be tempting everyone who has something to sell in the world and this is a situation which is none too healthy. I therefore commend this idea to the Honourable the Finance Member that he may as early as convenient go thoroughly into this and see by what means the inflation can be further checked, the spiral of prices and wages both going up may be brought under control and all those people with fixed incomes in this country may be relieved.

Sir, I beg to support the motion of the Honourable the Finance Member.

Shri D. P. Karmarkar (Bombay Southern Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) I rise to move a small amendment in respect of the personnel of the Select Committee as proposed by the Honourable the Mover. I move—

“That the names of Prof N G Ranga and Captain Syed Abid Hussain be added to the names mentioned in the original motion.”

I hope this amendment is accepted by the House.

Mr. President: Amendment moved.

“That the names of Prof N G Ranga and Captain Syed Abid Hussain be added to the names mentioned in the original motion.”

Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson (Bengal European) In giving the general support of the European Group to the Honourable the Finance Member's reference of this Bill to a Select Committee, I think it is unnecessary for me to say on our behalf that the members of the House will realize that though this Bill is an enabling Bill, it does confer very wide sweeping and drastic powers upon Government and their agent, the Reserve Bank of India. I must confess that when I listened this morning to the Honourable the Finance Member moving the motion which is before the House, I was a little surprised to find him striking a note in which he seemed to lament the passing of the unregenerate system under which we lived in 1939 and to welcome in place of the very satisfactory system of world exchanges which we then had, the creation of the complicated, and I may say, dangerous machinery which this Bill will give to Government. None the less, we do as I say, in general terms, support the provisions of the Bill. Our support, Sir, is based on the assumption that whilst giving these comprehensive powers to Government and to the Reserve Bank of India, it is the intention of the administration to use those powers as little as possible to fetter the free movement of trade which must also mean fettering as little as possible the free movement and the free flow of money as between the countries. If, Sir, this principle is accepted, then much which is obscure and dark now in the clauses will no doubt become clear and any fears; or such fears as may be entertained by any section of the House, will in due course prove to be groundless. The Bill is a long Bill. It is highly technical in many of its aspects. It runs, Sir, as you have seen into 27 clauses, and I venture to suggest that if any or all of those 27 clauses were applied in their literal sense and with the full vigour with which apparently the Reserve Bank has the powers to apply them, they would have the effect of imposing upon India a wholly closed economy. I take it that whatever our views may be, none of us believe that India can live in an autarchical state of isolation. I take it that it is Government's intentions so far as the provisions of the Bill are concerned to keep them in reserve as much as possible, and to use them for purposes of emergency. If that is so, I would go one step further and beg leave to assume that it is the Government's intention to restore as quickly as possible and as conditions permit, the familiar facilities of multilateral world trade. My Honourable friend Mr Manu Subedar has drawn upon his extensive experience of the past this afternoon and quoted cases which are undoubtedly an infringement of fair trade, and an infringement of the intention of the law. I put it to the House that, by and large, the multilateral principles of trade which obtained until they had to be restricted and curtailed by the war—by and large they were intended and did operate for the benefit of the world as a whole and for India's benefit too. The Honourable the Finance Member in his speech this morning drew our attention to the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and he mentioned particularly India's obligations under the International Monetary Fund. He emphasised that the powers which it is now proposed to confer on the Reserve Bank were necessary in order to enable India to discharge fully and in every circumstance, her obligations to the Fund. I agree that this may be so. I agree that it is necessary for Governments to take special powers in order to make their membership of the Fund effective. The Fund exists fundamentally, of course not to protect us against our own excesses but to protect the nations against the excesses of one another. But what is the underlying intention of the Fund? We have had both in this session and in previous sessions a number of debates on India's membership of the Fund—whether she should join the Fund and subscribe to the Bretton Woods Agreement. We have ranged over a wide field of details but I suggest that as I understand it and as most people I believe, understand it the really fundamental permanent and underlying objects of the Fund are to free world trade from the restrictions, the fetters and the shackles which have been imposed upon it during the war years. And in freeing world trade, I venture to suggest also, India's trade will be freed from restrictive influences.

India has accepted the membership, the objectives and the spirit of the Fund and all that lies behind the formal agreement. If that is so—and I believe it is so—I take it that the House will assume that this Bill is really designed to meet the special circumstances of the transition period through which we and other countries of the world are now passing. I confess that one of the criticisms—a criticism as to broad principle—which I have to offer in respect of the Bill is that no time limit is set as to the period in which the Bank can operate these provisions. As the Bill stands at the present moment it is, of course, a purely enabling measure and the Bank might never call any one of the provisions into operation. As it stands at the present time they could also continue to enjoy these provisions in perpetuity. We have just concluded a debate on another set of controls—controls over essential supplies and commodities and the Government of India wisely, so I think, have set a limit to the time in which the controls can be operated at the discretion of the Executive. If those controls are to be renewed, Government have to come before this House again and ask for sanction and approval of their renewal. There is no such provision in this Bill which (I once again emphasise) gives very wide and sweeping and comprehensive powers to the Reserve Bank. Let me say by way of explanation and let me make it clear, that I make no criticism whatsoever of the Reserve Bank of India as such. If it is necessary (and I believe it is necessary) to confer these powers upon some agent of Government then I for one would sooner that they repose in the hands of the Reserve Bank which is in touch with the practical requirements of the business community and with the main economic trends of the country. I for one would sooner that they were entrusted to the Reserve Bank than they were given to some department of Government or to any agency which has not the same contact with the real needs of the country in respect to its international trade. But, Sir, if control over essential commodities could be limited to only one year I suggest that there is a case to go to the Select Committee for some defined period after which the Government should come back to the legislature for the renewal of authority to exercise the powers which they will in due course delegate to the Reserve Bank.

The Honourable the Finance Member this morning emphasised that the main underlying principle of the Bill was to enable India to make the best use of her foreign exchange resources in implementing her post-war plans. That is a very laudable objective. He also talked to us about the disequilibrium or dislocation which had existed in the exchange relationships of countries including this country before the war. I looked through this Bill

[Mr Geoffrey W. Tyson] in some detail. Whilst I am prepared to agree that its provisions may help India in the correction of any disequilibrium in her balance of payments (which is the phrase used) I cannot accept the argument that it will enable her to maintain her balance of payments in perpetuity. Also we have to remember that exchange control, which is designedly and intentionally restrictive, is an activity in which other nations can engage. If we embark upon a policy in India that is in any way impudent, it might result in more harm than good to the country.

My Honourable friend Mr Manu Subedar in his speech a few months ago said that the controls such as were proposed should be used with the moral authority of this House. I agree, but I think it is equally important that they are used realistically and with prudence and with a eye to the practical requirements of the country.

The Honourable the Finance Member this morning dealt with some of the clauses in detail and he gave us an interesting and enlightening exposition of the meaning of many of them. Mr Subedar this afternoon has thrown more light on some of them and I do, on behalf of my group welcome Mr Subedar's statement, that just as India in the physical field has no aggressive intentions towards anybody else—so—and I think I am quoting him correctly—he said he has no aggressive financial designs on any country. (Mr Manu Subedar. Quite right.) We are glad in this Group to have an assurance of that kind coming from such an important quarter, and I believe that that assurance could be suitably underlined by the spokesman of the government in due course. We are glad of Mr Manu Subedar's assurance and we are glad to hear the restrained and temperate exposition of the intentions of this Bill which the Honourable Finance Member has given and we support its reference to Select Committee.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Gandhi van Nellore Non-Muhammadan Bahali. Mr President I am rather surprised at the attitude displayed by my Honourable friend Mr Tyson. In his own country there are these controls already imposed and exercised and he ought to know that in almost all the European countries these controls have already been imposed and are being exercised. What is good for his own country and for his own continent certainly cannot be so very bad for our country. He wants the Finance Member to fix some time limit for the operations of this Bill. I do not want any time limit. We do not know what is going to happen in the rest of the world and as long as the rest of the world is committed to this control of foreign exchanges, India should also be very careful about the way in which her own foreign exchanges are managed. He still seems to be a sort of diehard so far as the 19th century liberalism is concerned. That 19th century liberalism had served England very well, but it does not seem to go well with England now in the 20th century. Now it has come to be the part of the United States to sing the paeons of free trade, but what was the practice of the United States until the outbreak of the last war? Has she herself given the go-by to her own tariffs and her own closed economy? She did not. Only now she has begun to talk about it, because it is to her interests today to flood the markets of the rest of the world, not only with her own manufactured goods but also with her own monies, lent to other countries under various devices and various guises also. He is afraid that if India were to go in favour of closed economy India would be doing herself great injury. We have had the lessons of pre-war free trade in foreign exchanges. As long as you do not have sufficient control over your own foreign exchanges, there is always the danger of your country becoming liable to be injured hopelessly by the manipulations in Wall Street or in Lombard Street, and there is today among the economists of our country serious discussion going on, as to the repercussions of the relaxation of the various controls that are to be found in the United States. There their prices are rising and it is feared that very soon there may be a crash there. What might possibly be the results of such a crash no one knows, but most of our economists are afraid that if we do not have complete control over our own exchanges and we are not able to regulate our own economy here in our own country, we are also likely to be dragged down along with the United States, not because of our own fault but because of something that happens in the United States. The United States may be able to stand the rigours of the coming depression, but India may not. India was brought almost to the verge of insolvency last time, and India may not be able to stand the next crisis. Therefore it is good that the Honourable Finance Member has come to the House with this Bill at this early hour, so that India may arm herself with the necessary powers and with the necessary funds and with the necessary mechanism with which she may be able to face the United States crisis that is now in the offing.

Mr. Tyson expressed his happiness at the assurance given by my honourable friend Mr. Manu Subedar that India is not going to be an aggressor in the financial world. Why should he have such a fear at all lurking in his mind? Where is the chance of India becoming an aggressor within the next ten or fifteen years? (Sjt V. I. Gadgil (Guilty conscience).) That may be, but I am not quite so sure. Is he afraid that with the sterling securities that are there to our credit in London, we may be able to jeopardise the economy of England? Certainly it cannot be. That money alone will not be able to arm us and place us on the aggressor's list. Evidently, he does not want India at any time to become economically and financially as self-sufficing and able to look after herself. If that is not his intention, then he certainly need not entertain my such 'cat'. He need not be enthusiastic about any such assurance proffered by my Honourable friend. It will take years before India would be able to command such an amount of foreign exchange as to be able to import all the heavy machinery that she wants to build up her own industrial economy here on the scale that is needed and commanded by the growing needs of her own large masses of people in this country. Till then India will have to marshal all her own resources in foreign exchange and centralise them in such a manner that it will be possible for her to place this foreign exchange at the disposal of other countries in exchange for their heavy machinery. In fact, some of our own responsible leaders in our country are afraid that England and America may not be quite so very willing to sell their own heavy machinery needed for the building up of our own basic industries unless we agree to their terms and under such circumstances what is it that India has got to do except build up her own reserves of foreign exchange and then try to negotiate with such other countries as would be willing to negotiate with India on reasonable terms and export their own basic machinery to our country to build all our own manufactures? Therefore, the very basic principle on which this particular Bill is based is good, and for that reason we must all support this Bill enthusiastically.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions, Muhammadan Rural). Sir my friend Sir Cowasji Jehangir would probably remember that in 1933 when both of us were in England some bankers told him—and I also had the same story from others—that there are about seven persons in the world who have got a very large floating account in various banks of the world and these persons by transfer of their money from one country to another were in a position to affect seriously the currency of the country. Whatever was true at that time we have got a greater chance of a thing of this kind happening in the year 1946. I have always been apprehensive of this fact, that our currency, that is the rupee, is a managed currency. It is not a thing which really has got any intrinsic importance as it had in the old days before the great war, and unless it is protected by foreign gambling, there is the chance of its collapse at any moment. While we were discussing the Bretton Woods, I had constantly in my mind this difficulty that may possibly arise, and consequently I was in favour of the linking with gold so that our boat not be tossed about in the turmoil of the ocean, especially when a big storm is coming on. There may be the danger that these big billionaires in Wall Street may perhaps begin to operate in our currency, they may buy securities, they may deposit monies, they may transfer from Indian banks to their own banks and vice versa. There is danger of this kind and we cannot possibly put our neck in the hands of these foreign moneylenders and controllers of the world markets. Now, this restriction of the kind which is now before us is an exceedingly important one in order to stabilise our currency. There is no doubt that one or two provisions of the Bill require consideration. The protection of our managed currency is an exceedingly important thing and every precaution ought to be taken that foreigners may not begin to interfere with the stabilisation of the currency. In 1933 there were no restrictions and everybody had the liberty to deposit the money in the way he liked but subsequent events have changed the minds of the people because in every country we have a managed currency. The real currency which is gold is not to be found anywhere. When these currencies are managed currencies it is exceedingly desirable that every country should guard itself against the attack on its currency. I can understand if we give our goods in place of other goods which we receive but if our goods are given in lieu of managed currency of some other currency it will be a serious position and we want to avoid this. On the face of it, it seems not good that the price should be fixed by Government. A man who reads the Bill cursorily will come to the opinion that very large powers are given to the Government but this is absolutely necessary. This is the only thing by means of which the foreigners sitting in Wall Street in New York can be stopped from investing their money in this country and transferring any large quantities of dollars into rupees. Therefore I welcome this Bill. I think it requires a good deal of improvement. Unless we have a Bill of this kind we shall be in the ocean as I said and we will be at the mercy of the big millionnaires and billionaires in America and elsewhere and one millionaire in America can buy up all the millionnaires in this country. It is therefore exceedingly important that our currency should be protected. We must be sure of the value of our investment. Otherwise it will be in a very doubtful position. With these words I support the motion and I hope that the Bill will be improved in the Select Committee.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: It is very gratifying to find a unanimous support from all sections of the House to the motion which I have placed before the Honourable Members. Mr. Tyson has given a critical support, if I may say so, to the measure which is before the House. He has stated that this Bill confers comprehensive powers on the Government and the Reserve Bank and he has expressed a hope that these powers will be used as little as possible. I can assure my Honourable friend that the Government will use these powers as and when necessary. The Government have got firstly to meet their obligation as a member of the International Monetary Fund and secondly to carry out the obligation that the Government have got to safeguard the economic interests of India and I can assure my friend that these powers will not be used for any other purpose except the two purposes which I have stated.

My Honourable friend has said, and I think he has presumed correctly that India does not want to live in economic isolation from the rest of the world. The mere fact of our agreeing to become and remain members of the International Bank and Monetary Fund is proof positive that India is as anxious as any other country to co-operate fully in the economic rehabilitation of the world. My friend has referred to there being no time limit with regard to this measure. I am afraid his analysis of the Bill with regard to controls and the other articles is not a very correct one in this case. Thus, as I said in my speech, is really like balancing the budget and control of exchange in necessary and there cannot be any time limit for that purpose. This, as he has rightly pointed out, is an enabling Bill and it will be an enabling Act when it is passed by this Legislature and after the assurance that I have given him that this measure will not be used except for the two purposes which I mentioned earlier in my speech he should be satisfied that whether there is a time limit or not it is not going to be used harshly or unreasonably.

There is another point which my friend raised and I think he expected me to say something on that point and it was a reference that was made by Mr. Manu Subedar and later on confirmed by Prof. Ranga that India has no aggressive financial designs against any country. I can say that India certainly has no such design but if any defensive measures which India may take in the interest of its economy, any defensive measures which India may take to improve its financial stability are considered as aggression by India against any country, then I am afraid I cannot help it. It is possible that in some cases some people who have exploited India in the past may feel that the measure which India is taking is an aggressive design with regard to the other countries. But, as I have stated just now, whatever measure we take, it will not be with the intention of doing an injustice to any other country, but it will be with the determination of securing justice for ourselves. Therefore, my friend may rest assured that as long as the present Government is in power, our policy will not be aggression against others, but defence of our own interests. Our policy will not be exploitation of other countries but to save ourselves from exploitation. Our policy will not be to do injustice to any other country or any other nation but to secure justice for ourselves.

Sir, there is really nothing more about which I need say anything except one remark that was made by Mr. Manu Subedar. He has referred to the Indian States. It is a point worth considering and I can assure him that we will consider his suggestion carefully and see what can be done in that direction.

Now, Sir, before I sit down, I would like to say a word about the amendment that has been moved with regard to the personnel of the Select Committee. I accept the addition of those two names that have been proposed by my Honourable friend.

Mr. President: First of all, I will put to the House the amendment with regard to the personnel. The question is "That the names of Prof. N. G. Ranga and Captain Syed Abid Hussain be added to the names mentioned in the original motion."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President: I will now put to the House the amended motion.

The question is

"That the Bill to regulate certain payments, dealings in foreign exchange and securities and the import and export of currency and bullion, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal, Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar, Mr. H. D. Cayley, Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad, Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi, Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson, Mr. P. J. Griffiths, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, Mr. Manu Subedar, Mr. P. B. Gole, Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddiar, Shri D. P. Karmarkar, Shri Satya Narayan Sinha, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Captain Syed Abid Hussain, and the Mover, with instructions to report on the opening day of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

DELHI SPECIAL POLICE ESTABLISHMENT BILL

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Member for Home and Information and Broadcasting) Sir, I beg to move

"That the Bill to make provision for the constitution of a special police force for the Chief Commissioner's Province of Delhi for the investigation of certain offences committed in connection with matters concerning Departments of the Central Government, for the superintendence and administration of the said force and for the extension to other areas in British India of the powers and jurisdiction of members of the said force in regard to the investigation of the said offences, be taken into consideration."

[Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel]

This is a small Bill which imitates no new principle or new provisions. It is an attempt to put into legislative form a machinery that has already been in existence in the form of an Ordinance, which has been in force for about four or five years. Ordinarily, the offences of bribery, corruption and the like in normal times like all other offences keep within a certain level, but in abnormal times such offences cross the borders of normality. When the war broke out, the conditions suddenly changed and during the war the normal moral standard of all sections of people was more or less affected. It is not in this country alone that this happened but it took the same turn in almost all the countries. In the case of public services it placed innumerable opportunities and temptations in their way, large sums of money passed through their hands, and it was difficult for ordinary mortals to resist the temptation. Few people stood against the flood-gates of temptations that swept the country and all honour to those people who stood the test. We have seen that this evil raised its head first in the army where there are many contractors who thought that it was their life's opportunity. Many sections of people caught the infection and they all thought that war was a God-sent opportunity, few of them even prayed that the war should never end. The war has ended but the aftermath of the war continuously reminds us of what the war was and what it has left behind it.

The Defence Department in 1941 established a special police to deal with this evil by a small force, but this force was flooded with a volume of business which it could not cope with and the results achieved were very disappointing. Therefore, at a later stage, in 1943, Ordinance XXII was passed, establishing a special police force. Now, this force was entrusted with the investigation of crimes of the nature of bribery, corruption, criminal misappropriation, fraud, embezzlement, fabrication of documents and the like, which affected all the Departments of the services. Therefore, this force, of which there was a small number in the initial stage, increased. Its strength rose at a certain stage to 64 officers and 205 men and five legal advisers. That is also the present strength. Now, when the war ended, this Ordinance expired as was to expire six months after the termination of the War, after that in order to avoid a break another Ordinance was passed which will expire in March 1947. That is why, Sir, we have still, under the existing circumstances, the necessity to create a machinery in a legislative form and this Bill is an effort to do so. Now, the House would like to know the work of these 64 officers and of 205 men. The total number of cases investigated is 1,020. The cases sent up for trial were 636 and 128 cases were sent up for departmental enquiry, these were such that evidence was not sufficient to stand the test of a judicial trial. Out of the cases sent up for trial, convictions were obtained in 363 cases, and cases pending trial are 99, departmental enquiry resulted in punishment in 168 cases. This establishment during all this period cost us about 21 lakhs of rupees. But at the same time their efforts resulted in crediting to Government about 6 lakhs by way of fine and it has dealt with or investigated cases involving more than 5 crores of rupees. Now, this force has been transferred to the Home Department after the war ended from the Defence Department and is now functioning in the centrally administered area of Delhi, this Bill provides for its functioning outside the province of Delhi as well with the concurrence of the Provinces so that it should not be suspected for a moment that there is any encroachment on any provincial jurisdiction or provincial autonomy. Wherever it functions, it does so with the concurrence or the previous permission or agreement of the Provinces. Sir, the necessity or the utility of this Bill has been recognised by almost all the provinces. All the provinces were consulted and all of them have supported this Bill except the province of Sind, which it is hoped will also in due course take advantage of this measure. Now, Sir, from the figures that I have been able to place before the House, it will be recognised that there is justification for continuing the force. It has done useful work. The House has seen that the Honourable Member in charge of Industries and Supplies wants the controls to continue. Several Honourable Members of this House also want the control to continue, and controls and bribery and corruption almost run a race and go together. You cannot stop bribery and corruption so long as there are so many controls and licences which control almost all branches of our life, public life, social life and private life and necessities of life. Therefore, there is proved necessity for this Bill. It is a simple short Bill which provides for the creation of a police force to be stationed in the centrally administered area of Delhi and its powers, its responsibilities are almost the same or similar to the powers of the police in the provinces. Its liabilities and its responsibilities are almost the same and its functions are limited to the investigation of cases of a particular type. They are such as, bribery, corruption, embezzlement, criminal misappropriation, tampering with documents and the like which affect public service. We do not delude ourselves with the belief that this force has successfully eradicated this evil. It is not claimed. But it has made honest endeavours and in order to assist in this work I propose also, as soon as possible to bring another measure known as a Bill for tightening up existing legislation for bribery and corruption. These measures are considered essential to keep the standard of public service to a certain level and it is hoped that the short measure that I have proposed and which I have taken leave to introduce will get the general support of this House. I also hope that there is no necessity for referring this Bill to the Select Committee or for sending the Bill for circulation for eliciting public opinion, because it has introduced no new thing. As I have stated before, it puts into legislative form the existing state of thing and the machinery that is already functioning. Therefore, it is not necessary for me to say much in support of it nor is it advisable to delay this measure. The Ordinance expires in March 1917 and before that Ordinance expires this Bill should be passed. Therefore, I move for the consideration of this Bill before the House.

Mr. President: Motion moved.

"That the Bill to make provision for the constitution of a special police force for the Chief Commissioner's Province of Delhi for the investigation of certain offences committed in connection with matters concerning Departments of the Central Government for the superintendence and administration of the said force and for the extension to other parts in British India of the powers and jurisdiction of members of the said force in regard to the investigation of the said offences be taken into consideration."

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Central Districts and (Hindu Non-Muhammadan Rural). Sir, I welcome this Bill. I wish it had been extended long before to all the provinces. I shall only make one or two suggestions which suggestions need not be incorporated in the Act but may be carried out in practice by administrative orders. In clause 2(3) wide powers are entrusted to persons of the rank of sub-inspector and above. I do not like a sub-inspector should be allowed to investigate into very serious offences against very important persons. He may not in the ordinary course be able to tackle such a heavy responsibility, and therefore I would urge upon the Central Government, before issuing orders, to classify the offences which the sub-inspector may investigate and more serious offences may be investigated by a higher authority. This can be done without any amendment of the provision now made and by departmental orders.

Then I should like that the old set of police should not be entrusted with these special powers. This could easily have been done by modifying the Criminal Procedure Code itself without any special legislation. My Honourable friend chooses to continue the legislation because there is already a piece of legislation specially for the special police whoever is appointed under the Criminal Procedure Code will in that area be charged with the powers of a person in charge of a police station. Now the superintendence of the Delhi Special Police Establishment shall vest in the Central Government who are competent to appoint somebody who has got the powers of an Inspector-General over this establishment. I urge upon the Honourable Member to appoint a judicial officer of high integrity to be in charge of the special establishment. This special police is expected to investigate into very serious cases of corruption in the departments of Government. The sub-inspector has all his life been salaaming to these persons and he will be the last person to be in a position to muster up courage or the necessary equipment to find out the offender and charge him. Either on account of over-enthusiasm he may go a long way or on account of deficiency of courage he may not catch hold of the right offender. In either case the ordinary police may not be competent to discharge the heavy responsibilities that may be imposed upon them. During the war any officer could have done the work but now we are in peace time and therefore it is necessary that an officer of not less than the rank of a District Judge should be placed in charge of the special police administration so that he may look into the charge-sheets, if they are frivolous he may reject them and if there are grounds which will stand before a court of law he may take suitable action. There may be excesses in catching hold of people guilty of corruption, the persons in charge may overdo these things. Therefore a word of caution is necessary and I request the Honourable Member to appoint in charge of this administration one who is not below the rank of a District Judge with ripe experience of this matter, with criminal jurisdiction.

Then the persons who will investigate an offence has to give directions from time to time. Before the charge-sheet is ready he has to find out whether the offence is sufficient to stand before a court of law.

With regard to the powers of the special police in relation to offence committed in a province or a particular department in a province, the special police becomes for that province absorbed into the police establishment of that province and is subject to the superintendence of the Inspector-General of Police and subject to the liabilities of an ordinary policeman in that place. That is the provision in clause 5. I welcome that provision but in so far as the majority of provinces have agreed to this they will surely try to take as much advantage of this as possible. I would therefore urge on the Honourable Member to enlarge the scope of the offences. The words used here are,—“for the investigation of any offences or class of offences specified in a notification under section 3.” Now under clause 3 it is open to the Central Government alone to specify the class of offences or class of offences with respect to which the special police may investigate. But the provinces may try to use this special police for the purpose of investigating some other offence in relation to these various departments. Therefore to give them the advantage of the experience of the special police with respect to other classes of offences I thought this might have been enlarged, but I do not know what information the Honourable Member has and why, even though he places this special staff at the disposal of the provincial Governments, he does not allow them to use this staff for investigating kindred offences where they may be useful and effective. Then in clause 5(2) the words “liabilities of a police officer” are used. I believe the word “liability” implies liability to send up challans to other persons above them and taking their orders. I would have liked that word to be replaced by “subject to the orders of so and so with respect to challans and others.” But the word liability is there and if it means that I have no objection.

Then with regard to clause 6, I have my own doubts. I have found in practice that this is not a legislature where we are following the English practice where every word counts. By inadvertence a word may be omitted and when it goes up to the High Court and the Privy Council, they say they can do nothing because the legislature has so enacted it and therefore the rules of interpretation would strictly apply. Where a provincial Government requests, it ought not to be made necessary for them once again to invest the police with these powers. That is what appears to be in clause 6 which read with clause 5 means to me that the special police have to be clothed with special powers of a special police officer. I would welcome some clarification regarding that.

matter I want that when clothing them with special powers, the moment they are appointed they must have all the powers of a police officer of that province.

Sir, I welcome this Bill. It is long overdue and we await with pleasure the Bill which will make bribery a cognisable offence under the Penal Code.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi (Calcutta and Suburbs, Muhammadan Urban). Sir, I did not know it would be my misfortune to listen to a speech of the type delivered by the Honourable the Home Member. No member from amongst the sun-dried and file-ridden civilians could have talked as he has done. One would feel that the bones of Macaulay have really become dust and ashes and that the Indian Penal Code has ceased to exist. Sir, the demoralization of this House, to which I drew your attention yesterday, could be measured by the clapping which the side of the House on my left gave when the Honourable the Home Member sat down. Sir, this demoralization must stop, otherwise all the attractive and brilliant ideas in the brains of my colleagues in this House of our having entered the millennium will vanish into thin air. Mr. President, Sir, I should like to draw the attention of my colleagues in this House through you to Member after Member of the Government of India coming and telling us as if they had no shame as if they had no principles in life, as if the whole of their past had been washed away on their assumption of office that this thing was part of the Defence of India Rules, this thing of course worked in India not four years under an Ordinance and therefore it has to be continued. This means prolongation of the war into the civil life of this country. This Bill is of a dangerous type and no Indian citizen should allow it to be passed by this House with his consent. I was twitted, Mr. President, that I lived in the past. I am proud of living in the past. I should like the newer members of the Indian National Congress and the Muslim League to realize definitely and categorically that the present Government is still the Government under the Act of 1919. We have not entered the millennium yet. The thin end of the wedge in which the Honourable the Home Member applies it to Delhi first and then carries it forward to other parts of India is to use a very mild expression, intended to deceive the House of the terrible powers which this Government, which happens to be Indian, is seeking from us. Mr. President, when you get power you go mad, when you get power you forget your past, when you get power you want to dominate. I may tell the Honourable the Home Member that I shall have the privilege of not supporting him because this Bill goes against the grain of the politics which I have followed and which he has followed for the last forty or fifty years. How can I allow this establishment of overlapping of police authorities? Are there no sections in the Indian Penal Code to take care of the crimes contemplated in this Bill? Let the ordinary law take care of corruption, let the ordinary law take care of bribery. Sir, if you pay attention to Section 3, you will see that although he talks of bribery, he talks of corruption and this that and the other, he has not stated the offences specifically in that Section. Sir, any Home Member or any Assistant in the Department can include by a scratch of his pen my relations with my wife. Where are the Law Members and where are the other members of the Government of India who claim to talk

Mr. President: I do not want to interrupt the Honourable Member but I believe there is a misconception. This Bill does not create a new offence, it creates a machinery to deal with offences.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Mr. President, Sir, I do not know whether the interpretation you have given is also the interpretation of the Government of India. Sir, with your Indian mind and with my Indian mind we are here seeing a reflection of the Anglo-Indian mind as it existed for decades to our detriment. Sir, I want to know if these offences are covered by the Penal Code of the country? If they are, then why this wretched Bill? Corruption and bribery take two—one that gives and one that accepts—and therefore he may be able to punish the poor man in the department, but I shall have to live long to see that the Government of India has developed the courage to touch the [Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi] capitalist and the millionaire. I have heard of many cases of corruption and all sorts of nonsens during these years of war, but the poor man suffered, the bigger folk did not suffer. I could give instances, but I shall not disturb the House longer with my conception of these wonderful methods of crushing our rising spirit of freedom and liberty by people who are not ashamed of prolonging, as I said Sir into the civilian life of the country measures which were intended to meet war conditions. The Supplies and Industries Member wanted controls, the Finance Member wants the rupee to be thrown into the air and come back to us magically as a piece of gold. The Honourable Member considers that we are a nation of angles.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) When you are there we cannot believe it.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi I should think that the Honourable Members will go back home and according to their own methods of appealing to the deity will play 'Oh Lord! let my conscience be clean'. Let not the rights of Indians be tampered with by a Government that has no mind of its own, by a Government that lives on the crumbs thrown by its predecessor in the way of administration. It was the Ordinance and therefore we must accept it. Sir, could humbug go any further? If this Government, consisting of the Congress and the League is going to bring in wretched Bills like these without trying first to amend the terrible sections in the Indian Penal Code for our benefit, the sooner it ends the better. Sir, I cannot control my feelings. I cannot control my sentiments where the freedom of my fellow countrymen is concerned. (Interruptions.) It is all very well for gentlemen who are trying to disturb me to feel that they alone have got the monopoly of nationalism or freedom of liberty. May I point out to them, through you, Sir that they do not understand the meaning of the word freedom or the meaning of the word liberty. (Interruption.) They repeat what they hear from London, Washington and Moscow, and in their new creations as Members sitting on Government Benches consider that it will be a crime if we do not support this "Immolation Government" in everything that it wants to do. Sir I shall not be true to myself if I do not tell the Honourable the Home Member that for goodness sake let India go ahead as it is going. Withdraw this Bill because this Bill however, you try to explain it, is another addition to the fetters round the Indian citizen. Governments whosever turn them in Governments and the eternal quarrel between citizens and Governments must remain. We do not want to send the Bill even to a Select Committee for in the Select Committee the Home Member would have been—I hope even under the new mentality of my colleagues in this House—compelled to describe clearly and completely the various types of offences he wishes to control under Section 3. Sir I have had a bit of political experience in my time. Every section of the Indian Penal Code can be brought into this Section 3. Whatever the legal advisers of the Home Department may say I am not prepared to accept that it will stop at the few offences the Honourable the Home Member mentioned before us.

The whole Bill has been drafted in a spirit of cruelty. I hope the Honourable the Home Member will realize that this Bill in its present form, or in any form which adds even one more section to the penal laws of the country, cannot be acceptable to an honest mind, to people who have played their little part in the politics of the country. The new Members of the Government cannot understand that in the present world, in which they have taken power to themselves, their first duty is to protect and take care of the citizen and not to burden him with new criminal laws and punishments.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I am surprised at the attitude taken by my honourable friend, Mr. Siddiqi. I am afraid he has taken fright,

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Yes, yes!

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: he is oppressed by a sense of frightfulness and he thinks that this Bill is drafted in a spirit of cruelty. I in afraid he has not understood Section 3 at all. This Bill creates, as you Sir rightly said, no new offence. The Penal Code is not touched by this Bill. It only sets up a machinery for the investigation of a certain type of offences in the Penal Code by a certain type of special police which has got the experience, the knowledge and the facilities for the investigation of those types of offences. He may wait for the type of new offences that is still to come in a new Bill, called the Bribery and Corruption Bill, because the cruelty which he refers to is not the cruelty or the spirit of cruelty in drafting the Bill but the cruelty which has been perpetrated on the poor masses of this country by those who have taken advantage of the unfortunate situation in which the country was placed during the war and tried to take money by illegal means from the right, from the left, from the front and from all sides.

• Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: By all!

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: And if it is by all, then it is open to you to suggest measures. But this very police has been responsible for arresting those classes of people also whom my friend refers to—even the capitalist whom he has criticised. But the capitalists also by themselves are unable to go through the nefarious deal. They want the partnership of the officers to get through their evil deed, and therefore this is a measure which is aimed at both the parties. Hence it is obvious that it is not drafted in a spirit of cruelty, but in a spirit of pity and mercy. Thus it will give considerable relief to the people who suffer and who have no remedy.

I would point out one fact for the benefit of my honourable friend, Mr. Siddiqi, that this police establishment was responsible for securing conviction of no less than thirty gazetted officers. Is that a creditable performance for the service? It is a creditable performance for the establishment and not for the service. This establishment was responsible for the conviction of sixteen commissioned officers, and if the normal law of the country is not sufficient or is deficient to meet with the abnormal conditions that exist today, it would be criminal to fail in our duty, which demands that we should take a firm stand.

Now a suggestion has been made that a higher officer than a sub-inspector should be entrusted with certain cases. Indeed, it is the practice that when bigger officers are involved, the highest officer is put in charge—in the new Bill that is coming there is a provision that an officer not below the rank of Deputy Superintendent of Police should deal with those cases. But there are certain small cases in which the sub-inspector or the Inspector of Police is quite enough.

I am afraid I cannot accept the suggestion that a judicial officer should be placed at the head of this department. This is a special type of work in which these police officers have specialized and I may say for the information of the Honourable Members that this machinery has worked for four or five years and I have heard nothing but praise for the head of this Department, no complaint has been received so far. Therefore, apart from that, to put a judicial officer in this type of work would not fit in with the circumstances. The investigation of this type of work demands certain aptitude, certain character, and certain experience which a judicial officer would not have. After all the cases go to the judicial officer for trial. These cases are very difficult to detect and as they are in the nature of things difficult to detect the trained personnel which has got this experience for a number of years and who have proved themselves by their ability and work, should be allowed to do that work.

So far as the other point is concerned, that the scope of this class of offences should be enlarged. I do not think that the provinces themselves would relish the idea. The provinces are jealous of their powers. They do not want to be interfered with. The authority they have got and all their ordinary police are quite sufficient to deal with their normal work of detecting offences, but this is a special kind of work in which, if any province wants to take advantage, the machinery is at its disposal.

[Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel]

I forgot to make a reference to a point which my friend, the Honourable Mr Siddiqi raised that there is some device in the stationing of this police in Delhi and then extending it elsewhere. It is also a mistaken notion. Delhi Province is the only province which is near and which is centrally administered. We have no authority in the provinces. There is another province, Ajmer, which is also administered centrally but that would not be suitable. The offences to be investigated primarily refer to the Central Services, and therefore Delhi is the only place where we can keep proper supervision and control. But these offences require investigation in the outside provinces, because some of the offences are overlapping and therefore they want jurisdiction in other provinces. So even if the provinces do not want the machinery to be utilised for the purposes of the investigation of our offences it is necessary that our police should have power to investigate those offences in those areas. Therefore there is no device or any special ingenuity by which any encroachment is to be made or any extension is contemplated. That is a mistaken idea.

About the enlargement of the scope of offences, as I have said, the offences are to be notified and the power is to be given for the investigation of offences to be specially notified. If it is found necessary or if there is a demand from the provinces, it would be open to the Central Government to include those offences in the notification. It depends upon how the provinces make their demands. I think the House has accorded its formal approval and therefore I move for the consideration of this Bill. I hope that there will be no amendments. If there is any which has been given notice of I appeal to the movers of the amendments to withdraw them.

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill to make provision for the constitution of a special police force for the Chief Commissioner's Province of Delhi for the investigation of certain offences committed in connection with matters concerning Departments of the Central Government, for the superintendence and administration of the said force and for the extension to other areas in British India of the powers and jurisdiction of members of the said force in regard to the investigation of the said offences, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President: As there are no amendments to any of the clauses I propose to put all the clauses together. The question is

"That clauses 2 to 6 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 6 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President: The question is

"That clause 7 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 7 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, I move

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

[At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan).]

REQUISITIONED LAND (CONTINUANCE OF POWERS) BILL

Mr. G. S. Bhalja (Secretary, Defence Department) Sir, I beg to move.

"That the Bill to provide for the continuance of certain emergency powers in relation to requisitioned land, be taken into consideration"

Sir, Rule 75A of the Defence of India Rules provided inter alia for the temporary requisition and the permanent acquisition of lands and buildings for the purposes indicated in sub-rule (1) of that Rule. A large number of lands and buildings had been requisitioned by the Central Government as well as by the Provincial Governments, and immediately before the expiry of the Defence of India Act, were still in the use and occupation of Government for various public purposes. In order to give the House an idea as to the extent to which these powers had been exercised during the war, I should point out that the number of requisitioned properties remaining with the Government on the 31st March 1946 was 9,243. The total number of properties which were requisitioned during the period of the war was 10,689. If the Defence of India Act had been allowed to expire without any legislative action in this respect, the lands and buildings permanently acquired under sub-rule (2) of rule 75A would not have been affected, but it would have been necessary to return forthwith to the owners all lands and buildings which had only been requisitioned whether for a definite or an indefinite period.

Retention of some of the requisitioned lands and buildings beyond the 30th September was, and still is, necessary for several reasons. The problem of quartering Armed Forces and ancillary Services and of finding storage accommodation for their equipment and stores will continue to exist for a considerable time. As has been pointed out before on the floor of this House several times, the war has ended but the conditions created by the war still persist. As I explained the other day although the war is over the demobilisation of the armed forces has not been completed. We have still in the Army roughly four times the number of men at the beginning of the war. These members of the armed forces have to be clothed, fed and housed and for all these purposes accommodation is essential.

Secondly, troop movements are still greatly in excess of peace time movements both eastwards and westwards, with the result that transit camps and other facilities have to be temporarily retained.

Then, again, very valuable assets, the value of which amounts to several crores, have been created during the war on many of the requisitioned lands the value of which at the time of requisition was only a fraction of their present value. Government could not, however, legally claim from the owners any part of this increase in value and the return of all such properties on the 1st October, the date on which the special powers under the Defence of India Act terminated, would have resulted in an enormous loss of public money.

It was accordingly necessary to provide for the continuance without a break of the existing powers in relation to requisitioned land beyond the 30th September, 1946. As the legislature was not in session at that time the purpose was achieved by issuing an Ordinance which was promulgated on the 25th September 1946. The present Bill reproduces largely the provisions of that Ordinance.

I should explain that the main provisions of the Bill are as follows.

Clause 3 provides for continuance of all requisitions in force immediately before the expiry of the Defence of India Act and of the power of Government to use or deal with the lands in any manner it thinks fit.

Secondly, the proviso to clause 3 and clause 4 which provides for the release from requisition of any requisitioned land when no longer required by Government.

Thirdly, clause 5 provides for the permanent acquisition of any of the requisitioned lands in certain specified circumstances without resort to the cumbersome procedure laid down in the Land Acquisition Act. The first two circumstances specified in sub-clause (3) of this clause are the same as those specified in section 19A of the Defence of India Act 1938, while the third is considered essential and eminently justifiable.

[Mr G S Bhalja]

And lastly, clause 6 provides for the payment of compensation in respect of the continuance of requisition and any permanent acquisition effected under the Act. The principles and procedure for this purpose will be the same as those laid down in section 19 of the Defence of India Act, 1930.

Sir, I am aware that there is a good deal of feeling in the country as regards the progress of de-requisitioning many of these properties which were requisitioned during the war. I have tried briefly to indicate the necessity for continuing the special powers which Government had taken to themselves during the period of the war. As I pointed out though the war has ended the conditions created by the war still persist and it is therefore necessary that these powers which were taken during the emergency of the war should continue so long as those conditions also persist. Government realise that inconvenience is caused in several cases by their continuing in possession of requisitioned properties, but I shall give this assurance on behalf of Government that no one is more anxious to expedite the process of de-requisitioning properties which were requisitioned during the war than the Government, and that every effort will be made to release as quickly as possible the properties which are now in possession of Government. In this matter, I hope the House will balance the interests of the individuals against the interests of the State. It is true and it is natural that persons who have been deprived of their properties by extraordinary powers during the emergency should have a grievance that these properties still continue to be in the possession of Government, but I hope the House will realise the necessity and the justification for continuing to be in possession of some of these properties so long as the special conditions persist, and will subordinate the interests of the individuals to the larger interests of the state. Sir I move.

Mr Deputy President: Motion moved.

"That the Bill to provide for the continuance of certain emergency powers in relation to requisitioned land, be taken into consideration."

I think there are some amendments. If they are moved simultaneously, I think the Honourable Member would prefer to make his speech along with them.

There is an amendment by Mr Ahmed E H Jaffer for circulation, he is not here, that drops. A other starts "the name of Mr Ahmed Jaffer for Select Committee and the same name has been given by Messrs Griffiths and Lawson. I think both the amendments are the same. Does Mr Lawson want to move it?

Mr. C. P. Lawson (Bengal Language): Yes Sir. I should explain that I only heard today that Mr Jaffer's amendment was not being moved and I am afraid that I was able to give very little notice of this amendment but I hope you will accept it.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: On a point of order Sir, is the amendment in order?

Mr. Deputy President: The amendment is the same as Mr Jaffer's and it is only for Select Committee. The Honourable Member is not therefore taken by surprise.

Mr G. S. Bhalja: I am just inquiring whether under the Standing Orders the amendment is in order or not.

Mr. Deputy President: The amendment, as it has been handed over to me, is in order but the names have to be given. It is not complete yet.

Mr. C. P. Lawson: I beg to move.

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, Mr P J Griffiths, Mr Ahmed E H Jaffer, Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan, Mr Mann Subedar, Mr Abdur Rahman Siddiqui, Dr G V Deshmukh, Pandit Balkrishna Sharma, and the mover, with instructions to report by the first day of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the committee shall be five."

Mr. Deputy President: Will the Honourable Member hand over the names?

Sri M. Anantasaayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Cumbloor Non-Muhammadian Rural) Was the Whip of this party consulted?

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena (Lucknow Division Non-Muhammadian Rural). Am I to understand that he has obtained the consent of the members mentioned in the motion?

Mr. Deputy President: Has the Honourable Member obtained the consent of the members?

Mr. C. P. Lawson: As far as possible in the very short time I had

Mr. Deputy President: The practice has been to obtain the consent of the members, but it is open to the Honourable Members who do not want to serve to withdraw their names, but I think it is the practice that the Honourable Member before moving the names should obtain their consent

Mr. C. P. Lawson: Sir, it will come as no surprise to this House that we move this amendment to the original motion for consideration. From questions that we have raised from time to time, it has been tolerably clear that there is extreme dissatisfaction in all parts of this House regarding the speed of derequisitioning of property, both land and housing accommodation. During the last Budget session, it formed part of an actual cut which if it had been pushed would have been most certainly passed by this House. All parties spoke in favour of the cut and indeed the War Secretary himself admitted to this House that the progress of derequisitioning had been unsatisfactory. So, when we are presented with a Bill which provides for the continuation of requisitioning when the whole of our pressure has been in the direction of derequisitioning, we have to regard it as rather a grave measure that must receive very close consideration before it is passed. I suggest, in fact, that if this Bill finally is passed it would be to the benefit of the Bill itself were a number of alterations to be made, that is indeed at the back of our wish to move for the consideration of this Bill by a Select Committee. This is the time not for the continuation of measures for requisitioning but for pressing for quick derequisitioning. We have been lately told by the Honourable the Defence Secretary that so far something like 18 per cent of the requisitioned lands and 80 per cent of the requisitioned buildings have been derequisitioned. Now, Sir, I do not think there is any party in the House that could say that that was very good progress. It is not even adequate progress and whatever the Defence Secretary may say it is not the rate of progress that was indicated to us by the War Secretary during the last session. It was then a matter of complaint that derequisitioning was slow. If it was slow then, what is it now? It is certainly not proceeding at the rate that this House considered necessary and this House must therefore most carefully scrutinise any measures for the continuation of this compulsory requisitioning. Now, Sir, the Bill as in the case of another Bill that has been considered by this House comes under the provisions of the India (Central Government and Legislature) Act, 1946 and the period that this Bill will operate is for one year from the 30th September, possibly two years if the Governor General so requires and a maximum of five years, if the two years are exceeded and that is permitted by Parliament. So in fact, in the first instance, all this Bill asks for is that requisitioned property shall be retained in the hands of Government for another six months beyond the period permitted by the existing Ordinance. In fact, if this Bill were not passed, all requisitioned property would have to be returned back to its owners, I think, I am right in saying, by the end of next March; this might not be a bad thing but one does not wish to be unreasonable; circumstances might arise where that would make it extremely awkward for the Government but the effect of this Bill is merely to add another six months in the first instance to the period from the end of March. It might be extended to two years or even five years later but in the initial stage they ask for six months more. There is a fear in the minds of the authorities that they might be made to get rid of all the buildings they requisitioned by the end of next March if this Bill is not passed. Now, I heard the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies yesterday point out that most of the objections to another measure were not on account of the measure itself but on account of the bribery and corruption which that measure brought and I suppose that the Defence Secretary may equally stand up and say—the trouble is not that we are requisitioning but that the provincial authorities and the various authorities that apply this law do not work properly and that bribery and corruption is there, but that is not quite the same story. The fact of the matter is that once property gets into official hands, that property sticks. It is much too easy to hold on to somebody else's property than to build new property for yourself and we have lately had a very good example of that in Delhi in the requisitioning of godowns to accommodate food stock. It is much easier to go and pinch somebody else's godowns than to go in the highways and byways and find one for yourself or build one for yourself. I know personally of a case in which a flat in Calcutta is being occupied by a junior officer of the Railways. The continuation of the requisitioning of that flat has been arranged. It is still requisitioned and it is going on being requisitioned. That officer may say that he belongs to an essential service and he must be there but why should he have that flat more than I should. The fact of the matter is this—When an official is placed in a requisitioned building he is in receipt of a government quarter and he gets that quarter for ten per cent of his salary. The rent of his flat is anything between 300 and 400 rupees a month and that person is certainly not drawing Rs 3,000 or Rs 4,000 a month. In other words, he gets his accommodation a good deal cheaper than he is entitled to get it and in those circumstances these buildings are not being given up. They are sticking and they will go on sticking and the reason why the Defence Secretary cannot give a better showing than this—18 per cent only of land and 60 per cent only of buildings—is that officials are hanging on to the buildings they have got and are not giving them up.

Now, Sir, you may say—what does this mean in terms of the Select Committee. You may say you have put up various points of maladministration. You have pointed out certain aspects in which officials are hanging on to property much longer than they should and how are you going to alter that in the Bill? Well, Sir, I will make a suggestion which is perhaps more in the nature of thinking aloud, but that is the purpose of a Select Committee. It is to think about a Bill and finally produce it in the proper shape and not in the shape in which it is now.

My first suggestion would be to establish under this Bill something in the way of a Board so that these various decisions that are taken are not taken by one official, who is undoubtedly interested, but by people who are disinterested and who may represent the non-officials in that particular district. There is no appeal at present at all from these executive decisions. If I want my flat back and if my flat is in the hands of an official who I do not think should have it, some Estate Officer may tell me that I cannot have my flat back and that is the end of it. I have got to accept what he says. I do not accept that position. I think it is a bad position and I think it is the duty of this Government to see that any Bill that they may produce includes measures which will deal with a situation like the one I have mentioned. We are not working now in war conditions, we are working in peace conditions and it is the duty of the Government to adapt these measures to new conditions. There is no reason now why there should be this arbitrary decision on the part of officials. There is no reason whatever for that state of things now and it is the duty of the Government to remedy it. Unless this Bill goes to the Select Committee, I cannot see how this point can be remedied.

While I am sorry to hold up the business of the House and while it has always been our effort on this side to get business through as expeditiously as possible, here is a case where the Bill should be examined by the Select Committee. And if my Honourable friends in this House who have spoken on this subject before have the same attitude today towards this subject as they had when I raised it last session this Bill will have to go to the Select Committee.

Now, Sir, there is only one other point which I would like to make before I sit down. It is to stress the need for this body or authority whichever you may call it which will be in the nature of a court of appeal. Let us take the question of the acquisition of land under this Bill I have a piece of land and the Government takes it and puts up a building on it. When I want that bit of land back, normally I might say "All right, take your building away", and presumably the terms of the Land Acquisition Act would apply. Actually, now the Government can take my land without so much as offering it back to me. They might at least offer the land and building to me and give me the first refusal, then if I refuse they could take the land and keep it. Surely, there should be some superior authority to decide points of this sort. The point of the acquisition is made clear in these words. It says

"When the appropriate Government decides that such acquisition is necessary for a purpose connected with the maintenance of defence services or the maintenance of supplies and services essential to the life of the community"

Now, Sir, who is going to decide whether my godown is necessary to Government? No doubt when food stocks arrived recently in Delhi, there was a scarcity of godowns. So, the Chief Commissioner says, "It is necessary that I acquire that godown." But who is to say that it is necessary for him to acquire it? He can go to Ghaziabad and get a godown there. Of course, it won't be in Delhi. He can go two or three miles by road and get a godown there. But he will say that it will cost him extra money. So, it is necessary that he should acquire my godown. That is an executive instruction and no one can tell that official to go to some other place where he can have a godown.

Again, Sir, what is the necessity of the defence services? There is no war now. Supposing I have the only godown on a sea coast and the Navy says "I must have that godown. It is necessary for me because it is the only godown on the seacoast." Let them build a godown of their own. There is no necessity now because there is no war.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: May I interrupt the Honourable Member for a minute? The Bill does not give powers to the Government to requisition any further properties. It only gives powers to continue in possession of the properties already requisitioned.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh (Bombay City Non-Muhammadan Urban) : But which are unnecessary now.

Mr. O. P. Lawson: That is exactly my point and that is why I referred to a godown on the seacoast. That godown was requisitioned when the war was on and now the Government says "I want that godown. I am going to acquire it." Let them build another godown.

Then, Sir, they can acquire property for the needs of the defence. But the needs of the defence in peace time are not the same as in war time. In fact, during peace time there is no particular reason why they should have that building at all.

Then, again, what are the services essential to the life of the community? My junior railway official presumably is essential to the life of the community because he runs the railways, but is he to have my accommodation because he is the railway official? If so, who is to decide what is essential to the life of the community? The executive officer in Calcutta or Bombay and there is no appeal from his decision.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: What about the community? I am the community.

Mr. O. P. Lawson: Dr. Deshmukh says "What about the community?" He is one of the public spirited citizens of Bombay and doubtless in his spare moments between cutting people up he could sit on a Board and decide whether an appeal from the orders of this executive officer was reasonable or not.

Now, Sir, I think I have made out a case—a very strong and definite case—why this Bill has got no right to be put before this House for consideration and passing in a couple of hours in an afternoon. I think that there is every reason why this Bill should go to a Select Committee and have at least the corners knocked off and I do hope that in the Select Committee perhaps one or two of the corners will be quite big corners when they are knocked off. I hope the Member in charge of this Bill will accept my amendment and I also hope that my Honourable friends in other parts of the House will support this motion and see that the Bill does go to the Select Committee

Mr. Deputy President: Amendment moved

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, Mr P J Griffiths, Mr Ahmed E H Jaffer, Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan, Mr Manu Subedar, Mr Abdul Rahman Siddiqi, Dr G V Deshmukh, Pandit Balkrishna Sharma, and the mover, with instructions to report by the first day of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the committee shall be five"

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Nominated Non-Official) Sir, I will have only one minute to speak on this Bill as I am going to Bombay tomorrow morning. I support most cordially the amendment that the Bill should go to a Select Committee. My Honourable friend the Mover of the Bill was not in the House during the last session and he therefore does not realise the strength of the feeling in this matter. There is one point I want to raise. I agree that requisitioning should continue in certain cases where Government are at present in possession. With that principle I agree. But I would draw the Honourable Member's attention to the injustice that his Department does to owners of properties that have already been requisitioned by the manner in which they treat them while the properties are being derequisitioned. They are not repaired properly. Every obstacle is put in the way of the owner in getting back properties in decent condition. Let me tell my Honourable friends in this House that greater injustice is being done to poorer classes of people in this country than to the rich. I have instances before me where the poorer classes of people living in chawls were put on the streets on account of requisitioning orders. I have got instances just now where poor fishermen were kept away from their homes quite unnecessarily and not properly compensated and rent inadequately paid.

An Honourable Member: They are still being kept away.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: My Honourable friend Mr Lawson made the point of keeping properties unnecessarily. In many cases the poorest people are kept away from their homes simply because it is convenient to another class of people to live in those houses. The war has nothing to do with it, nor have war conditions got anything to do with it. It is merely the convenience of the people who are in possession and the owners themselves may go to the dogs as long as such legislation is on the statute book.

Now, Sir, those are some of the reasons why this Bill should go to the Select Committee. We agree to the principle that there may be certain lands and buildings which Government must continue to occupy just now. But that does not mean that this House should give the Government a carte blanche order to continue their present methods of injustice and inequity during the duration of this Act. I should like to have certain assurances given categorically to this House about their future conduct before we are a party to vote for such legislation.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday the 19th November 1946.

Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member consider reversing the process and getting the original news in Hindustani and having it translated into English because Hindustani is our national language?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: News comes in from news agencies in English, it cannot be reversed

Seth Govind Das: Is the Honorable Member aware that a move has been made to get teleprinters prepared for Hindustani? Will Government give an impetus to this so that original news may come through these teleprinters?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Surely, no action can be taken merely on a move that has been made

GRIEVANCES OF HINDI SPEAKING PUBLIC AGAINST THE LANGUAGE POLICY OF ALL INDIA RADIO

460. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Palwal: Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state the steps Government have taken or propose to take to remove the long-standing grievances of the Hindi speaking public and bodies like the All-India Hindi-Sahitya Sammelan against the language policy of the All-India Radio?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to his starred question No 928 on the 8th November 1946

INDIANISATION OF THE ARMY

461. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Palwal: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state the steps which the Interim Government have taken or propose to take to Indianise the Army?

(b) How long will it take to completely Indianise the Army?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) and (b) The Honourable the Defence Member is going to make an announcement on this subject today

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether any appointments to the Indian army in the officers' rank have been made of non-Indians after the last Budget Session was over?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I shall require notice of that question

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Was this question of Indianisation of the army brought before the Defence Consultative Committee?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Not the whole question of the Indianisation of the armed forces

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: May I know if the Honourable Member is considering the desirability of calling an early meeting of the Defence Consultative Committee with a view to going into this question immediately?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I said that the Honourable the Defence Member was going to make an announcement on this subject in the course of today

Mr. President: Where is it to be made?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: In the Upper House, Sir

Mr. Manu Subedar: Is it a fact that according to the Willcox Committee report a period of 26 years has been indicated as required for Indianisation? If so will the Honourable Member convey to the Honourable the Defence Member that that is not the way most Members of this House would like Indianisation to be done?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I would ask Honourable Members to be patient for a little while, they will have the full statement before them and I am sure they will be fully satisfied on this matter

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Is it a fact that the pay and prospects of Indians in the army have not yet been determined?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The pay, pension and other conditions of service are to be determined after the receipt of the report of the Post-War Pay Committee

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Is it a fact that after the last Budget Session of the House some non-Indians were recruited into the army on the ground that suitable applications were not forthcoming from Indians?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: That is a repetition of the same question

GRANT OF EMERGENCY COMMISSION AT THE INSTANCE OF DIRECTORATE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS AND OFFICERS IN THE Fauj Akhbar

462. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state

(a) the number of officers whom Emergency Commissions were granted at the instance of the Directorate of Public Relations, community-wise, from 1941 to 1946, along with their educational qualifications, journalistic or technical experience, status and pay held by them before the grant of such commissions,

(b) the number of military and civilian officers drawing more than Rs 250 per month, working in the Fauj Akhbar

(c) their academic qualifications including the examination passed in oriental or other languages, and journalistic experience before joining the Public Relations Directorate, and

+ Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

(d) the total amount of money paid to the Army Press from 1939 to 1946 in respect of the work done by it for the production of Fauji Akhbar and its supplement?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) British—47 Indians—52 (Muslims 23, Hindus 21 Sikh 1, Christians 5, Parsis 2)

Others—8 (Americans 2, German 1, Australian 3, Dutch 1, Chinese 1)

A statement giving these officers' educational qualifications, journalistic and technical experience and status before they were granted commissions (where known) is placed on the table of the House

(b) and (c) A statement is laid on the table giving the required information

(d) Rs. 19,29,577-7-6

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir I am authorised by the Honourable Member (Shri Sri Prakasa) to ask these questions (463-466).

Mr. President: I understand there is no fresh authority.

COORDINATION OF SANSKRIT STUDIES

†463. Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that there is no co-ordination of Sanskrit studies in the country,

* Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

(b) whether different institutions and universities are fully authorised to recognise or not the corresponding degrees of other institutions and universities, and

(c) whether Government propose to make arrangements for the setting up of uniform standards for different degrees in Sanskrit for the whole country, so that one institution may be bound to recognise the degree of another institution and admit students for higher degrees when they come with the hallmark of requisite qualification from another institution?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a), (b) and (c) The Honourable member has probably indicated the position fully. The study of Sanskrit in higher stages is conducted by Indian Universities and the degrees granted by one are generally recognised by other Universities. Indian Universities enjoy autonomy in their functions. They recognise courses of instruction provided for in educational institutions in accordance with their Rules and Regulations. The Inter-University Board of India has been set up to co-ordinate courses of studies in the Universities and it should be possible for the Honourable Member to raise the question before that Board and to have it examined although the need for imposing uniformity from without may be less in this field than in others.

SARNATH MUSEUM AT BENARES

†464. Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that the 'Lion Capitol' in the Sarnath Museum at Benares has been damaged and badly cracked, and if so, the circumstances in which the accident happened,

(b) if any images and other exhibits in the Museum had been sent abroad, and if so, whether all things have come back and been restored to proper places, and

(c) if Government intend to extend the Museum buildings to store the many valuable images etc., that have to be kept outside in the open yard?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) The Sarnath Lion Capitol was found broken across just above its bell portion and there were cracks in the necks of the lions when it was discovered in 1904-05. It is today in exactly the same condition as it was when it was discovered.

(b) No images and other exhibits in the Museum have been sent abroad, the latter part of this question, therefore, does not arise.

(c) No valuable images are stored or kept outside in the open yard. The question of extending the Museum building, therefore, does not arise.

EUROPEAN MENTAL HOSPITAL, RANCHI

†465. Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable Member for Health be pleased to state

(a) the annual expenditure on the European Mental Hospital at Ranchi,

(b) if the patients have to pay anything for their board, lodging and treatment there,

(c) if it is reserved for Europeans only, and

(d) if Government propose to permit non-European patients also to be admitted there?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: (a) The average expenditure in the past five years was Rs 5,89,385 per annum.

(b) Yes, unless they are certified to be indigent by the District Magistrate.

(c) and (d) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the answer given to question No. 340 asked by Seth Govind Das on the 8th November 1946.

+ Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

CENSOR OF CORRESPONDENCE

†466. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state

- (a) if any censorship is maintained on private correspondence,
- (b) if the correspondence of Congressmen is being still censored, and
- (c) if a political side of the Criminal Intelligence Department is still in existence, and if so, its exact duties?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (a) No censorship of private correspondence is maintained as such but powers of secret interception under section 26 of the Post Offices Act of 1898 are still exercised

(b) In order to safeguard the secrecy of interception, Government are not prepared to disclose the description and nature of correspondence which is censored

(c) The Honourable Member is presumably referring to the Central Intelligence Bureau. The function of this Bureau is the collection of intelligence relating to the security of India. It is not in the public interest to disclose the detailed character of these duties

NUTRITION DEPARTMENT

467. *Mr. Madandhari Singh: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Health be pleased to state if the Nutrition Department is a permanent one?

(b) If the reply to (a) is in the negative, do Government propose to make it permanent?

(c) Where are the centres for the research?

(d) Are they fully staffed?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: (a) and (b) There is no nutrition department. There is an institution known as the Nutrition Research Laboratories which is administered by the Indian Research Fund Association. The staff of this institution is employed on a year to year basis in accordance with the practice of the Association, with the exception of the Director who has been appointed on a three year contract, and the Assistant Director, who is on a five year contract. The Indian Research Fund Association has no intention of terminating the activities of the institution.

(c) Some nutrition research is conducted in a special section at the All-India Institute of Hygiene and Public Health, Calcutta. The main centre for nutrition research, is, however, the Nutrition Research Laboratories at Coonoor, maintained by the Indian Research Fund Association which receives its funds from the Government of India. The Indian Research Fund Association also finances a Nutrition Unit at the Seth G. S. Medical College Bombay and another at the Decca University. In addition the I. R. F. A. gives grants for ten enquiries into nutrition problems conducted in institutions in various parts of India.

(d) The staff at the All-India Institute of Hygiene and Public Health, Calcutta, is adequate. The staff at the Nutrition Research Laboratories and in connection with the various enquiries is employed by the Indian Research Fund Association. Some vacancies left unfilled during the war at the Nutrition Research Laboratories are now being filled. The various enquiries are adequately staffed.

Prof. H. G. Ranga: Are these places being filled by Indians or Englishmen?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: By Indians.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask why the Research Institute is kept on a yearly basis, and not on a permanent basis? Is it an advantage to keep it on a yearly basis?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: The Association operates on a grant given every year by the Government, and for that reason, I think, it maintains these laboratories on a year to year basis. They have been in existence for many years, and there is no intention of discontinuing them.

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

NUMBER AND LOCATION OF AERODROMES MAINTAINED FOR MILITARY PURPOSES

468. *Mr. Madandhar Singh: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state the number of aerodromes maintained for military purposes after the war and also their locations?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The number of Airfields, Landing Grounds and Flying Boat Bases under the control of this Department at the end of war (i.e., the 15th August, 1945) was 415. The total number maintained by the Defence Department at the present time is 101 including three Flying Boat Bases.

The location of these 101 Aerodromes is shown in a statement laid on the table of the House.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: What will happen to the other landing grounds and flying boat bases?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: 101 landing grounds, etc., are to be retained by the Defence Department, 15 have been transferred to the Director General of Civil Aviation for civil aviation purposes, and 260 are to be disposed of.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: May I ask for some clarification of that word—'to be disposed of'? Are they going to be sold away or are they going to be dismantled?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Of these 260 airfields which are the subject of disposal, letters declaring them surplus have already been issued in respect of 242. The remaining 18 are under consideration. The intention is that runways, taxi tracks, hard standings, etc., where they exist on these fields will be retained by the Central Government. This will be done as a form of insurance in case of a future emergency and because of the prohibitive cost of restoring land covered by several inches of concrete to its original condition. The Provincial Governments are going to be informed very shortly that if they so desire they may take over and maintain any of these works at their own expense.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: May we have the assurance that these airfields and landing grounds will not be either dismantled, destroyed or sold?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Yes, Sir. I have indicated that if the Provincial Governments desire to maintain them, they will be handed over to them for maintenance purposes and the rest which are likely to be utilized or required for defence purposes will be maintained by the Central Government.

Mr. Mann Subedar: May I know in how many cases of these military aerodromes which were located in Indian States territories, the aerodromes have been handed over to the Indian States and may I know how much and why Government demand payment for these aerodromes from these States?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I am afraid I must ask for notice of that question.

Sri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Have Government arrived at any decision with regard to which Landing Grounds, etc., they are going to retain and maintain?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Yes, Sir. I am laying a statement on the table of the House showing the aerodromes which will be retained by the Defence Department.

RECRUITMENT TO INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE

469. Mr. Mann Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state the total number of men in the Indian Civil Service?

(b) How many were recruited during the years 1943-44, 1944-45, 1945-46 and 1946-47 (upto 80th September 1946), and by what process?

(c) Have Government reached any conclusion as to the method of recruitment in future and the machinery by which they would be recruited?

(d) Do Government intend to continue recruitment of non-Indians in service in future?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) The total number of officers in the Indian Civil Service on 1st January 1946 was 1022

(b) Seven candidates were recruited during 1943-44 by competition and two by nomination. There has been no recruitment since then.

(c) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to my reply to Sardar Mangal Singh's starred question No. 71 on the subject on the 30th October 1946.

(d) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to my reply to Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Pahlwal's question No. 321 on the 8th November 1946.

Mr. Mannu Subedar: Do Government intend to recruit any non-Indians under the scheme put forward by the Secretary of State assuring them after such recruitment of very heavy gratuity and other charges in addition to all the allowances and emoluments which were given to the old civil servants?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The scheme referred to by my Honourable friend has not yet been received.

RETIREMENT ON PROPORTIONATE PENSION AND GRATUITIES TO I C S OFFICERS

470. Mr. Mannu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state how many members of the Indian Civil Service have exercised their rights to retire upon proportionate pension and how many of them have claimed gratuities under the new rules?

(b) What are the names of these officers?

(c) What is the amount of gratuity so paid?

(d) How many officers are affected by the proposed termination of their contract and their re-employment under new conditions?

(e) Has any decision been reached as to when and how this is to be done?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) to (e) The Honourable Member is presumably referring to premature retirements in view of the impending constitutional changes. At present there is a ban on retirements save in exceptional circumstances upto 31st December 1946. I place on the table a list of persons whose retirement on proportionate pension has been approved by the Secretary of State during 1946. No scheme for the winding up of the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police has yet been formulated by the Secretary of State. In pursuance of the conclusions reached at the Premiers Conference recently convened by me, the Secretary of State has been requested to expedite his proposals in this respect to terminate forthwith his connections with these Services and to fix a very early date for this purpose. His reply is still awaited. The total number of those who would be affected by these proposals is 1,022 which is the total strength of the Indian Civil Service cadre. The question of their re-employment will arise only after the scheme of new conditions of service is framed. As regards gratuity the Honourable Member is presumably referring to the compensation terms announced for war-service candidates. The Secretary of State has decided to stop recruitment to the Indian Civil Service but before this announcement 31 candidates had been offered and had accepted employment in the Indian Civil Service. The Secretary of State has sanctioned compensation grants amounting to £11,862-10-0 to these candidates. Since recruitment has been stopped, no further liabilities on this account will arise.

Names of I C S officers whose applications to retire on proportionate pension was approved by the Secretary of State during 1946*

* The officer is due to retire in each case after the expiry of leave due to him

+ These officers are contemplating withdrawals of their requests to retire on proportionate pension

Mr Manu Subedar: Will Government consider the desirability of not re-engaging any non-Indian who retires from these Services who claims full compensation and who then offers himself for a fresh job under this Government?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: There has been no such case of re-employment before Government at present but the point will be considered when any such question arises

EMPLOYMENT IN PRIVATE FIRMS OF HIGH GOVERNMENT OFFICERS

471. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state whether Government have considered the problem arising out of the negotiations with highly placed Government servants by business firms, who offer them jobs either at once or on their retirement?

(b) Will Government consider the advisability of enacting a law, which would oblige such negotiations to be done with the full knowledge of Government, and also whether they propose to take powers to prevent Government officers from being enticed away into private employment?

(c) Have Government enquired whether inducements for future employment given now will not in some cases result in special favour being shown to such parties?

(d) How many officers of Government of the status beginning with and higher than Deputy Secretary have, during the last five years, left Government service, or retired, and have taken up employment with private firms? Who are they?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) The number of such persons is comparatively small and consequently there is no problem of importance which could claim Government's special attention

(b) In view of the answer to clause (a), Government do not consider that drastic measures suggested by the Honourable Member are necessary. In any case no legislation is required and if any such contingency arises, it can be covered by rules

(c) Government are mindful of this possibility and the question of taking precautions against it requires consideration

(d) The information is being collected and will be placed on the table of the House as soon as possible

Mr. Manu Subedar: Will Government as one of the precautions against the inducement given to existing very highly placed Government servants offer to them an assurance that the emoluments and the terms and conditions of work for high officers of the Indian Civil Service who are now engaged will not be altered whatever the change may be with regard to the new recruitment of new men who may be taken?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: No change is contemplated

Mr. Manu Subedar: Will Government declare their intention of being informed in time that a highly placed Government servant is approached by a business firm with a proposition of future service? In other words, will Government declare it as a policy that negotiations should take place with the full knowledge of Government and not privately

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I do not think that any negotiations can proceed without the knowledge of Government

APPLICATIONS FOR NATURALIZATION FROM EX-ENEMY ALIENS, REFUGEES, ETC.

472. Mr. Manu Subedar. (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the Home Member been drawn to the numerous applications for naturalization from ex-enemy aliens, refugees, stateless people and others?

(b) What is the general policy of Government in this matter?

(c) Have Government considered the advisability of bringing legislation on the subject of Indian nationality and the conditions under which persons may be admitted to such nationality?

(d) Is decision on these applications taken independently in India by the present Government, or is a reference made to the United Kingdom as these people are claiming to become 'British nationals'?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Yes

(b) The policy of the Government of India in this matter was announced in a press note dated the 23rd July 1945 a copy of which is laid on the table of the House

(c) The question is being examined

(d) The decision is taken independently by the Government of India without making a reference to His Majesty's Government

PRESS NOTE

In 1940 in war conditions the Government of India suspended the naturalisation under the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act of subjects of European countries save in most exceptional circumstances. The position has now been reviewed and applications for naturalisation will again be considered

The grant of naturalisation cannot be claimed automatically on completion of the minimum period of residence prescribed under Statute, it is granted only when, after careful enquiries, it is established that the applicant is worthy of British citizenship

Such enquiries must take time but in order to minimise the inevitable delay a questionnaire has been prepared, copies of which can be obtained on application from the Home Department New Delhi. These forms should, on completion, be forwarded to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, New Delhi

When these forms have been scrutinised, if it is considered that an applicant is not prima facie ineligible for naturalisation, he will be asked to insert an advertisement in the papers announcing that he has applied for naturalisation and the Provincial Governments will be requested, when this has been done, to institute the usual inquiries and to require the applicant to comply with the prescribed formalities

Mr. Manu Subedar: Is it a fact that these people are claiming British nationality by naturalisation in India, and if that is so, will Government consider how soon we can have a definite policy formulated of having an Indian nationality?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Will the Honourable Member repeat the question?

Mr. Manu Subedar: These persons who claim naturalisation in their applications now are requesting to be admitted as a British national. The term used is British, though they are claiming naturalisation in India. Will Government consider a policy and consider the terms and conditions under which any one who claims citizenship in this country would claim to be an Indian national?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The question will be considered.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Have Government considered that some of these refugees on Bombay side are not of a very desirable type, and do Government ascertain in each case the source of livelihood and the manner and method of their activities before the applications for naturalisation are passed?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: No application is sanctioned in cases in which there is any report against the applicant.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Is it merely a political report which is considered, or is it the economic activities of such men? Most of them in Bombay side have been black-marketing and profiteering and not paying one single rupee as tax to the Honourable the Finance Member?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Every aspect of the question is considered.

CONSTRUCTION OF QUARTERS FOR LABOURERS ON THE PREMISES OF FUEL DEPOTS IN NEW DELHI

1473 Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddiar: (a) With reference to the short notice question on the 11th February, 1946, and the starred question No. 1803 on the 17th April, 1946, will the Honourable Member for Health please state at what stage the construction of quarters for labourers on the premises of fuel depots in New Delhi is?

(b) Is it a fact that the fuel depot owners have submitted their plans and estimates to the New Delhi Municipal authorities about three months ago for their approval but the Municipality have not moved in the matter till now?

(c) Is it a fact that the labourers are put to great inconvenience for want of dwelling houses on the premises?

(d) In view of the approaching cold season, will Government consider the advisability of instructing the New Delhi Municipality to get the quarters completed soon, so that the labourers may not be exposed to cold and wind?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: (a) In the programme of works of the New Delhi Municipal Committee for 1947-48 a provision of Rs. 9,000 has been made for the construction of 24 permanent quarters adjacent to the fuel depots.

(b) Yes. The plans and estimates are for temporary shelters at the depots and will be considered by the Committee at their next meeting to be held on the 19th November 1946.

(c) The labourers do suffer some inconvenience.

(d) Yes.

APPOINTMENT TO THE POST OF MUSLIM EPIGRAPHIST IN THE DEPARTMENT OF ARCHAEOLOGY

1474. Mr. Ahmed H. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state if it is a fact that recently a post of Muslim Epigraphist was sanctioned by the Government of India in the Archaeological Department?

(b) Is it a fact that one permanent Muslim Assistant Superintendent in the regular cadre of the Department was appointed to that post?

†Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) Yes The post of a Muslim Epigraphist was created 18 months ago

(b) An Assistant Superintendent in the regular cadre who is a Muslim has been found fit and appointed to this post

AUCTION OF THE PROPERTY OF RAMTAL ASHRAM, KATHARIA SERAI, MEHRAULI, DELHI PROVINCE

477 *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please refer to the list of 76 articles belonging to Shri Gandhi Seva Ashram, Ram Tal, Katharia Serai, Mehrauli, Delhi Province, as provided by Government in reply to Unstarred question number 216, put by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, on the 15th April, 1946, and state the amount realised by Government by auctioning the property of the Ramtal Ashram, Katharia Serai, Mehrauli?

(b) When was the auction held, and how was it advertised?

(c) Was the whole lot sold to one man? If so, what was the name of the person?

(d) Is it a fact that the amount offered by the Local Government to the Provincial Congress Committee for the entire belongings of the Ashram, which were valued at more than Rs 1,000 as auction proceeds is Rs 5? If so, do Government propose to make an enquiry into the matter as to why such valuable property was sold for sum of Rs 5 and compensate the Ashram?

(e) Is it a fact that at the time of confiscation of the said property on the 25th August, 1942, a list was duly prepared by the Police but its copy was not given to the Ashram authorities? If so, do Government propose to place it on the table of the House?

(f) Have Government got a list of the articles which were returned to Master Tula Ram on the 11th December, 1942? If so, do Government propose to place it on the table of the House?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Out of 76 articles 35, a list of which is laid on the table, were auctioned for Rs 40. The remaining articles comprised documents which were considered objectionable by the local Administration and were destroyed.

(b) The auction was held on the 26th May 1945. It was advertised as usual by pasting notices on notice boards in the Kutcherry compound.

(c) The property was sold to one man named Mohammad Ismail Kabari.

(d) No such offer appears to have been made.

(e) At the time of attachment of the buildings in question, on the 26th August 1942, lists of articles found therein were duly prepared by the Police and signed by Tula Ram s/o Devi Ram Biahman and two witnesses named Qazi Mohanmad Said Sufed Posh and Kesho Ram Lambardar. The articles found in the buildings were partly confiscated and partly restored. A list of the articles confiscated was placed on the table of the House on 15th April, 1946, in reply to question No 216. A list of articles restored is now placed on the table in reply to part (f) below.

(f) A copy of the list of the articles, which were handed over to Master Tula Ram on the 11th December 1942, is laid on the table.

Prof N. G Ranga In regard to those articles which were destroyed, will Government consider the advisability of enquiring about their nature and their cost and compensating the Ashram concerned?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I think nothing can be done about the articles. They have been destroyed and it has been considered to be closed in the general appeal of forget and forgive.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Member please enquire into the articles numbering thirty-five or thirty-six, auctioned for a paltry sum and find out whether the auction was considered fair and also find out the reasons for doing so?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Well it was sold in the ordinary course and no enquiry would serve any purpose.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is the Honourable Member aware that this list of articles consisted of big beds and furniture?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Perhaps they might have been in a rotten state.

DISTRICT BOARD OF DELHI

478. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Secretary of the Health Department be pleased to state

(a) whether Government are aware of the fact that the District Board of Delhi consists of 21 members out of which ten are officials and nominated,

(b) whether it is a fact that the Chairman is also an official, namely the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi,

(c) whether it is a fact that in the adjoining Provinces of the United Provinces and the Punjab the District Boards consist of an overwhelming majority of elected members and have non official Presidents, and

(d) whether Government propose to democratise the District Board by making suitable changes in its constitution?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: (a) Out of 21 members four are officials, five nominated members and twelve are elected members

(b) Yes

(c) In the United Provinces a District Board has a majority of elected members and an elected non-official Chairman. It is understood that in the Punjab the majority of members are elected but in most districts the President of the District Board is an official

(d) The matter will be considered

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know as to how long it will take the Government to come to a decision in the matter?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: I am unable to say exactly, but the decision will be arrived at shortly

Prof. N. G. Ranga: For the last several years this demand for democratising these local boards here and especially this Corporation has been made in this House and with no effect

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: There has been a demand in some quarters for some time.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is it a fact that Government propose to appoint a Committee to go into the question of having a Corporation in Delhi?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: That does not arise out of this question

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: It does. If the District Board has to be democratised it may have something to do with it

Mr. President: Order, order. Next question

PROVISION FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RETRENCHED OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN ARMY, NAVY, AND AIR FORCE

479. *Seth Sukhdev: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state

(a) how many officers of the (i) Indian Army, (ii) Indian Navy (iii) Air Force, have been retrenched since the close of the war,

(b) the number of Europeans and Indians retrenched, separately, and

(c) what provision has been made for the unemployed Indian Officers and how many of them have been rehabilitated?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) The number of officers demobilised since the close of the war in the three services is as follows

Indian Army	19,182
Royal Indian Navy	1,820
Royal Indian Air Force	240

(b) The number of Europeans and Indians demobilised in the three services is as follows

	Indian	European
Indian Army	4,208	14,974
Royal Indian Navy	557	1,083
Royal Indian Air Force	240	Nil

(c) The Resettlement and Employment machinery set up by the Labour Department caters for all demobilised Service personnel—officers and other ranks. Appointment Branches have been set up at the nine Regional Employment Exchanges in the country to deal with demobilized officers of the Armed Forces. The Central Employment Exchange circulates to Government Departments and private employers fortnightly lists of Services personnel seeking higher grade appointments. Officers still in the Service but likely to be released in the near future send their names for inclusion in these lists.

Released officers are eligible for reserved vacancies under the scheme for advanced studies abroad and for Short-Term Commissions in the Armed Forces.

Up to the 30th September, 1946, 512 officers were placed in employment of whom the majority were Indians. It is not possible to give the exact figure of Indian officers without a detailed enquiry which will take time.

Seth Govind Das: Is there any definite scheme for demobilisation of the remaining European army?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: There is a definite scheme for the demobilisation of officers according to the age and service groups.

Seth Govind Das: By what date can it be expected that no European officer in the army will remain in this country?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: That will be covered by the announcement which I referred to earlier in the morning.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Was there any principle followed for determining the ratio of release as between Indians and Europeans?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: No ratio is followed. Both are treated exactly in the same way in the matter of releases.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: How is it that in the Royal Indian Air Force the number of Indian personnel demobilised is 240 whereas there was no European demobilised?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: For the simple reason that in the Royal Indian Air Force there are no British officers.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Why is it that if some people had to be demobilised, Europeans alone were not demobilised, in view of the fact that the army is in India and not in Europe?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I do not follow the Honorable Member's question.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Why is it that when demobilisation was being decided upon and some people were demobilised Europeans alone were not demobilised?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: As I explained on another occasion in this House the Indian army is on a voluntary basis and we cannot keep people in the army against their wishes. Those who are due for demobilisation and those who wish to be released cannot be retained in the armed forces against their will. As regards others there are schemes for granting permanent and short service commissions, but surely it is not suggested that every officer who wishes to continue should be given a permanent commission irrespective of his suitability for the purpose.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know from the Honourable Member why is it that the absence of permanent commissions with respect to Europeans makes a difference in the matter of demobilisation?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: As I said there are no European officers in the Royal Indian Air Force and the question of demobilising them does not arise.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: If they are not permanent commissioned officers they may be sent out, call them by whatever name you like. My question is why should they not be sent out, if they are not permanent commissioned officers in preference to Indians who hold permanent commissions and who are there already?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: As regards Indian officers, I have explained that already As I said, nobody can be retained against his will in the armed forces and the Government must have the right of selecting the right type of men for the grant of permanent commissions

Sri. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Have Government made it impossible for Indians to continue

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Absolutely not, Sir

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Then, why are they anxious to go away from the armed forces without serving their own mother country?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I think the Honourable Member is under a misapprehension. Government are most anxious that as many Indian officers as possible should be retained in the post-war forces

Mr. Manu Subedar: How will the Honourable the Defence Secretary explain the fact that when Indian officers running into thousands have been demobilised and are being sent away, the Army Department is actually recruiting 2,800 Britishers to the officers' posts in the Indian army?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The number of Indian officers demobilised from the Indian Army is only 4,208. Probably what my Honourable friend refers to is the scheme of secondment of British officers in jobs, for which suitable Indian officers are not available at the present moment. There is no intention of granting a permanent commission to any non-Indian in future.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I have raised this point before in this House. Men are sent away after good service of several years. Why could they not be accommodated in the ranks instead of recruiting British officers for secondment?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The secondment scheme applies only to those cases in which Indian officers in sufficient numbers are not forthcoming or in which technical qualifications are necessary. As regards Indian Emergency Commissioned Officers Government are considering a scheme of giving training to the existing officers who might like to continue in the future armed forces, with a view to absorbing a large number of them in the three Services.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: In view of the fact that Indian officers in large numbers are willing to continue in the armed forces, may I ask the Honourable Member if Government is considering proposals to attract larger number of Indians to continue in the armed forces by giving them additional facilities or improving their prospects, so that they may continue in the services?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I do not accept the suggestion that the pay prospects, etc., offered to Indians in the army and the other two services are not adequate.

Seth Govind Das: Are the prospects for both Europeans and Indians the same?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Absolutely the same, except in the matter of what we call the Indian service allowance which is in the nature of overseas allowance and an allowance for service with Indian troops.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What is the cause of Indians getting away in such large numbers?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Indians are not going away in large numbers. I said that a large number of people have been given permanent commissions and that there was a scheme offering short service commissions. It was announced only the other day that 2,000 short service commissions would be given. It is hoped that in this way it will be found possible to retain in the services many of the existing officers after suitable training.

PAYMENTS MADE OUT OF THE ACCUMULATED STERLING BALANCES OF INDIA

480. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state whether Government propose to lay on the table of the House a statement giving the details of

(a) the amount of sterling balances of India which is accumulated overseas;

(b) the amount out of the said accumulation which has been spent on payment on consumer goods imported in India,

(c) payment for scholarships of the Indian students sent abroad for higher or specialised studies, and

(d) import of capital goods?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) The sterling balances according to the Reserve Bank's return for the 1st November 1946 amounted to £1218½ million or Rs 1,625 crores

(b) and (d) The sterling balances are a running account and consist of the surplus arising from India's favourable balance of payments as well as direct payments by H M G. Payments for imports are normally met by banks out of the foreign exchange earnings arising from their purchases of export bills. It is only to the extent that such payments cannot be met out of the proceeds of exports, that banks buy sterling from the Reserve Bank. It is therefore impossible to say to what extent any particular item is paid out of accumulations of sterling or out of the proceeds of current exports. It is only to the extent that the value of imports into India exceeds exports from India that payment for the latter will be met out of sterling previously accumulated.

Separate figures for amounts of sterling spent on imports of consumer goods and capital goods are not readily available. For the total amounts spent on imports, I would invite a reference to the monthly accounts relating to the Sea-borne Trade and Navigation of British India.

(c) Information regarding the total amount expended on the overseas scholarships scheme is not readily available. The estimated expenditure as provided for in the Budget Estimates is rupees ten lakhs for 1945-46 and Rs 55 lakhs for 1946-47.

Seth Govind Das: Is it a fact that recently all sorts of imports are increasing even of such goods as are produced in India?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I would request the Honourable Member to refer his question to the Commerce Department.

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the importance of Government having full information as to current trade transactions, capital movements and speculative movements of exchange, will the Honourable Member exercise the powers which this House has given to him yesterday and direct that each bank must collect the reason for the purchase of sterling or any other currency from every body who purchases it and give it to the Reserve Bank?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: After the Foreign Exchange Bill is passed and becomes law, the matter will be considered.

Seth Govind Das: With reference to part (c) of the question, may I know whether the students sent abroad are having practically the same degrees which they are having in India or even lower degrees, and in that case will the Government think it advisable not to send students for the same degrees or lower degrees, so that our sterling balances may not dwindle?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Here again I will have to refer the Honourable Member to the Education Department.

Mr. Tamisruddin Khan: Can the Honourable Member tell us how much sterling balances accumulated in the course of the current year?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I must have notice of that question.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know, whenever any payments which have to be made outside are not able to be adjusted by ordinary foreign exchange or our surplus balances, and merchants go to the Reserve Bank for sterling, the Reserve Bank watches if they are sterling balances or the sterling is required for ordinary consumers goods and are not frittered away when capital goods are required from that country?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The Reserve Bank has to make exchange available whenever an import license is produced.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it for all kinds of goods? Has the bank no discretion to refuse to pay in case particular kinds of commodities are unnecessarily brought to this country?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The Reserve Bank has no discretion in the matter it would be for the Commerce Department to exercise any discretion, if they wish

Seth Govind Das: Under these circumstances, will the Government keep separate accounts of the imports of consumer goods and capital goods, so that we may be able to check and decide whether we should stop consumer goods and utilise our sterling balances for the capital goods?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I am afraid it is difficult to keep an account like that

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: May I know if there is any definition by which you can differentiate between consumer goods and capital goods?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: My Honourable friend is an expert at these things and he knows it

INFLATIONARY CURRENCY POLICY

481. *Seth Govind Das. (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state what steps the Interim National Government propose to take to stop the present inflationary currency policy?

(b) Do Government propose to withdraw the excess money at present in circulation in the market?

(c) Is it proposed to stabilise the prices at a reasonable and healthy level by initiating and following a sound fiscal policy?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) Currency has been decreasing rather than increasing in recent months, but Government are aware that inflationary tendencies persist. They are continuing the various anti-inflationary measures initiated by the previous Government and are considering further measures.

(b) Government's anti-inflationary measures include the absorption of the surplus purchasing power by maximum borrowing, small savings campaign etc., and Government are continuing these measures.

(c) Yes, Sir

Mr. Manu Subedar: Have Government considered that if they go on borrowing at reduced rates they are causing inflation in the values of older securities?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: That is a matter of opinion

Mr. Manu Subedar: Have Government considered that the volume of borrowing which they can pick up from the market reduces as you go on reducing the rates of interest, and will Government revise their policy in this direction?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: No. I am afraid I cannot accept the contention of the Honourable Member

USE OF PERSIANISED URDU IN BROADCASTING HINDUSTANI NEWS BULLETINS BY THE ALL-INDIA RADIO

482. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state

(a) whether Government are aware of the great resentment prevalent in the Hindi speaking population all over the country on account of the use of the highly Persianised Urdu in broadcasting of the Hindustani News Bulletins by the All-India Radio,

(b) whether Government propose to take immediate steps to introduce the common men's Hindustani as the medium for these broadcasts, and

(c) whether Government propose to introduce the broadcasting of the News Bulletins in Hindi and Urdu separately?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a), (b) and (c) The whole question is at present under my active consideration

Mr. M. B. Masani: With reference to part (a) of the question, is the Honourable Member aware, that there are other sections of the people who take the view that the very simple Hindustani used in the All-India Radio bulletins is a great contribution to the building up of a common national language and that those sections do not share my Honourable friend's resentment?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: That is a part of the general question which is under consideration

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: Is the Honourable Member aware that the programme which is broadcast in Hindi contains so many Sanskrit words that even most of the Honourable Members here would not be able to follow it?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The whole question is being considered and nothing can be said at present

- Pandit Balkrishna Sharma: May I know whether the Honourable Member is aware of the immense amount of dissatisfaction that has been caused by the anti-Hindi policy of the All-India Radio?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Government is aware of the complaints received on both sides

INVITATION BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA TO ADMIRAL C B BARRY, DIRECTOR GENERAL DESIGNATE OF NAVAL DOCKYARD

483. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state whether Admiral C B Barry, Director-General Designate of Dockyards of the Royal Navy, has been invited by the Government of India on any Special Mission to Bombay?

(b) If so, what is that Mission? If not, on whose behalf is he coming?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) No, Sir

(b) Vice Admiral G B Barry happened to be passing through India en route to Ceylon. During his stay in Bombay he paid a visit to H M I Dockyard. There is no special significance attaching to this informal visit

RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE RUPEE AND STERLING

484. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state the latest constitutional and financial relationship between the Rupee and Sterling?

(b) When will the Rupee be delinked from Sterling?

(c) What is being done to achieve this delinking?

(d) When will India's membership of the Empire Dollar Pool be terminated?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) The constitutional and financial relationship between the rupee and the sterling is as set forth in Sections 40 and 41 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934

(b) I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to my reply to part (a) of Mr Manu Subedar's Starred question No. 87, on the 30th October, 1946

(c) The matter is under consideration

(d) The question is linked up with the sterling balances and it will be desirable to deal with it during the negotiations for the settlement of these balances

Prof. N. G. Ranga: When are these expected to commence?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I have made a statement before on this matter. The negotiations will be started earlier than my Honourable friend thinks

WAR COMPENSATIONS TO INDIAN PERSONNEL OF INDIAN FORCES

†485. *Babu Ram Narayan Singh: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please refer to the reply to starred question No. 1896, dated 27th March 1945, relating to King's prerogative to stop War Compensations in respect of certain Indian personnel of Indian Forces, and state if the promised statement has since been laid on the table? If so, on what date? If not, when do Government propose to lay the same on the table?

†Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Yes, Sir. The statement was laid on the table on the 21st January, 1946.

(CANCELLATION OF FIRE ARMS LICENCES IN DELHI PROVINCE)

486. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state whether Government propose to lay on the table of the House a statement giving the names of the persons whose fire-arm licences were cancelled in the Province of Delhi from the 9th August, 1942, to the 15th October, 1946?

(b) Is it a fact that most of the licences were cancelled on the ground that no ammunition was purchased or consumed by the licensees?

(c) There appears to have been no request to licensees to use ammunition requested all licensees to use ammunition very sparingly in view of the shortage of supply?

(d) Do Government propose to renew all such licences which had been cancelled on the ground that licensees did not buy or consume any ammunition?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) and (b) The information has been called for and will be laid on the table when received.

(c) There appears to have been no request to licensees to use ammunition sparingly.

(d) The matter is engaging my attention.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I bring to the notice of the Honourable Member and know from him whether his attention has been drawn to a general order passed by the district authorities saying—"As he has not purchased any ammunition after the 27th October 1941, it is evident that he does not need the weapon for which he will now obtain a good price by sale. I, hereby under clause (a) of section 18 of the Indian Arms Act, 1878, cancel the license?" Is it a fact that under this order about 300 or 400 licenses have been cancelled during this period?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: As many as 174 licenses have been cancelled under this clause (a) of section 18 of the Arms Act which gives power in this behalf.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is it a fact that out of these 174 licenses that were cancelled, a large majority—perhaps 90 per cent—of these licenses were of such persons who belonged to one particular community?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I am not aware of the fact, I want notice.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will he kindly inquire into the matter and place the information before the House?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Inquiries will be made.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Member please tell the House if he is aware of the fact that the clerk in charge of issuing licenses was authorised to collect commission on the sale of war bonds and such licensees, who bought war bonds during the period and paid commission to him got their licenses renewed?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I am not aware of the fact.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Member make inquiries into this matter too?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: If the information is required, inquiries will be made.

Sri V. C. Vellingiri Gounder: Is the Honourable Member aware that there is lot of complaint that suitable ammunition is not available in the licence depots in Madras?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The question refers to Delhi and not to outside provinces

FIVE YEAR PLAN FOR EXPANSION OF DELHI

487. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Member for Health be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Delhi Government has prepared a five year plan for the expansion of Delhi? If so, do Government propose to lay a copy of the same on the table of the House?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: Certain information has been called for and a reply will be furnished to the Honourable Member as soon as complete information is available

 OFFICERS OF THE LANDS, HIRINGS AND DISPOSALS SERVICES IN INDIA

488. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state whether Government propose to lay on the table of the House a list of officers of the Lands, Hirings and Disposals Services in India together with their full particulars?

(b) What is the number of Indian officers in the Lands, Hirings and Disposals Services in India?

(c) How many Deputy Directors, Assistant Directors and Deputy Assistant Directors (barring those recruited from the Lands and Cantonment Department) are fully conversant with the application of Land Acquisition Acts in India, and Defence of India Rules and can read and understand revenue records to appraise of the correct position of all leased hired requisitioned and acquired lands and buildings?

(d) Do Government propose to take early steps to appoint qualified Indians to higher appointments in the Lands, Hirings and Disposals Services in India?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) A list is laid on the table

(b) 65 of a total of 181

(c) All Deputy Directors, Assistant Directors and Deputy Assistant Directors are fully conversant with the application of the Land Acquisition Act in India, and with the sections of the Defence of India Rules governing the acquisition and requisition of property

Ability to read and understand revenue records is not considered essential. These records are kept by District Officers who have been given additional staff, paid from Defence Services Estimates for work connected with requisitioning, and any information required by Lands, Hirings and Disposals Service is obtained from the District Officer concerned

(d) The claims of qualified Indian officers to higher appointments will be duly considered along with those of others in the Service.

Mr. Manu Subedar: May I know why it was found necessary for the Defence Department to import Englishmen from England for doing derequisitioning after the war ceased and whether they did not find any suitable men in this country to do this work?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Because the requisite number of Indians possessing the required technical qualifications were not available. That is why a number of officers had to be brought out from England. I may add that advertisements appeared both in India and in the United Kingdom about the same time offering almost similar terms with certain changes

Mr. Manu Subedar: Did the Government consider, when importing these men, that these men coming from abroad know nothing of this country's geography, customs, laws or even manners in dealing with Indians and may I know why the Defence Department considered it necessary still to continue them when derequisitioning has already proceeded to some extent?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The Government have asked the Secretary of State not to make any further recruitment for this service

Seth Govind Das: Is there any possibility of sending away very soon those who are already there?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Their contract is for three to five years and as soon as their work is over, they will go back

Mr. Manu Subedar: Did Government anticipate that derequisitioning will take three to five years, since most of these men were brought out after the stoppage of hostilities?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I am not in a position to say when derequisitioning will be completely over

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Who were the people who were in charge of recruitment, were they Englishmen or Indians?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The Defence Department

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Does that mean that the Defence Department is fully Indian today?

(No reply)

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Is this Bill the result of these derequisitioning officers?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The results of the efforts of the officers will be noted in the debate on the Bill which is before the House and which will be resumed after the question hour

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: The Honourable Member referred to three to five years contract. Is there not the usual clause for the termination of the contract by three months notice on either side?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I must ask for notice of that question

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I ask whether these are military men or civilians?

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Neither!

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: A large number appointed by the Secretary of State are civilians

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What particular qualifications were insisted on in the case of the men appointed?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: If the Honourable Member desires I can give some of these qualifications. Degree in Estate management, Cambridge or London University, Fellowship, Membership, Associateship, Professional Associateship of Institutions of Chartered Surveyors or Land Agents, Fellows, Members or Associates of Institutions of Auctioneers; officers possessing degrees in Engineering, Civil Mechanical, Structural or Electrical and so on

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Most of these are auctioneers and house agents imported from England. If so, may I know why Indian house agents and auctioneers were not given emergency commissions?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: All officers are not of the category to which my Honourable friend refers. As I said earlier in this House, advertisements for these posts were inserted in the Press both in India and the United Kingdom.

PERMANENT LOCATION IN DELHI OF THE OFFICES OF AUDITOR GENERAL, DIRECTOR OF RAILWAY AUDIT AND ACCOUNTANT GENERAL, POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS

489. Sri N. Narayanamurthi: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state whether it is a fact that the offices of the Auditor General, the Director of Railway Audit, and the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs were permanently located in Delhi before the War?

(b) Is it a fact that on account of shortage of accommodation in Delhi, these offices were moved to Simla on the distinct understanding that they would be brought back to Delhi after the termination of the War?

(c) Are Government aware that the climate of Simla does not generally suit the staff of these offices and in consequence quite a good number of the members of the staff of these offices have fallen victims to such diseases as asthma, bronchitis, gout and rheumatism?

(d) Is it a fact that at the time of transfer of the above offices to Simla, the staff of these offices was given assurance by Government that their liens on Government residences occupied by them before transfer will be preserved till such time as they come back to Delhi? Is it a fact that subsequently Government removed the liens? If so, do Government propose to grant the liens again?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) Yes

• (b) Yes

(c) The Auditor General has received representations from the staff of these offices regarding the severity of the winter in Simla and has dealt sympathetically with individual requests for transfer on grounds of illness attributed to the climate

(d) Yes

It was decided that it was in the interests of public policy to abolish all suspended liens

The revival of suspended liens will upset all the present allotments and it is not proposed to revive them

DEARNESS ALLOWANCE TO MINT WORKERS IN BOMBAY

490. *Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) whether Government are aware of the fact that Mint workers in Bombay were refused payment of an additional dearness allowance of Rs 3 p m for the period from 1st July to 31st December, 1944, on the ground that, while H M I Dockyard workers received dearness allowance based on the basic pay only, the Mint workers received it based on total emoluments that is, pay plus overtime etc., and that the Bombay Mint workers, therefore, receive more dearness allowance than the Dockyard workers,

(b) whether it is a fact that the Bombay Mint workers Union represented that, during the period for which the additional dearness allowance of Rs 3 was sanctioned, the Bombay Mint workers actually received less dearness allowance than the Dockyard workers, and

(c) whether Government propose to pay the said Mint workers the arrears of dearness allowance at the rate of Rs 3 p m for the period from 1st July to 31st December, 1944?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) Yes, Sir

(b) Yes Sir

(c) No, Sir

Miss Maniben Kara: Are the Government aware that the cost of living in Bombay has gone up to 260 and in view of the cost of living may I know whether the Government consider, that the mint workers are not entitled to the dearness allowance as demanded by the Mint Workers Union?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The matter is under the consideration of the Government

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask when the Government has paid arrears to all the other Government employees why the arrears are not being paid to the mint workers? What is the reason?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The point is this—that the Government refused the concession asked for for the reasons that had been stated by the Honourable questioner herself. As for the ground urged in part (b) of the question, Government are not prepared to agree to the extra Rs 3 dearness Allowance from July to December 1944, because all these years the mint workers drew dearness allowance on the basis of total emoluments and must have therefore drawn in the aggregate much more dearness allowance than the R I N dockyard workers

Miss Maniben Kara: In view of the fact that the Government do not necessarily follow the policy that they followed all these years and in view of the fact that the cost of living has gone up and they are already paying dearness allowance to the other departments of the Government of India, why should there be any difference in policy as far as the mint workers are concerned?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: It means opening the whole question. As the Honourable Member is aware, there is the Pay Commission which is in session and we must await the report of that Commission

Miss Maniben Kara: Do I take it that this question of the dearness allowance to be paid to the Mint workers as represented by the Mint Workers Union will be considered by the Pay Commission?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Not the old question, but the question with regard to the future and the present will be considered

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the Pay Commission will consider the question of the payment of the arrears from July?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: No

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Then the question asked of the Government of India is. Why should they not pay and consider the question now instead of waiting for the report of the Pay Commission?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I have just given the answer that the dearness allowance which was paid to the Mint workers was paid on a different basis whereby they have received more dearness allowance in the past than what has been paid to the R I N dock workers

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will the Honourable the Finance Member consider the possibility of increasing the salary of everybody in the ratio of 100 to 373, which is the present index figure, and do away with the question of the dearness allowances altogether?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I think the country should wait for that occasion when my Honourable friend becomes the Finance Member Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I ask the Honourable the Finance Member if he will increase the tax on my friend from 100 to 373?

Mr. President: Next question

PAYMENT OF INTERIM RELIEF TO BOMBAY MINT WORKERS

491. Miss Maniben Kara. Will the Honourable the Finance Member be please to state why the Interim Relief, which is a part of the pay, has not been paid to Bombay Mint workers in a lump sum?

(b) Whether it is a fact that the Interim Relief has not been paid to the men in service in July, 1945 but subsequently discharged or retired?

(c) If the answer to (b) above is in the affirmative, do Government propose to issue orders sanctioning the payment of Interim Relief to all men in service in July 1945, but subsequently retrenched, or retired or discharged?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) It was decided to disburse the amount in three equal monthly instalments not only to the Bombay Mint Workers but to all Government servants affected by the concession, in order to spread the relief over a longer period, and thus avoid the danger of another step towards inflation as was likely if the whole amount was made available for circulation at one time

(b) and (c) Interim relief is admissible only to those Central Government servants who were in service on the 1st July 1948. Government is not prepared to extend the concession to others

(b) WRITTEN ANSWERS

REFUSAL OF PAYMENT OF EXPENSES BY GOVERNMENT TO DEPUTATION OF BOMBAY MINT WORKERS

492. *Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) whether the members of a deputation of a Trade Union of the Central Government employees are entitled to expenses incurred by them while meeting the Government to discuss the grievances of the employees,

(b) whether it is a fact that members of a deputation of the H M I Dockyard Workers Union, Bombay, were paid such expenses,

(c) if the answer to the above be in the affirmative, why the members of a deputation of the Bombay Mint Workers Union which met the Additional Secretary, Finance Department on the 30th March 1946 were refused the payment of expenses incurred by them, and

(d) do Government propose to pay the expenses to the deputation of the Bombay Mint Workers Union?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) No, Sir, but the Government may agree to pay such expenses where the deputation is specially invited by them

(b) Yes, Sir, because the deputation came to Delhi at the invitation of the Government

(c) Because the deputation came to meet the Additional Secretary, Finance Department, of their own accord and not at the invitation of the Government

(d) Does not arise in view of my reply to part (c)

TIME SCALE OF PAY TO TEMPORARY CADRE OF BOMBAY MINT EMPLOYEES

493. *Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) whether Government are aware that the question of giving permanent status and monthly time scale of pay to the temporary cadre of the Bombay Mint employees having long and continuous service was discussed at a meeting between a deputation of Bombay Mint Workers Union and the Additional Secretary Finance Department, on the 30th March, 1946, at New Delhi and that the deputationists were assured that the matter will be examined carefully in consultation with other departments,

(b) whether Government are aware of the Mint Masters proposals for constituting a permanent cadre of Mint workers and regarding terms of service for permanent personnel and the selection of the cadre,

(c) whether it is a fact that the question of security service and monthly time scale of pay is being actively considered by Government, and

(d) if the answers to (a) to (c) above are in the affirmative, have Government of India taken any decision on the subject and if not, when do they propose to do so?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a), (b) and (c) The answers are in the affirmative

(d) The Government of India have accepted in principle the proposal to create a permanent cadre of Mint workers and arrangements are in train for implementing this decision at an early date

PAYMENT OF WAR BONUS TO BOMBAY MINT EMPLOYEES

494. *Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state.

(a) whether it is a fact that War Bonus sanctioned by the Government of India to all temporary Government employees has not yet been paid to the Bombay Mint Workers belonging to the temporary cadre though others have received it long ago;

(b) whether it is a fact that the Bombay Mint Workers Union was advised by the Mint Master that the question of War Bonus to mint workers had been referred to the War and Industries and Supply Department,

(c) whether it is a fact that the Bombay Mint Workers Union repeatedly requested the Mint Master to expedite the payment of War Bonus, and

(d) the cause of the delay in payment of War Bonus to the Mint Workers, and when it is proposed to be paid?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) War bonus is payable to temporary men only on the date of discharge, whenever this may occur, in respect of eligible service up to the 31st October 1945. This rule applies uniformly to all staff whose pay is charged to Civil Estimates. Payment of war bonus has been made promptly to all Mint workers who qualify for it.

(b) and (c) Yes, Sir.

(d) In view of the reply to part (a), this part of the question does not arise.

COMPENSATORY ALLOWANCE TO GOVERNMENT SERVANTS IN LIEU OF SUPPLY OF FOODSTUFFS AT CONCESSIONAL RATES

495. Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that a compensatory allowance of Rs 3-12-0 p m is being paid with effect from the 1st July 1945, to Government servants in such areas where Government have not been able to arrange supply of foodstuffs at concessional rates,

(b) whether it is a fact that supply of foodstuff could not be arranged at concessional rates to certain Bombay Mint workers, while other Mint workers were getting foodstuff at concessional rates from the cheap gram shop in H. M. Mint, Bombay, and

(c) in view of the fact that the Mint workers referred to in part (b) above are since recently being given Rs 3-12-0 p m as compensatory allowance with effect from the 1st July 1945, whether Government propose to consider the payment of the said allowance to the said workers with retrospective effect, i.e., since the supply of commodities at concessional rate was made available through cheap grain shop in the Mint to some Mint workers?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) Yes, Sir, subject to a pay limit of Rs 300 per mensem.

(b) Yes, Sir, but where a worker was so placed as not to be able to avail of the benefit of the concessional foodgrains supply scheme, he was granted a monetary allowance in lieu in order to bring him on a par with other Mint employees.

(c) No, Sir. I have already explained in my reply to part (b) that the benefit was made available to all Mint employees, whether in kind or in cash.

RELEASE OF INDIAN PRISONERS OF WAR OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

496. Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state

(a) how many Indians are still prisoners of the Government of India (or of a Provincial Government, if any), tried by court martials or military courts for (i) contact with the Axis Powers during the war, and (ii) participation in, or collaboration with the Indian National Army, Indian Independence League and similar other organisations;

(b) the policy of the Government of India with regard to the release of such prisoners, and

(c) whether Government propose to grant remission of the unexpired portions of sentences of such prisoners as has been done in the case which has been referred to in the answer given by the Honourable the Home Member to starred question No. 68 of the 30th of October 1945?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) No one was tried by court martial or other military courts solely for the reasons mentioned by the Honourable Member

There are, however, 15 military ex-I N A personnel serving sentences in various jails in India for the offences of waging war against the King, desertion, grievous hurt and murder

There are, in addition, two civilians still in prison for waging war against the King These were convicted under Ordinance XXXVII of 1943

(b) and (c) With regard to those tried by court martial, I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply to part (e) of starred question No 98 asked on the 30th October 1946

As regards the two civilians the question of their release is under the consideration of Government

SELECTION FOR THE POSTS OF INCOME-TAX OFFICERS

497. *Sri V. Gangaraju: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that the Central Board of Revenue has, in September last, advertised for about 200 posts of Income Tax Inspectors,

(b) whether it is a fact that Government have received applications from persons who have qualified for the Indian Audit and Accounts Service, and

(c) whether Government propose to give preference to those applicants who have already qualified for the Audit and Accounts Service in the matter of selection, if not, why not?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) No, but an advertisement was issued by the Director of Inspection (Income-tax), Central Board of Revenue, on the 30th August 1946, inviting applications for appointment as temporary Income-tax Officers, Class II The number of posts available for recruitment was not indicated

(b) Yes

(c) As already stated in the advertisement special consideration will be given for those obtaining qualifying marks in the Indian Audit and Accounts and Allied Services examination Government cannot, however, give preference to such candidates irrespective of their other qualifications vis-a-vis other applicants

RESTORATION OF AGRICULTURAL LAND ACQUIRED FOR WAR PURPOSES IN BAREILLY DISTRICT

498. *Sjt. Seth Damodar Swroop: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that agricultural lands were acquired by Government for war purposes in various parts of the District of Bareilly (United Provinces),

(b) if it is the intention of Government to restore the lands back to the tenants now when the war has come to an end and that the lands acquired are no more required for war purposes, and

(c) if the answer to (b) above is in the affirmative whether Government propose to issue necessary instructions on the point, so that the poor tenants get back their lands for cultivation purposes?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a), (b) and (c) Land for one airfield was acquired by Government in the Bareilly District

As the land was acquired, and not requisitioned, parts (b) and (c) of the question do not arise.

TRANSFER OF STATIONS OF THE ARMY REMOUNT DEPARTMENT FROM CHANAH AREA TO MONTGOMERY DISTRICT

499. *Captain Syed Abid Hussain: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state if it is a fact that the Army Remount Department has since a long time, been keeping thoroughbred stallions in the Chanah Area (Lyallpur, Sargodha, etc.), for horse breeding purposes?

(b) Is it a fact that they have given great impetus to Horse-breeding in that area?

(c) Is it a fact that Government have recently shifted these thoroughbred stallions from Chanab Area to the Montgomery District?

(d) Is it a fact that the Chanab Area has been one of the main nurseries for the supply of first class horses to the Army as well as to other breeding districts?

(e) If the answers to (a) to (d) above be in the affirmative, do Government propose to reconsider their decision regarding their transfer or at least a part of them particularly when the interests of breeding are already being fully met in the Montgomery Area?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) Unbound horse breeding, i.e., voluntary breeding on the part of breeders which was carried out in the Chanab Area was discontinued in March 1941. A small number of thoroughbred horse stallions was, however, allowed to remain so that breeding could be carried on by those who wished to continue horse breeding on a voluntary basis.

(b) Yes, Sir. The allocation of thoroughbred stallions has helped to some extent to preserve the industry built up in the late Shahpur Area.

(c) Yes, Sir. As a result of the reduction in the Army's post-war requirements the small number of horse stallions in the Chanab Area has been reduced and stallions thus rendered surplus have been withdrawn for disposal. There has also been certain inter-area transfer of horse stallions between Chanab and Montgomery.

(d) No, Sir. The Chanab Area being an unbound horse breeding area was never the source of supply of good horses.

(e) No, Sir. The Honourable Member will appreciate that owing to the progress of mechanization fewer horses are required for military purposes and consequently bound horse breeding in the late Shahpur Area and all unbound horse breeding conducted in the Chanab Area had to be abolished. As the requirement of the Army in horses is on the decrease, there is every possibility of a further reduction in the number of horse stallions at present maintained in that Area.

ASSISTANTS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT

500. *Sardar Mangal Singh: (a) Is the Honourable the Home Member aware that it was originally decided to fill permanent posts of Assistants in the Government of India Secretariat during 1942, from amongst the candidates who qualified at the Assistant's Grade Examination held by the Federal Public Service Commission in 1941, and that, subsequently, during 1942, it was decided not to fill these posts on a permanent footing during the war time, with the result that most of the 1941 qualified candidates (including those who had secured high positions) were appointed to temporary posts in which they are still continuing?

(b) Is it a fact that these Assistants, though already qualified, are being asked to sit again for an examination which is to be held shortly to fill the quota of permanent vacancies reserved for temporary Government servants?

(c) If the answers to (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, do Government propose to consider the desirability of confirming as many such candidates as possible in permanent vacancies of Assistants without any further examination?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) The position is that the Ministerial Service (Assistants' Grade) Examination, 1941, was held to recruit to one half of the permanent vacancies occurring in the Assistants' grade in the Government of India Secretariat and its Attached Offices during the period between the 1st December 1941, and the 31st December 1942. The other half was filled, as usual, by promotion. The orders which banned permanent appointments during the war were issued on the 29th June 1942. One half of the permanent vacancies which had occurred before that date were filled by candidates successful at the 1941 examination, and one quarter of the permanent vacancies which occurred after the 29th June 1942 and before the 31st December 1942 were also filled by candidates qualified in that examination in view of the fact that they had not been warned at the time of appearing for the examination that some permanent vacancies would be reserved for 'war service' candidates. Between the 29th June 1942 and the 31st December 1942 these candidates secured five permanent vacancies. They could, therefore, have got five more permanent vacancies only had there been no ban on permanent appointments. To compensate them for this loss they were, however, given six permanent vacancies which occurred during 1943, though they had no claim to these vacancies. The candidates can therefore have no legitimate grievance. Some of the other candidates, who could not secure permanent vacancies were appointed in temporary vacancies.

(b) Candidates appointed in temporary vacancies will be required to qualify in the ensuing examinations for permanent appointment

(c) As will be evident from the answer to part (a) normally these candidates would not have got permanent appointments on the results of the examination in which they qualified. Government do not therefore consider that any injustice will be done to them if they are asked to qualify again for such appointment

SELECTION FOR ADMINISTRATIVE RESERVE BY THE F. P. S. C.

501. *Sardar Mangal Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state the principles on which selections for the Administrative Reserve recently made by the Federal Public Service Commission are based?

(b) Are Government aware that senior members of the Imperial Secretariat Service who are fully qualified for holding administrative posts and are actually holding such posts have not been selected for the Reserve, whereas temporary Government servants and others who are much less qualified and whose substantive pay is very low have been selected?

(c) Are Government aware that the selections already made by the Federal Public Service Commission have created serious anomalies in the several Departments of the Government of India? What steps do Government propose to take to remove these anomalies, so that the interests of the senior and qualified members of the Imperial Secretariat Service are safeguarded?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Government prescribed the qualifications, while the Selection was made by the Federal Public Service Commission as a result of an interview. I regret I am unable to enlighten the Honourable Member on the principles which the Federal Public Service Commission adopted in making the selection.

(b) and (c) If any anomaly exists in individual cases, it is not the fault of the selection, but the effect of qualifications prescribed. The recruitment to this Reserve has been stopped under my instructions, and the Reserve will automatically disappear after five years. Anomalies if any will, therefore, be of only temporary duration. Government, therefore, do not consider that the interests of senior and qualified members of the Imperial Secretariat Service will necessarily be affected by appointment made to the Reserve.

APPOINTMENT OF UNDER SECRETARIES FROM THE ADMINISTRATIVE RESERVE MADE BY THE F. P. S. C.

502. *Sardar Mangal Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state if it is a fact that future appointments to the grade of Under Secretary in the various Departments of the Government of India are intended to be made mainly from the Administration Reserve recently made by the Federal Public Service Commission?

(b) Do Government propose to take steps to increase the quota of vacancies in the grade of Under Secretary reserved for members of the Imperial Secretariat Service in order to ensure fair chances of promotion to deserving members of that service?

(c) Is it a fact that so far the names of only thirty-six persons have been announced? When do Government propose to announce the names of the remaining sixty-four to make up the total of one hundred already announced?

(d) Are Government aware that the majority of the persons already selected belong to South India? Was there any dearth of suitable persons belonging to other Provinces or communities, or the latter were not considered suitable for the Reserve? If not, why not?

(e) In view of the fact that there is no dearth of qualified Sikh officers in the permanent employment of the Government of India, why has not a single Sikh been selected so far? Do Government propose to take into consideration the claims of this minority community when the next selection is made?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) No

(b) The matter is under consideration in connection with the reorganisation of the Government of India Secretariat and the proposed formation of a Central Secretariat Service.

(c) So far forty-three officers have been selected for appointment to the Reserve. It is not proposed to make further selection of officers for appointment to the Reserve.

(d) Of the candidates selected seventeen appear to be from South India. Selection was made on merit and Government have never accepted the principle of territorial representation in their services.

(e) The Federal Public Service Commission did not recommend any Sikh candidate. In view of what is stated in reply to part (c) of the question the question of appointing any Sikh to the Reserve does not arise.

HINDI AS COMMON LANGUAGE FOR HINDUSTAN

503. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state if it is a fact that Government have under consideration proposals to make Hindi the common language for Hindustan? If so, how many are there in the whole of India who now speak only Hindi?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. The latter part does not arise.

RISE IN HOUSE-TAX IN DELHI

504. *Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Secretary of the Health Department be pleased to state

(a) whether his attention has been drawn to the enormous rise in house-tax in Delhi,

(b) whether it is a fact that it has risen four fold or even more,

(c) the reason for this abnormal rise in house-tax,

(d) whether it is a fact that a Finance Sub-Committee is to sit some time in November 1946, to settle the question of fixing house-tax for the year 1947, and

(e) whether Government propose to give assurance to this House that this Finance Sub-Committee will look into the grievances of the citizens of Delhi and afford some relief to the poor?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulman: (a) and (b) The house tax in the Delhi Municipality was raised from 3½ per cent of the annual value to 6½ per cent. with effect from the 1st January 1944.

(c) The house tax was increased in order to enable the budget to be balanced and to meet rising expenses due to fresh liabilities.

(d) and (e) The Honourable Member presumably refers to the Finance Sub-Committee of the Delhi Municipal Committee. The grievances should be represented to the Delhi Municipal Committee. The Government does not propose to take any action in the matter.

FOREIGN SCHOLARSHIPS TO STUDENTS FROM BOMBAY PROVINCE.

505. *Shri D. P. Karamarkar: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state how many foreign scholarships have been awarded by the Government of India to students from the Bombay Province in 1944, 1945, 1946?

(b) How many of the above have been awarded to students from the Karnatak Area in the Bombay Province, namely the Dharwar, Belgaum, Bijapur and North Kanara Districts?

(c) In view of the educational backwardness of the above Karnatak districts, do Government propose to consider the advisability of ear-marking a definite number of foreign scholarships for students from these districts?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) Apart from the 20 Overseas Scholarships awarded in 1945 and 33 in 1946 on behalf of the Bombay Government to students domiciled in the Bombay Province, the number of students belonging to Bombay Province who have been selected for the award of Overseas Scholarships on behalf of the Central Government in 1945-46 and 1946-47 are 22 and nine respectively. In addition, seven students from Bombay Province were selected in 1945 for the award of Scheduled Caste Overseas Scholarships. No scholarships were awarded in 1944.

(b) Of the 22 Bombay students selected for Central Scholarships in 1945-46, two belonged to the Karnatak area of the Bombay Province. None of those selected in 1946-47 came from that area. One of those selected for Scheduled Caste Overseas Scholarships in 1945 belonged to the Karnatak. Information is not available here as to how many students selected so far by the Bombay Government belong to the Karnatak area of the Province.

(c) The question can most appropriately be considered by the Bombay Government who are no doubt fully aware of the condition and needs of the various districts in the Province. With regard to the scholarships awarded on behalf of the Central Government, I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to parts (a) and (b) of the reply given by the Education Secretary to starred question No. 1898, by Seth Sukhdev in this House on the 17th April 1946. The object of these overseas Scholarships is to train as quickly as possible high grade personnel urgently required for progress in the execution of various plans of development. Selections for these Overseas Scholarships must be made therefore on considerations of merit without reference to the area to which a candidate belonged. It is difficult at any rate to go further down than the present administrative Provinces in the allocation of these Scholarships.

NUMBER OF CHURCHES MAINTAINED FOR BRITISH TROOPS IN INDIA

506. *Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state

- (a) the number of Churches maintained for the British Troops in India,
- (b) to what organisation they will be handed over when the British troops withdraw from India, and
- (c) the number of Churches vested in the Crown used by (i) Conformists, and (ii) Non-conformists?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) and (c) The agency responsible for dealing with Churches has in the past been the Provincial Governments as agents for the Central Government, and the Central Government has at present no up-to-date information regarding the number of maintained churches of denominations other than Anglican. The information has already been called for in connection with arrangements which are being made to end all ecclesiastical expenditure, and a statement will be laid on the table of the House in due course. The number of Anglican military churches maintained by Government is 80.

(b) The intention is to hand over all churches to the authorities of their respective denomination in the near future, irrespective of the date when British troops leave India.

OPTIONAL SUBJECTS IN SECONDARY CLASSES IN AJMER-MERWARA

507. *Pandit Mukut Bhatt Lal Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state if it is a fact that in Ajmer-Merwara, Secondary Education is being imparted in accordance with the United Provinces Code of Education, which provides a very wide choice in optional subjects for students?

(b) Is it a fact that, notwithstanding this, the Education Department is providing for only two or three optional subjects in secondary classes, with the result that no choice is left for students and that optional subjects stand on the same footing as compulsory ones? In how many schools hand spinning and weaving, arts and crafts, agriculture and carpentry is provided in secondary classes in the Province of Ajmer-Merwara?

(c) Do Government intend to provide for all these useful subjects in Lower Middle Classes in future? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: (a) If the reference is to Middle School Education the reply is in the affirmative. Middle education of the Anglo-Vernacular type borrows both from the United Provinces and the Punjab but the whole is so framed as to suit Local requirements, and ultimately the requirements of the Board of High School and Intermediate Education, Rajputana, Central India and Gwalior to which the High School Examination in Ajmer-Merwara is affiliated. There is no public examination at the end of the middle stage in Vernacular Schools in Ajmer-Merwara.

(b) and (c) The Education Department is providing for four optional subjects, namely Manual Training, Agriculture, Arts and Crafts and Rural Science in Boys' Vernacular Middle Schools, and Domestic Science with Child Study and Hygiene in Girls' Middle Schools. Arts and crafts are taught in seven schools and Agriculture in five. Spinning, weaving and Carpentry were not hitherto taught in any of the Middle Schools. But Government have decided that education in the age group 6-14 years should be through creative activities of the kind mentioned in the question.

DROPPING OF ENGLISH AS OPTIONAL SUBJECT IN CERTAIN SCHOOLS IN AJMER-MERWARA

506. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state if Government are aware that Educational authorities in Ajmer-Merwara have dropped English as an optional subject in Deoli, Pisangan and other Kasha Schools of Ajmer-Merwara? If so, for what reason?

(b) Are Government aware that there is great resentment against this policy and that the rural population has been put to great inconvenience, with the result that a large number of students had to migrate to urban areas for receiving education in English? If so, do Government propose to provide English as an optional subject in secondary classes of all schools?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: (a) Yes, Sir

It was felt that the time spent on the teaching of English, which would not really be of much value to pupils of these Middle schools in later life, could be more usefully employed in the teaching of practical subjects and the mother tongue. It was therefore decided not to continue English as an optional subject in these Middle schools. This was in accordance with the considered recommendations of the Committee of the Central Advisory Board of Education.

(b) The Local Administration have received a few applications asking for the re-introduction of English as an optional subject in these schools. The information with the Administration does not warrant the conclusion that there has been an exodus of large numbers of pupils from the rural to the urban areas with a view to obtaining instruction in English. But if there be such an exodus there is no harm caused. English is provided for in the Anglo-Vernacular schools of the urban areas to meet any demand for English.

ADOPTION OF UNITED PROVINCES CODE OF EDUCATION IN AJMER-MERWARA CURRICULUM

509. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: (a) Is the Honourable Member for Education aware that the Ajmer-Merwara Educational curriculum for primary classes prescribes a four-year course only, as contrasted to the five-year course prescribed in the United Provinces? If so, what is the reason for this distinction, particularly when secondary education is being imparted under and in accordance with the United Provinces Code of Education?

(b) Do Government contemplate to amend the Ajmer-Merwara curriculum for primary classes and bring it into line with that of the United Provinces? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: (a) Yes, Sir. The curriculum in primary classes in Ajmer-Merwara is based on local requirements. The Primary and Secondary Courses form two separate and distinct units. There is therefore no reason for the Ajmer-Merwara primary course to be identical in length with that of the United Provinces Code. The intention of the four year course was to induce parents in rural areas to let their children complete the full primary course in the curtailed period.

(b) In the Post-War Schemes of Ajmer-Merwara, provision has been made for the establishment of Five-Year course primary schools in accordance with the principles laid down in the Central Advisory Board's Report on Post-War Educational Development in India.

EXPENDITURE OF BEAWAR MUNICIPALITY ON PRIMARY EDUCATION

510. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state what amount the Beawar Municipality (Ajmer-Merwara) is spending annually on primary education and whether Government make any contribution to the Beawar Municipality for the purpose? If not, why not?

(b) What percentage of the expenditure on primary education is borne by the Local Boards and Government, separately, under the Code of Education, and do Government propose to take steps to provide for a requisite contribution to Local Boards in Ajmer-Merwara?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: (a) The Beawar Municipal Committee is at present spending Rs. 18,786 per year on primary education. No contribution has been made by the Government. The Board is generally required to spend ten per cent. of its income on provision of primary education. The present expenditure of the Beawar Municipal Committee on education amounts to a little over ten per cent. It has, therefore, now qualified for Government grant, the award of which will be considered if and when an application is received.

(b) No such percentage has been laid down in case of Ajmer-Merwara so far. The question of a grant will be considered when an application for such assistance is made.

PROVISION OF GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS FOR SCHOOLS IN RURAL AREAS IN CENTRALLY ADMINISTERED AREAS

511. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state what progress has been made towards providing buildings for schools at Government cost in urban and rural areas in Ajmer-Merwara as promised by the Education Secretary in answer to starred question No. 1913 asked on the 17th April, 1946?

(b) Are Government aware that time has come to make primary education free and compulsory in the Centrally Administered Areas and particularly in Ajmer-Merwara, where there has been a long standing public demand for the same? If so, what steps have Government taken or contemplate taking in future towards the achievement of that end as early as possible?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: (a) A provision of Rs. 85 lakhs has been made for educational development in Ajmer-Merwara during the next quinquennium; suitable buildings for schools as far as possible will be provided for in the development programme.

(b) A provision of Rs. 18 lakhs for the introduction of compulsory basic education in Ajmer-Merwara has been made in the five years plan.

DIPLOMAS OF THE DELHI POLYTECHNIC

512. *Shri Mohan Lal Saxena: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state what steps have been taken to secure recognition for the certificates and Diplomas of the Delhi Polytechnic?

(b) What steps, if any, have been taken to secure employment for the students of the Polytechnic?

(c) Have the various Departments agreed to recognise the certificates and Diplomas of the Polytechnic?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari. (a), (b) and (c) Two Statements are laid on the table giving all the information asked for in detail

Statement 'A'

The Delhi Polytechnic provides courses for

(i) All-India Diploma in Engineering, Commerce, Chemical Engineering and Technology, and Architecture (full-time)

(ii) All-India Certificate in Engineering and Commerce (Part-time)

(iii) Polytechnic Diplomas in Textile Technology and Art (full-time), and

(iv) Polytechnic Certificate in Art (Part-time)

The All India Diplomas and Certificates were, till recently, awarded by Boards of Studies set up by the Association of Principals of Technical Institutions (India). The All India Council for Technical Education has decided with the concurrence of the Association of Principals of Technical Institutions (India) to take over these Boards of Studies and to re-constitute them as under its own auspices

The Polytechnic was started with the object of providing courses in Technology of quite a high standard with greater courses in Technology of quite a high standard with greater emphasis on the practical side so that qualified students could be employed in Industry with the minimum amount of additional training. Such employment depends on the gradual recognition by industrial employers of the merits of the young men trained in the institution

The following is the present position in regard to recognition of Diplomas and Certificates for which the Delhi Polytechnic prepares students —

1 All India Diploma and All India Certificate in Engineering—The Certificate and the Diploma have been recognised by the Government of Bengal, the latter as equivalent to the Diploma of the Bengal Engineering College. The Bengal Government have also recognised the Certificate of this Board

At the suggestion of the Chairman, Federal Public Service Commission, the Institution of Engineers (India) were requested to accept the Diploma for exemption from Section A and B of the Associate Membership Examination. The matter was considered by the Council of the Institution at its meeting in Bombay, on the 31st October, 1946, and their decision is awaited. In the event of a favourable decision, the Diploma will receive automatic recognition for recruitment to Superior Engineering Services in India

The different Departments of the Government of India concerned with the employment of Engineers have been approached also to evaluate the Diploma and make recommendations for provisional recognition

2 All India Diploma and All India Certificate in Commerce—The Diploma with Auditing as a special subject has been recognised by the Government of India as equivalent to First B. A. Examination and for purposes of Rule 61 (2) (iv) (b) of the Income Tax Act

The Auditor General in India has also recognised this Diploma as equivalent to a degree of an Indian University for purposes of recruitment in his office as well as in Audit and Account Offices subordinate to him if the Diploma Holder had taken advanced Auditing and Accountancy as Special subjects

The Certificate course is designed to give part-time theoretical instructions to persons already employed in Commercial undertakings, so that they could be more useful to their profession. It enables them to get into higher and more responsible posts.

3 All India Diploma in Chemical Engineering and Technology—Recognition of the Diploma in this subject has to come from Industrialists who have been approached for employment and training of passed students of the Delhi Polytechnic and almost all students have been suitably placed.

4 All India Diploma in Architecture—This course is a five year course and the fourth year class has commenced only this year. The Chairman of the All India Board has taken up the question of recognition of the All India Diploma with the Indian Institute of Architects

5 Polytechnic Diploma in Textile Technology—The industrialists employing Textile Technologists hold the view that as in the case of the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute Bombay, the Diploma of the Polytechnic will receive due recognition when the students of the Polytechnic have been tried for some years and found useful.

6 Polytechnic Diploma and Certificate in Art—So far these students have completed the three-year Diploma and Certificate course and all of them have been suitably employed. The courses have recently been reorganised as five year courses and no difficulty is anticipated in regard to the recognition of these courses

Statement "B"

Altogether 106 students have qualified in full or in part. Of these 48 have been employed after having satisfactorily completed their entire course including practical training, 10 have been employed before completion of practical training, 18 are still undergoing practical training, 6 have declined to take practical training; 19 are prosecuting further studies elsewhere and information regarding the remaining five is inadequate.

The authorities are constantly in touch with possible employers and an employment register is maintained.

Detailed information will be found in the Annexure to this statement (below).

CANCELLATION OF GUN LICENCES BY THE DEPUTY COMMISSIONER, DELHI.

513. *Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state whether the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi cancelled the gun licences of those who did not purchase cartridges during the preceding year? If so, what is the number of such licences, and the provision of the Arms Act under which his action was justified?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Deputy Commissioner of Delhi cancelled 174 licences on the ground that the holders had not purchased any cartridges (or had purchased less than 50) during the last five years and consequently appeared to have no need for their weapons. Action was taken under Rule 43 read with Rule 30 of the Indian Arms Rules.

TAXATION OF INCOME OF HINDU UN-DIVIDED FAMILY

514. *Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member kindly state if Government are aware that the inequity of taxing the income of the Hindu un-divided family as such has been pressed upon Government for the last twenty years, that many Finance Members, while admitting that there is a case worth looking into have refused to consider the question on merits at the time of the Annual Finance Bill and that on the last occasion the Honourable the Finance Member suggested reference of the question to the proposed taxation Inquiry Committee which has not been appointed so far?

(b) How much amount would it mean to the exchequer if the income of the Hindu undivided family as such was not taxed and that only individuals as in the case of other communities were taxed?

(c) In view of the fact that the Taxation Inquiry Committee has not been appointed so far and recommendation by such a Committee, if any, are not going to be made and acted upon in the near future, will the Honourable Member consider the advisability of this question being examined by a small committee of officials and non-officials before the Budget Session?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) and (c) The taxation of the Hindu undivided family would be a suitable subject for examination by the Taxation Enquiry Committee, the setting up of which is under consideration. I do not consider it necessary to set up a separate committee for this purpose alone.

(b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given to part (d) of question No. 829, dated the 18th February 1946.

EXAMINATION FOR TEMPORARY EMPLOYEES IN THE MINISTERIAL SERVICE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT

515. *Miss Maniben Kara: (a) Is the Honourable the Home Member aware of the resentment among the temporary employees in the Ministerial service of the Government of India Secretariat, in being asked to appear for an examination for permanent appointment and of the various representations they have made on the subject?

(b) Is he aware that such a procedure will ultimately lead to the discharge of a majority of such employees, irrespective of the fact that they have served Government faithfully during the six years of war, under most trying conditions?

(c) What does he propose to do in the case of such employees who are discharged, as a result of such an examination?

(d) What is the purpose for asking these employees to sit for a purely academic examination, even though they possess University diplomas and Certificates?

(e) Is it a fact that even those employees who had attained merit in such examinations as were held during the war, are being asked to appear for an examination again for a permanent appointment?

(f) Is it a fact that even those who are employed temporarily against permanent vacancies due to their rank at an examination already held, do not stand any chance of being absorbed permanently without appearing for another examination, in spite of the fact that they were assured favourable consideration in this respect after the war?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) I have seen some representations on the subject

(b) The number of vacancies available being much less than the number of temporary employees in service, it is inevitable that the surplus employees should be discharged. As to how many would be discharged and when, would depend on the extent to which temporary employments would continue and the temporary employees could be absorbed in permanent vacancies.

(c) Those who fail to secure permanent employment will have the same facilities of being absorbed in alternative employment through Employment Exchanges as the demobilised war-service personnel. They would also get, subject to certain conditions, gratuity according to the prescribed scales.

(d) The examination is intended to assist in selecting suitable persons for the allotted number of vacancies from amongst the temporary employees.

(e) Yes

(f) In regard to war-time vacancies there is a definite reservation both for war-service candidates and temporary employees. Vacancies for the latter will be filled only by those temporary employees who obtain a sufficiently high rank at the proposed examination.

ADMISSION OF STUDENTS FROM ASSAM INTO COLLEGES AFFILIATED TO BENARES HINDU, ALIGARH AND DELHI UNIVERSITIES

516. *Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state as to how many students from the Province of Assam have been admitted during the last three years into Colleges affiliated under the following Universities

- (i) Benares Hindu University,
- (ii) Aligarh University, and
- (iii) Delhi University?

(b) Does any Provincial Government in India make any monetary contribution to these Universities? If so, what is their total contribution?

(c) Does any of these Universities mentioned in part (a) above reserve any seat for students belonging to provinces other than the province in which these Universities are located? If so, what is the quota of each Province?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) Information asked for in regard to the Benares Hindu University and Delhi University, during the last three years, is placed on the table of the House.

(b) The Benares Hindu University receives an annual grant of Rs. 1,01,000, from the United Provinces Government. No other Provincial Government contributes towards the funds of the University. The Delhi University receives no contribution from any Provincial Government.

(c) The Benares Hindu University and the Aligarh Muslim University reserve seats for students belonging to the several Provinces. A statement giving the quota of each Province in the Benares Hindu University is placed on the table of the House. The Delhi University reserves no seats on a Provincial basis, but students from other Provinces are admitted to the University and its Constituent Colleges, subject to the general rules of admission, prevailing.

Information relating to the Aligarh Muslim University in respect of (a), (b) and (c) is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member

ADMISSION OF STUDENTS FROM INDIA IN COLLEGES IN U. S. A. AND U. K.

517. *Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Does the Honourable Member for Education propose to give to private students, i.e., students who have not been granted stipends either by the Government of India or a Provincial Government, assistance in the matter of securing admission into educational institutions in America and United Kingdom, and booking of passages for their journey?

[18TH Nov. 1946]

(b) What is the number of students who have either been granted stipends or deputed on study leave, for studies in America and United Kingdom this year who have not secured admission in Colleges or have not obtained passage for their voyage, province by province?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: (a) Arrangements already exist in the United Kingdom and the United States of America for giving to private students all possible assistance in the matter of securing admission into educational institutions in those countries and also for looking after their general welfare in the same way as is done for students proceeding on Government scholarships

The Government of India enabled a large number of private students to secure passages to the United States of America in 1945 and to the United Kingdom in 1945 and 1946. Passages to the United States of America were decontrolled at the end of last year and passages to the United Kingdom also have now been decontrolled. There is nothing that Government can do by way of assistance in regard to passages. Arrangements must be made with the shipping companies or Travel Agents.

(b) Two statements are placed on the table giving the information asked for

OFFICERS OF THE PROVINCIAL CIVIL SERVICE OR ON THE LISTED POSTS SERVING IN GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

512. *Sreejati Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state as to how many Officers formerly belonging to the Provincial Civil Service or to the listed posts in different provinces are now working in the Secretariat of the Government of India as Secretaries, Under Secretaries, Deputy Secretaries and Assistant Secretaries?

[13TH Nov 1946]

(b) Is it a fact that no such officer has up-till now been recruited from the province of Assam, for service in the Secretariat of the Government of India? If so, do Government propose to give the Assam Officers a chance?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) A statement containing information in respect of officers of and above the rank of Under Secretary is placed on the table of the House. Information in respect of Assistant Secretaries is being collected and will be furnished when it is complete.

(b) There is no such officer from the province of Assam in the statement referred to above. I would, however, explain that these posts are not filled on a territorial basis.

DEPUTATION OF C. I. D. OFFICERS OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT TO PROVINCES FOR DETECTION OF CASES OF CORRUPTION, ETC.

519. *Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state

(a) how many C. I. D. Officers attached to the Central Government were deputed in the years 1944, 1945 and 1946 to different Provinces to detect cases of corruption and misappropriation by Government servants,

(b) the number of cases sent by them for trial in each Province,

(c) the number of cases ending in conviction, and

(d) the total expenditure incurred by the Government of India on such deputations?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) None but a Special Police Establishment was created by the Government of India in 1943 for the detection and investigation of cases of bribery and corruption in which employees of the Central Government and their contractors were involved. The staff was not posted by provinces. The total strength of investigating officers was 58 in 1944, 58 in 1945 and 56 in 1946.

(b) and (c) Records of trials and convictions are not maintained by provinces. The total number of cases sent up for trial, including those reported for departmental action, up to 30th September, 1946, was 904. Of these 488 ended in convictions or departmental action and 124 cases are still pending.

(d) The total expenditure on account of the special police staff was Rs 6,50,000 in 1944-45 and Rs 8,75,000 in 1945-46. The provision made for the year 1946-47 was Rs 10,11,000 of which about Rs 4,53,000 was spent up to the end of September, 1946.

EXCISE DUTY ON BETEL-NUTS

520. *Sreejith Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state the total Excise Duties levied on betelnuts in each Province from the 1st April to the 30th September, 1946? How much of this was levied on uncured betelnuts?

(b) Is he aware that levy of this tax has caused great hardship in Provinces where betelnuts are not cured, particularly in Assam where the incidence of tax on growers comes to nearly five times the land revenue paid by them? If so, do Government propose to abolish the imposition of tax on uncured betelnuts?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) Information regarding the amount of Excise Duty collected on betelnuts in each Province during the period 1st April to the 30th September 1946 is being collected and will be laid on the table of the House in due course. The Excise is levied only on betelnuts which are cured within the meaning of Section 2(c) of the Central Excises and Salt Act, 1944.

(b) Representations to this effect have been received from Assam. The duty is intended to fall on the consumer and not on the producer. The difficulties experienced by the latter can be overcome not by the abolition of the duty but by an improvement in his bargaining position vis-a-vis the middlemen. For this purpose a grant of Rs five lakhs a year has been made and special measures to secure a fair price to the betelnut grower for his produce are at present under active consideration.

RETIREMENT OF OFFICIALS ON FULL PENSION AFTER SERVING 25 YEARS

521. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state whether in view of unemployment Government propose to consider the question of retirement of all those officials who have put in 25 years of service with full pension benefits?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: No Sir.

WITHDRAWAL OF EXTENSIONS GRANTED TO OFFICIALS

522.*Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state whether extension granted to the officials already in service will be withdrawn to provide employment for the younger generation?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: As a measure of unemployment relief I doubt whether the advantage of such a step would be appreciable. Apart from this it is not possible for Government to terminate employment in such cases before the expiry of the stipulated period save for disciplinary reasons or unless there is a specific clause for earlier termination. I am, however, prepared to ask Departments to examine the case of such persons with a view to termination of their service where possible and where continuance of employment is not essential in the interests of public service.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

DEARNESS ALLOWANCE TO PENSIONERS

68. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state whether any demand has been made on Government to give additional dearness allowance to those in receipt of pensions by Government of India as well as by Provincial Governments?

(b) If so, have Government considered this matter at all?

(c) What are the findings of such examination?

(d) How much money will be involved so far as the Central revenues are concerned?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) There have been applications from Central Government pensioners for increases over the existing rates of pensions. Provincial Government pensioners would petition their Governments and not the Central Government.

(b) Yes

(c) Since 1943 the rates were revised twice. After the cessation of hostilities the matter was considered again and it was decided not to enhance the rates further.

(d) It is estimated that the increases already sanctioned have cost the Central Revenues an additional Rs. 127.5 lakhs.

DEMobilIZATION AND RE-EMPLOYMENT OF INDIAN ARMY OFFICERS SINCE V J DAY

69. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state how many Indian officers have been demobilised since the V J Day?

(b) How many Indian officers have been re-engaged since that time and how do these figures compare with British officers demobilised and re-engaged?

(c) How many English officers have found employment elsewhere than in Government Departments?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) The number of Indian Officers in the three services demobilised or released since V J Day to the 1st October 1946 is 5,005. The figure for British officers is 16,037.

(b) It is not clear what exactly the Honourable Member has in mind by the phrase "demobilised and re-engaged", which, strictly speaking does not apply to anyone. If the Honourable Member refers to the voluntary deferment of release, the number of Indian officers who have agreed to defer their release is 3,970, while the number of non-Indian officers is 2,563. If, on the other hand, the Honourable Member means the number to whom permanent commissions have been given, the figures are for Indians 1,245, for non-Indians eleven.

(c) No record is kept of every officer who finds employment. We know of 418 British officers whose firms asked for their early release on work of national importance, but have no information regarding others. The Resettlement Office of the Labour Department have found employment for 512 officers in India, of whom the majority are Indians.

STRIKE BY THE NAVAL RATINGS IN BOMBAY

70. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state what steps have Government taken on the strike of the Naval Ratings in Bombay and elsewhere and the subsequent disturbances?

- (b) Are any trials pending?
- (c) Are any officers still awaiting trials and, if so, for what offence?
- (d) Have they been given full opportunity to bring their lawyers?
- (e) Before which tribunal will they be tried?
- (f) Has the Defence Consultative Committee gone into each case as was promised by Government?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) The Government of India appointed a Commission of Enquiry to enquire into and report on the causes and origin of the mutinies in the R.N. at Bombay and other places in February 1946. The Report has been received and is at present under the consideration of Government.

- (b) No, Sir
- (c) No, Sir
- (d) and (e) Do not arise in view of answers to (b) and (c) above
- (f) No, Sir. No such promise was made by Government.

RELAYING OF ENGLISH MUSIC FROM LONDON

71. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state whether Government have attempted relaying English music from London in place of the English music given in India?

(b) Have Government attempted to relay good Indian music from one centre to more than one centres?

(c) Can this be done and, if so, what is the amount of saving, which could be effected by doing this?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a), (b) and (c) Relays of music are technically unsatisfactory and are not undertaken except on special occasions. There are also copyright difficulties involved in relaying musical works broadcast by the B.B.C. The last portion of part (c) of the question does not arise.

TIME GIVEN TO BROADCASTS OF ENGLISH AND INDIAN MUSIC AND TALKS

72. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state how much time is given to English talks, reviews and music at each of the radio transmitting centres in India?

(b) How does it compare with the languages of the province from which such transmission takes place?

(c) Have Government considered the advisability of reducing the time given for English music and English talks and increasing the time given for talks in Indian languages?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) and (b) A statement giving the required information is laid on the table of the House. Reviews, by which I understand the Honourable Member to mean commentaries, book reviews, etc., are included under the heading 'talks'.

(c) The Honourable Member will notice that the amount of Western music broadcast is concentrated mostly in the four important centres of Delhi, Bombay, Calcutta and Madras, and the proportion of English to Indian talks is also high. There is demand from listeners, both Europeans and Indians, for English music and talks, and the Honourable Member will appreciate that in arranging our broadcast programme such demands have also to be given due consideration. I am, however, prepared to examine whether the proportions cannot be readjusted.

EFFECT OF COMMUNAL RIOTS IN NOAKHALI AND TIPPERAH IN BENGALE ON THE ACTIVITIES OF CENTRAL EXCISE DEPARTMENT

73. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please make a statement indicating whether the activities of the Central Excise Department have been affected in any manner in the districts of Noakhali and Tipperah in Bengal, due to communal troubles, since 10th October last?

(b) Has any financial loss been suffered by the Department due to such troubles in the said areas? If so, in what manner and to what extent?

(c) How many employees of the department, belonging to different ranks, were stationed in those areas upto the date of the outbreak of troubles, and how many of them continued to discharge their duties after the outbreak? Were any reports received from any of these employees by the superior officers, relating to these troubles, directly or indirectly? If so, to what effect, and what action was taken thereon?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: The information is being collected and will be laid before the House as soon as possible

SUPERVISORY ALLOWANCE TO CLERKS OF MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT

74. Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that a supervisory allowance of Rs 80 p m was allowed to all the clerks of Military Accounts Department working in supervisory posts,

(b) whether any limit was fixed beyond which, pay and supervisory allowances were not to exceed and if so, whether this restriction was later on removed on representation made by the clerks affected, and

(c) whether it is a fact that while removing the aforesaid restriction it was not given retrospective effect, and, if so, whether Government propose to grant the allowance to the clerks with effect from the date of the original order?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) With effect from the 1st May 1948, all supervisory appointments in the Military Accounts Department were classified into three grades, according to the responsibility of the posts, and supervisory allowances of Rs 30 p m, Rs 20 p m and Rs 10 p m respectively were sanctioned for payment to clerks holding those posts.

(b) (i) Yes Pay plus supervisory allowance of a clerk in receipt of the old rates of pay was restricted to Rs 210 p m, the minimum salary of an Accountant

(ii) Yes, this restriction was later removed

(c) The restriction was removed with effect from the 1st December 1948. Normally the policy of Government is not to give retrospective effect to financial sanctions and Government see no reason for doing so in this case

DUTIES OF ASSISTANT CONTROLLER OF SALVAGE

75. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state.

(a) what are the duties of an Assistant Controller of Salvage,

(b) the number of Assistant Controllers in the Salvage Directorate;

(c) whether any Indian is there amongst them; if so, who and how many; and

(d) the rank of the Indian or Indians working as Assistant Controllers?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) and (b) There are three Assistant Controllers in the Salvage Organisation located at the Headquarters of each of the three military commands, namely Northern, Southern and Eastern Commands. The appointment carries the rank of Lt-Col with the following duties

(i) Co-ordination of Salvage Activities of the Navy, Army and Air Force in their Commands

(ii) Co-ordination of Salvage statistical information

(iii) Control of staff and activities of all salvage installations located in their Command

(iv) Implementation of G H Q and Command Salvage policy

(c) and (d) At present there is no Indian Assistant Controller of Salvage

REPORTS OF LAWLESSNESS IN CALCUTTA AND EASTERN BENGAL PUBLISHED IN THE AMRITA BAZAR PATRIKA

76. Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state.

(a) whether he has seen in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 18th August, Allahabad, Second Dak Edition and its issues thereafter, the reports of the lawlessness which prevailed in Calcutta from 18th to 19th August in particular; and

(b) whether he has seen in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 19th October, Allahabad, Second Dak Edition, the reports of lawlessness prevalent in the Eastern Bengal, particularly Noakhali and Tipperah?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) and (b) I have seen newspaper reports of incidents in the areas mentioned

SCHEDULE FOR FIXING OF HOUSE TAX IN DELHI PROVINCE

77. Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Secretary of the Health Department be pleased to lay on the table of the House a copy of the Schedule on the basis of which house-tax has been fixed in the Delhi Province?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: A statement is laid on the table of the House

Statement showing the rates at which the House tax is levied by the various local bodies in Delhi

House-tax is levied by the various Municipal bodies in Delhi under section 61 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911 at the following rates

Delhi Municipal Committee	6½% of annual value
New Delhi Municipal Committee	6½% ditto
Notified Area Committee (Civil Station)	9½% ditto
Shahdara Municipal Committee	6½% ditto

The definition of "annual value" is given in section 3(1) of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911

POSTING OF ARMED FORCES IN CALCUTTA AND EASTERN BENGAL

78. Seth Govind Das: (a) Is the Honourable the Home Member aware of the repeated outbreaks of lawlessness in Bengal?

(b) If so, will the Central Government consider the dispatch and posting in Bengal, particularly at its nerve centres in its Eastern part and Calcutta armed forces to be in readiness to take over the administration from the civilian hands and take prompt action to deal with all attempts at lawlessness?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Yes

(b) The Central Government have been giving all possible assistance in aid of the civil power in the affected area

POLICY OF GOVERNMENT OF INDIA RE FILLING UP OF VACANCIES IN IMPERIAL SECRETARIAT AND ATTACHED OFFICES THROUGH THE I.P.S.C.

79. Sri N. Narayanamurthi: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the Home Member been drawn to the various Office Memoranda issued recently by the Home Department relating to the future policy of the Government of India in regard to filling up of vacancies in the Imperial Secretariat and its attached offices?

(b) Is it a fact that further recruitment will be made on the basis of Federal Public Service Commission Examination?

(c) What is the policy of Government in respect of those temporary Government Servants who had been recruited through the agency of the Home Department on the basis of the results of the Federal Public Service Commission Examinations held since 1940? Are such Government servants required to take examinations once again? If so, why?

(d) In view of the fact, that these temporary Government servants have put in service for more than two and a half years, do the Government propose to consider the advisability of not calling them to sit for such examinations once again?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) and (b) Yes

(c) and (d) Government consider that it is necessary in order to ensure a suitable and equitable method of selection that all temporary Government employees whether they have appeared in the Federal Public Service Commission examinations or not should appear at an examination to be held by the Commission. The reasons for this decision are as follows

Departmental selection would not provide a common standard of selection either between such temporary employees in the various Departments, or within the same Department between such temporary employees and others who have not passed a Federal Public Service Commission examination. Secondly, such a procedure would not be fair because the proportion between the number of permanent vacancies and the number of employees who have passed a Federal Public Service Commission examination varies from Department to Department. Thirdly, the large war-time Departments were staffed mainly by men who have not passed a Federal Public Service Commission examination, and, moreover, have few, if any, permanent vacancies. The procedure would therefore mean uneven selection as between men who have passed a Federal Public Service Commission examination and the exclusion of men who have not

BROADCASTING STATIONS IN INDIA

90. Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state

(a) the number of Broadcasting Stations existing at present in India with their names and places of location,

(b) if any extension or development plan to increase the number of Broadcasting Stations has been formulated, if so, how many Stations and at what places and within what time Government intend to set up either themselves, or through Provincial or State Governments or through private enterprise, and

(c) the percentage of different communities in the total number of persons employed in the Department in its different ranks and Branches with the names of the respective Stations to which they are attached?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) There are at present nine Broadcasting Stations at Delhi, Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Peshawar, Lahore, Lucknow, Dacca and Trichinopoly

(b) Plans, both long-term and short-term, have been prepared for the development of broadcasting in India. They involve the installation of transmitters of varying power at various places, and the erection of studios where none already exist. It is not possible to say within what period transmitters of different types or studio equipment will become available. It is even more difficult to say within what period sufficient trained technical staff for both installation and maintenance will be forthcoming. I regret, therefore, that I cannot give a specific reply to this question. I should add that the plans do not contemplate that, except in the States, broadcasting should be run and controlled by any authority other than the Central Government.

(c) The information asked for is so detailed and bulky that I would prefer to avoid inflicting it on the House. If the Honourable Member will indicate what is the exact point of his interest, I will endeavour to satisfy his curiosity.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER

ATTACK AT DASNA ON PILGRIM TRAIN FROM GARHMUKTESHWAR

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) whether his attention has been drawn to the report published in the Hindustan Times, dated the 10th November, 1946 saying that the Railway train carrying a large number of pilgrims and returning from Garhmukteshwar was attacked by a party of armed men at Dasna at about 12 noon on Saturday, the 9th November, 1946, as a result of which many passengers died and received injuries,

(b) whether it is a fact that the driver disconnected the engine from the train and went away to Ghaziabad, leaving the train behind at the mercy of the assailants;

(c) whether it is a fact that the Railway line was in no way blocked and the Engine Driver could have as well escorted the whole train to Ghaziabad;

(d) the total number of deaths and the persons injured;

(e) how many of the dead and injured have been identified, and what steps have been taken to inform their relatives,

(f) what steps were taken to provide medical relief by Government to the injured;

(g) how many arrests, if any, have been made so far in this connection;

(h) whether the Railway authorities informed the District Police to send ample police force to protect the waylaid passengers:

(i) whether the Railway authorities made any arrangements for food, shelter and conveyance of the passengers who were so stranded,

(j) what steps Government have taken to restore the property of the passengers which was left behind in the Railway train, and

(k) whether Government propose to compensate the passengers for the losses incurred by them due to this incident, if not, why not?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes, but preliminary enquiries made by the railway authorities reveal that it was not a case of passengers in the train being attacked by a party of armed men. There was a scuffle on the platform between some of the passengers in the train and a party of milk vendors who were attempting to board the train. The main disturbance however apparently took place later near the outer signal of Dasna Station in the direction of Ghaziabad after a number of passengers had left the train and had started walking along the railway line towards Ghaziabad.

(b) Yes, the Driver uncoupled the engine and drove it to Ghaziabad, it is stated that he did this in the interests of the passengers and the railway in order to bring police assistance which in fact he was able to do.

(c) The line was not blocked but the Driver could not haul the train to Ghaziabad without releasing the brakes which he could only do by walking along the train. Thus he was precluded from doing because the platform was crowded and the situation was out of control.

(d) and (e) The information is not available from railway sources since most of the rioting took place outside the station limits. The Honourable Member will no doubt be able to get reliable figures from the local Civil administration based on police reports submitted to them. The only definite information available in this connection is that the two Guards working the Police Relief Special Trains picked up nine dead bodies and eight injured persons. One railway postman was also killed at Dasna Station.

(f) Certain of the injured were given first-aid by the Guard of the Police Relief Train which arrived at Dasna from Hapur. The Guard was assisted in this by some private individuals who had arrived by car. Injured passengers, with the exception of one lady, were taken by train to Ghaziabad and there entrusted to the care of the railway and civil doctors. The injured lady left Dasna in a private car. Such dead bodies as were collected were brought in to Ghaziabad.

(g) This is not known to the railway authorities.

(h) Yes, a wireless message was sent immediately by the Divisional Superintendent, Moradabad, through the Officer Commanding, Moradabad, to the Superintendent of Police and the District Magistrate, Meerut. At the same time, a message was sent over the railway Control telephone to the police at Ghaziabad and at Hapur. About an hour later, a further message was sent to the District Magistrate, Meerut, asking for police protection at all the six stations between Garhmukhtesar and Ghaziabad in view of the tension prevailing among the crowds dispersing from the mela and the possibility of trouble in the surrounding areas.

(i) Passengers who stayed at Dasna station were looked after and given protection in the Station office. On arrival of the police, the train conveying these passengers was worked to Delhi after a detention of 3 hours and 17 minutes.

(j) The luggage and other belongings of passengers who had left the train at Dasna were taken into safe custody by the police. Some was stored at Dasna and the rest was taken to Ghaziabad for safe custody pending restoration to the rightful owners.

(k) Such damage or loss as may have been sustained by the passengers did not arise from any act of omission or commission on the part of the Railway Administration or its servants, but was attributable to civil commotion beyond the control of the railway authorities to foresee or prevent. While Government have every sympathy for the unfortunate victims of the disturbance, they regret that they cannot accept any liability for compensation for any damage or loss sustained by passengers as a result of the disturbance.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know from the Honourable Member whether it is not the responsibility of the Government to provide shelter to those persons who were stranded outside the railway yard as a result of this incident?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I am afraid my Honourable friend is referring to an incident the facts of which he does not seem to be quite fully aware of. It was not outside the station yard, but it was at some distance from the station that this incident took place. The distance was something like two furlongs.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Is it not a fact that on several occasions trains have been stopped midway by interested parties by pulling the alarm chains and Muslim passengers have been asked to get down and then they have been attacked?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, that question does not really arise but I may inform my Honourable friend that such incidents have taken place and the Government have taken definite steps to stop this kind of interference. Railway Administrations have been called upon to disconnect alarm chains and thereby rob these mischief-makers of one opportunity of creating any kind of trouble.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Have the Government considered the question of providing armed guards to travel with the train in case there is internal trouble in the compartment between people of both communities?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: We are doing our level best at the time, and in fact steps are under active consideration today to increase the armed forces which the railways ought to employ. But it is obviously impossible for the railways to provide armed guard to every single compartment?

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: Does the Honourable Member not think that it will be a very dangerous practice to disconnect alarm chains?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: It is much more dangerous to allow people to pull alarm chains, stop trains and murder people.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if it is a general order affecting all railways and all trains all over India?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: It is a general order, but discretion is left to the General Managers who will choose the section where they might apply this order.

Maharajkumar Dr. Sir Vijaya Ananda: Are the Government satisfied with the explanation of the Indian driver?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I have already stated what information we possess at the time, and if our enquiry reveals any delinquency on the part of the driver suitable action will be taken against him.

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: What is the name of the driver?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I can assure my Honourable friend that I do not know the name myself.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: There is a great deal of resentment on this point. People feel that it was deliberately disconnected and taken to Ghaziabad leaving the passengers to the mercy of the assailants.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I do not accept the implication of this question until the enquiry which we are making is complete.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Has the Honourable Member made himself sure that no property has been left behind in Ghaziabad which belonged to these pilgrims?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: We have done our best.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is there any property still left?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The Honourable Member may enquire from the station authorities.

DEATHS OF PANDIT MADAN MOHAN MALAVIYA AND SIR SIVASWAMI AIYAR

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Leader of the House). Sir, may I crave your leave to refer to the passing away yesterday afternoon of a giant among men, a great Indian, one who was a Member of this Assembly for a long number of years and who was also a Member of the Imperial Legislative Council which preceded this Assembly. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya died yesterday afternoon at the ripe age of 85, and with his passing away, perhaps it may be said that a certain age in Indian politics closes. He was one of those giants who laid the foundations of modern Indian nationalism, and year by year, he laid the foundations and built brick by brick and stone by stone the noble edifice of Indian freedom. They laboured in days when they had to face enormous difficulties, they had little support and we, who have succeeded to them and we, who have in a large measure been benefited by their labours, perhaps hardly realise the conditions in which they began this work. Many of us think, looking back to those days, that those people who worked then were not quite so advanced as we are, they were more moderate, more accommodating or compromising, not realising that the environment in which they worked was infinitely more difficult than the one in which we work now. We have changed since then. We have our difficulties which in some ways are greater. Nevertheless, we function in an entirely different atmosphere and it is a little difficult to capture the air, the atmosphere of those old days. Some of us, many of us, have grown up under, what shall I say, the tradition of some of those elders of the national movement. Speaking for myself, almost my earliest memories of childhood are connected so far as Indian politics are concerned with Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. Somehow Indian politics took shape in my boyish eyes with Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's face and figure. I remember still those early days as a boy when I listened to his brilliant oratory and was powerfully moved. I remember in later years, it was 27 years ago in the Imperial Legislative Council, when I sat in the visitors' gallery listening to his tremendous oration in regard to the Punjab Martial law events. Whether one agreed with him or whether one differed from him, I doubt if there is any one in India who did not respect him, who did not admire him and who was not affected by his very lovable, kind and gentle personality. So, now, when this last of the old giants is gone, gone perhaps at the right time—one cannot expect any one to live on and on for ever and ever,—nevertheless it is something which affects us all very much, as always a break with a certain age affects one and certainly in regard to a person like Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya who has been not only a kind of father of Indian nationalism but almost a father of many of us and under whose shadow we learnt much about public service, it is a deep wrench. He was not merely a figure working and speaking in Assemblies, but as the world knows, he left enormous achievements to his credit, chief among them being the great University at Benares which he established.

Sir, I think it is fitting that we should pay our homage to the memory of this giant amongst men, whom it was our privilege to meet, to work under and learn under. May I beg of you to convey on behalf of this House to the family of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya our deep sorrow and our condolences at this unhappy event. May I also mention, Sir, the passing away in the course of the last few days of another old and respected Member of this House, Sir Sivaswami Aiyar. I would beg of you to convey to his family also our condolences.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths (Assam European). Mr President, this is the second melancholy occasion during the present session on which we have found it necessary to mourn the passing of a great Indian patriot, a man whose life was dedicated to public service and who in that service displayed not only ability of a very high order, but what is still more important unassailable political and intellectual integrity. At this present juncture in Indian affairs, when the transfer of power to Indian hands is almost complete, when the process of framing the first constitution of a self-governing India is about to begin, it is difficult for us to recapture the atmosphere of those distant days, that period during which the most active portion of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's life was spent, days when he and those who worked with him were working for what must often have been only a distant vision. But where there is no vision the people perish, and all history teaches us, that progress depends on the existence among us of people who are capable of seeing those distant visions, people capable of looking, not to the things of the day, but to the things that lie ahead. For most of us, absorbed as we necessarily are in the petty things of everyday life, our eyes are kept on our feet or on that small tract of land which we happen to be traversing at a particular time, but if progress is not to perish from the earth, there must be among us men who, while they are engaged in everyday things, will still keep their view on the Delectable Mountains across which lies the path leading to the Celestial city. It is men of that class who provide the inspiration by which the world lives and does not stagnate. It is men of that class who give rise to those ideas which alone can differentiate between men and the beasts. It is because Pandit Malaviya belonged to that class of men—and indeed ranked high in that class of men—that we regard him as a great man and that every section of this House and every party and community in this country, will wish to join together in paying their tribute to his great memory and his great achievements. And I would say that in paying honour to that great man we but pay honour to ourselves. We in this group would wish to be most completely associated with the moving tribute paid by the Leader of the House to Pandit Malaviya, and I trust that you, Sir, will convey these sentiments, not only to the bereaved relatives but to the bereaved people of India.

We would wish also to associate ourselves with what has been said regarding another well-known man, though few of us in this group had the privilege of his personal acquaintance,—Sir Sivaswamy Aiyar. In his case too we think with sorrow of the death of a man whose life was given to public service. We wish fully to associate ourselves with what was said about him, and we trust that in his case, too, you will convey our feelings to the bereaved relatives.

Khan Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division Muhammadan Rural) Sir, I knew Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya from the time I was at school and his reputation as an educationist was well known throughout my province. He was not only the founder of the Benares Hindu University but also laid the foundation of the Hindu College there which later developed into the University. He was afterwards known to me as a member of the Imperial Council and I met him occasionally before the present Montagu-Chelmsford reforms came. Pandit Malaviya did not come to the first Assembly in 1921-23 but he came here in 1924. I knew that there was a big tug-of-war in my province as well as in other provinces—there are always differences of opinion in politics—between the Swaraj party and the Nationalist party. The Swaraj party was led by a very eminent person in my province, the late Pandit Motilal Nehru, father of the present Leader of the House, and Pandit Malaviya was the leader of the Nationalist party. In spite of these differences in politics Pandit Malaviya's respect and esteem was very high in the province. His great work in the field of education will always be remembered by all educationists. My party and I fully express our sympathies with the bereaved family, specially our colleague Pandit Govind Malaviya who is the eldest son of the deceased. We want you, Sir, to convey our sympathies to him and to other members of the bereaved family.

Sir Sivaswamy Aiyar was also very well known to me in the first Assembly. He was a nominated member and I was an elected member and we used sometimes to differ. But I knew that he commanded great respect in this House and put forward views which were acceptable to all sides of the House. He was in the second Assembly also and his memory will be cherished by all those who had the honour to sit with him in those days and benefit by his great knowledge of public affairs. I want you to convey our sorrow to that bereaved family also.

Mr. President: I fully associate myself with all that has been said by the Leader of the House, the Leader of the Opposition and the Honorable Deputy President, and I join the House in paying my homage to the great Indian—Pandit Mahatma

DECLARATIONS OF EXEMPTIONS UNDER THE REGISTRATION OF FOREIGNERS ACT LAID ON THE TABLE

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Member for Home and Information and Broadcasting). Sir, I lay on the table a copy each of the following Declarations of Exemption issued under the Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 —

- (i) No 1/2/46-Poll (E), dated the 4th March, 1946
- (ii) No 1/4/46-Poll (E) dated the 11th April 1946
- (iii) No 1/5/46-Poll (E), dated the 17th May, 1946
- (iv) No 1/7/46-Poll (E), dated the 3rd June 1946
- (v) No 1/13/46-Poll (E), dated the 27th August 1946
- (vi) No 1/14/46 Poll (E), dated the 27th August, 1946,
- (vii) No 1/16/46 Poll (E), dated the 10th September, 1946,
- (viii) No 1/14/46-Poll (E), dated the 17th September, 1946,
- (ix) No 1/16/46-Poll (E), dated the 25th September, 1946

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadian Rural) Sir, may I know if there are general instructions for declaration of exemption or there are particular cases of exemption in various cases?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: These are special exemptions, I have no knowledge about general exemptions.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know what general ground there is for exempting these under the Registration of Foreigners Act?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Exemptions are given on the ground that they are generally considered to be useful people here

REQUISITIONED LAND (CONTINUANCE OF POWERS) BILL

Mr. President: The House will now take into consideration the Bill to provide for the continuance of certain emergency powers in relation to requisitioned Land. An amendment has been moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee.

Shri Satya Narayan Sinha (Darbhanga Non-Muhammadian) Sir, I move

"That to the names given in the amendment the names of Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava and Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal be added, and that, in place of the name of Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiq the name of Hafiz M. Ghazanfarulla be substituted, and that instead of the words 'on the opening day of the next session' the words 'by Friday the 15th instant' be substituted."

The Bill may in that case be taken up and finished on Monday the 18th

Khan Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division Muhammadan Rural) We are sitting practically every day and then there are some other conferences. For instance there is one conference this afternoon. We will be busy every evening.

Shri Satya Narayan Sinha: That is the compromise we have arrived at. I may inform the Honourable Member that members of the Select Committee will find time to meet before Friday next.

Mr. President: Amendment to amendment moved

"That to the names given in the amendment the names of Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava and Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Bandyal be added, and that, in place of the name of Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqui the name of Hafiz M. Ghazantariulla be substituted, and that instead of the words 'on the opening day of the next session' the words 'by Friday the 15th instant' be substituted."

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer (Bombay Southern Division—Muhammadan Rural).—Sir, I rise to support wholeheartedly the amendment of my Honourable friend, Mr. Lawson, who has so ably moved that this Bill be referred to a Select Committee. I am very pleased to see that the Government is inclined to accept this amendment and I hope that in the Bill as the Select Committee may have it will be very carefully considered.

But this Bill is one which seeks to give powers for the continuance of military emergency powers in relation to requisitioned lands. I am entirely against giving such powers as are proposed—to those who have caused power to be taken away from them. Landlords and landowners alike have been threatened and have been displaced from their properties during the war, and now that the war is over I feel that this question is one which should be very carefully considered and at the same time it should be arranged that the properties which were requisitioned and handed back to the owners at once. During the course of the war, as we are all aware, the military officers have been threatening the owners of requisitioning their properties. Even an ordinary Lieut. or Captain would go to the owner and say, "my property is needed for the Government, it will be requisitioned." If we are to continue powers to Government to continue the same, I am afraid they will be misused again. I want an assurance from the Honourable Member that these powers will not be misused. I want an assurance that the military officers will not take shelter under this Bill and go to the landlords whose properties they want to hire, and tell them that if the properties are not given to them they would be requisitioned. I like it that this Bill provides only for the continuance of those properties, particularly lands, which are already requisitioned and are in the possession of Government. I want an assurance from the Honourable Member that no further properties—whether bungalows or lands—will be requisitioned in future.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja (Secretary, Defence Department). I give that assurance straightaway no fresh requisitions will take place.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: I am very grateful to the Honourable Member, and I am sure this will come as a great relief to everybody concerned. But I may inform the Honourable Member that even today I have received letters from Poona and Bombay, where owners have been threatened by the military authorities. They say "if you don't give the properties we shall requisition them." I hope my Honourable friend will issue a communique on this subject informing the authorities that they have no right to threaten the landlords like that. I should welcome a statement from the Honourable Member outlining the policy of Government on this question and saying that no properties would be requisitioned in future. That will help to allay the great fears which the civilians all over India are faced at present.

Now, I come to the question of derequisitioning. As you are aware, these properties when they were requisitioned were requisitioned for the duration of the war and six months after. I want to know from the Honourable Member whether these properties have been handed back to the owners. The requisitioning orders have not been carried out properly. Most of the properties requisitioned by Government are still in the possession of Government irrespective of the fact whether they are occupied or not. Most of them I know from my own experience are being misused. The other day my Honourable friend Mr. Lawson put a question to the Honourable Member to furnish information to the House on this subject and I am sorry to say that that information has not yet been furnished. We should like to know what is the percentage of properties that were requisitioned by Government during the course of the war have been derequisitioned. From my information I find that only 18 per cent land has been derequisitioned. This is a very small percentage, and I see no reason why Government should keep 82 per cent of land in their possession. When I deal with that question later on, I shall prove to the House that even the land which is no longer required by Government for defence purposes is being retained by them simply because most of the officers feel, as in the case of an island near Bombay, that the climate is very good and it is a good place for them to visit during week ends. This practice should stop. I am going to make suggestions later on as to how this is going to be done.

I also know that some properties in Bombay and Poona are lying vacant since June 1946. When the landlords approached the Garrison Engineer for getting the properties derequisitioned, he replied that this will be done by the end of September. It seems Government prefers to keep the properties vacant, and they go on paying rent for those properties which are not in use. When September came, they said that they were trying to get orders to the effect that properties would continue to be in their possession until such time as they pleased, and that the Defence of India Rules were being extended. I know that one building in Bombay which is in the possession of Government is lying vacant for the last six months and Government is paying 6,000 a month as rent. May I know from the Honourable Member where this money comes from? We taxpayers have to pay this amount. I hope the Honourable Member will go into this question very carefully. I do not wish to take up much time of the House, but I should like to mention one instance which concerns three thousand inhabitants of the tiny Isle of Madh in the Bombay Suburban District. I have got a cutting from the Evening News dated the 1st October 1946 and I will read a few lines in order to convince my Honourable friend that lands which are in possession of the military authorities are being misused. It says

"For the last three years many of them (this refers to fishermen)—have remained practically unemployed, living on the payments made by Government either as rent or compensation for their requisitioned properties." "Those of them who have no land or other property have to live on the meagre grant of Rs 5/- to Rs 15/- paid by the authorities as rent for their homes." . . . "Government has allowed only Rs 2 per tree per year to owners, whereas a tree, in fact, according to the prevailing rate should bring its owner at least Rs 30 a year."

A very old man there told this to the representative with which I agree that "at the time when Government is arranging facilities for the return of foreigners to their land, why are we poor people not allowed to come back to our homes."

I have also a letter from a very high official of which I should like to read extracts in which he says

"There are hardly any officers and men there and from such confidential conversation as I had with those present, I gather that the only reason why they want to stay there is because it was a very healthy place. They seem to have done a great deal of damage to the property of the fishermen; the woodwork has been broken, the roofs have fallen and many valuable trees cut down."

This is the state of affairs prevailing in a place not far from Bombay. When the question of damages and compensation will arise the usual reply will be that the question is under consideration. I suggest that when the properties are derequisitioned Government should hand over the properties at once, particularly those not required, and when this is done compensation should be paid to the owners immediately and at a proper rate.

Secondly I want to know why it should take twelve months on the part of the military authorities to think as to what properties are required and what are not required. I heard this morning from the Honourable Member's reply to one of the questions that Englishmen have been imported into India, some of whom are house-agents and auctioneers to consider the question of derequisitioning of property. Is there really a need to bring Englishmen to consider the question of derequisitioning? Have we not got people in India fitted for these jobs? Has any effort been made to see that proper people were employed in India? The only idea for employing the people from outside is to delay matters. Here the question is one of urgency and especially because there is the housing accommodation problem. This matter requires immediate attention.

In conclusion, I would like to make one suggestion. I suggest that a Non-official Board be set up in every province by Government, before which Board the military authorities should submit their cases for the continuation of these requisitioned places. If the military authorities feel that here is a property which should continue to be retained, then this Board should be the authority to decide whether a particular property or land should be allowed to be retained or not. As you know, the military authorities are interested parties. They have taken over the properties in a hurry, giving to most of the owners barely twenty-four hours' notice to vacate. They are people who wish to continue occupation of these properties mostly for private reasons. I suggest that such cases should go before this Board. This Board should be the only authority to decide whether a property should be given back or retained.

The question of derequisitioning should also be placed before this Board. If any landlord wants that his property should be handed over to him, particularly now that the war is over, and circumstances have changed, this Board should call upon the military to hand over the property to the owner. In many cases, many landlords who have been staying away from their places of residence want to come back to their original houses. But the Government says that the bungalows are required for the use of the military officers. It should remain open to these landlords to submit their cases to this Board. At present I know from experience as to what is happening. The owner goes to the authorities. He is sent from pillar to post. He goes to the Garrison Engineer, then to the D. A. D. Lands and Firings, then to the Area Commander, and then to the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, and the matter takes six months.

I therefore suggest that immediately a Board should be set up which should deal with the complaints of landlords and landowners.

I hope the Honourable Member will consider my suggestions favourably.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh (Bombay City Non-Muhammadan Urban): I see that the House has pretty nearly agreed to send this Bill to the Select Committee, and therefore I do not want to take much time of this House. Otherwise, Sir, I would certainly have said that I am not satisfied with a Bill of this kind giving so much power to the officers. An arbitrary Bill of this kind is not at all necessary now that the war is over.

I want to bring to the notice of this House one aspect of this question, and it is this. It is not merely individual landlords and their houses whose properties have been requisitioned. There are public bodies, such as the Municipal Corporations whose lands have been acquired by this Department.

Now I want an assurance from the Member in charge who was eager to give the assurance. (Is he paying any attention?)

Mr. President: The Honourable the Defence Secretary.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: In the same way that he answered with alacrity that no further properties will be requisitioned, could he give me an assurance that the properties requisitioned from public bodies and corporations like the Bombay Municipal Corporation and others will be returned?

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official): Of course, one day!

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Not one day! But now. Why I am asking this question is for this reason. I know that a body like the Bombay Corporation is very anxious to increase the number of beds for the sick in Bombay because they want to increase their medical relief. But what is the position. A big piece of land like Tarauay where they wanted to have a hospital has been requisitioned by the military authorities and when they get a Bill like this the military people will say, no we do not return it. Therefore my request is that we have many Corporations who are supplying public amenities and doing useful work for the public and that their land should be returned. But to give you a definite case. What is it that the military authority want? I know that the Bombay Municipal Corporation wants to have a general public hospital on this site. If that is returned surely it will be for the good of the public of Bombay and yet according to this Bill what is going to happen? The Honourable Member in charge cannot deny that for every bed that they have had in this institution they are wanting Rs 800 from the Municipal Corporation Is that correct, Sir?

[Dr G V Deshmukh]

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I apologise, I was engaged elsewhere

Dr. G V Deshmukh: I do not know if it has come to his ears. These bodies which are doing useful work for the public and who have been put to all these disadvantages on account of war, (even if the Department has to suffer a certain amount of loss they ought to be willing to bear it), should have requisitioned properties and lands returned to them. Look at the amount of loss they have put not only to the public but all these public bodies during the war! Therefore, if bodies like the Bombay Municipal Corporation asked them to give all this equipment free they ought to be prepared to do it, considering the amount of loss that they have put all these different corporations to.

Under the circumstances, if the Member in charge is not willing to give an assurance like this, I am very glad that my friend, Mr Lawson moved this amendment, because you can see in what direction the mentality of the Department is working. Instead of the mentality working on the lines of derequisitioning and coming back to civil life as soon as possible, they want to continue in an easy way so that they can requisition and do what they like as in times of war and emergencies. What is the explanation of the Member in Charge? His explanation is that warlike conditions are going to continue. Can he tell us when these conditions are going to discontinue? The war ended a long time ago and it is no good coming before this House and putting forward such excuses that warlike conditions are going to continue. You want to make it very easy for yourself. We know that the Indian army which used to be 150,000 is going to be half a million. Does this department want to cater for this increase in the army by means of emergency measures? I think it is very unfair that they should try to make it easy for themselves at the expense of the civilian population. The Member in Charge will say that he wants more flats for their military officers, because they are going to have a larger number of officers, and therefore they must continue to have this power of requisitioning. They will come and say that they want clubs and all kinds of things, amusements and luxuries, for the increased army and therefore they want this power. I think no public body worthy of its name and certainly not this Assembly, will consent to this easy way of pampering the military department at the expense of civilian life.

There are a good many things that I could have brought to the notice of the Member in Charge. I do earnestly appeal to him that though not in the case of private landlords, at least in the case of public bodies which serve public purposes he will make it a point of giving them back the lands and buildings which they have taken over. I happen to be on the Select Committee and hope to express my views there.

Sardar Sampuran Singh (West Punjab Sikh) Sir, personally I think it is a misnomer to call this measure a law at all, because, strictly speaking, every body has the right of possessing his property and using it as he likes, and to use force in any form, may it be of law or otherwise to take the property of another person, I think, is illegal. Such provisions are meant for special purposes and the Government had the advantage of this provision for the period of the war. There is no emergency now and there is no special purpose for which they should continue enjoying that facility. It is such a long time since the war is over and yet we learn that the military department has only derequisitioned 18 per cent of the property which they had requisitioned during the war. Is it not wrong? Is not the machinery of Government moving very slowly? And does that Government which has moved so slowly deserve this treatment from us, that we should allow them to continue to have those facilities which they had for a special occasion. It is not only that individuals are suffering but great nation-building institutions are suffering on account of these provisions. Buildings of colleges, schools, hotels, corporations, municipal and district boards have been requisitioned and all those bodies are suffering for want of accommodation and they are not able to help the public and carry on the purposes for which those institutions were really established. And in that way to carry out one purpose, you are thwarting so many other purposes in the country, and it is the duty of the Government to see that no such law is allowed to continue for a single day longer than is absolutely necessary. I think they have had enough time and if they want prolongation of these provisions, they should have it with the determination that they are going to stop their use as soon as possible.

Mr. Abdul Rahman Siddiqi (Calcutta and Suburbs, Muhammadan Urban). Mr. President, in the language of the Secretariat I have nothing further to add to what I said the other day about this mischievous propensity of the present Government to prolong the war into civil life. The Honourable Member who is speaking on behalf of the Defence Department perhaps does not look at the civilian aspect of requisitioning. Sir, I hope the Select Committee will come out with a report that the Bill be thrown out, because we shall not have really justified our existence in this House, if we allow this kind of liberty and license to be taken with the rights of the Indian citizen. "The aftermath of the war" is perhaps a very good phrase to use but, Sir, does the Honourable Member realise that the aftermath of making this remark leads me to the conclusion that there is incompetence all over the requisitioning departments?

Mr. President the Honourable Member should realise that in blocks of flats, sometimes 10 and sometimes 12, only one was occupied and the remaining 11 were vacant when every man, woman and child in Calcutta was mad to find a room to live in. Sir, I know of a big building in Calcutta which was occupied by the Americans first and then was passed on to this Department, over which the Honourable the Defence Member presides. The owner has agreed to let it to a party but the Department has left two tables in that huge building and refuses to remove those two tables, and this is requisitioning!

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Take possession like the squatters in London!

Mr. Abdul Rahman Siddiqi: Sir, it will perhaps surprise the Honourable Member that the civil and military officers who take these flats have been taking advantage of the Rent Control Act in the cities. I know that the owner of a house could not get back into his flat, because it was requisitioned for an officer who has now been transferred from Calcutta. Before going he sublet the flat to a friend of his. The result is that the owner cannot come back to his own house.

In this wonderful imperial city of Delhi full price was paid for a piece of land to the Government of India. The purchasers were told that they would not be given possession of the piece of land so long as the war was on and six months thereafter. Sir, a good many months after that I tried to get this piece of land, not for private use, but for the use of a public organization. I was asked to see the Honourable the Labour Member. I went to him and he said "I have nothing to do with it. You better go to the War Department." I went to the War Department and they sent me to some office—I forget what it was—with headquarters at Agra. We approached that office and we were sent to the Khyber Pass, near Delhi, to see its representative here. I did that. Nobody knew where this piece of land was. I took him to it. He said he would look into the matter, and the answer came back the next day that I should approach the Labour Department. I went to the Secretary of the department and he said "No, no, Mr. Siddiqi, you are mistaken, you had better go to the War Department." I went back again to the War Department. If this is not incompetence, what else is it? I hope the Government of India will muster courage and put the army back in its proper place. This kind of intrusion into my rights as a citizen, if allowed to go on, my fear is that these encroachments under the incompetence of a government that does not think in terms of the rights of Indians, will widen they will increase. The aftermath may become the tail of a comet—uncomprehensible and immeasurable. It is all very well to talk glibly and with one's tongue in his cheek. The main problem is, when are you going to get out of the houses of private citizens? I do not know why a Select Committee is being set up for under the present mental attitude of my colleagues in this House, whether you have a Select Committee or whether you have the Secretary of a Department speaking, everything that comes from the official benches will go through, and the poor Indian citizen will be trampled under foot like the worm. But I hope the worm will turn, if not during this session then in the next one.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Before Friday evening!

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: I again suggest the Government will see to it that an Opposition is created, otherwise our moral stature, our political stature, and even the constitutional stature of this Assembly will be dwarfed and shortened and I doubt if the Constitution-making Body will be able to pull us out of the bog.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, I am only reminded of a story said of an Irishman who was shipwrecked on an island and who when he met the first man asked him if there was a government, and on being told 'yes', he said he was in the opposition. My Honourable friend Mr Siddiqi, whatever the form of government, will always be in the opposition—he has an itching for it. He accuses us of joining this government and giving support to any measure that is being brought forward. I would ask him to consider dispassionately whether it is not right to place individual or self-interest after the interests of the community as a whole. I come from a small town and I know how, without any rent control order, it is impossible for anybody to get a house. Rents go up enormously and persons who have got houses to let are being represented here, are their interests to prevail over the interests of the community as a whole? Have we got out of war conditions yet? The war might not have been over normally but for the atom bomb. It collapsed on that account prematurely but war conditions are still prevailing and we are in a worse state of affairs than during war time.

It is true that there may have been excesses committed and the military may not have looked into every detail of the requisitioned buildings, the need for a particular house may not be there, but the need for continuing requisition as a whole is still there. Possibly some of these houses or buildings have to be acquired permanently. Is it not therefore necessary to have a statute of this kind? We must arm ourselves. Let us not be constantly under the impression that some other man is trying to rule us, nor am I going to say that every piece of legislation which follows in the wake of the rules and regulations that were framed under the Defence of India Act should automatically lapse or is cent per cent bad. I am not going to be a wholehogger merely because it is somehow related to the Defence of India Act. This will go to the Select Committee and the angulanties may be rounded off, it is for that purpose that we are sending it to Select Committee. I agree with Dr Deshmukh that so far as public buildings which have been used for charitable purposes or as educational trusts or colleges are concerned, they ought to be derequisitioned as early as possible. I am aware of a case where the Ramjas College here in Karol Bagh was requisitioned a long time ago and the students had to shift to private buildings, and in spite of repeated requests the military say they have put up enormous buildings and therefore they have not been able to return it yet. I want the scope of the Bill restricted. Military purposes ought to be defined. If they were requisitioned for a particular purpose let it not be open to the authorities in charge of those buildings to enlarge the scope and divert it for other uses now. If the original need no longer exists, the buildings or lands should be automatically returned.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Irrespective of the monies spent on them?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: As far as that is concerned, whatever amount might have been spent and whoever spent it, it is his money and my money, and therefore if lakhs of rupees have been spent on a small building that was requisitioned, is it reasonable that this should be given as a gift? It is not proper. If the improvement can be separated from the original building, let it be separated and the original building returned, or if the original building is so small that it can be easily acquired and a substitute can be given, let a substitute be given. In any case these are all considerations of details and they may be left to the Select Committee. Generally the grounds on which the derequisition may be allowed or requisitioned houses temporarily may be made permanent should be considered. That is all I want to say for the present.

On the other point of deficiency of houses in Delhi, I would like to say a word. Large numbers of buildings were constructed here for lodging troops coming from foreign countries—for instance the American troops. In the Canning Road I find huge blocks of buildings are lying vacant. The Americans have left. What has happened? Questions were put on the floor of the *Assembly, and an Honourable Member asked whether these Houses could not be given for the use of other officers in the civil services here, and the answer was that the Army Department would be referred to. But persons going that side have found that for a long time the doors have not been opened at all. If they were housing the armed forces of other countries, they have gone, and our own forces have not increased after the war, what then is the need for keeping them for army purposes I am unable to understand. There does not seem to be any liaison or co-ordination between one department of government and another. It is rather unfortunate that that is so. It is easy for one department to pass it on to another department. In that way I entirely agree with the observations of my Honourable friend Mr. Siddiqi. In spite of the change of government I am really sorry to see that the secretaries are still moving in the same old rut, they do not move, they do not care to know or to remove the inconveniences that people are suffering from. If lots of buildings are no longer in use, why do not the military give them over for civilian purposes? There is so much of delay in dispensing with or derequisitioning even in proper cases where buildings are no longer necessary for the purposes for which they were taken originally. In all these matters general rules should be laid down and punishments should be given to those who are indifferent or unduly dilatory in dealing with these matters.

Mr. Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce): How can you punish imported British personnel who have been brought here to derequisition these buildings?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Sir, I realise the strength of feeling in this House on this subject, and out of deference to the wishes of the House I accept the amendment moved by my Honourable friend, with this addition that my Honourable friend Mr. Gokhale may also be put on the Select Committee. Perhaps the House is aware that it is not only the Defence Department which is in possession of this large number of requisitioned properties spread throughout the country. I propose this addition because civil departments of Government of which the Department of Works, Mines and Power is particularly important, have to answer for a large number of buildings which have not yet been derequisitioned.

It is forgotten that this is not a permanent measure on the statute book. As was pointed out yesterday, its operation at the moment will be automatic only up to October 1947, after which by an order of the Governor General it would be extended by another year after which by a vote of both Houses of the Legislature in the U. K. it could be extended to a maximum period of five years. So all the vehement and strong language used by some of my Honourable friends that Government were trying to encroach upon the liberties of the individual for ever was rather misplaced.

I shall indicate very briefly the progress which has been actually made in derequisitioning the properties up to the end of September 1946. Out of 10,689 properties which were requisitioned and which were in possession of Government on the termination of the war, there are now 6,353 properties still in their possession. We have therefore already derequisitioned nearly 4,800 properties.

Mr. Manu Subedar: You will take another two years at this rate

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I hope not. I explained to the House yesterday why it was that the progress of derequisitioning was not as rapid as we had wished it to be. I pointed out in particular that the strength of the armed forces was still roughly one million, that is one half of the total number of men in the forces during the war. I also pointed out that we had large movements of troops on the East and the West. The House is aware that we have large numbers of forces in overseas theatres and when they come back we have to provide for transit camps for them. We have to provide for hospital accommodation and we have to provide for a number of other things. So Sir, I am glad to notice that the House has accepted in principle at any rate the necessity of continuing powers of possession of requisitioned properties. I repeat the assurance which I gave yesterday that nobody is more anxious than the Defence Department to derequisition all properties with the utmost speed possible and with that end in view they will examine all the suggestions which have been made in the House today including the suggestion of appointing non-official Boards.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member may continue his speech after Lunch. Before we adjourn I might just mention that the point of the attack was that the requisition would be permanent and even if the legislation is temporary, power is given to deprive owners perpetually of certain properties in their hands. That seems to require attention. The Honourable Member may reply to that point when we reassemble at 2-30.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch Till Half Past Two of the Clock

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (the Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Sir, in the morning I mentioned the 1st of October 1947 as the period up to which these powers would be automatically in force. The correct date is the 1st of April 1947. I inadvertently mentioned 1st of October 1947.

I shall now briefly mention the various classes of properties which Government have been in possession of. I shall say straightaway that it was some months ago that Government issued special instructions for the release of all educational institutions and I am glad to say that out of the educational buildings which were in possession of Government on the 1st of September 1945, few if any now continue to be in their possession.

As regards hospitals, only those which are required until the strength of the defence service is decreased to a figure which will enable us to carry on hospitalisation within our own premises will be retained. I understand that only four premises are affected in the whole country.

As regards public buildings and institutions and commercial and industrial undertakings, in most cases they have been retained to accommodate the increased staff and will be released in proportion as demobilisation progresses.

The next class I shall refer to is the storage accommodation. Here unfortunately I cannot hold out hopes of very early release mainly for the reason that we have stores of the value of crores of rupees in several places in India. In addition, the army has undertaken the responsibility of looking after American surplus stores which the Government of India have purchased and for which accommodation will be required so long as the stores are not finally disposed of. As regards the residential buildings and other buildings including hotels, I must emphasise that until the strength of the armed forces is brought down somewhere near the pre-war figure, a large number of them will have to be continued in possession.

I do not wish to take much time of the House now. But I would like to make one final plea. Several instances of individual hardship have been brought to notice on the floor of the House. I am not in a position to reply to the allegations made about these individual cases because I have not had the time to make the necessary inquiries. But may I suggest that the House might have a proper perspective in this matter? It should be realised that the number of properties involved runs into thousands and they are spread all over India. Wherever there is executive power, there is a possibility of some abuse. It is the business of this House to ventilate the grievances in individual cases and I give an assurance on behalf of Government that these individual cases of grievances will be looked into very carefully and will be investigated and, where substantiated, remedied.

Sir, I shall end by saying that in this matter the interests of the individuals should be subordinated to the larger interests of the State for which alone Government wish to retain these powers of continuing the possession of requisitioned property.

I forgot to answer the question which you asked, Sir, namely whether the properties, although the Act will cease to operate, will continue to be in possession of Government under certain circumstances. The position is that where acquisition has taken place it is of a permanent nature, and there the properties will pass permanently out of the possession of the owners. But may I assure the House that in this matter, particularly in reference to sub-clause (c) of clause 5 (3) where it is stated that the appropriate Government can require properties for the maintenance of defence services or for the maintenance of supplies and services essential to the life of the community—so far as the Central Government are concerned, I can give the assurance that these powers would be most sparingly used and only when there is no other alternative available to serve the public purpose in view.

Mr. Mannu Subedar: May I request my Honourable friend to make it clear why in addition to the ordinary land acquisition powers which Government have already got it is necessary to provide under clause 3 that lands which were requisitioned for the war period and for the war period alone may be acquired? Why this power is necessary?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I suggest that that point may be gone into in the Select Committee.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I ask the Honourable Member whether he is going to consider my suggestion that he would be good enough to set up some machinery in the provinces whereby the ordinary landlord of the property can approach the Board and have his grievances redressed instead of approaching the Government of India?

Mr. President: Now that the matter is going to the Select Committee all these points can be threshed out there.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth (West Coast and Nilgiris Muhammadan) Sir, I wish to suggest a small change in the names of the Select Committee. I suggest that the name of Khan Muhammad Yamin Khan be replaced by the name of Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi. I am sure the House will have no objection to it.

Mr. President: The original mover of the amendment motion is Mr. Satyanarain Sinha. Is he agreeable to this change?

(Mr. Satyanarain Sinha was not in the Chamber.)

In that case, the form of the amendment will be

"That the name of Hafiz M. Ghazanfarulla be substituted in place of Khan Muhammad Yamin Khan."

I think the best course would be to put the amendment like this

"That, to the names given in the amendment, the names of Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava and Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal be added, and that in place of the name of Khan Muhammad Yamin Khan the name of Hafiz M. Ghazanfarulla be substituted and that instead of the words 'on the opening day of the next session' the words 'by Friday the 15th instant' be substituted."

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: May I suggest, Sir, that the name of Mr B K Gokhale be included in the Committee?

Mr. President: There is the original Motion before the House for the consideration of the Bill, and there is the amendment for reference to the Select Committee. To that there is the amendment of Hajj Abdus Sattar Hajj Ishaq Seth. The question is

"That, to the names given in the amendment, the names of Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava Mr Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal, and Mr B K Gokhale, be added, and that in place of the name of Khan Muhammad Yamin Khan the name of Hafiz M Ghazanfarulla be substituted, and that instead of the words 'on the opening day of the next session' the words 'by Friday the 15th November, 1946,' be substituted "

The motion was adopted

Mr. President: The other amendment of Mr Sinha drops out. I will now put to the House the amended amendment of Mr Lawson

The question is

"That, the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, Mr P J Griffiths, Mr Ahmed E H Jaffer, Hafiz M Ghazanfarulla, Mr Manu Subedar, Mr Abdur Rahman Siddiqi, Dr G V Deshmukh, Pandit Balkrishnan Sharma, Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava, Mr Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal, Mr B K Gokhale and the Mover, with instructions to report by Friday the 15th November, 1946, and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the committee shall be five "

The motion was adopted

FOREIGNERS BILL

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Home Member) Sir, I move

"That the Bill to confer upon the Central Government certain powers in respect of foreigners be taken into consideration "

Sir, in moving for the consideration of this Bill, I do not propose to go into details of this Bill for the House will remember that in 1939 when the Registration of Foreigners Bill was brought before the House, in the debate strong opinion was expressed by several Honourable Members that a more comprehensive measure with greater powers to be given to Government should be brought in. The Home Department then took up for consideration the formulation of such a Bill. In the meanwhile the war intervened and an Ordinance was therefore passed. Now, immediately afterwards the Home Department took up the consideration of the Bill but it was then thought advisable that the Act should be limited to the period of the war and six months after. Now the period of this Bill expired in September last and again the vacuum has been filled by the passing of an Ordinance. It is therefore necessary that the measure which was contemplated to be passed and which the House generally wanted to pass should be brought before the House. Therefore this measure has been drafted embodying all the suggestions and is practically wholly or more or less in the same form as the Act of 1940. In 1939 Act, the Registration of Foreigners Act, when it was passed, provided only for the registration and certain restrictions, but it was found very inadequate. Before this Act was passed, you will remember that there was only one Act and the old one, known as the Foreigners Act of 1864. That Act instead of dealing with foreigners, probably was used or abused for treating Indians as foreigners in India. Therefore the definition was revised in 1940 and the revised definition has been incorporated in this Bill. Therefore there is no such danger of any abuse of that definition. Now, the House would like to know what are the number of foreigners in this country. It is very difficult to say because there is no proper statistics about them. Roughly there are five lakhs of foreigners in this country, of which number about three lakhs are people who are not considered foreigners, but who are more or less Indians or semi Indians, that is from Nepal and surrounding areas. Thus there are three lakhs of these people, some Nepalese, some Tibetans who are exempt from registration, then there are about 28,000 Chinese and 18,000 Afghans and one thousand Persians. The total number of European foreigners is about 14,600. Theoretically all these people would come under the Act, but practically very few would be affected. The Bill now drafted takes two additional powers to those given under the Act of 1940. Firstly power is given imposing obligations on masters of ships and hotel keepers or restaurant keepers to give information about the movement of these people since it would be necessary to check such movements. The other power that has been given is for the determination of nationality. Where there is a doubt as to the question of nationality it is quite natural that a man may give his nationality as it suits him, and it would be impossible to wait for a judicial decision of the pronouncement of a court. It is therefore considered necessary that on the facts that may be produced Government should have power to determine the nationality of the person concerned.

Except these two provisions the rest of the provisions are all in tact. This Bill therefore should not be considered as a war-time measure on a war-time legacy. The Bill was contemplated even before the war but the war intervened and therefore the emergency was faded over by the Ordinance. But all civilised countries have some sort of legislation empowering the Government of the day to possess accurate figures of the number of foreigners, their trade, profession and calling and also about their activities in the country. It is useful both for normal as well as abnormal times. Occasionally we find these people competing with residents economically and using their talents sometimes for very mischievous purposes, sometimes some of them prove to be a danger to society. Therefore no one will question the necessity of such a Bill. As the Bill contains no new provision and as the necessity for it had already been recognised by the House I do not propose to take any further time of the House. I move for its consideration. There was no amendment received till today.

Mr. President: That will be coming after the consideration motion is put to the House.

Motion moved.

"That the Bill to confer upon the Central Government certain powers in respect of foreigners be taken into consideration."

Sjt. M. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadan Rural).
 Sir, I wish to say a few words on this. I am glad that the definition of a foreigner given in clause 2 (m) exempts the ruler as well as the subject of an Indian State. In the original Foreigners Act of 1940 the definition was such as to include the ruler as well as the subject of an Indian State. I remember that in the non-co-operation movement of 1930 and 1932 many Congress workers were arrested, detained, and deported to various Indian States, and sometimes it worked great hardship. I know of a Congress worker from Belgaum who was arrested in Poona and deported to Miraj State because his parents were born in that State. But the Miraj State authorities refused to have him because he was not born in Miraj. He could not enter that territory and he could not remain in the railway yard because it was British territory. Then he tried to get into Sangli State but the authorities there said that as neither he nor his parents were born in that State he could have no asylum there. Therefore he followed the only course open to him, i.e., he went underground. In 1935 when I was first elected to this House I brought in a Bill to have the necessary changes in this Act so that the rulers as well as subjects of Indian States should be free from the mischief of this Act. At any rate that has been done after ten years and now I am glad on that account.

Another point to which I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable Member is that the definition is negative. 'Foreigner' is defined as one who "is not a natural-born British subject", etc. It would have been logical to define 'foreigner as one who is not an Indian subject'. Under clause 2(a)(1) Indians are not 'foreigners' because they are natural-born British subjects, within the meaning of sub-section (1) of Section 1 of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act of 1914. In other words we are citizens of our own country because we are living in a territory which is under the domination of the British Government or His Majesty's Government and because we owe allegiance to it! That is not the foundation of our citizenship. The foundation of our citizenship is that we are owners of this country and we are born in this country. But here it is otherwise. Here is an opportunity to break another link in the chain that binds India to the British crown. I therefore submit that in all future legislation we should not be described as British Indian subjects or British Indian citizens or in some such manner in which the basis of citizenship is not our birth in and loyalty to this country but some allegiance to some one who exists somewhere else. The basis of our citizenship should be our law. That should be borne in mind and followed in future. I am personally happy about this bill because I did not succeed in my attempt, my Bill came up to the consideration stage and it could not proceed further for the simple reason that I was not here. Sir, I support the Bill.

Mr. Mann Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce). Sir, I wish to raise a very small point and bring it to the attention of the House. The House will remember that during the last session I moved a Resolution in this House objecting to the safeguarding clauses of the Government of India Act, one of which provides that no disability can be imposed on a British subject and no discrimination can be made against him in the matter of entry or earning his livelihood or settling down in this country. I know that constitutionally those disabilities continue. I also know that this House unanimously adopted that Resolution. I am not sure if Mr Griffiths objected to it, but I am sure that this House minus the European Group supported that Resolution, and the feeling on all sides was that we should sooner or later get rid of those elections which prevent us from putting our house in order. I want to show this House a direction in which this Bill, which is very necessary and salutary, leaves a loophole. That loophole is with regard to South Africa. Under this Bill this Government cannot treat a South African as a foreigner. That is how I read it, if I am wrong I should be corrected. A South African being a British subject is not covered by this. At the present moment and in the present temper of the Indian people a South African is something that we would not touch with the longest pole. We would not give him any facilities or any welcome, and if we had our way we would hound him out of this country, no matter what economic or other losses it inflicted upon us. That is the present state of feeling in our mind. Our countrymen are being ill-treated there and are denied the elementary civil and property rights, and here we have the open door. I realise the disability of this Government constitutionally to expand this Bill so as to cover every person who is not a natural born Indian. That is the definition which my Honourable friend Mr Gadgil is asking for and that is the definition which I am asking for, and I realise that at the present moment it is not possible, in this legislature at all events, to bring in a law which will cover Indians alone and treat everybody else as a foreigner. We have in this country a very large number of people who have not abandoned their British nationality and who still claim Indian domicile and all rights thereunder. There are our English friends. With regard to these English friends the position will be settled in due course when the treaty between this country and the United Kingdom comes to be considered. And I do not wish to raise it now. But I do raise it with regard to South African who by this loophole is not regarded as a foreigner. He can enter this country by the open door and do what he likes.

Now, Sir, there is another small point which I made this morning in questions. I am very happy that the Honourable the Home Member has taken notice of this point. People have come to this country—I particularly refer to Bombay—who have reduced Bombay to a place comparable with the unenviable

3 P. M. reputation of Port Said and Singapore at one time. They have black-marketing, they have gathered all available supplies of chemicals, drugs, Gillette Blades and various other articles, they have bribed Government officials on a large and extensive scale and secured licences; they have amassed big money and I make this allegation with a full sense of responsibility on the floor of this House that they have evaded the payment of income-tax on their income. These men who came with nothing, some of them have grown very rich, some of them are offering very uneconomic competition to our own people in various lines. They are not desirable citizens. Many of them, now that these laws are being tightened, are applying to this Government for naturalization certificates and they will regularize themselves as British subjects hereafter, and their application I understand, are by the hundreds being entertained and passed by this Government. I suggest, Sir, most respectfully that this is an issue which deserves a much closer examination. I do not say that any man who lives honestly in this country should be interfered with. I do not say that any set of people who wish to enter here for travel, for amusement and for other purposes, may not be permitted, but I do say that India's hospitality in giving these refugees a place to live in when they were hounded out from everywhere cannot be abused in the manner in which some of them are doing. Some of them engaged themselves in anti-social activities. This country in the past under the British tradition was an open country. It had an open door, anybody could come here and do what he liked, anybody could do any trade, anybody could enter into any transactions, and even if it was deleterious for the life of our own people we had no power or say in it, but that will not be the case in future. I therefore trust Government's attention will be drawn to some of the aspects which we are mentioning.

Let me mention another class of people who are in this country. There are Italian prisoners about whom I have been putting questions, there are Czechs and particularly Polish refugees to the extent of 6,000 in Kolapur, but I know there are camps near Rampur and Bhopal and all sorts of places. There are thousands of these refugees who are being paid, and Sir, may I tell this House the scale on which they are being paid. It is an unconscionable scale. I know in Secunderabad there are certain Czech refugees who are receiving Rs 500 a month ever since they arrived in this country and they are still being paid that sum. I want any party on the official Benches to contradict this information, and I shall be very glad to get that contradiction. This is also a problem. Here is a set of people whom we gave refuge during the period of their difficulties.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali (Member for Railways and Transport) Who is paying this money?

Mr. Manu Subedar: I suppose it is being paid by the Government of India on behalf of His Majesty's Government, and it is adding to the sterling balances which is one of our headaches.

Sir, I want to know whether Government will not make an effort to remove all foreign elements who are costing us in this manner, and to regulate all other elements which are left but in particular to mark out those who are adding to the vice of this country and who are indulging in blackmarketing and other deleterious practices and in tax-dodging in particular. I think the Income-tax Department is normally quite efficient, if I may say so, when it affects the Indian section of the population but the Income-tax Department has been also very slack with regard to these people from Iraq and Poland and from Germany and Austria. Some of them have been playing havoc with our economic life. I know that they will be covered by this. All European foreigners are covered by this Bill, but I am sorry that it has not been possible for Government to include the South Africans whom we would like to treat as foreigners and unwelcome foreigners in every respect.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I am glad that the House has fully supported the measure that has been brought by me. My Honourable friend Mr. Gadgil has reminded me of certain Indian State subjects that were dealt with under the old Act of 1864 and were treated as foreigners. I may inform him that I know more than he does about it because many of my comrades from Kathiawar who were working with me in British India were dealt with similarly. But furthermore, which nobody perhaps in this House or outside knows, a considerable pressure was brought to bear upon the Thakur Sahib of

[Mr. Vallabhbhai Patel]

Porbandar to deport Mahatma Gandhi from British India and keep him in that State because he was a subject of that State. Those days are gone and the Bill provides against any such abuse, nor is there any possibility of such an abuse in future.

He has also referred to the question of the definition. The definition in the present circumstances is of a negative character. It is a definition as to who is a foreigner in this land, not of Indian nationality. There is no law dealing with the Indian nationality at present. It is under consideration, but today the law is of British nationality. We have excluded what are called British subjects in this definition. The scope of the Bill is limited and it is better that this question should not be dealt with till we have our complete law dealing with Indian nationality and until India is as free as any other free country to deal with all the foreigners in the manner in which free countries are dealing with them.

The point raised by the Honourable Mr. Manu Subedar is about a certain number of detenus in this country—Italians and others. These detenus were kept in detention from the time the war began. Many of them have been repatriated. There are a few left still, but that is not because they are to be kept here, but because there are no proper passage facilities and other facilities for repatriation. But repatriation is kept in view and there are a very few left who will soon go. The expense on this account mostly falls on the British treasury and to that extent of course we become the creditor. How the debt will be dealt with is a different matter altogether, but if we have lent crores and millions and we have not grudged them, then why feel shy at an amount which is very small.

Sgt. N. V. Gadgil: It may break the camel's back.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths (Assam Europeans): The camel's back is very strong in this case.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: So the policy followed by this Government today is that any foreigner and these people who are prisoners or who are under detention and are mechanical or technical experts whose services would be very useful in this country and whose stay here in this country would not cause any difficulty or danger—such men are allowed provided the Government of India is satisfied that there is a demand for the employment of such experts. No other person is allowed to remain in this country from amongst those people who are under detention.

I am glad that the House has given almost an unanimous reception to this Bill.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan (Dacca cum Mymensingh Muhammadan Rural): Will the inhabitants of French India and Portuguese India, who are as much Indians as we British Indians are, come under the purview of this measure?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Of course. So long as they are under foreign rule they are foreigners.

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill to confer upon the Central Government certain powers in respect of foreigners be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President: We may now take the Bill clause by clause. There are amendments to clauses 6, 7 and 13 of which notice has been given by the Honourable Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava. Does he propose to move any of them? I find that these notices are coming in at the last minute.

Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division Non-Muhammadan): I quite see that I am late. But we have had no sufficient time to study the Bills and we had to go through them till late in the night.

Mr. President: I shall put these clauses separately and the other clauses by groups

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: If I may be permitted to explain this, perhaps the mover may withdraw his amendment

Mr. President: If it is more convenient, it may be done at the time we consider the particular clause

So I am taking the clauses by groups

Mr. President: Clauses 2—5

Sardar Sampuran Singh (West Punjab Sikh) I have to say something about the definition. According to this Bill to allow the tribal people the same facilities as the natives of this land. They are not considered foreigners here though we have no facilities for going to their land. As a matter of fact they enter in northern India in large numbers in winter and compete with labour in this part of India and it is a very unhealthy competition. They lower the rate of wages. They should not be allowed to enjoy that privilege. Secondly, clause 4 of section 2 should be removed from the Bill altogether. They are also responsible for committing a very large number of offences in Northern India during the winter. They kidnap small children and they are a great nuisance to this part of the country and they should not be given the privilege of being considered as natives of this country.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel. The Honourable Member wants the deletion of clause 4 of section 2, "is not a native of the Tribal areas". There are certain tribal areas inside India also and roundabout the borders of our country. It is very difficult to prevent inter-communication and perhaps it is unwise to prevent at this stage intercommunication, it would raise a wider and more complicated problem at this stage and therefore we have kept the definition as it was because it is more likely to create complications than confer advantages.

In the case of tribal people, if they are of a dangerous character, there are regulations to deal with them, there are the tribal regulations and other laws there and it is not proper to deal with this question at this stage. All that I can say is that the clause should be maintained.

Mr. President: The question is

"That clauses 2 to 5 stand part of the Bill"

The motion was adopted

Clauses 2 to 5 were added to the Bill

Mr. President: Clause 6

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: There is one amendment with regard to clause 6 and that is with regard to penalty. Now I invite the attention of the House to section 14 of the Bill which provides that if any person contravenes the provisions of this Act or any order made thereunder, or any direction given in pursuance of this Act, or such order, he will be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to five years and shall also be liable to fine, etc. So the provision for punishment is amply provided for and if it is the intention that the punishment should be not so severe, then it is a discretionary clause and the discretion should be left to the trying Court. Therefore I think the amendment is unnecessary and I hope it will be withdrawn.

Mr. President: He has not moved it yet

Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava: In view of what has been said by the Honourable the Member in charge, I feel that I should withdraw.

Mr. President: The position is whether the Honourable Member should be given permission to move. But no permission has been given. I only want to give the Honourable Member a chance of having his say in respect to clause 6, and not for the purpose of moving his amendment.

Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, clause 6 only refers to a sort of duty sought to be imposed upon the master of a vessel or the pilot of an aircraft. It puts a liability on the master of a vessel or the pilot of an aircraft to furnish certain information to certain officials who may be subsequently specified by particular orders. This duty is of such a nature that it cannot be said that it is a very great burden upon them and this duty even if not performed is not such as will endanger the safety of the state or in any way endanger the safety of any other person. It may be for purely statistical reasons, so that the Government may know what persons are coming in or going out of the country. I may, with your permission, Sir, point out that similar duties are cast by sections 44 and 45 of the Cr P C upon the members of the public. Those duties are much more cumbersome and at the same time they involve certain consequences to the public. Under Section 44 of the Cr P C if any member of the public becomes aware of the intention of any person to commit an offence under Section 121 (a), 302, 396, 436, 457 and many other sections, it is his duty to inform the police that such and such a person or persons have such and such intention and are about to commit such and such an offence. Similarly in Section 45 of the Cr P C the headman of a village or the village accountant is bound under law to inform the authorities about the commission of certain offences which may have taken place or are likely to take place. If those men on whom this duty has been imposed by law do not perform that duty or fail to give the information, Section 76 of the Cr P C says that they are liable for the offence to simple imprisonment for one month. My humble submission is that section 6 and section 13 (which also provides in sub-clause 3 that the master of a vessel or the pilot of an aircraft will be liable for certain offences) relate to two different aspects of the liabilities of the carriers. The offence mentioned in Section 13 is much more serious because in that case the man who brings in a foreigner knows that the foreigner is contravening a certain provision of the law and therefore he is certainly guilty of abetment whereas under sections 6 and 7 the only guilt imputed to him is one of negligence. He does not know whether he is innocent or guilty. He does not know anything about the foreigner. The only duty that is cast upon him is to inform the authorities. If he is guilty of an offence it is a very minor one and it is not such as to deserve a punishment of five years imprisonment. It is like using a sledge hammer to kill a gnat. You will find by that in Bentham's Theory of Legislation (Rule 8) it is said that if the offences are of a similar nature, but differing in degree, the punishment should not be the same for all. I know that the court is quite competent to award any punishment that it pleases. All the same it is the duty of the legislature to provide suitable punishments for particular offences. If the same punishment is awarded to offences similar in character but differing in degree, the smaller offence being awarded the same punishment as the bigger offence, the offender would preferably commit the bigger offence. I find that in the bills that have come before us yesterday and today the punishment provided is the same for all offences. As the verse goes

Take Ser Bhi ji, tale Ser Ahaya

(Same price for all kinds of food)

These offences under sections 6 and 7 do not involve any moral turpitude. If it goes to a court of law the punishment for an offence of this nature would be imprisonment of six months to one year or a fine. My submission is that the rules of Jurisprudence demand that you must provide proper punishment for appropriate offences. With your permission let me quote from the book on the Theory of Legislation, by Bentham a small couplet

"Let's have a rule

Which deals to crimes an equal punishment,

Nor tortures with the horrid lash for faults,

Worthy a birchen twig

If the keeper of a hotel or a person owning a sarai does not inform the authorities, the authorities have other ways and means to find out what they want. They have got their secret police. The man's only fault lies in not maintaining a register. Therefore my submission is that if proper punishments are not provided for proper offences the person committing the offence generally and the public generally will have very little respect for the law courts nor confidence in the legislature

This is not a piece of legislation which would last for only one year after the war but it is a permanent piece of legislation and therefore our duty is that we should define the offences rightly and at the same time we should provide the punishment properly. It is not my intention to say that the provisions of Section 6 are not necessary. I want to submit to the House that the punishment prescribed is too disproportionate for the offence with which section 6 and 7 deal.

Mr. President: The question is

"That clause 6 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 6 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 7 to 12 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President: Clause 13.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I think the original clause is more happily worded than the amendment proposed in this case, the amendment makes the thing unworkable and impracticable. Any way, I cannot appreciate the amendment at all and I hope the Honourable Member who has given notice of it will not move it.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions Muhammadan Rural): On a point of order, Sir, the amendment has not been moved yet.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member is speaking on the clause and not on the amendment.

Fundit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I respectfully beg to submit for your consideration that this clause 3 of section 13 is of such a general and wide nature that one fails to find the reason for it. If the master of vessel or the pilot of an aircraft is sent to jail for five years, he must know what he is guilty of. According to clause 3 of section 13 the only offence that he is guilty of is bringing a person into India or making it possible for a person to leave British India. The language of the clause is "The master of any vessel or the pilot of any aircraft as the case may be, by means of which any foreigner enters or leaves British India in contravention of any order made under, or direction given in pursuance of section 3 shall— be deemed to have contravened the Act."

What will be the position if the master of the vessel or the pilot of the aircraft does not know that he is carrying a person who has gone against the law. The mere fact that he is carrying a person who has contravened the law should not make him liable to punishment. My humble submission is that it is the duty of the prosecution in every case to prove that the master of the vessel or the pilot of the aircraft knew or had reason to believe that he is carrying a person who has contravened the law. In the absence of such a provision, you are only holding an innocent man to be guilty. The master of the vessel himself may not know who is travelling specially in view of the definition given in Section 6, and in the absence of such knowledge, the mere fact that he is the master of the vessel or the pilot of the aircraft should not make him liable to punishment. All the ingredients which go to constitute the offence will not be proved against him. I do not think it was the intention of the gentleman who drafted the law that such innocent men should be made liable to punishment. Moreover I fail to see how a person can exercise diligence to prevent such a person travelling. He does not know as a matter of fact that contravention has taken place or is about to take place. Therefore my humble submission is that many innocent men will come under the mischief of this provision.

It is again wrong to put the burden on the accused. It must be proved by the prosecution that the master of the vessel was in a position to prevent such a contravention. The mere possession of a certain knowledge does not make a man guilty. It is the intention and the act combined that constitute the offence.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

My humble submission is that the clause as worded may bring within its mischief innocent men, unless the Honourable the Home Member suitably amends the wording

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) With all respect to my friend Mr. Bhargava, I do not agree with him. The rules of evidence are intended to bring the real offenders to book and also to see that an innocent person is not unnecessarily charged. If a man travels in a vessel, who else is in a position to know about that man than the master of the vessel himself, who carries him in his vessel. It is his duty to enquire whether the man whom he carries has committed a murder or offended against any of the rules and regulations which are in force for the safety of the community. It is the duty of the legislature to see that the pilot of an aircraft does not carry a person who has contravened any of the provisions of the law in force. Suppose a man travels without a ticket. Is it not the duty of the conductor to see that a man who travels in a public conveyance has a ticket or a proper passport. The burden is rightly on that man to show that the passenger is a bona fide one. My Honourable friend knows very well that if a person is in possession of a stolen watch it is his business to explain to the satisfaction of the authorities that he came into its possession in a rightful manner. I say the provision is not novel or contrary to the principles of jurisprudence. Likewise it is the duty of a hotel keeper to see that he does not harbour a man who has offended or is about to offend against the law. I would therefore oppose any amendment of the kind suggested by my friend Mr. Bhargava.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad : I am not a lawyer and I cannot argue in the manner of the two speakers who have preceded me. I like one point to be made clear. Suppose there is a stowaway about whom nobody knows. Will the master of the boat be liable for the travelling of this stowaway?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel : If he proves that he has exercised due diligence, then he is free.

Mr. President : The object is to tighten up diligence. The question is "That clause 13 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 13 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Clause 14.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : It is my turn to request the Honourable the Home Member to see whether some change in the wording in this clause is called for. The expression used here is 'punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to five years and shall also be liable to fine'. My Honourable friend Mr. Bhargava referred to this and said that it does not make any difference between one kind of offence and another kind of offence. Even a small irregularity can be punished by 5 years. Five years is the maximum period that is prescribed and it cannot be said that the same kind of punishment can be given with respect to all kinds of offences irrespective of their seriousness. I, therefore, suggest that instead of the word 'shall' the word 'may' be substituted. It will give sufficient discretion to the Judge to impose some fine in addition to the imprisonment or he may not impose any fine at all. I am sorry I did not table any amendment to this effect, but if the Honourable Mover himself finds that sufficient latitude may be given, I would request him to accept it.

Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava : In all the offences that are mentioned in the Indian Penal Code the words always are "shall also be liable to fine". You will not find in any section of the Indian Penal Code the word "may". The phrase "shall also be liable to fine" means that he is liable to be fined. It is not obligatory on any Judge to fine him. Therefore, so far as the liability to fine is concerned, the words 'shall' and 'may' make no difference whatsoever.

Mr. President : The only alternative perhaps will be "shall be liable to imprisonment for 5 years or to fine or to both".

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: In this clause what is compulsory is imprisonment. These commercial exploiters do not care for a fine of Rs 50 or of Rs 1,000. That is not the real object of this clause. But in case where there is a heavy fine to be imposed, the latitude is given. But the real object is a deterrent punishment. If you say 'or fine', it may mean that the Magistrate will let them go with a fine of Rs 5 and that will be useless. Therefore, this provision is deliberately put there.

Mr. President: The question is

"That clause 14 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 14 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 15 to 17 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, I move

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

SPECIAL TRIBUNALS (SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS) BILL

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal (Law Member) Sir, I move

"That the Bill to make certain provisions in relation to sentences and orders passed by Special Tribunals constituted under the Criminal Law Amendment Ordinance, 1943, on such Tribunals ceasing to function, be taken into consideration."

The Bill is very simple. It is intended to replace the Special Tribunals (Supplementary Provisions) Ordinance No 23 of 1946. The Criminal Law Amendment Ordinance No 29 of 1943 provided for the constitution of Special Tribunals for the trial of specified cases allocated to them by the Central Government. Two of these Tribunals ceased to function on 1st of October 1946. As questions were bound to arise as to the courts which should be considered competent to succeed those tribunals for the purposes of the Criminal Procedure Code such as directing execution of sentences and receiving orders from the High Court on appeal or revision, it was considered necessary to make express statutory provisions for the determination of such questions before these Special Tribunals ceased to exist. As the Central Legislature was not then in session, the necessary provisions were enacted by the promulgation of an Ordinance, namely, the Special Tribunals (Supplementary Provisions) Ordinance, No 23 of 1946. As I have stated before this Bill is intended to replace that Ordinance. It seeks to make provisions where any special tribunal ceases to function that the sentences and orders passed by the Special Tribunals should be deemed to have been passed by the Court of Session within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offences charged in the case were committed. If there may be more than one Court of Session, then by such Court as the High Court may determine.

This Bill also repeals the Special Tribunals (Supplementary Provisions) Ordinance, 1946. It is very simple, as I have stated. Some apprehension might arise in the minds of some of my Honourable friends as to the functions that were entrusted to those Special Tribunals. I would like to make it clear that certain categories of offences were allotted to those Special Tribunals for trial. They had nothing to do with political offences. Certain offences that were committed by high officials, such as, corruption, bribery, embezzlement and misappropriation of money were allotted for trial by these courts. As one of my Honourable friends pointed out to me, I can tell him that no political prisoners were either tried or convicted by these special tribunals. I would again like to make it clear that no political offences were tried by these tribunals. I commend my motion for the acceptance of the House and I hope Honourable Members will agree with me that this Bill should be passed without much debate.

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That the Bill to make certain provisions in relation to sentences and orders passed by Special Tribunals constituted under the Criminal Law Amendment Ordinance, 1943, on such Tribunals ceasing to function, be taken into consideration."

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Clintoo Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, somehow, I am not able to reconcile myself to the passing of this Bill, whoever might be the target of attack under this Bill. It is said that this Bill does not cover political offences, but offences committed by public servants in the discharge of their duty, such as bribery etc., sections 161 to 165 etc. But ordinary courts were not allowed jurisdiction and when cases were launched before ordinary courts, after Special Tribunals came into existence those cases were transferred to those Special Tribunals. You will see from the constitution of the Special Tribunal and the manner in which the Special Tribunals disposed of cases, whoever might be the accused, that we ought to make it clear to anybody who is charged with the offence that the law is equitable and just, that the dishonest people shall be punished that merely in the hurry of the war, no man shall be convicted unless he is given a fair opportunity to defend himself at the trial. I am trying to proceed on that principle. Now, kindly refer to clause 4 of the Ordinance which this Special Act is trying to revive or restore in a degree. The Special Tribunal is to consist of three members of whom one shall be an officer of His Majesty's forces. I take very serious exception to an officer of His Majesty's forces being one of the Judges, whatever might be his other qualification, to decide upon cases of misappropriation by high public servants, misappropriation or corruption. Why should a member of the Forces be chosen for that purpose? That is my first objection with regard to the composition of this tribunal. Then as regards powers of appeal, clause 7 of the Ordinance says that there shall be no appeal from any order or sentence of a Special Tribunal.

Sir George Spence (Secretary Legislative Department) My Honourable friend is quoting from the Ordinance as originally promulgated in 1943. It was subsequently amended in both respects to which he is referring and in particular section 7 was amended so as to render all the ordinary appellate revisional jurisdiction of the High Court exercisable.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I would ask the Honourable Member who has signed this Bill to refer to the Statement of Objects and Reasons whether he has referred to any amendment at all there. It simply says —

"The Criminal Law Amendment Ordinance 1943 (XXIX of 1943) provided for the constitution of Special Tribunals for the trial of specified cases allotted to them by the Central Government."

Sir George Spence: The reference to the Criminal Law Amendment Ordinance means the Ordinance as amended up to the date when the Statement of Objects and Reasons was signed.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: He has not even placed a copy in the library and does my Honourable friend expect me to carry all these in my brain or carry all these books with me? He must make the Statement of Objects and Reasons self contained. Assuming that what he says is a fact, I would ask the Honourable the Law Member that now that there is a change of Government to review all these cases and find out whether, in particular cases persons have been judged wrongly or not. Otherwise there is no meaning in delegating the powers to Special Tribunals and continuing the same kind of tragedy to which these persons have been exposed. A number of persons are noted in the Schedule, I do not know how many have been convicted for whom Special Tribunals were constituted. One is in Calcutta, and the other is at Lahore. A list of 14 persons were put up before Lahore Tribunal and 20 before the Calcutta tribunal I would urge upon the Honourable Member that before he wants to continue the Special Tribunal by vesting that jurisdiction in sessions courts to make sure that these convictions are just and proper and to see to it that the sessions courts exercise the jurisdiction vested in them by removing these conviction or vacating them and delegate the powers of special tribunal to sessions courts only with respect to other persons in other cases

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: My Honourable friend has committed one initial mistake. This Bill does not propose to set up any Special Tribunal.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Continuing

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: Not at all. Two Special Tribunals one at Lucknow and the other at Amraoti have ceased to function. They have disposed of all cases allotted to them. The sentences and orders passed by those Special Tribunals have got to be executed by some courts. There was no provision in those special tribunals ordinances and no provision anywhere in the criminal procedure code which enabled the execution of sentences. Hence certain enactments is necessary to provide for the successor of those two special tribunals which will execute those orders and sentences passed by the Special Tribunals. Now this Bill intends to give power or appoint as then successor the session court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offences charged in the case were committed. Therefore I feel that at this stage there is nothing to be criticised. What was done was done at the time of the passing or the promulgation of these Ordinances, namely Ordinance XXIX of 1943. Now, these Special Tribunals passed certain sentences and orders and it is fair and reasonable that some courts should execute those orders and sentences.

Sreejot Ronini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam Valley, Non-Muhammadan) I wish to know whether there will be any new trials under the Special Tribunal. Now my Honourable friend said in the course of his preliminary remarks that out of five or so many tribunals only two have become defunct and the rest are still functioning.

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: Seven Special Tribunals were constituted and five are still functioning. Part of the provisions of these Special Tribunals come under the provincial jurisdiction namely the constitution and organisation of courts. So the respective provinces were asked to pass enactments for the continuance of these special tribunals. One such Act has been passed by the Bengal legislature and another by the Bombay legislature and for the Punjab I think the legislature is not in session and an Ordinance has been promulgated there for the continuance of the Special Tribunals. The cases which were allotted to these Special Tribunals shall only be tried by those Special Tribunals. I think there is nothing else for me to explain or add and I hope the Bill will be taken into consideration.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, I wish to say a word of personal explanation. I have not misunderstood my Honourable friend. I only wanted that the jurisdiction of Special Tribunals is not continued in the sessions court, and my object is, that the convictions of these Special Tribunals shall lapse. There will be no court which will execute these in cases where in the special tribunals there was a glaring breach of justice. That is what I wanted. I do not want these sentences to be executed. If this Act does not

4 P M clothe the sessions courts with the powers of the special tribunals no court can execute these sentences. It is because I am offended with these Special Tribunals which were not constituted properly whose judgment I do not approve of. That is my point; I did not misunderstand him.

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: On this point I should like to make it clear that section 7 of the Criminal Law Amendment Ordinance of 1943 provided for appeals to the High Court. The only restriction was that no transfer of cases allotted to these Special Tribunals was allowed by any court. But the aggrieved or convicted persons were entitled to prefer an appeal to the High Court. Therefore I think my Honourable friend shall have no objection in the matter.

Mr. President: I do not know whether it will be proper on my part to state to the House, the difficulties which I was feeling about this. I do not know what happens to the pending cases before the tribunals about the time they cease because clause 3 deals with sentences or orders passed. There may be neither sentences nor orders about the time the tribunals cease to exist. I was just considering it from that point of view and trying to gain some light myself, being a lawyer I felt interested in this discussion. It is not merely a question of executing sentences or orders but of providing for succession to a particular court which ceases to exist. If that is the object, it would not present much difficulty.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal (Presidency Division Non-Muhammadian Rural) Sir, since you have been good enough to raise this question it is rather necessary that this matter should be discussed in order to make the whole question clear. As you were looking at the matter I was also looking at it from a different point of view exactly for the same purpose, because, if the sessions court is meant to be the successor to the tribunal this law as it is, will defeat its purpose. On the other hand it may be contended, as presumably the Law Member meant to contend, that this Bill covers only specified cases, namely, there have been final orders by the special tribunals, these are pending before the High Court, during the pendency of these cases the special tribunals ceased to exist, and therefore the sentence as originally passed by the special tribunal which is confirmed by the High Court stands, or the sentence is modified or changed to some other form and the question of execution of that sentence remains the only question at that time. If the Bill is so narrow as that it is certainly clear and there is nothing to object to. But, as you have hinted, if the sessions court is meant really to be the successor for all practical purposes of administration of justice, I submit this Bill will carry us into the wilderness.

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: That is not the object of this Bill.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What will happen if instead of modifying the High Court thinks fit to order a retrial? Under what rule and regulation is the sessions court a successor, with all the inconveniences and limitations made under the original Ordinance? Or will it be allowed to proceed under the Criminal Procedure Code?

Mr. President: Before this controversy goes on, I may point out that the wording seems to be clear in the direction of succession.

"When any Special Tribunal ceases to function, the sentences or orders passed by it in any case shall, for the purposes of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, applicable in respect of those sentences or orders, be deemed to have been passed by the Court of Session", etc.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Is this order means an order of adjournment sine die by an order of the Special Tribunal?

Mr. President: That is an order which shall be deemed to have been passed by the Court of Session "within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offences charged in the case are alleged to have taken place." Then of course the procedure in respect of orders of the sessions court will be followed. That is what I understood. Therefore, I put the question as to what is to happen to pending cases because the clause refers to "sentences or orders passed".

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: There are no pending cases before these tribunals.

Mr. President: I did not know the facts, I was merely trying to know the scope of the legislation from the wording

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division Muhammadan Rural)
There is another difficulty that Mr Ayyangar pointed out. Supposing the High Court orders a retrial and this court ceases to function who will take it up?

Mr. President: That is the sessions court. However, we will leave the matter of interpretation to the courts if and when such cases arise.

The question is

"That the Bill to make certain provisions in relation to sentences and orders passed by Special Tribunals constituted under the Criminal Law Amendment Ordinance, 1943, on such Tribunals ceasing to function, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President: The question is

"That clauses 2 to 4 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 4 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal: Sir, I move

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

MOTOR VEHICLES (SECOND AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Mr. M Asaf Ali (Member for Railways and Transport):
Sir, I move

"That the Bill further to amend the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 (Second Amendment) be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal, Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Puri, Mr. V. V. Gadgil, Pandit Ishwar Das Bhargava, Sri N. Narayanamurthi, Mr. Gaur Shankar Saran Singh, Sri Satyapriya Banerjee, Mr. M. A. F. Hirtzel, Mr. R. C. Morris, Rai Bahadur D. M. Bhattacharya, Sardar Bahadur Captain Sardar Harendra Singh, Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan, Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang, Mr. Muhammad Nauman, Shri Mohan Lal Saksena, Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar and the Mover with instructions to report on the opening day of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

As the House remembers, the Motor Vehicles Act was passed in 1939 and it was not until the last session that an amending Bill was brought up and was referred to a Select Committee.

[At this stage Mr. President vacated the chair which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Khan Mohammed Yamin Khan).]

At that time Chapter VIII of the Motor Vehicles Act had not been brought into force. It came into force from the 1st of July 1946, and since then we have discovered that there is a lacuna in Chapter VIII, the lacuna being, want of reciprocity with the States. Compulsory insurance of motor vehicles in British India was enforced, but the States had no reciprocal arrangement with us, and were free to do exactly as they liked. Now that 40 states have expressed their intention to pass parallel legislation so that insurance policies that may be taken out in British India, if this Bill is passed, will be valid in the reciprocating States and vice versa, it has become necessary to pass this measure. Of course I must also mention the fact that we have taken this occasion to introduce one or two minor amendments which will be found in the Bill. I am sure Honourable Members have already read the Statement of Objects and Reasons and they have also looked [Mr M Asaf Ali] at the notes on clauses, and it is not necessary for me to inflict at the tag end of the day a long speech on the House. Moreover this measure is wholly non-controversial. In any case it is being referred to the very Select Committee which is now considering or which will be considering the earlier amending measure.

There is only one change. The Honourable the Law Member happens to be different today, and I happen to be a different person. Otherwise all the other members are exactly the same. There should be no controversy about it, and I hope the House will agree to my motion. Sir, I move

Mr. Deputy President: Motion moved

That the Bill (to amend the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939) (Second Amendment) be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr Jogendra Nath Mandal, Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Pahlwal, Sjt N V Gidgil, Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, Sri N Narayanaiah, Mr Gaur Shankar Saran Singh, Sri Sityapiya Banerjee, Mr M A F Hitzel, Mr R C Morris, Mr Puhidu D M Bhattacharya, Sardar Bahadur Captain Sardar Harendra Singh Khun Mohammad Yamin Khun, Mr Siddiq Ali Khan Syed (Hulum Bhik Nairang, Mr Muhammad Nauman Shai Moh n Lal Saksena, Sri M Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, and the Mover, with instructions to report on the opening day of the next session, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammudin Rural) May I ask if the Honourable Member has made himself a member of the other Select Committee also?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I am a member.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: There is no motion moved to the effect that you should be on that Select Committee. The previous Railway Member was on that Committee and the present Railway Member cannot ipso facto step into his place.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I am not quite sure. As a matter of fact when the Select Committee met last time I was there and no objection was raised.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: We cannot ask the Honourable Member to walk about.

Sri Mohan Lal Saksena (Lucknow Division Non-Muhammadian Rural) I think there should be a formal motion about this.

Sir George Spence (Secretary, Legislative Department) May I refer to Standing Order 40, which provides, that

The Member of the Government to whose department the Bill relates—(in this case the Honourable Mr Asaf Ali)—the member who introduced the Bill and the Law Member of the Governor General's Executive Council, if he is a member of the Assembly, shall be members of every Select Committee, and it shall not be necessary to include their names in any motion for appointment of such a Committee.

Mr. Deputy President: It was not necessary to include the names of the Law Member and the Mover, that is redundant.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Now that this Bill refers to Chapter VIII of the Motor Vehicles Bill can both of them be discussed together and one report of the Select Committee be issued for both.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: It is perfectly obvious that both these amending measures will be considered by the same Select Committee and they will submit one report on both.

Mr. Deputy President: We cannot discuss what procedure the Committee will adopt. What is provided here is that the report should be made on the opening day of the next session and the other Committee has to report on the same day too.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haid Ishaq Feth (West Coast and Nilgiris Muhammadan) May I ask the Honourable Member to enlighten me on the question of whether these two Bills are to be considered at one and the same time by the same Select Committee?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I am perfectly certain that my Honourable friend knows the entire procedure from end to end. Does he mean to suggest that both these measures will be considered at the same time? It is quite obvious that both the amending measures will be taken up item by item. It is open to the Committee to take up this item first or the other one, and in any case after having considered both the amending measures, normally I should expect them to submit one report rather than two.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: You require permission of the House for that.

Mr. M. A. F. Hirtzel (Bengal European): Sir, I do not want to take up the time of the House unduly, but there is one point. As I understand it, Section 95 of the Act is open to amendment and we on this side of the House should like to move an amendment in the Select Committee on Section 95 sub-section 3. The Motor Vehicles Act, as we all know, is a Trojan horse in as much as it professes to deal with motor vehicles, but under that cover it deals also with transport to an ever-increasing extent. In addition in certain sections it also deals with what might be regarded as labour items. This particular amendment which we propose to move is in that connection, and I do not propose to discuss the merits, but I should like to know from the Honourable the Transport Member that it will be open to us to move that amendment in the Select Committee.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member ought to know that once this motion is carried, then the House is committed to the principle underlying the Bill and no amendment which violates that principle can be moved. It is for the Honourable Member to see whether he will be in order or not and that will be decided by the Chairman of the Committee.

The question is

"That the Bill further to amend the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 (Second Amendment) be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal, Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Palwal, Sjt N. V. Gidgil, Pandit Hukam Das Bhargava, Sri N. Narayanamurthi, Mr. Gauri Shankar Saran Singh, Sree Satyapriya Banerjee, Mr. M. A. F. Hirtzel, Mr. R. C. Morris, Rai Bahadur D. M. Bhattacharya, Sardar Bahadur Captain Sardar Hariendra Singh, Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan, Syed Ghulam Bluk Nuriang, Mr. Muhammad Nauman Shri Mohan Lal Sak-sena, Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar and the Mover, with instructions to report on the opening day of the next session, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

BANKING COMPANIES (RESTRICTION OF BRANCHES) BILL

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan (Finance Member): Sir, I beg to move

"That the Bill to restrict the opening and removal of Branches by banking companies be taken into consideration."

As the Honourable Members must have noticed from the aims and objects of the Bill, it is intended to enact one section of the Banking Companies Bill and that section, Sir, is clause 18(6). In recent times, Mr. Deputy President, there has been a rapid increase in branches of various banks in the country. I would like to give the House some figures of the increase that has taken place during the last few years. In 1938 the banking offices in India were only 1,471. Their number increased to 2,710 at the end of 1942, and to 3,418 at the end of 1943, and to 4,550 at the end of 1944, and to 5,266 at the end of 1945. Now, Sir, the Honourable Members will notice that there has been a very great increase in the number of branches of the various banks that have been opened in recent times. We would think that an increase in numbers should be welcome, and I think it is something which we should welcome. But unfortunately, the increase has not been on right lines. For instance, nearly one-third of the total number of Branches of scheduled banks at the end of 1945 were owned by banks which were floated during the war or which were included in the second schedule during this period. Not only that, but these Branches have been concentrated in a few bigger towns, with the result that while the number has increased, the facilities for banking have not increased proportionately, and it has been noticed that in larger towns the number has been beyond proportion. This has not helped in increasing banking business. It has only helped in diverting business from one branch to another.

Now, Sir, it has led to a number of difficulties and undesirable practice. To get business from other branches which were already in existence, new terms of interest and better terms of interest have been offered by the smaller banks who could not compete with other banks on account of their well-established past and their financial resources, with the result that these small banks by offering a larger rate of interest have to incur a greater expenditure and they can only get back this money by making loans on bigger rates of interest. Then management charges have also been greater and the result has been that it has not benefitted those small banks and by manipulations they have shown profits whereas they have in fact not made any profits. Now, Sir, as I have already said the opening of these new branches in towns has not helped in tapping new banking channels. But it has only meant directing business from one Branch to another.

Then Sir, there is another undesirable practice that has sprung up. Some of these small banks have opened branches in provinces far away from their headquarters and on account of the credulity of the people there they have succeeded in securing deposits which they have remitted to their head offices, with the result that in a number of cases the branches in far-flung provinces have not been able to meet their obligations and a number of cases have come to the notice of the Government that the depositors have been refused payment, and consequently they have had to suffer a great loss.

Then Sir, banking, as you know, is not in such an advanced stage in India as it is in some other parts of the world, and we have not got sufficient trained personnel for this specialized subject in the country, with the result that untrained men have been employed and it has meant great deterioration in the management of the banking business in India. Sir, in other countries, the Governments have legal powers to regulate and control the opening of new Branches and the object of this Bill is to vest the Reserve Bank with special powers to regulate the opening of new branches of banks throughout the country. While the Reserve Bank is considering a case for opening a new branch, they would examine the financial position of the bank, they would examine the requirements of the locality where a branch is intended to be opened, they would examine the management of the concern, and they would, before permission is given to open a new branch, make certain that it would be in the interests of the banking business of the country as well as in the interests of the depositors. Where the Reserve Bank finds that it is in the interests of the financial position and financial stability of the country to stop the opening of new branches they would take proper action and would not allow any new branches to be opened.

Sir, as you are aware, the Banking Companies Bill was referred to a Select Committee and the Select Committee on this Bill has not yet started functioning. It will be sometime before the Banking Companies Bill becomes law but in the meantime a number of banking concerns are going ahead with opening branches, so that later on they may escape from the clause to which I referred at the beginning of my speech and which is incorporated in the Banking Companies Bill. It is intended that this should be stopped immediately and we cannot afford to wait till such time as the Banking Companies Bill becomes law. I hope the Honourable Members of this House will agree with me that it is absolutely necessary that we should control and have a proper check on the opening of new branches of banks not only in the interest of banking business in this country but also in the interest of depositors. There are great possibilities for banking business in India. There are in fact no banks in the rural areas or in smaller towns and we should make every effort to see that branches are opened in those areas instead of concentrating them only in larger cities, which does not help either to get any more business or get any more banking facilities but only helps to create more branches and consequently less business for each bank. Sir, I commend this motion for the consideration of this Honourable House

"That the Bill to restrict the opening and removal of Branches by banking companies be taken into consideration"

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena (Lucknow Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, on a point of information I would like to know how many branches have been opened since the introduction of the Bill last Budget Session so that we may be in a position to know as to whether this Bill is necessary at this stage

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I will reply in my closing speech

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: If we have the information now that would save a lot of speeches on these amendments

Mr. Deputy President. The Honourable Member mentioned some figures as to what we had sometime ago and what we have now

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: I want to know the figures since the introduction of this Bill

Mr. Deputy President: There are amendments and Mr. Jaffer who has a motion for circulation is not here. Then there is one by Mr. Sanval

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanval (Presidency Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, I beg to move

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal Sir Cowajee Jehangir, Mr. K. G. Ambegolkar, Mr. Ram Nath, Mr. M. A. F. Hirtzel Mr. Geoffrey W. Tyson, Khan Mohammad Yamin Khari, Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon Mr. Mohd. M. Killeddar, Mr. Manu Subedar, Shri Mohan Lal Saksena, Sri M. Ananthasaynam Ayyangar, Mr. P. B. Gole, Sri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar Sri Satya Narayan Sinha, Sardar Mangal Singh, and the Member with instructions to report by the 31st December, 1946 and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five"

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions Muhammadan Rural) Why not the whole House?

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanval: I should welcome such an amendment

Sir, after the Honourable Member for Railways and War Transport who referred his second Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill to a Select Committee which is identical with the Select Committee to which the other Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Bill was referred, I am surprised that the Government is not pursuing the same policy in the matter of this Bill also. I think that this motion which has been moved by the Honourable the Finance Member is objectionable on three grounds. The first ground is that it is piecemeal legislation, the second ground is haste and the third ground is positive (I hope it is not intentional) discourtesy to the Select Committee to which the bigger Banking Companies (Amendment) Bill has already been referred.

Sir, banks have been growing in the last few years either for good or for evil or for both.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: It cannot be for both

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanval: and it was desired and expected from various quarters that there should be a consolidating Bill and it was a very welcome measure when during the last budget session the Finance Member introduced the Bill and it was referred to a Select Committee. If you would be good enough to refer to the Statement of Objects and Reasons, to which the Honourable the Finance Member himself referred, the frank object is to put into immediate operation clause 18 of the earlier and the bigger Bill. May I enquire why a portion only of that Bill has been sliced out and why this Bill is proposed to be rushed down the throat of the legislature in this manner?

Mr. Deputy President: The arguments have been given

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: I hope to meet those arguments. The Honourable the Finance Member says that the number of branches was increasing by leaps and bounds and he has given figures up to 1945. When the earlier Bill was referred to the Select Committee it was sometime in March or April, 1946. The Government of that time and the then Finance Member had before them these figures of the rapidly increasing number of banks and their branches up to 1945 and the number was 5,266. We can take it that at that time it was not considered necessary for the then Finance Member or the then Government to hustle any portion of this Bill through the House. Therefore it would be pertinent to make an enquiry of the Honourable the Finance Member as to when the Government considered the desirability of putting a stop to this mounting march of banks and their branches. Certainly not in April, 1946. Then the position boils down to this that there must have been some further rapid, unwelcome and undesirable increase in the number after April 1946. That would be a more relevant and pertinent information. My friend Mr. Saksena put the real and pointed question when he stood up to make an enquiry of the Honourable Member as to how many branches or banks have cropped up after the last Bill was referred to the Select Committee. That is the crux of the matter and the Honourable the Finance Member's whole case is that all these developments are fraught with danger to the banking structure of the country. The Government's principal case seems to be that after the 1946 Bill was referred to the Select Committee the bankers and financiers dealing with banks are manipulating things in such a way as to defeat the amending measure which was before the Select Committee at that time. If the Finance Member has got his information that after April, 1946 and before today any number of branches have been opened, then of course he will use that information and will convince us as to why during this interim period such an emergent and hasty legislation has been necessary. I have got my information and I propose humbly to convey that information to the Finance Member. Some new branches have been opened but these are not really new branches. They are the commitments of earlier times. For example in December 1945 there may have been a number like 5,266 but at that time some contemplated branches could not be opened on account of certain difficulties. Investments were however made, establishments were provided for and expenses were gone through. In point of time, they came into existence after December 1945 but actually there were prior commitments. Being a member of the Select Committee I am trying to get facts so that we may use them. My information is that between April, 1946 and today not more than two or three branches have been opened all over the country.

Mr. Mann Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce) The number must be 200.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Out of this 200, the bulk of the branches were the commitments of previous times. As a matter of fact, houses were taken, furniture purchased and officers were appointed. Only on account of certain difficulties or for purposes of certain formal opening ceremonies, they could not be opened earlier. The other Select Committee has already sat on the 15th April, 1946 and this matter and other matters are already before that Select Committee. On account of certain political exigencies, when bigger things were on the anvil and Simla was the scene of various other important matters, this Select Committee could not be called but it has been called again and we have got notice that this Select Committee is going to sit on the 21st November and it is expected to sit up to the 7th December, 1946. What useful purpose will be served by withdrawing this from the Select Committee and hustling this piece of legislation through the House. What will be the effect of this legislation. The Finance Member has given figures that from 1938 to 1945 there has been a very big increase but is this Bill going to touch the fringe of those banks and their branches which have already their existence before. Certainly not. What is the point in bringing a legislative measure which will not affect the sinners but which will affect only new enterprises Towards the beginning there may have been the advantages of inflation but these parties and banks and branches who already had derived benefit of inflation by foul means more than by fair, they will get double protection, namely, the protection of the inflation which they have already got and the protection of this legislative measure which will not axe even a part of their existence but will axe only new enterprises which may be more honest and more solid in their aspirations

What is the point in suddenly waking up to the realities of the situation and trying to hurry through a legislation which will prejudicially affect new and honest enterprises Today the position is different Those parties and branches got the advantage of inflation and today when branches will be opened they will be opened with reference to the present context of things If banks are really eager to open their branches today they will certainly be more cautious because after all they are business men They are not going to have their business expanded only to spit the law or other They will proceed according to the fundamental principles of self-interest They will automatically be anxious today and it is extremely unfortunate that the Finance Member has stated that they are forestalling These banks are not forestalling anything They are only carrying on their growth in the normal way and if any party is guilty of forestalling, if I may say so without any disrespect to the Government or the Honourable the Finance Member, this Bill is guilty of forestalling the considerations which will be before the Select Committee which is going to consider the bigger Bill This Bill cannot be considered apart from the other provisions of the bigger Bill We have to consider this along with clause 11 of that Bill and with other things It is a controversial question whether banks should have rapid marches or not Much can be said on either side Therefore things cannot be anticipated or prejudged

As I was submitting, this Bill will have the effect of tightening up the growth of honest and deserving enterprises The effect will be that big banks which have already spread the tentacles of their activities all over the country, they will not only come to stay but they will have the additional advantage of being relieved of any healthy competition that may be offered by new enterprises Sir here again the whole thing boils down to the question of Tata, Dalmias and Birlas etc According to Newtonian law all matters gravitate towards the earth and according to the law of administration of this country, whatever is done will inure to the benefit of certain big banking concerns only, certain big banking enterprises only and all the small banking concerns will be washed out All the advantages will be enjoyed only by the big magnates who have already got a sure footing and stronghold not only in one province but practically in all the important cities of the country As time goes on these big organisations will have free field and they will be relieved of all healthy competition that might be offered by new enterprises Therefore on principle also that is bad Sir the Honourable the Finance Member has proposed in his Statement of Objects and Reasons to give authority to the Reserve Bank to examine the financial structure and the earning capacity and the capital assets and all that In clause 3 also reference is made to that Now, Sir, may I enquire from the Honourable the Finance Member what has the Government done in order to increase the financial efficiency of these comparatively new and less developed banking concerns Sir, I will not use strong language But if I were in the opposition as we were in the Budget session and if this Government were the previous Government, then, I would have said that the Government are throttling the banking institutions from two ends At one end the Government is putting down in the matter of capital issues and at the other end fresh shackles are put by saying don't go to the field, you do not extend yourself If the previous Government were here and if I had been in opposition, I would have said the same thing, but what is the position today with regard to capital issue matter I must say that it is an open scandal that there are no principles governing the grant or refusal in the matter of application of capital issues It is only the rule of thumb of some authority in some department somewhere that decides to grant or not to grant the application. This is one of my standing objections and there are several cases which I will take up personally with the Honourable the Finance Member for his consideration. I know of certain Banks who have stood very well by the community for over 25 years. They have grown and grown and spread their branches and they have done good service to the constituents, but then the more you do good things, the more you require capital and the capital has to be increased. When they make application to the authorities for increase of their capital issues, usually the first reply is that the application is not according to form. It is not pointed out how the application is not according to form. The second reply that is usually given is that the requirements have not been fulfilled. Nothing is said about what those requirements are. Then ultimately when everything is done then the summary order goes that the capital issues cannot be granted. Permission is refused. Why are these Banks which are doing very well and which would have done much better being refused nutrition by the rule of the thumb of the department. Sir, I would also say that the Honourable the Finance Member ought to take also the moral responsibility for the collapse of some Banks during the last few weeks. The Honourable the Finance Member was very light in using the expression that he received complaints that some branches could not pay to the depositors. I do not know which are the branches and which are the Banks. But I will not be surprised if there are one or two. But you cannot penalise the whole community of Banks because there are some black sheep within the fold. But I would rather bring the alternative charge that some of these Banks have collapsed because of the one reason namely refusal to give permission for increasing the capital structure and so the moral responsibility for their collapse rests on the Government. These Banks have spread their branches between 1938 to 1945. The Branches increased but the Government did nothing. I would have understood if the Government had stopped the spread of these branches in time but having allowed these Banks to spread their branches all over the country, if the depositors interest is so dear to the Government as it should be, then the Government ought to have liberally allowed them to grow and develop their capital by issue of capital permits. But then the Government did not do that. So, for sometime the Government kept quiet over the whole matter and then the interest of the community required that the Government should give assistance by allowing share capital to increase, but by withholding the permission the result is that on account of this callousness and cruelty of the Government, these Banks have crashed. I lay the charge at the door of the Government.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: You would have said all these had you been on this side of the House?

Mr Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: My point is this that it is not the time to interfere like this, because I can conceive of Banks, I can conceive this position generally also that Banks can grow and avoid a crash even if they do not get capital assistance from the Government provided they are allowed to have free scope in their developments. After all the Banks do not really flourish very much upon the capital of shareholders as upon credit. I know of certain Banks who have got such enormous credit in their own locality that they do business in lakhs and lakhs which create the impression that these are very big Banks that they have very large share capital that they do not care to know whether the capital issue department is issuing permit or not. They look at persons who are pioneers and who are at the helm of affairs of Banks. There are some outstanding personalities in certain Banks which in themselves are adequate credit and that helps the Bank in carrying on smoothly and that also always keeps depositors interest safe. Therefore I would beg of the Honourable Member not to throttle these institutions from both ends. Banks must grow they should not come to an end at all. The Honourable the Finance Member, whose knowledge of affairs is certainly much more than mine has used language which I certainly do not appreciate much. There has been in recent years a rapid increase in new branches of Banks mostly at places where adequate banking facilities are already available. As a humble student of economic we hear that Banking in India is still thousands and thousands of miles away from the saturation point in our country. It is said that even in America and other advanced countries, banking has not reached its saturation point. Are we to understand that in our country we are so advanced economically that we have reached the saturation point? Certainly not. Then Sir, my Honourable friend used the language, "where adequate banking facilities are already available." Sir, he should not have found fault with that, because as with the law of nature commerce banking and industrial institutions have a tendency to gravitate to particular places. They seek their own level, they flock together and they create some sort of circle. If there is one Bank doing good business, then a banking field is created, there is room for another Bank. Similarly the field creates Bank and the Bank creates field. This is a sort of virtuous circle, not a vicious circle. That is how human institutions grow. Why should it be different in respect of Banks? Now Sir, I am glad that the Honourable the Finance Member referred on to the principal Presidency towns. He says there has been overcrowding in Presidency towns. But if he wants to relieve the congestion, I would ask him to bring in a legislative measure which will induce or compel these big capitalistic Banks to penetrate into the villages so that the towns might be an easier field for more enterprising and less capitalistic institutions. After all, if the congestion is to be relieved, let relief be in favour of the growing concerns, not in favour of those who have already reached the peak of development. I will be very glad if by his legislative measure the Honourable Member can induce the Birlas, the Tatas and Dalmas and all these big financiers to help the development of banking in rural parts.

Mr. Deputy President: As it is now five o'clock, the House will now adjourn. The Honourable Member can resume his speech tomorrow.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: (West Coast and Nilgiris Muhammadan) Sir, before you adjourn the House I want to offer the House an explanation with regard to the names included in the Motion for Select Committee which my Honourable friend has proposed. It is not given to any Member to propose names without getting the sanction of Members whose names he wishes to propose. For the information of the House, I may say that the usual practice is that if an Honourable Member wants to make a proposition like this, he approaches the Whips of the Parties so that the Whips can give the names of such people who are willing to serve. In this particular instance, I do wish to bring to the notice of the House that none of the Members of the Muslim League Party was approached nor was consent given.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Sir I owe an apology to the House. Being new to this House, I thought that when I was giving a Motion for reference of the Bill to the Select Committee which is a Committee identical with the Committee which is going to sit and which has already been passed by this House, no further formalities were required. Therefore, Sir, I must say that in my want of wisdom, I thought I was doing something which may not be wrong. But since I now offer an apology to the House, I would ask the Whips of Parties to obtain the necessary consent so that the factum valet policy may be approved.

Mr. Deputy President: For the guidance of the House as I told yesterday when a similar point was raised, I may again inform the House that it has been decided in this House that no names should be mentioned in the Select Committee without obtaining the previous consent of the Members whose names are proposed. But now of course it sometimes happens that the consent of individual members cannot be obtained. But if this had been left to the Party Whips, and if the Whips are willing to give names, they are supposed to have taken the consent of the Members whose names they propose. I hope this practice will be followed in future.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock, on Thursday, the 14th November 1946.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(a) ORAL ANSWERS

MOLESTATION OF WOMEN BY RAILWAY POLICE AT VICTORIA TERMINUS, BOMBAY

523. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: With reference to the reply to part c) of starred question No. 685, dated the 5th March, 1946, by Sriyut D. K. Jadhav Chaudhury, relating to molestation of women by Railway Police at Victoria Terminus, Bombay, will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if the investigation has been completed? If so, with what result?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The investigation shows that no written complaint was made by the party concerned to the Railway Station Staff. A complaint was made direct to the Railway Police at Victoria Terminus and a case against the Chief Head Watchman was registered by the Police on the 2nd October 1945 under Section 120 of the Indian Railways Act and Section 309 of the Indian Penal Code. The case was tried in the court of the Honorary Presidency Magistrate Bombay, and was compounded and the accused acquitted. As a result of this incident, the conduct of the Chief Head Watchman was departmentally investigated and he was removed from service.

ADULTERATION OF PURE GHEE

524. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Food Department please state if it is a fact that the latent colouration of Vanaspathi has been enforced to prevent its use for the adulteration of pure ghee?

Mr. B. B. Sen: Action is being taken to enforce latent colourisation of Vanaspathi with effect from 1st January 1947.

SUPPLY OF SUB-SOIL WATER FOR IRRIGATION

525. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture please state the steps taken by Government (i) to develop the possibilities of getting adequate supplies of sub-soil water for irrigation purposes in the alluvial tracts particularly in the Indo-gangetic plains, and (ii) to survey the sub-soil supplies of irrigation water in the non-alluvial tracts of India?

Mr. B. B. Sen: Subsidies have been given for the construction of 600 tube-wells in the U.P. and 76 in Bihar. As the manual boring rigs were found unsuitable for the hard strata found in many areas, eleven mechanically operated rigs have been imported. An expert was brought out from America to advise about the work to be undertaken. As a result a new type of well will now be constructed which will be cheaper and give more water. A training class has been started to teach the proper use of mechanically operated rigs Steps are being taken to obtain some 80 more rigs from abroad. When these rigs are received and the staff trained, some of them will be used for undertaking survey operations in the non-alluvial tracts

Seth Govind Das: The Honourable Member said some wells are dug in U P. and Bihar; may I know what is being done in other provinces?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The provinces are being taken up according to the enthusiasm shown by the provinces themselves. The provinces where tube-wells up to now have been tried are the U P., Bihar, North-Western Frontier Province, Punjab and also the State of Baroda.

Seth Govind Das: As nothing has been done so far in the Central Provinces will Government take some steps to provide tube-wells for that province also?

Mr. B. R. Sen: Yes, Sir, if there is a demand from that province we shall certainly consider it. The whole scheme is before all the provinces.

Khan Abdul Ghani Khan: Did I understand the Honourable Member to say that mechanical rigs were used anywhere in India for boring wells?

Mr. B. R. Sen: These rigs have just been brought out and they have been sent out to two or three provinces. We have not had the results yet, but from the results of these rigs in other countries we think they will be suitable in Indian conditions.

Khan Abdul Ghani Khan: Is it a fact that these rigs are merely being used in a drilling school somewhere in Bihar and not one of them is working anywhere in the provinces?

Mr. B. R. Sen: Out of these eight rigs two have been sent to Meerut, three to Bihar, one to Punjab, and two have been kept for the Central drilling school at Roorkee.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I ask if any attempts are being made to tap the sub-soil water in the famine districts—the Ceded Districts and Chittoor—in the Madras Presidency?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I shall require notice of that question.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know what kind of subsidy the Central Government gives to the provinces in the matter of tube-wells?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I shall give a reply to that question later on in the day.

Mr. M. A. F. Hirtzel: Have Government got a tube-well programme? If so, what is the total number of tube-wells contemplated to be constructed and in what period?

Mr. B. R. Sen: No comprehensive programme for the country as a whole has yet been drawn up by the Central Government. The provinces have been given the scheme of subsidy and they have been asked to come up with their tube-well schemes and ask for grants.

RE-INTRODUCTION OF RETURN AND ZONE TICKETS ON RAILWAYS

†526. Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state, if the Railway Administrations are considering the desirability of re-introducing the system of Return and Zone Tickets? If so, by what time is it expected that these systems will come into operation again?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply to Question No 117 given on 31st of October 1946. Return tickets were amongst the pre-war concessions, available generally to the travelling public. Zone tickets on the other hand, were in a somewhat different category being of the nature of season tickets. Consideration can only be given to the reintroduction of zone tickets after the general pre-war concessions have been revived and have been in force sufficiently long to enable their effect on travel conditions to be gauged.

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

SHORTAGE OF PRINTED TICKETS AT STATIONS ON E I, RAILWAY

†527. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) if there is a dearth of printed Railway tickets at many stations on the East Indian Railway,

(b) the reasons for this shortage,

(c) if great delay is caused by Booking Clerks writing out on forms,

(d) if there is jamming at Booking Offices in consequence, and trains are missed by passengers in consequence, and

(e) what steps, if any, Government are taking to obviate this evil?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes

(b) The reason for the shortage of printed tickets is the increased demand and the shortage on the East Indian Railway has been aggravated by a Strike of their Press employees, which occurred in October, 1945, and lasted six weeks. Since this Strike, there has also been a consistent reduction in the output of the Press

(c) Yes, delay does occur in filling in blank paper tickets in manuscript

(d) Precise information on this point is not available with the East Indian Railway authorities, but there is reason to believe that inconvenience and delay are caused at booking office windows on account of the use of Blank Paper Tickets necessitated by the shortage of printed tickets

(e) Printing of Card Tickets is a specialised work. All possible steps have been taken to increase the supply of printed card tickets by obtaining assistance from Presses of other railways. Every effort is also being made to increase the output of tickets in the E I Railway Printing Press

ISSUE OF TICKETS BY TRAVELLING TICKETS EXAMINERS TO BONAFIDE PASSENGER

†528. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) if it is a fact that T T E are not allowed to give tickets to passengers who have been unable to obtain tickets even though without any fault of their own, and

(b) if Government propose to re-introduce the old system of enabling T T E's to give such tickets to bona fide passengers without charging any penalty?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) No. Travelling Ticket Examiners are not provided with ordinary tickets but issue Excess Fare tickets to passengers who are not in possession of tickets

(b) The question of re-introducing the former practice of granting certificates which would enable Travelling Ticket Examiners to issue Excess Fare tickets without including the excess charge leviable under the Railways Act will be considered as soon as travel conditions have eased sufficiently to permit it

PAYMENT OF BILLS FOR TRUNK TELEPHONE CALLS TO THE ACCOUNTS OFFICER, CENTRAL TELEPHONE REVENUE ACCOUNTING OFFICE, DELHI

†529. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Secretary of the Communications Department be pleased to state

(a) if it is a rule that all bills for trunk calls from all over India are sent by the Accounts Officer, Central Telephone Revenue Accounting Office, Delhi;

(b) if copies of these bills are sent to Telephone Supervisors in various districts as soon as they are sent to local subscribers;

(c) if the local offices are required to remind local subscribers of these bills; and if so, what interval of time is allowed for payment, between the receipt of the bills and the reminding.

(d) if local offices keep on reminding long after the bills have actually been paid and subscribers are required to give the actual numbers of Post Office receipts if they have paid the bills, and

(e) if Government propose to consider the advisability of decentralising the system and protect the subscribers from being reminded of bills already paid, by telephone calls in the midst of important work?

Sir Harold Shoober: (a) No The Honourable Member is clearly referring to the position as it was before April 1943. Since that time the policy has been revised and action has been taken gradually to decentralise the Telephone Revenue Accounting work.

(b) No

(c) The reply to the first part is in the negative. The Honourable Member is apparently referring to the case of defaulting subscribers. The local telephone exchange is required to remind such defaulters over the telephone and this is generally done about a fortnight after the receipt of the bills by the subscribers.

(d) No. The procedure is that if the local exchange is unable to gain contact with a defaulting subscriber over the telephone, a written notice is sent by registered post asking the subscriber concerned to arrange payment within two days of receipt of the notice, and to inform the exchange of the day upon which and the office in which payment has been made. The telephone is proscribed after the expiry of the days of grace.

(e) As stated in the reply to (a), the policy of decentralisation has already been accepted and the trunk call bills for Calcutta, Bombay, Ahmedabad and Delhi exchanges and for the exchanges in the Madras Circle are now issued by the appropriate District and General Managers. It has also been decided to decentralise the telephone billing work of the Assam Bengal and Bombay Circles but the decision has not yet been put into effect owing to difficulty in obtaining accommodation.

RUNNING OF INTER CLASS SLEEPING COACHES BETWEEN BENARES CANTONMENT AND HOWRAH ON E I RAILWAY

'530. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) if Inter-class sleeping coaches run between Benares Cantonment and Howrah by the 15 Up and 16 Down Expresses of the East Indian Railway,

(b) if the experiment has been a success,

(c) the number of similar coaches the Railway possesses,

(d) if the system would be extended, and similar coaches run with similar conditions on other trains also, and

(e) if other Railways also have similar coaches and whether Government propose to make similar arrangements on these Railways?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes

(b) Yes

(c) The East Indian Railway have three such coaches, all in service, on Nos 15 Up and 16 Dn Express trains

(d) Yes. It is the intention to extend similar services to other trains on the release of certain Ward cars at present utilised by the Defence Department

(e) Other Government Railways providing sleeping accommodation for Inter Class passengers are the—

B A Railway—(i) the Up and Down Darjeeling Mail trains running between Calcutta and Siliguri, and S I Railway—On the Up and Down Indo-Ceylon Express trains, running between Madras (Egmore) and Dhanushkodi via Tanjore

The provision of sleeping accommodation for a considerable number of passengers to whom the facility is not at present available is under consideration in connection with the Railway Board's post war coach design. The financial implications of providing this amenity are also under examination. It is anticipated that the provision of such amenities cannot be separated from the question of increasing fares.

FIXATION OF PURCHASE PRICE OF PADDY BY BENGAL BIHAR AND U P GOVERNMENTS

531 Mr Madandhari Singh Will the Secretary of the Food Department be pleased to state

(a) the price fixed for the purchase of paddy by the Governments of Bengal Bihar and United Provinces and

(b) whether there is any difference if so what the reasons are for that?

Mr B R Sen (i) A statement giving the purchase prices of paddy in Bihar and Bengal is laid on the table of the House. The United Provinces do not make direct purchases of paddy.

(b) The reason for disparity in rice and paddy prices in the U P, Bihar and Bengal is that markets in different parts of the country reacted differently to security conditions created by the War and the incidence of inflation in price was not uniform. As a result of efforts made by the Central as well as Provincial Governments these disparities have since been narrowed down considerably though the price disparity has not yet been eliminated.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if these disparities have affected the procurement of foodgrains? If so, to what extent?

Mr. B. R. Sen: No, Sir, it is not our information that the disparity of prices has affected procurement operations.

PASSENGER TRAIN AT NIGHT BETWEEN BADNERA AND AMRAOTI ON G. I. P. RAILWAY

532. *Mr. P. B. Gole: Will the Honourable Member for Transport be pleased to state.

(a) if it is a fact that there is no train between Badnera and Amraoti to carry passengers for the shuttle trains stopping at Badnera and that passengers reaching Badnera station have to wait for the whole night before they could get a train for Amraoti,

(b) if it is a fact that only light engine comes from Amraoti to Badnera after 9 P.M. and again goes back to Amraoti at about 4 A.M. to bring the mail passengers, if so, why the engine is not used for bringing passengers to Badnera for the shuttle trains and taking passengers to Amraoti;

(c) whether Government are aware of the great inconvenience and hardship experienced by the passengers owing to the absence of passenger trains at night between Badnera and Amraoti connecting the shuttle trains, and

(d) if so, whether Government propose to issue instructions to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to maintain a connecting train between Badnera and Amraoti for every passenger train on the main line?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) No Sir. There are suitable connections with Badnera-Amraoti trains for all trains stopping at Badnera. It is not correct that passengers detraining at Badnera have to wait all night to get a connection to Amraoti.

(b) The engine after making the last trip in the evening to Amraoti returns to Badnera without a load or with a goods load if offering, for stabling as there are no shed facilities at Amraoti station.

(c) and (d) Since, as stated in reply to part (a), there are suitable connections at Badnera, the question of hardship and inconvenience to passengers does not arise, nor is it necessary for Government to issue instructions to the G. I. P. Railway Administration on the lines suggested by the Honourable Member.

Mr. P. B. Gole: May I know if there is a connecting train at night for the shuttle train reaching Badnera?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: As far as I know there are at least six shuttle trains running between BhusaVal and Badnera

Mr. P. B. Gole: Is there any connecting train for this shuttle from Badnera to Amraoti?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Yes, Sir

Mr. P. B. Gole: May I know the timings of these trains?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I shall require notice of that question

SUPPLY OF RAILWAY WAGONS

533. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state how many wagons have been added in the course of the current official year by (i) import, (ii) rehabilitation, and (iii) new wagons made in India?

(b) How many more are expected to be so added?

(c) What was the total figure of wagons in India before the war and how does the present figure compare with it?

(d) What is the additional quantity which Government have estimated as required to deal with the traffic at the peak period?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) (i) 6836 Broad Gauge general service wagons

(ii) Rehabilitation which is continuously undertaken in Railway Workshops does not add to the amount of stock available, as the percentage under repairs fluctuates only to a very small degree throughout the year

(iii) 2308 B G general service wagons

(* Of these 3,944 General Service wagons and 383 Special type wagons were imported under Lend/Lease for the War Department.)

(d) An increase of 20 per cent over the pre-war figure in the case of Broad Gauge General Service wagons and ten per cent increase in the case of Metre Gauge General Service wagons is estimated sufficient to meet the post-war traffic requirements at the peak period, but it will be appreciated that this estimate may need to be modified as necessity arises

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the availability of wagons in very large number which the Honourable Member has said as compared with pre-war period, may I know why there should still be complaint with regard to the shortage of wagons and why the whole system of priority should still be necessary to be maintained?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: In so far as the question of priority is concerned, I may assure my Honourable friend that the whole question is going to be considered very shortly and the entire priority system will most probably go by March 1947.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Will the Honourable Member, if he has got ready at hand, give me the information or perhaps supply it later as to the comparative price of the standard B G wagon as imported and as made in this country?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I must have notice of that question.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I ask the Honourable Member whether Government is going to consider the question of manufacturing all locomotives in India, particularly in view of the fact that this question has been discussed every year in this House and assurances have been given to this effect?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Although this question does not arise out of the question that has been put to me, I am very glad to reply to my Honourable friend and assure him that ever since I have come into office I have been concentrating on the manufacture in India of not merely locomotives but every single thing that is required by the Railways in India.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: With reference to part (a) of the question may I know from which countries wagons have been imported?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Some of these orders were placed in the United Kingdom and I believe some orders were placed in Australia.

Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: What tonnage was handled in the pre-war period and what is the present tonnage?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: That is a very large question and I must have notice of it.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if any of these wagons are being manufactured departmentally?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Yes, Sir.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What percentage?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I do not carry all these figures on the tip of my tongue all the time, but if you put down a question I will give the necessary information.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: With reference to part (b) of the question in reply to which the Honourable Member has given the number of wagons expected may I know what is the period within which the wagons are expected?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I require notice of that question too.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if any wagons have been taken over from the War Department?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Yes, Sir. All wagons and coaches with the War Department are being released from time to time and we are constantly pressing the War Department to release as many wagons as they possibly can, and more quickly than they have done.

Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: What is the number of wagons still on loan with the War Department?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I want notice of that question.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: How does the Honourable Member propose to reach the optimum figure?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: What exactly is the idea of the Honourable Member with regard to optimum figure?

Mr. President: The question is not clear. Will the Honourable Member repeat his question?

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: May I know from the Honourable Member how he wants to reach the optimum figure, in what way and in what period?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Optimum figure regarding what ?

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Optimum figure as the Honourable Member has stated in part (d), namely 20 per cent additional wagons are necessary to meet the traffic at the peak period.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: They are made from time to time. These are our requirements and we are meeting our requirements in whichever way we possibly can. I think the actual question was what additions we expected and I have told the House what additions we expected.

SUPPLY OF TIMBER FROM BURMA, ANDAMANS AND INDIAN FORESTS

534. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state how much timber has arrived from (1) Burma, and (2) Andamans?

(b) What steps are Government taking for the supply of building timber for the building trade in India from these sources as well as from the Indian forests?

(c) How much surplus timber was there with the Military for the Disposals Department?

(d) How much of this has been disposed of?

(e) Has it been disposed of to merchants or consumers?

Mr. M. P. Pai: (1) (i) So far as I am aware, no timber has arrived till now from Burma. 4,000 tons of Teak Wood are, however, expected before the end of this year.

(ii) As regards timber from the Andamans, I understand that the following quantities have been exported to Indian Ports from the time of re-occupation of Andamans up to the 6th November 1946 —

(i) Logs for Match Industry	4,415 tons
(ii) Sawn Scantlings	1,471
(iii) Sawn Squares	1,097
(iv) Mill Logs	1,381
(v) Manufactured Match Splints	464

(In equivalent quantity Match Logs)

Total	8,831 tons

(b) The control over the distribution of timber was lifted with effect from the 1st January 1946. No figures are, therefore, available of the quantity of timber which has become available for the building trade. It may, however, be assumed that a substantial portion of the material has been, or will be utilised for building purposes. I may add that during the period January to August 1946, issues of timber by the L & S Department to various Provinces and States amounted to 314,445 tons. The major portion of this quantity must have gone to the trade.

(c) No surpluses have been reported by the Northern, Central or Eastern Commands. In the case of Southern Command, the Engineer-in-Chief has been authorised to dispose of, under M.E.S. regulations, surplus timber lying in that Command as the stock in general is centred at various stations not within easy reach of the Regional Commissioner (Disposals), Bombay. The following quantities of timber stocks have been declared surplus by the Quarter Master General

Sleepers	3,15,476
Wooden blocks	2,150
Metre Gauge Block	19

(d) and (e) 20,000 sleepers have been sold to Government of Madras for famine relief work

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the Government's declared policy of assisting building as a means of absorbing unemployed people and demobilized soldiers, will the Honourable Member make clear what specific assistance has been given to the building trade? He mentioned that the amount has gone to the trade, that is the general merchants. My question refers to the desirability of giving suitable timber for building houses to those who are actually building houses, and not to the merchants.

Mr. M. P. Pai: The present arrangement is to dispose of this timber through the Provincial Governments, and it has been emphasized upon them that a high priority should be given for building purposes. Presumably they are doing all, they can to see that these go for building purposes.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Will Government take special steps, having regard to the importance of building houses, in this country to import larger quantities both from the Andamans and from Burma of a suitable quality, and will they particularly take steps to prohibit the export of any timber from this country, as I know specifically that some timber has gone out of this country during the last six months.

Mr. M. P. Pai: The suggestion will be borne in mind.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I therefore take it that the Regional Commissioner of Disposals, Bombay, will not be disposing of this timber and that the Provincial Government will do so?

Mr. M. P. Pai: Not as regards the timber in the Southern Command but other timber owned by Government will be disposed of by the Bombay Government.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: May I know from the Honourable Member whether he is aware of the fact that the Standing Finance Committee granted money for the rehabilitation of the Andamans on condition that the timber should be first exported into India and when Indian needs are met then only to other countries?

Mr. M. P. Pai: That is actually the case I believe. I do not think timber is exported from the Andamans to other countries.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: The Andamans should export timber to India and to no other country.

Mr. M. P. Pai: That is the position.

Mr. President: That he believes to be the position.

Seth Govind Das: The Honourable Member said that no timber has been recently imported from Burma. May I know whether any timber is going to be imported from Burma in the near future?

Mr. M. P. Pai: I have already said that we forecast that we will receive 4,000 tons by the end of the year. A programme is being worked out for receipts during the next year.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: On what basis is allocation made to the various provinces of this quantity?

Mr. M. P. Pai: I want notice of that.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Is it a fact that the timber lying in the Bombay Depots has been sold by the Regional Commissioner directly to the merchants and not through the Provincial Governments?

Mr. M. P. Pai: At some stage that might have been done. I will not say that no timber has been sold by him. At present negotiations are going on with the Bombay Government. The Bombay Government were not interested in taking over this timber in the same way as other Provincial Governments, but they have offered to dispose of this timber on behalf of the Government of India, and the matter is under consideration, and I think the disposal work will be entrusted to him.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: What will happen to such timber which will remain in the depot not accepted by the Bombay Government? Will it be sold by tenders or private negotiations by the Regional Commissioner?

Mr. M. P. Pai: Details have not been settled, but it has been said that the Bombay Government should dispose of them

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Is there any truth in the rumour that some of the Andamans timber is being exported to England?

Mr. M. P. Pai: No such rumour has come to my notice. But I will certainly enquire.

FACTORIES FOR RADIOS, FILMS, REFRIGERATORS AND TYPEWRITERS IN INDIA

535. *Mr. Mannu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state how many companies or factories have been projected in India for the manufacture of (i) radios, (ii) films, (iii) refrigerators, and (iv) typewriters?

(b) How many of them have been assured by Government with permission to import equipment and machinery and with dollars or hard currency?

(c) When will these manufactures start and if there is any progress in any of them, what is the progress?

Mr. M. P. Pai: (a) A statement showing the names of the companies, which have received consent to issue capital, is placed on the table. This does not include companies with a capital of under five lakhs regarding which Government have no information.

(b) Information is being collected and will be placed on the table of the House in due course.

(c) Government have no information about the progress made by the promoters of raw film companies. As regards other industries no progress is reported to have been made except that some of the Radio manufacturing companies are likely to go into production by the middle of 1947.

List of companies manufacturing Typewriters

- 1 Asiatic General Industries, Ltd
- 2 Typewriters Ltd
- 3 Orient Typewriter Industries, Ltd
- 4 M/s Kaicker's Typewriter Exchange Ltd

Mr Manu Subedar: In view of the experience in this country during the war with regard to raw films which were not available for the cinema production companies and with regard to typewriters which were not available to the business community, will Government take any special steps to encourage the production of these two articles in this country and if necessary to help those who are undertaking these somewhat hazardous enterprises?

Mr M P Pai: I only offer to take that suggestion into consideration.

MANUFACTURE OF TELEPHONE EQUIPMENT IN INDIA

536. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state whether Government have undertaken the manufacture of the whole telephonic equipment in India in the Government work shops?

(b) In view of the inconvenience felt during the war through the shortage of telephone instruments, what steps do Government propose to take in the interests of India to render India self-sufficient in the matter of the telephonic equipment?

Sir Harold Shobert: (a) No, not the whole equipment.

(b) At present the Posts and Telegraphs Department manufactures in its own Workshops, its main requirements of manual telephone exchange equipment and hand-micro telephone sets. The principal line construction stores (posts, brackets, fittings, etc.) are also produced in the Departmental Workshops, insulators and the wire required for line construction are purchased from Indian manufacturing concerns. Automatic telephone exchange equipment, long distance telephone equipment and certain parts of the telephone instruments are still imported, but it is the policy of the Department to encourage the manufacture of this apparatus also by Indian enterprise.

Mr. Manu Subedar: During the war I raised this issue and I was informed by this Government that Anstala was manufacturing the old telephone and that the Indian Government would take steps to have the whole telephone manufactured here in their workshops. May I know why that undertaking given on the floor of this House has not been carried out?

Sir Harold Shobert: Sir, we are manufacturing all that we can in the Posts and Telegraphs workshops according to sound financial principles. It is only the more complicated types of apparatus which we are unable to manufacture. As I have already said that comprises long distance telephone equipment, teleprinters and machinery of that kind. If we attempted to undertake in the Posts and Telegraphs workshops manufacture of this complicated type of equipment, there would not be sufficient demand for it in India to justify the installation of research organizations, manufacturing organization, and the import or manufacture of machinery for that purpose. On the other hand, if private enterprise is willing to undertake that Government would be only too pleased to take from the private enterprise all its necessities.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I am very unhappy to hear this official wisdom from my Honourable friend. Having regard to the security and defence conditions in this country during the war, you were short of telephones. Is it not desirable to suspend those financial considerations for the time being and to undertake the manufacture even of those parts? Does Government expect a private individual to undertake those things which Government on financial considerations are afraid to undertake?

Sir Harold Shoobert: I have no doubt that Government will take into consideration the points which have been made by the Honourable Member. In the Communications Department we have been concerned with producing all that was possible as I said according to sound financial policy. It is difficult to do any more. This telecommunication equipment is of an extraordinary complicated nature and it needs extraordinary complicated machinery, and it would mean, I am afraid, foreign experts to supervise. But that is a matter of broader policy which I feel is for the Finance Department.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Having regard to the feelings on this subject, everywhere in the country, as was reflected during the last session, will the Honourable Member go into this question and give a statement to the House at the beginning of the next session as to the specific reasons why Government will not undertake the manufacture of the whole telephone equipment in this country?

Sir Harold Shoobert: I have already stated the specific reasons but I am certainly willing to have the matter examined further and to give details to my Honourable friend which might convince him of the wisdom of the policy which has hitherto been followed. I may say that Government is not a trading concern and it might be possible to manufacture this long distance equipment and to sell it to other countries but that is hardly the business of even a department like the Posts and Telegraphs run on commercial lines.

DAILY AIR SERVICE BETWEEN DELHI AND MADRAS

537 Haj. Abdus Sattar Haj. Ishaq Seth: Will the Secretary of the Communications Department be pleased to state

(a) whether there is any proposal for running a daily air service between Delhi and Madras,

(b) whether Government are aware that the present three weekly service is found very inadequate and there is great demand for the expansion of this service, and

(c) whether there are proposals for the extension of this service from Madras to other parts of Southern India including Malabar and if so, what those proposals are?

Sir Harold Shoobert: (a) The Air Transport Licensing Board have received applications for the grant of licences for the operation of daily air transport services between Delhi and Madras from some companies. These will be taken up for consideration by the Board during this month. The Deccan Airways Ltd., are operating an air service between Delhi and Madras three times a Week under a Provisional licence.

(b) The traffic figures available for the existing Delhi-Madras service show that of the total capacity available only 31 per cent is being utilised, the balance of 69 per cent going empty. The present frequency can not therefore, be considered inadequate. No representation for increasing the frequency has, so far, been received by Government.

(c) No applications have so far been received for extending the present Delhi-Madras service to other places in Southern India, but a number of applications have been received by the Air Transport Licensing Board for the operation of air transport services in or across South India. A statement giving a list of the applications is laid on the table of the House.

Of the above applications, the frequency proposed for No. 15 is thrice weekly and that for No. 16 is from 2 to 7 services a week.

The frequency proposed for the rest is once daily.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: In view of the fact that there is a first class aerodrome near Bezwada, will Government consider the advisability of diverting the air route in such a way that these lines can be taken via Bezwada, so that there may be more traffic?

Sir Harold Shobert: I see from the statement which I am going to lay on the table of the House that there are various applications for lines between Bezwada and Madras which would connect up with the present service and I hope that the Honourable Member would feel that that was adequate without making the present line less direct than it is now

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Will that connect Bezwada with Hyderabad?

Sir Harold Shobert: Definitely

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know whether the deficiency of passengers at present is not due to the fact that the full load is not allowed to get in at Madras and that a percentage of accommodation is reserved for passengers at Hyderabad, Nagpur and Gwalior?

Sir Harold Shobert: I am afraid I must have notice of that question but it is probably the case. There may be bookings from these other places and in a matter like that you cannot follow the policy of first come first served otherwise intermediate stations would never get served at all

SUPERANNUATED OFFICERS IN THE TRANSPORT DEPARTMENT

538. *Seth Sukhdev: Will the Honourable the Transport Member please state

(a) how many officers who have already reached the age of 55 are still being continued in service in the departments under his control,

(b) how many pensioners were re-employed during the war and are still being continued, how many of these superannuated men were specialists and technical men, and

(c) when will the services of these men be dispensed with?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) 39

(b) 29, of whom 28 are technical officers or specialists

(c) The services of 26 officers are likely to be dispensed with by 31st December 1946, eight more officers by the 31st March 1947 and the remaining five on the expiry of the present terms of appointment or as soon thereafter as they can be suitably replaced

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Are there any such superannuated persons in the Railway Board?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: These figures relate both to the Railway and Transport Departments Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know from the Honourable Member if there are any superannuated men in the Railway Board as members?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I have already answered the question. These figures include both the Railway and Transport Departments. To the best of my information there is no superannuated gentleman on the Railway Board

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: There are seven or eight General Managers. How many of these gentlemen are superannuated?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I really ought to have notice of that question. But I can assure my Honourable friend that some of them are proceeding on leave preparatory to retirement and nobody is standing in their way

SUPERANNUATED OFFICERS IN COMMUNICATIONS DEPARTMENT

539. *Seth Sukhdev: Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state

(a) how many officers who have already reached the age of 55 are still being continued in service in the departments under his control,

(b) how many pensioners were re-employed during the war and are still being continued; how many of these superannuated men were specialists or technical men; and

(c) when will the services of these men be dispensed with?

Sir Harold Shobert: (a) Six

(b) (i) Three

(ii) All of them are technical men

(c) The services of these men will be dispensed with during the course of the next ten months on the expiry of the period of extension or re-employment sanctioned in each case

Prof. N. G. Ranga: May I know if Government have trained other people to take their place?

Sir Harold Shobert: Certainly, Sir

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Are they Indians?

Sir Harold Shobert: Certainly Sir

MUSLIM TEMPORARY ENGINEERS ON N W RAILWAY

†540. Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that four temporary engineers serving on the North Western Railway were selected locally during 1942 and that none of them is a Muslim,

(b) whether it is a fact that they have been recommended to be confirmed along with Indian Railway Service Engineers Officers recruited during war even though they appeared in Federal Public Service Commission and failed and that while recruiting them it was essentially laid down that they were being employed only for the duration of war, and

(c) if it is so, will the General Manager be asked to rectify the mistake and give proper representation to Muslims in all Gazetted and non-gazetted services?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) The actual facts in connection with the recruitment of temporary Engineers on the North Western Railway in 1942 are as follows. Nine candidates were considered suitable by Selection Board, consisting of the Chief Engineer, two Deputy Chief Engineers and the Deputy General Manager (Personnel), for six posts of temporary Engineers. Of these the first five in order of merit, including one Muslim, were selected and another Muslim candidate whose rank was the seventh was nominated to conform to communal requirements, two of the six vacancies having been reserved for Muslims. As both the Muslim candidates subsequently failed to pass the medical examination, they could not be appointed and the remaining Muslim candidate who stood 8th in the list of nine approved candidates was appointed. This candidate, however, failed to pass the examination held at the Walton Training School at the end of 3 months training given to these recruits and his services were, therefore, terminated in accordance with the terms of the Agreement entered by him. The correct position, therefore, is that five candidates were initially recruited as temporary Engineers on the North Western Railway in 1942, including one Muslim, and that the services of the latter had to be terminated as he failed to pass the prescribed examination.

(b) 70 per cent of permanent vacancies occurring since 1st June 1942, have been reserved for war-service personnel after the war, steps are now being taken to fill the remaining 30 per cent, not reserved for war-service candidates, through the Federal Public Service Commission. The latter have issued an advertisement calling for applications for filling these vacancies and, in accordance with Government's policy, any Government servant employed temporarily during the war (whether originally recruited departmentally or through the Federal Public Service Commission) is eligible to compete for a permanent vacancy in any grade or corresponding grade to which direct recruitment is made, provided he satisfies the normal educational qualifications and is within the age limits prescribed for such cases. The applications of the four temporary Engineers in question received in response to the Commission's advertisement have been forwarded along with other similar applications for consideration by the Commission. Government have no information regarding their position in a previous examination held by the Commission but they have no doubt that the Commission will deal with all applications on their merits.

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

(c) Communal quotas are observed in direct recruitment to gazetted and non-gazetted posts on Railways, and in filling the vacancies referred to, communal quotas are required to be observed

SINKING OF WELLS AND PROCURATION OF FOODGRAINS BY SUBSIDIES

541. *Sri E. Venkatasubba Reddiar: Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state

(a) the total amount spent on the accelerated programme of sinking wells up to the 30th September, 1946, province-wise,

(b) the total quantity of foodgrains procured by granting subsidies for the above programme, and

(c) if Government have received representations that the amount of subsidy in many cases was much below 50 per cent of the total cost and in some cases it was below 20 per cent?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) and (b) A statement is laid on the table showing the amounts of the subsidies given for the construction of wells and the quantity of foodgrains expected therefrom. No figures are available of the quantities procured

(c) No such representations have been received by the Central Government. The rate of subsidy given to cultivators for the sinking of wells is determined by the Provincial Governments in the light of local conditions. The Central Government are however prepared to bear half the cost of the subsidy given by Provincial Governments to cultivators provided that the total subsidy so given for well construction does not exceed 50 per cent of the cost of the wells.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know from the Honourable Member if this programme to accelerate the sinking of wells includes the sinking of tube-wells also?

Mr. B. R. Sen: Yes

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: If so, would the Honourable Member kindly read out from the statement how many such tube-wells have been sunk in Madras and how many applications have been received?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I could not give all that information. So far as I am aware 30,000 wells have been sunk in Madras.

Sri E. Venkatasubba Reddiar: How many more rigs are going to be imported?

Mr. B. R. Sen: 30

Sri E. Venkatasubba Reddiar: Do Government propose to allot any of the 30 imported mechanical rigs to Madras?

Mr. B. R. Sen: We have not yet decided on that.

Khan Abdul Ghani Khan: What is the capacity of these wells? How much land can be irrigated?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I am sorry I have not got that information.

FIXATION OF SUGARCANE PRICE

542. *Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddiar: Will the Secretary of the Food Department be pleased to state

(a) the basis on which the sugar-cane price is fixed and the percentage which is allotted to the cane grower, and

(b) the price of sugar-cane fixed for the season 1946-47 for the Madras Presidency?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Prices of sugarcane are fixed by the Provincial Governments on the basis of sugar prices which are fixed by the Government of India in consultation with Provincial Governments and representatives of the industry. Cane prices are fixed for delivery at the mill gate and the grower gets the entire price minus transport expenses that he may have to incur.

(b) Cane prices of Madras Presidency for the current year vary from Rs. 29 to Rs. 35 per ton at factory gate except in the case of Podanur factory which is a very small and uneconomic unit where price has been fixed at Rs. 26 per ton.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Is it obligatory for the millowners to purchase any sugarcane that is brought to the mill gate?

Mr. B. R. Sen: Yes.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Are Government aware that the millowners play a trick upon the grower by making them come with the sugarcane to the mill gate and when they do not agree to a lower rate offered by the millowner, the grower is placed at the mercy of the millowner?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I have no such information. If the Honourable Member will be pleased to supply me with specific instances I shall go into them.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: How are these prices fixed in Madras, U. P. and Bihar?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The price is about the same. In U. P. and Bihar the price is Rs. 1-4-0 per maund and the price in Madras comes to about the same.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I know whether Government fixes the share of the wage-earners in the sugarcane industry when fixing the share of the grower?

Mr. B. R. Sen: Not that I am aware of.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I know whether Government will consider the necessity of safeguarding the interests of the wage-earners in the sugarcane industry and see that their share also is fixed?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I shall have the suggestion examined.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it a fact that the sugarcane growers in a particular locality nearest to a factory are obliged to sell all their sugarcane to the factory and on that account the prices are low and unremunerative for them?

Mr. B. R. Sen: In some cases that is so, but the provincial governments fix the price which the growers must get, and the growers do get that price, at least since the last two years.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if the Honourable Member is aware that gur is selling at a higher price in Madras than Sugar, and that sugarcane prices are very low—much lower than in other places where gur is allowed to be manufactured?

Mr. B. R. Sen: That has happened in some areas,—Yes

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Is it the policy of Government to discourage the production of gur?

Mr. B. R. Sen: No, it is not the policy to discourage production of gur, but it is the policy of Government to keep the sugar factories going, and to the extent that it is necessary to put restrictions on gur production for keeping these sugar mills going, they take necessary measures.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Is it not a fact that gur is much more nutritive than sugar and the production of gur also is more remunerative to the grower than the supply of sugarcane to the sugar manufacturer?

Mr. B. R. Sen: That question perhaps does not arise out of this.

Seth Govind Das: Will the Government consider the question of raising the price of sugarcane and also sugar, so that gur may be available to cultivators at a cheaper rate and does the Government know that at present in certain places the price of gur is more than that of sugar?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The Honourable Member should be aware that only recently the price of sugarcane has been increased in the United Provinces and Bihar from 14s 6p to Rs 1-4-0 per maund and the price of sugar has been increased from Rs 16-10-0 to Rs 20-14-0 per maund.

NUMBER OF TRACTORS AND PLOUGHS RECEIVED BY GOVERNMENT

543. *Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddhar: Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state

(a) the number of tractors with ploughs attached that has been received by Government since May 1946, and how they have been distributed, and

(b) the steps that have been taken to manufacture such ploughs, and if any steps have been taken, the number of ploughs that are being manufactured and the probable time by which they will be available?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) As orders for tractors and Ploughs are placed with different manufacturing concerns, they are received in separate consignments and are attached together subsequently before use in India. Since May 1946, 20 Tractors have been received by Government from the U S A. Eight of these tractors have been sent to the U P, three to Rampur, five to Hyderabad and four to Baroda. No Ploughs were received by Government from abroad during this period. In addition Government have also acquired from the American Army Surpluses in India about 315 Used Tractors and eight Ploughs out of which twelve tractors have been despatched to Bombay, 41 Tractors and three Ploughs to Madras and 15 Tractors and three Ploughs to Mysore. The remaining machines have to be repaired before they can be put to effective use.

(b) A contract for the manufacture in India of 1250 tractor—drawn agricultural implements including 250 Mould Board Ploughs, 250 Disc Ploughs and 250 One-way Disc Tillers or wheat land Ploughs has been entered into by Government with an Indian firm. In accordance with the terms of the contract the delivery of these implements is spread over the period February 1947 to April 1948.

Seth Govind Das: May I know why no tractors have been supplied to the Central Provinces?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I think the demand of the other provinces was considered more immediate Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddiar: What is the use of these tractors, without ploughs?

Mr. B. R. Sen: It is unfortunate that we have not got implements at the same time as we got these tractors, but these tractors are in some areas being used for earth work.

Seth Govind Das: Has the Honourable Member received any demand from the Central Provinces about tractors?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I must ask for notice

Khan Abdul Gham Khan: In view of the fact that we cannot get enough tractors but that there are a number of Bren gun carriers available which can be used to do the work of these tractors, will Government offer a few of these carriers to provincial governments to do this kind of work?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I shall have to consider that matter

BAN ON EXPORT OF GROUNDNUT OIL

544. *Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddiar: Will the Secretary of the Food Department please state the necessity for continuing the ban on the export of groundnut oil from the Madras Province?

Mr. B. R. Sen: There is no absolute ban on the export of groundnut oil from the Madras Province. Madras Government regulate the export of groundnut oil from that province in accordance with an all-India Basic Plan.

EXPANSION OF SUGAR INDUSTRY IN MADRAS

545. *Sri R. Venkatasubba Reddiar: Will the Secretary of the Food Department be pleased to state whether Government propose to expand the sugar industry in the Madras Presidency? And if so, what is the number of new factories that is proposed to be allotted to the Province?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The Province of Madras has been allocated nine new units of a daily crushing capacity ranging between 400 and 650 tons in the post war expansion of the sugar industry. This will increase the crushing capacity in Madras by about 4,700 tons per day.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Who gives to individual applicants? Is it the Central Government or the Provincial Government?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The selection was made by the Madras Government.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Have all of them been distributed?

Mr. B. R. Sen: All the nine have been distributed.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is care taken to see that this does not fall into the hands of exploiters who start agencies and promise enormous dividends and thus get enormous funds, and whenever there is an application by co-operative societies they are always asked whether these applications will have priority?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I am sure that all these considerations have been taken into account by the Madras Government in making the selection.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Has the Central Government given any general directions in the matter?

Mr. B. R. Sen: No, it is in the discretion of the Provincial Government.

PERMANENT OFFICERS IN BRANCHES OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

†546. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

(a) the total number of permanent officers in the class I and II separately in each of the following branches of the Posts and Telegraphs Department—(i) Telegraph Engineering Branch, (u) Telegraph Traffic Branch, and (uu) Postal Branch,

(b) the number of officers of class I and II in the Posts and Telegraphs Directorate,

(c) the total number of Officers in the Office of Post Master-General, Punjab and North West Frontier Province at Lahore,

(d) the number of Sikhs with their names and designation in each of the above groups, and

(e) whether Government propose to make up this deficiency at least partly, by taking Sikh candidates in the immediate future either from amongst the war candidates or from the open market?

Sir Harold Shoobert: (a) to (d) A statement is laid on the table of the House

(e) There is no special reservation fixed for Sikhs. The question, therefore, does not arise

Statement
(a) (i) Class I	55
Class II	140
(ii) Class I	3
Class II	47
(iii) Class I	39
Class II	190
(b) Class I	49
Class II	15
(c)	13

(d) Group (a) includes five Sixth officers, viz —

(1) Mr Lochan Singh, Divisional Engineer, Telegraphs, officiating as Director of Telegraphs, Central Circle

(2) Mr Harbans Singh, Superintendent of Post offices, officiating as Deputy Postmaster General, Lahore

(3) Mr Ajit Singh, Superintendent of Post Offices

(4) Mr Daljit Singh, Superintendent of Post Offices

(5) Mr Gurcharan Singh Bhatia, Superintendent of Post Offices, officiating as Assistant Postmaster General, Lahore

Group (b) does not include any Sikh officer

Group (c) includes two Sikh officers viz —

(1) Mr Harbans Singh, Superintendent of Post offices officiating as Deputy Postmaster General Lahore

(2) Mr Gurcharan Singh Bhatia, Superintendent of Post offices, officiating as Assistant Postmaster General, Lahore

CANDIDATES OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT SENT OVERSEAS FOR SPECIALIZED TRAINING

†547. Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Secretary of the Communication Department please state

(a) how many candidates of the Posts and Telegraphs Department have been sent this year for specialization overseas, and for what period,

(b) how many candidates referred to in part (a) above were selected from class II and Class III officials of the Telegraph Engineering, who are responsible for the technical maintenance of the Tele-communication equipment, and

(c) whether it is a fact that two class III officials were sent for training abroad about 6 years ago and that these two officials did very well in their work, if so, why is the choice now restricted to class I officials, almost ignoring other classes of officials?

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

Sir Harold Shoober: (a) Five officers of the Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department were recently sent to England for a special and intensive course of training in the planning of underground telephone cable networks. This course lasted three months

(b) Three of the officers mentioned are in the Telegraph Engineering Service Class I and two are Grade I Telephone Inspectors of the late Bengal Telephone Corporation, which did not distinguish between Class I and Class II officers

(c) Yes Two Engineering Supervisors were sent abroad for specialised training in 1939 and certainly profited by that training Government do not propose to restrict selections for courses of training abroad to Class I officers, but it must be recognised that officers in Class I will be able to disseminate knowledge which they acquire far more widely than could be done by the comparatively few officials in lower grades who could be sent abroad for special training

MANUFACTURE OF TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH MACHINERY

†548. Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state

(a) how many candidates have been sent abroad to learn manufacture of telephone and telegraph machinery or parts thereof,

(b) how many foreign experts have been called in India to teach or guide Indian Engineers to manufacture telegraph and telephone machines or parts thereof, and

(c) if the answers to (a) and (b) above are in the negative, whether Government propose to do something in the matter?

Sir Harold Shoober: (a) None

(b) None

(c) The Indian Posts and Telegraphs factories for manufacturing Telegraph and Telephone equipment are already seriously understaffed. It is not at present possible to spare any officer from these factories for specialized training abroad. Efforts are however being made to obtain Indian engineers with experience of Telegraph and Telephone equipment factories to fill the posts of Production Engineers and similar posts in the Posts and Telegraphs factories. Furthermore, the complete reorganisation of the factories, so as to equip them for meeting the post-war requirements of the Department, is under close investigation

IMPORTATION OF ENGINEERS IN THE POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

†549. Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state

(a) whether it is a fact that some Engineers have been imported recently in India to do Posts and Telegraphs work, if so, (i) how many they are, (ii) their grades of pay and conditions of service and terms of employment, and (iii) what special work will they do in India,

(b) whether the same work could not be done by the Indian Engineers, and

(c) whether Government propose to import more foreign Engineers or Experts of the same qualifications, if so, what are its details?

Sir Harold Shoober: (a) Yes

(i) Five

(ii) One officer has been recruited on a consolidated pay of Rs. 1,500 per month on a contract for three years terminable on six months notice on either side. He has been granted a free first class passage to India and return passage to the United Kingdom on the conclusion of the contract. Four officers have been recruited on pay ranging from Rs. 550 to Rs. 600 per month plus war allowance and free quarters or allowance in lieu thereof on contracts for one year terminable on one month's notice on either side. They have been granted free passage to India and return passages to the United Kingdom on conclusion of the contracts.

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent

(m) They are employed on long distance telephone maintenance and installation work.

(b) Telegraph Engineers of Indian nationality possessing the requisite qualifications and experience are not available in sufficient numbers to maintain efficiently the existing telephone and telegraph equipment in India, and to carry through the plans for post-war development. This position is being remedied as quickly as possible by sending Indian officers for specialised technical training abroad. Information upon this subject has already been given to the Honourable Member in reply to his question No. 25.

(c) The Telegraph and Telephone equipment operated by the Indian Post and Telegraphs Department has nearly doubled in value during the war. A large part of the additional equipment consists of complicated and delicate apparatus which requires a high degree of technical skill and experience for its efficient maintenance. As stated in the reply to part (b) of this question, the policy of the Department is to send Indian officers abroad to receive the special training required as fast as they can. In the meantime it may be necessary to borrow the services of foreign engineers on contracts of varying length until there are enough qualified Indian engineers to take their place. The policy of the Government of India is only to recruit experts from abroad in exceptional circumstances.

SUPPLY OF NEWSPRINT TO THE RIYASATI DUNNIYA

†550. Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: (a) Is the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies aware that an Illustrated Weekly known as Riyasati Dunniya used to be published from Delhi, which represented the news of State Muslims?

(b) Is it a fact that the paper has ceased publication due to refusal by Government to give newsprint quota?

(c) Is it a fact that the General Secretary of the All-India Muslim League and some Delhi papers had recommended to Government to give adequate quota and that Government promised to do the needful?

(d) Do Government propose to look into the matter and redress this grievance?

Mr. M. P. Pal: (a) Yes, but Government have seen only one issue of this Weekly and do not know if it was in regular publication.

(b) No. The paper is stated to have started publication in August 1942 and to have ceased during the same year on account of the death of Nawab Yar Jung Bahadur who appears to have started this weekly.

(c) The answer to the first part of the question is 'Yes'. The Government promised to consider the request on merits.

(d) There has recently been a set back in the supply position of paper and the applicant has been informed that the Government are prepared to reconsider the request after December 1946, provided the paper situation improves by that time.

CHEMICAL FERTILIZERS

551. Seth Govind Das: Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture please state

(a) whether it is a fact that most of the chemical fertilizers are at present not manufactured in India and are mostly imported from Great Britain, chiefly of Indian Chemical Industries Manufacture,

† Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

(b) whether it is a fact that this Indian Chemical Industries is a big concern owned by British Industrialists,

(c) whether it is a fact that huge subsidies and loans have been offered and given by the Government of India to the local Governments for arranging for subsidised distribution of these fertilizers amongst the cultivators,

(d) whether it is a fact that a big market has thus been created for these products and a vigorous propaganda for these is being carried on at the cost of Government under the camouflage of the 'grow more food campaign', thus giving a huge bounty to the Company concerned under the garb of subsidy to tenants, and

(e) whether Government propose to ban all subsidy to fertilizers till these are manufactured in India and introduce compost schemes throughout the country reaching every village?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Out of some 200,000 tons of chemical fertilisers, which are expected to be used in 1946-47, some 180,000 tons will be imported, 40,000 tons from Canada and Belgium and the rest from the U.K. from Imperial Chemical Industries Ltd

(b) Yes

(c) Grants and loans are given to Provincial Governments for the subsidised distribution not only of chemical fertilisers but also of other manures such as composts, oilcakes and bonemeal and also for green manuring. The total grant sanctioned for this purpose is Rs 166 lakhs of which ammonium sulphate accounts for Rs 35 lakhs. The subsidies are given in order to increase food production.

(d) There is no element of camouflage and no bounty to any Company. India needs the fertilisers to increase food production and they are purchased at the world market rates. There is an acute demand for these fertilisers from all over the world and we have to fight hard to obtain our quota, what we get is considerably less than what we need. The benefit from the subsidies given is derived by the individual cultivators using the fertilisers as well as by the country as a whole through increased food production.

(e) Government have already taken steps to introduce compost schemes throughout the country but cannot accept the suggestion of banning subsidies for fertilisers, because such a course would result in less production of food in India.

Seth Govind Das: Is it a fact that about two crores of rupees are spent annually by the Government for importing this material and if more subsidies are given locally and if more efforts are made, from this amount which is spent in importing, more material can be prepared in this country?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The Honourable Member may be aware that Government have already taken steps to produce ammonium sulphate in this country. The local production will increase to about 4,40,000 tons by 1951-52. The policy of the Government is to reduce their imports of fertilisers with the increase of their local production.

Seth Govind Das: Is it a fact that the Government of India fertiliser factory at Sindri, Bihar, which was to begin working in 1946 has not yet begun to work on account of certain things and it is not expected that it will work very soon?

Mr. B. R. Sen: That is correct, but so far as I am aware, it will start production from about 1948.

Seth Govind Das: Was it to begin work in 1946 and may I know the reason why two years more delay has been made?

Mr. B. R. Sen: If the Honourable Member wants to have the reasons in detail, I must ask for notice

Mr. Manu Subedar: May I inquire whether he can reassure the House, that whatever might have been the position with regard to the current year, in future, until the Sindhri factory produces, any importations of fertilisers on Government account will not be from one concern or from one country but will be taken from wherever they could be had and at the cheapest price?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I think that is the policy of the Government of India, apart from ammonium sulphate which we are getting from the Imperial Chemical Industries, we get ammonium phosphates from Canada, super-phosphates from the United States of America and Belgium, and ammonium nitrate from Canada. We do not confine ourselves to the United Kingdom only.

Mr. Manu Subedar: May I know whether Government will adhere to the policy of the cheapest price regardless of the country?

Mr. B. R. Sen: That will be one of the primary considerations.

Mr. O. P. Lawson: May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that the fertilisers imported from Great Britain are cheaper than the fertilisers imported from Canada and from Belgium?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I believe that is correct.

LOSS OF CATTLE DUE TO INFECTIOUS DISEASES

552. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture please state

(a) the amount of loss in cattle wealth in the country since the outbreak of the war and its cost in money equivalent in each year and for each Province, separately, particularly the losses due to rinderpest and other seasonal and infectious diseases, mentioning the fatality figures for each disease, separately,

(b) whether Government are aware that diseases like rinderpest are mostly due to migration of cattle and that they can be successfully brought under control by establishing proper quarantines under strict supervision,

(c) whether Government are aware that the seasonal diseases can also be brought under control by locating the centres where the diseases break out and by arranging adequate medical help at proper time at such places, and

(d) whether Government propose to take early steps in consultation and co-ordination with Provinces on all-India basis for the protection of the already depleted cattle wealth of the country?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Veterinary returns from the Provinces have not been published regularly since 1941. From such reports as are available a statement showing the average annual losses incurred on account of the principal contagious diseases has been prepared and is laid on the table of the House. It is recognised that all the deaths occurring are not reported and that the actual loss is much greater than estimated from the reported figures.

(b) Government recognise that one of the means of controlling the spread of diseases like rinderpest is through the establishment of effective quarantine stations for migrating cattle.

(c) Yes

(d) The subject is under the consideration of Government. A scheme for concentrating inoculation in areas in Bengal which are prone to ravages by imported rinderpest has been sanctioned this year at a cost of Rs 58,500 from the Central Revenue.

Total average annual losses from the principal contagious veterinary diseases, Province-wise, in India excluding States, computed from such data as are available with the Central Government.

Seth Govind Das: Is it a fact that recently these diseases among cattle are increasing particularly in the Central Provinces and no effective steps are being taken by the Government to see that these diseases do not spread?

Mr. B. R. Sen: That is a fact so far as the Central Provinces are concerned. The Central Provinces have established quarantine stations in the northern part of their area and I believe they are doing their best to cope with the spread of the disease.

Mr. R. O. Morris: Is it a fact that the number of veterinary officers in the rural areas in the Madras Presidency is inadequate to deal with outbreaks of rinderpest and other diseases?

Mr. B. R. Sen: That must be correct.

DISPOSAL OF SURPLUSES, OBSOLETE STORES AND SALVAGE BY THE INDUSTRIES AND SUPPLIES DEPARTMENT

553. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state

(a) the amount for which the surpluses, obsolete stores and salvage have been disposed of out of the stocks purchased for war purposes by his Department since the de facto termination of the hostilities, and

(b) the cost for which these were purchased and the expenses incurred in storing, maintaining and disposing of the same?

Mr. M. P. Pal: (a) During the period 1st September 1945 (V J Day) to 30th September 1946 sales of surplus stores (including obsolete stores) by the Directorate General of Disposals and its Agencies and Branches totalled Rs. 25.2 crores. During the same period recoveries from sales of salvage amounted to Rs. 10.5 crores.

(b) The book-value of the above surpluses was Rs. 86.5 crores. The book value of salvage disposed of is not available.

The expenditure on the Disposals Organisation from 1st September 1945 to 30th September 1946 was roughly Rs. 80 lakhs.

The Disposals Organization is not responsible for storage and maintenance of surpluses pending disposal. Separate figures of storage and maintenance costs for such stores are not available and the results achieved will not be commensurate with the additional work involved in computing them.

Seth Govind Das: Are Government aware that there are rumours of corruption in the Disposal Department and may I know whether Government will take steps to make inquiries into the matter?

Mr. M. P. Pal: There is corruption in every department of Government. If specific instances are brought to the notice of Government, they would be investigated.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Is it a fact that Government is making cent per cent profit in the disposal of these goods and may I ask the Honourable Member whether this policy is always going to continue?

Mr. M. P. Pal: It is not the policy to sell any article at the best price. It is the policy to sell it in consonance with the Government's general anti-inflationary policy. There might be a profit but it is not made deliberately.

DIFFERENCE IN LOCAL WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

554. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state

(a) whether it is a fact that different local weights and measures are in use in different parts of the country,

(b) whether it is a fact that this variety is a great handicap in inter-provincial and even inter-district trade,

(c) whether the Government of India have decided to accept the decimal system of coinage, and

(d) whether Government propose to take early steps to introduce a uniform system of weights and measures for use throughout the country, and adopt the metric system for this purpose?

Mr. M. P. Pal: (a) Yes

(b) Yes

(c) Government have already introduced a Bill to establish a decimal system of coinage.

(d) I invite the Honourable Member's attention to the Standards of Weight Act passed by the Legislature in 1939 and the rules made thereunder copies of which are available in the Library. Both the Act and the rules were brought into force with effect from the 1st July 1942. The enforcement of the use of weights based on the Standards of Weight Act, 1939 and standardization of measures are matters for the Provincial Governments. Some of the Provincial Governments have already legislated on the subject and Provincial Governments who have not yet passed any legislation on the subject have been requested to do so. Government are also in correspondence with Chief Commissioners and it is hoped that weights and measures will be standardised in the Centrally administered areas shortly.

As regards the introduction of the metric system, Government have invited the views of the Provincial Governments, the commercial community and various other organisations. The question will be further examined on receipt of all replies.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: In view of the fact that the standardisation of weights and measures has been hanging fire for a number of years and the Central Government has been pleading inability to do anything because it is a provincial matter, will Government consider the advisability of calling a conference of the representatives of these Provincial Governments so that they may be able to persuade them to introduce necessary legislation to standardise these things?

Mr. M. P. Pal: If the Government of India do not receive replies which they consider satisfactory, that suggestion will certainly be considered.

PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT TO ANGLO-INDIANS AND EX-SERVICE MEN IN RAILWAY SERVICES

555. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state

(a) whether Government are aware that a policy of undue preference to ex-service men and Anglo-Indians and of exclusion of person who participated even indirectly or were suspected to be sympathetic to the Indian National Resistance Movement of 1942 is being pursued for employment in railway services,

(b) whether it is a fact that a circular was issued some time in 1942 or at any time thereafter excluding persons who were dismissed from the Railway services on account of alleged participation in or sympathy with the 1942 Movement referred to in part (a) above and banning their re-employment,

(c) whether the said circular is still in force.

(d) if so, whether Government propose to rescind the said circular and re-instate the persons affected by it?

(e) [Not put]

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) 70 per cent of the permanent vacancies which occurred from the 1st June, 1942, to 31st December, 1945, have been reserved for ex-service men. Apart from this, no special preference is given to them. As regards Anglo-Indians and Domiciled Europeans, Government decided in 1934 that to safeguard their interests, 8 1/3 per cent of the vacancies to be filled by direct recruitment should be reserved for them. No special instructions were issued to Railways in regard to the exclusion of the persons referred to by the Honourable Member. Very early in 1942 prior to the 1942 movement, instructions were issued requiring the verification by the Police of the character and antecedents of persons selected for temporary appointment to posts connected with war work under Government and those whose character and antecedents were reported to be unsatisfactory were excluded from service. In 1944 these instructions were further amplified to provide for action being taken on receipt of adverse Police reports against those who might have been inadvertently appointed without proper verification or who might have subsequently become corrupted.

(b) No circular, other than that containing the instruction referred to in the reply to part (a) above, was issued. In accordance with rule 151 of the State Railway Establishment Code, Volume I a copy of which is in the library of the House a person who has been dismissed from Railway service for any reason is not eligible for re-employment without the specific sanction of higher authority. It is likely that the cases referred to in this part of the question were dealt with in terms of the rule mentioned.

(c) and (d) Government have decided to review cases of persons who have been disqualified during the last five years on adverse police reports or on political grounds (including cases of Government servants who have been dismissed for such reasons during that period). They have also decided to review other cases on individual representation.

AIR-CONDITIONED COACHES BETWEEN DELHI AND AHMEDABAD

556. *Mr. Vadilal Lalubhai: (a) Is the Honourable the Railway Member aware that there is one air-conditioned coach running between Delhi and Ahmedabad, which requires an extra bogey for housing the machinery?

(b) Are Government aware that for this provision of ten air-conditioned seats, the Railway deprives about 180 third class passengers of travel facilities?

(c) Are Government aware that this coach is an old one involving heavy expenditure to Government and great inconvenience to third class passengers?

(d) Do Government propose to inquire into the matter and put a stop to this kind of uneconomical travel facilities?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes, one bogie air-conditioned coach and one bogie generator car run on 1 Up and 2 Down Mails between Ahmedabad and Delhi four days a week

(b) No The air-conditioned unit is in addition to the normal composition of the train, and third class accommodation has not been curtailed to make room for it

(c) The air-conditioned coach is a converted military ward car and cost less than a new coach would have done The question of heavy expenditure to Government does not, therefore, arise, nor is there any question of inconvenience to third class passengers

(d) Government do not admit that the air-conditioned travel facilities provided are uneconomical and do not, therefore, propose to order their discontinuance

Mr. Vadilal Lalubhai: Will the Government not be able to attach two third class coaches in place of these air-conditioned coaches?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: That suggestion is very interesting, it will be considered

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: In view of the fact that air travel is becoming very popular, will the Honourable Member try to avoid attaching these air-conditioned coaches to any trains?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: In fact, I am thinking of air-conditioning all the coaches, if possible

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Is the Honourable Member aware that air-conditioned coaches are very necessary especially in the summer?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: That is a matter of opinion

(b) WRITTEN ANSWERS

THROUGH BOGY BETWEEN PATNA AND DEHRA DUN.

557. *Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) whether Government are aware that the passengers from Patna travelling to Dehra Dun feel much inconvenience because lack of through boggy for the passengers between these two stations, and

(b) whether Government propose to introduce the running of a boggy for 1st and 2nd class passengers between these two Stations in any convenient train from both sides?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Government are aware that there is no Through-Service coach from Patna to Dehra Dun and vice versa, and that passengers have to change trains at Moghalsara. There is, however, a considerable margin of time between the arrival of one train at Moghalsara and the departure of the connecting train, and the changes occur during daylight at convenient hours Government do not consider that the absence of a Through carriage involves any great inconvenience to passengers

(b) The Railway Administration report that the question of introducing a Through-Service carriage between Patna and Dehra Dun during the summer months will be considered when the time-table to come into force from April 1947 is taken in hand

EXPORT OF GHEE FROM INDIA.

558. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Secretary of the Food Department please state

(a) the quantity of Ghee exported from India during the preceding three years;

(b) the firms (including the War Department) who exported it together with the quantity thus exported by each firm;

(c) the quantity destroyed by the War Department as unconsumable during that period;

(d) the steps taken to make it available for the consumption of the civilian population; and

(e) the rate per seer at which it is purchased by the War Department together with the names of the firms from whom it is purchased for export?

Mr. B. E. Sen: (a) and (b) A statement is laid on the table of the House.

(c) Nil

(d) Does not arise

(e) A statement is laid on the table of the House

Statement with reference to parts (a) and (b)

Year	Quantity of Ghee exported	By whom exported Tons.
1943	62 3	Exported as ship stores for the use of Indian crews abroad.

(Figures for 1945-46 have not been worked out so far).

TELEPHONE CONNECTIONS IN DELHI.

559. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state

(a) the number of applications for new connections of telephones in Delhi received by the Delhi Office during the preceeding three years,

(b) the number of such applicants who are given connections, and

(c) the cost of the printing of the Directory of June, 1946 of Delhi Telephone District?

Sir Harold Shobert: (a) and (b) During the preceding three years namely 1943-44, 1944-45 and 1945-46, 1943 applications for telephones were received, 1195 of the applicants were given connections

(c) The cost of printing 10,000 copies of the June 1946 issue of the Directory was Rs 7,500

STENOGRAPHERS ON SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAYS.

560. *Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state

(a) whether it is a fact that there is only one stenographer in the South Indian Railway, others doing the work of stenographers on that Railway being designated as Personal Clerks, if so, is the nature of the work of the latter different from that of the former,

(b) whether it is a fact that the increase in pay sanctioned by the Railway Board to stenographers of all State Railways with effect from the 1st April, 1944 was not given effect to on the South Indian Railway because the stenographers on that Railway have a different designation, viz., Personal Clerks,

(c) whether it is a fact that as a result of the various representations from the staff concerned, the General Manager of the South Indian Railway recommended that the increase referred to in part (b) above be given to such staff but the Railway Board turned down the recommendation, and

(d) if so, whether Government propose to issue instructions that "personal clerks" on the South Indian Railway doing the work of stenographers be given the increase in pay with retrospective effect from the 1st April, 1944?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) The S I Railway have two sanctioned grades of stenographers, viz., Confidential Stenographer—Rs 200—10—250 (Old and Revised), Stenographers—Old Scale Rs 180—7½—160, New Scale Rs 140 (fixed)

At present there is one post in each grade, There are Personal or Camp Clerks who were originally recruited as clerks and not as stenographers. These men are borne on the clerical cadre and in the course of their duties as departmental clerks attached to officers whom they sometimes accompany on line, they do stenography. They are eligible for transfer or promotion to other posts in their own Department, provided they are suitable and pass the necessary departmental tests. With regard to the latter part of the question, the difference is that the duties for which Personal and Camp Clerks are recruited are essentially clerical, while stenographers are essentially recruited to stenographic work

(b) Yes, but the temporary increase in pay sanctioned by the Railway Board for stenographers on Railways with effect from the 1st April 1944 was withheld from Personal and Camp Clerks not merely because of the difference in designation, but because of the reasons given in my reply to part (a) above

(c) The reply is in the affirmative

(d) In view of the reply to part (a) and (b) above, Government do not consider an alteration of the previous decision of the Railway Board is called for

TELEPHONE CONNECTIONS FOR MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE IN NEW DELHI

561. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Secretary of the Communications Department please state whether Government are aware of the difficulties of members of the Legislature not merely for fixing up the house, but also for fixing a telephone in such houses?

(b) Is it a fact that applications for a telephone from members of the Legislature have been held up for a week or two at a time and that connection could not be secured till towards the end of the sessions?

(c) What steps do Government propose to take to put an end to complaints of this order?

(d) Do Government propose to appoint a small Committee of the House to enquire into these matters?

Sir Harold Shobert: (a) and (b). There has been some delay in the installation of telephones at the residences of a few members of the House which Government greatly regrets. As regards the difficulty about houses the Honourable Member's attention is invited to the replies given by the Secretary, Works, Mines and Power Department to questions No 813 and 814 on 7th November 1946

(c) Special instructions have been issued to secure prompt installation of telephones at members' residences. It must however be stated for the information of the Honourable Member that at houses not already wired for telephones or where underground telephone cables are not available, some delay is bound to occur in providing connections.

(d) In view of the replies given to parts (a) to (c), the appointment of a Committee is not considered necessary but it is understood that the matter is being laid before the House Committee of the Legislature at the instance of one Honourable Member

IMPORT AND DISTRIBUTION OF NEWSPRINT SINCE 1940

562. *Hafiz M. Ghazanfarulla: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies kindly place on the table of the House a detailed statement on the import and distribution of newsprint since 1940?

(b) How much newsprint was imported in this country in 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944 and 1945?

(c) How much of the abovementioned newsprint was given from year to year, since 1940 to Assam, Bengal, Bihar, the United Provinces, Delhi, Punjab, North-West Frontier Province, Sind, Bombay the Central Provinces Madras, and Orissa?

(d) How much out of the abovementioned newsprint was given to the Hindu-owned newspapers, journals, and periodicals from year to year since 1940, and similarly how much was given to the Muslim-owned newspapers journals and periodicals, and how much was given to newspapers, journals and periodicals owned by communities other than Hindus and Muslims?

Mr. M. P. Pai: (a) The newsprint control was instituted on 12th April 1941 in order to conserve shipping and dollar exchange. Originally it consisted of the issue of licences for imports to established importers on the basis of their imports from the North-American countries during the six months August 1940 to January 1941. Supplies from the Scandinavian countries disappeared soon after on account of the war situation. In September 1941 a quota allotment system was introduced in replacement of the previous system which had put dealers into a quasi-monopolistic position and all newspapers were granted quota allotments based on their annual consumption in 1940 and 1941. These allotments were cut down as our supplies dwindled, the cuts being 25 per cent for January-June 1942, 50 per cent for July-December 1942, and 87½ per cent for January-March 1943. The present rationing scheme was introduced in replacement of the quota allotment scheme in April 1943 since the cuts were falling harshly on small consumers after a conference with newspaper interests. At present the basic quota of every paper is 45 per cent of its consumption in July-December 1942 if its consumption in 1940-41 was 75 tons per year, 65 per cent of its consumption in July-December 1942 if its annual consumption in 1940-41 was between 10 and 75 tons, and a 100 per cent of its consumption in July-December 1942 if its consumption in 1940-41 was under ten tons per year. This was intended to graduate the cut so that it fell more severely on the large newspapers than on the small ones. As a result of improvement in supplies, there is an addition of 25 per cent to these basic quotas at present.

(b) The quantity of newsprint imported in this country since 1940 year by year is as follows

1939-40	36,714
1940-41	30,730
1941-42	28,277
1942-43	11,237
1943-44	13,777
1944-45	22,418

(c) and (d) As will be seen from the answer to question (a), the scheme of newsprint control in force is based on consumption in normal years, and is not related to any factor of ownership, community or province. The monthly quotas are based on the consumption in July-December 1942 graduated with reference to the consumption in the previous year so that the cut falls more severely on large consumers than on small. Newspapers and periodicals circulate in more provinces than one, and it is not, therefore, possible to state how much newsprint is consumed by any particular province. It is also not possible without elaborate enquiry to decide how much is consumed by newspapers owned by any particular community. Newspapers which were not in circulation in the basic period and new newspapers started subsequently have been allowed quotas for the purpose of facilitating the expression of political points of view not adequately represented in the existing Press. The basic quotas of such papers have been fixed ad hoc and have sometimes been subsequently increased on the merits of each case.

SHIP BUILDING YARD AT BHATKAL IN BOMBAY PRESIDENCY

563. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Is the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies aware that a Bombay Firm is trying to establish a ship-building yard at Bhatkal, a port in the Western Coast of the Bombay Presidency?

(b) If so, what do Government propose to do in the matter?

(c) Do Government intend to grant the proposed firm any concession or licence to establish the industry as a private capitalist concern? If so, why?

(d) Do Government propose to consult local public opinion before taking any step in the matter?

Mr. M. P. Pal: (a) No, Sir

(b), (c), and (d) Do not arise.

NEW TEXTILE POLICY OF THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT.

564. *Mr. R. C. Morris: Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies be pleased to state

(a) whether the Central Government approve of the proposed new textile policy of the Madras Government, and

(b) whether the proposed policy is in accordance with the declared industrial policy of the Central Government?

Mr. M. P. Pal: (a) and (b). The Government of India have written to the Government of Madras asking for an authoritative exposition of their reported textile policy and pending the receipt of their reply I regret I am unable to

ALLOTMENT OF NEW MOTOR CARS TO COORG

565. *Mr. B. C. Morris: Will the Honourable Member for Transport be pleased to state

(a) the number of new motor cars that have been allocated to the Province of Coorg during 1946, and

(b) whether Government are aware that non-officials in Coorg have hitherto this year been unable to obtain new cars?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Two

(b) Government have no information on this point as actual allocation of cars was made by the Provincial Motor Transport Controller, Coorg

• LACK OF BOOKING FACILITIES FOR GOODS AT GHORPURI STATION

566. *Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that goods booked for Stations between Hubli and Poona from Bombay are held up at the Ghorpuri Station on account of want of adequate booking, and that this has resulted in great hardships to merchants and consumers? If so, what measures are proposed to be taken to arrange for more adequate booking?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: It is assumed that the Honourable Member refers to the transshipment arrangements at Ghorpuri and not to booking arrangements

The railway administration report that goods booked from Bombay to station between Hubli and Poona via Ghorpuri are not detained at the latter station and that the transshipment arrangements at Ghorpuri are adequate. The question of more adequate transshipment arrangements at Ghorpuri does not therefore arise

It is true however that owing to heavy booking of foodgrains and sugar via the Ghorpuri route, which must be given priority, it has been necessary to impose restrictions on booking of other traffic for stations on the metre gauge route via Ghorpuri

The railway administration will be asked to consider whether it is necessary to increase the capacity of the metre gauge line south of Ghorpuri to meet demands of normal traffic

REPORT OF MR. PEPPERALL ON MILK PROBLEM IN INDIA

567. *Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state

(a) whether Government have considered the Report submitted by Mr Pepperall in respect of the milk problem in India, and

(b) what steps Government propose to take to implement the recommendations made in that Report

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Yes, Sir

(b) The Honourable Member may kindly see the reply to part (c) of Assembly Question No. 880 asked by Mr Jhunjhunwala on the 12th March, 1946

REPORT OF DR. B. V. N. NAIDU TO MADRAS GOVERNMENT re PRICES OF PADDY AND RICE.

568. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: Will the Secretary of the Food Department be pleased to state

(a) if his attention is drawn to the summary of the Report made to the Government of Madras by Dr. B. V. N. Naidu (Hindu, dated the 30th October, 1946) in which he said that in fixing the limits of prices of foodgrains in stabilising them, "such factors as margin of profit for the cultivator, costs of cultivation, prices of manufactured goods consumed by the farmers and the level of prices in the other Provinces and countries have to be taken into account",

(b) if Government are aware that the present level of basic controlled prices of paddy and rice in the Madras Presidency are so low as not to satisfy the conditions prescribed either by Dr Naidu or even the Gregory's Food Grains Policy Committee; and

(c) whether it is a fact that the Government of Madras have actually represented to the Government of India that the present levels of prices are unremunerative?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) The Government of India do not consider the present level of paddy and rice prices in Madras as too low.

(c) Yes, Sir

CROP AND CATTLE INSURANCE SCHEMES SUGGESTED BY DR. B. V. N. NAIDU TO THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT.

569. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state.

(a) if he has seen the Press Summary of Dr. B. V. N. Naidu's report to the Government of Madras published in the Hindu of the 30th October, 1946, in which he suggested the inauguration of a "Crop and Cattle Insurance Scheme on the lines of the Federal Crop Insurance in the United States of America";

(b) whether the Government of India propose to appoint a small expert committee to prepare such an insurance scheme in order to protect our vast peasant masses from the vicissitudes of seasons, pests, cattle epidemics, and

(c) whether in preparing their schemes, Government would also keep in mind the responsibility of the community as a whole to make a suitable contribution to such schemes as in the case of unemployment insurance scheme in England?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Yes, Sir

(b) and (c) The suggestions will be examined

STENOGRAPHERS IN SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY

570. *Sri M. K. Jinachandran: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state whether it is a fact that Stenographers on the South Indian Railway, with a solitary exception, are all designated as Personal Clerks or Camp Clerks and that they alone of all Government Railways have been denied the general increase of pay which was sanctioned by the Railway Board in 1944 to stenographers of all the Government Railways, because of their having designations other than that of stenographers?

(b) Are not stenographers sometimes designated as Personal Assistants, Camp Clerks, etc in Government Offices?

(c) If the Personal Clerks or Camp Clerks on the South Indian Railway are actually doing stenographic work, will the Honourable Member please order that they should be given the increase of pay with retrospective effect, that is from the date on which it was given effect to on all other Government Railways?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) and (c). I would invite attention to the reply just given to Miss Maniben Kara's starred question No. 560

(b) Yes, but they are invariably recruited as stenographers and retain their identity as such.

RAILWAY BRIDGE OVER THE RIVER BANGULI NEAR MAHIMAGANJ STATION ON BENGAL ASSAM RAILWAY.

571. *Manjiv Abdul Hamid Shah: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state:

(a) whether it is a fact that there is no arrangement for pedestrians to cross the Railway bridge over the River Banguli near the Mahimaganj Station on the Bengal and Assam Railway;

(b) whether Government are aware that due to high embankment of Railway there is water logging at all places and pedestrians have no other way of crossing except over the Railway bridge,

(c) whether Government are aware that many accidents have occurred owing to this; and

(d) whether Government propose to remedy this by making a footpath along the bridge?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes, this is so

(b) The Government are not prepared to admit that water logging at all places is caused by high railway embankments. As regards this particular place, pedestrians can cross by boats

(c) No case has been reported

(d) No Railway bridges in general, and this one in particular, exist solely for the passage of railway traffic. In such cases, persons other than Railway employees making use of the bridge are trespassing and, therefore, are liable to punishment on conviction. In special cases exceptions have been made and footpaths have been added to existing structures by arrangement with, and at the cost of, the Provincial Government concerned.

MOHAMMADAN APPLICANT FOR STALL IN MAHIMAGANJ RAILWAY STATION ON BENGAL ASSAM RAILWAY.

572. *Maulvi Abdul Hamid Shah: Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state

(a) whether there was any Mohammadan applicant to open a Stall in the Railway Compound of the Mahimaganj Railway Station in the Bengal and Assam Railway,

(b) whether it is a fact that Mohammadan passengers sent an application for providing a Mohammadan stall,

(c) whether it is a fact that the Station Master recommended the application stating that a Mohammadan Stall is necessary;

(d) whether it is a fact that, in spite of these, the Railway authority refused permission stating that a Mohammadan stall was unnecessary, though 90 per cent of passengers belong to the Mohammadan Community, and

(e) whether Government propose to take steps to grant a licence to a Mohammadan to open a Stall there?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a), (b), (c) and (d) Information is not available at the headquarters of the Bengal Assam Railway Administration, but has been called for from the District Traffic Superintendent's Office at Katihar. A reply will be placed on the table of the House immediately the required information is received.

(e) This is a matter which the Railway Administration will consider when in possession of detailed information.

WORKING HOURS FOR CLERKS IN STORES DEPARTMENT OF B., B. & C. I RAILWAY AJMER

573. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state as to why the clerks in the Stores Department, Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway (Metre Gauge), Ajmer, are asked to work after the scheduled office hours and, as such, to put in ten to twelve hours hard work daily, while they are not paid a single pie extra? Do Government propose to stop this practice?

(b) Why do not Government provide for additional staff? Do Government propose to allow overtime allowance to such members of the staff, who are working beyond the scheduled hours of work, till additional staff is provided to release them from such work?

(c) Why have some of the clerks of the Stores Department, Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, Ajmer not been given increment for the last fifteen to twenty years, while their juniors have been promoted on one excuse or the other? How many such cases are there, and do Government propose to hold an enquiry into these cases and make arrangements for the immediate relief of the sufferers?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: The information has been called for and will be laid on the table of the House in due course

UNCOVERED PLATFORMS AT BEAWAR AND INDORE

574. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if it is a fact that Beawar in Rajputana and Indore in Central India are two important commercial and industrial centres and are a source of considerable income to the Railway?

(b) Is it a fact that the platforms at both these places are uncovered and that passengers are put to great inconvenience on that account?

(c) Is it a fact that there are no water supplying and electric lighting arrangements at these stations? Do Government propose to issue necessary instructions for providing these amenities for the travelling public at these stations at an early date? If not, why not?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) Yes

(b) The platforms at both these stations are uncovered. The extension of roofs to cover the platforms at Beawar is included in the post-war reconstruction plans. A re-modelling scheme for Indore station is under examination, but has yet to be finalised and the provision of funds for building roofs over the station platforms is being considered.

(c) Information with regard to existing arrangements for supplying water is being obtained and will be laid on the table of the House later. If the arrangements are found inadequate they will be improved. Electric lighting is already provided at Indore station, and is to be introduced at Beawar when post war reconstruction work is undertaken at that station.

POLICY re MOTOR TRANSPORT BUSINESS AND RAIL-ROAD COORDINATION SCHEME IN AJMER-MERWARA, DELHI, ETC

575. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Transport be pleased to state if the Central Government have laid down any definite policy in respect of Motor Transport business and the Rail-Road Co-ordination Scheme in Ajmer-Merwara, Delhi, and other Centrally Administered Areas?

(b) If so, to what extent is such policy being followed by the different Provincial Governments?

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: (a) and (b) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given on the 28th October, 1946 to question No 3, asked by Sardar Mangal Singh, in which the principles of the Interim Government's Policy regarding motor transport and road-rail co-ordination were indicated. Those principles hold good in respect of the Chief Commissioner's Provinces and their application to such Provinces is under consideration.

SCALES OF PAY AND DEARNESS ALLOWANCE OF STAFF IN SETTLEMENT OPERATIONS IN AJMER-MERWARA

576. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: Has the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture received through the Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara any representation from Members of the staff engaged in the settlement operations in the Province of Ajmer-Merwara, in respect of meagre scales of their pay and dearness allowances? If so what action has been taken or is contemplated to be taken by Government thereon?

Mr. B. E. Sen: A letter for raising the minimum pay of the subordinate staff employed in the Settlement Department, Ajmer-Merwara, was received from the Settlement Officer through the Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara. In view of the interim relief measures announced by Government in August 1946, it is proposed to await the recommendations of the Central Pay Commission.

ISTIMRARI TENURE IN AJMER-MERWARA

577. *Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture please state as to why the reports submitted by the Dela Fa Committee and by Mr Irwin in respect of the Istimrari Tenure in Ajmer-Merwara are being kept confidentially?

(b) In view of the changed political atmosphere in the country and the advent of the National Government at the Centre, do Government propose to revise the previous policy and publish these reports for the information of the public or, at any rate, lay them on the table of the House for the use of the Honourable Members of this House?

(c) How many new wells have been sunk in the Province of Ajmer-Merwara, and what amount of subsidies or loans have been granted for such purposes so far?

(d) In view of the rocky soil and the extreme poverty and indebtedness of cultivators in the Province of Ajmer-Merwara, do Government propose to consider the advisability of increasing the percentage of subsidy for sinking new wells or for deepening the existing wells?

Mr. B. E. Sen: (a) It was considered that the publication of the reports, without further action for protecting the tenants, would only strain the relations between the Istimrardars and their tenants, to the detriment of the latter and that it would be better not to publish the report till the proposed tenancy legislation could be introduced. The Dela Fargue report is less in favour of the tenants than the Irwin report.

(b) The question of placing a copy in the Library of the House is being examined.

(c) 24 new wells have been constructed and four existing wells deepened and improved. A loan of Rs 20,800 has been given for the purpose of which Rs 4,160 will be treated as a subsidy or grant, and the balance of Rs 16,640 recovered in due course.

(d) The rate of subsidy has recently been raised from 20 per cent to 50 per cent.

CORRUPTION IN CIVIL SUPPLY DEPARTMENT OF CENTRAL AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS

578. *Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state if Government are aware that there is very great corruption and favouritism in Civil Supply Departments of the Central and Provincial Governments?

(b) Are Government aware that Civil Supply Offices possess very large powers of patronage for giving permits and licences, and that complaint against misuse of these powers are universal?

(c) Are Government aware that among other kinds of complaints the complaint of giving permits and licences to new persons as against old merchants in trade for purposes of extortion and furthering communal interests by officials is very general?

(d) Do Government propose taking away these drastic powers in the public interest and to end the system of licences and permits as soon as possible?

(e) In case this system is not going to be ended soon, do Government propose to take steps to regulate the system by strict rules and vigilant observance so that the powers of granting licences and permits are not abused?

Mr. M. P. Pal: (a) There have been cases of corruption in the Industries and Supplies Department. Information regarding the Civil Supply Departments of the Provincial Governments should be asked of them

(b) Varying degrees of powers to grant permits and licences are exercised by officers appointed in connection with the administration of controls and complaints are bound to occur. If the Honourable Member will bring to my notice any particular case, I shall be glad to look into it

(c) and (d) So long as there is necessity for control, the system of licences and permits has to be maintained. The case for licensing of trade was explained in a statement which was circulated by me to all the Honourable Members towards the end of the last week

(e) It has always been the aim of Government to see that rules relating to the administration of controls are so framed as to minimize possibilities of abuse

SLAUGHTER OF CATTLE

579. *Fundit Thakur Das Bhargava: Has the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture received any representations that slaughter of Cattle should be stopped in terms of notifications of the Government of India dated the 30th September, 1946, in the whole of India? Has any action been taken in the matter so far?

Mr. B. E. Sen: Some representations have been received for continuing the restrictions on the slaughter of cattle. No notification against the slaughter of cattle has been issued by the Government of India on the 30th September, 1946. Letters were issued to all Provincial Governments and Administrations on that date drawing their attention to the shortage of cattle in the country, both for cultivation and milk supply, and requesting them to take such measures as they may, in the light of local conditions, consider feasible to continue the restrictions on the slaughter of useful cattle hitherto imposed by most Provincial Governments and Administrations under the Defence of India Rules. According to information available to the Government of India, the Governments of Madras and Sind have so far assumed necessary legal powers and reimposed the restrictions on the slaughter of useful cattle

MANUFACTURE OF VEGETABLE GHEE FROM COTTON SEED

580. *Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Secretary of the Food Department be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that cotton-seed is being used for the manufacture of vegetable ghee,

(b) if so, the names of the factories so using it,

(c) the quantity of cotton-seed being so used yearly; and

(d) whether Government propose to take steps for preventing the use of cotton seed for vegetable ghee, in view of the urgent need for making adequate cattle food available?

Mr. B. E. Sen: (a) Yes

(b) The Ganesh Flour Mills, Delhi, the Modi Vanaspati Co., Modinagar, and the Hindustan Vanaspati Co., Bombay, are three factories which are reported to be using small quantities of cotton seed oil, mixed with ground nut oil for producing vanaspati

(c) 118 tons of cotton seed oil.

(d) Government do not propose to prevent the use of cotton seed for vanaspati production as they are advised that it will add to fats available for human consumption, without reducing food for cattle, as oil left in the cake after crushing is as much as cattle can digest.

PRICE OF COCONUT

561. Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state.

(a) whether it is a fact that there has been a rise in the price of coconut; and if so, to what extent as compared with the pre-war price,

(b) whether it is a fact that quantities of coconut used to be imported, and if so, from what countries, and in what quantities during the years 1935-1946;

(c) what steps Government are taking to make coconut of a lower price more largely available to the consumers, and

(d) whether coconut oil is being used by the Soap Industry in India, and if so, the average quantity used during a year?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) The price of coconuts, at Calcutta has increased from Rs. 57-15-0 per thousand in 1928-29 and Rs. 20-14-0 per thousand in 1938-39 to Rs. 160 per thousand in September, 1946

(b) A statement showing the available information is laid on the table of the House

(c) Government have under consideration a scheme for fixing floor and ceiling prices for indigenous copra and coconut oil. It is expected that with the fixation of these prices the prices of raw coconuts will adjust themselves.

(d) Yes The quantity of coconut oil used by the Soap Industry in India during the quinquennium ending 1938-39 was estimated to average about 80,000 tons annually. The relevant data for recent years are not available

WAGES TO STRIKERS IN THE POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT FOR STRIKE PERIOD

582. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Department of Communications please state

(a) if Government intend to pay the wages of the strikers of the Posts and Telegraphs Department for the period of strike, if so, when, if not, why not, and

(b) if it is a fact that the Honourable Member in charge of the Department at that time gave a promise that there will be no victimisation of the strikers?

Sir Harold Shoober: (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to part (a) of Starred Question No 22 asked by Miss Maniben Kara on the 28th October, 1946

(b) Yes

STRIKE IN THE POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

583. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Department of Communications please state

(a) the number of employees of the Posts and Telegraphs Department involved in the last Postal Strike,

(b) the categories to which they belonged, .

(c) the amount of their wages for the strike period,

(d) the number of outsiders employed during the strike period

(e) the number of days for which they were employed,

(f) the amount of work disposed of by them,

(g) the amount and remuneration and other expenses incurred on them, and

(h) if any vouchers were kept for tea and refreshments, etc supplied to them?

Sir Harold Shoober: (a) to (e), (g) and (h) Information is being collected from subordinate offices. A statement will be laid on the table of the House as soon as complete facts are available

(f) It is not possible to estimate the actual amount of work disposed of by outsiders who were employed during the strike, they attended to the regular departmental work entrusted to them

RESEARCH WORK IN THE AGRICULTURAL ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

584. *Sri V. O. Vellingri Gounder: (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state whether Government are aware that not much research work is being done in the Agricultural Engineering Departments under Provincial Governments?

(b) Considering the importance of these agricultural engineering work to the development of agriculture, do Government propose to send suitable men to provinces for training in agricultural engineering and by subsidizing agricultural engineering workshops and in other suitable ways?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Government are aware that a certain amount of research work is done in agricultural engineering sections of Provincial Departments of Agriculture and that there is considerable scope for the expansion of such research work. Provision for the expansion of agricultural engineering activities exists in the Post-war Development Plans of several Provincial Governments

(b) Twenty four students have been sent abroad by Government for training in Agricultural Engineering. Financial assistance is given by the Central Government to the Provincial Governments for implementing their Post-war Development Plans which include Schemes for the expansion of agricultural engineering activities.

BAN IN BRITISH INDIA FOR ENTERING A PARTICULAR TRADE.

585. *Captain Syed Abid Hussain: Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies please state whether it is a fact that within the limits of British India there exists no bar on any section of the population entering into a particular trade?

Mr. M. P. Pal: No, Sir

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

CULTIVATION NEAR QUEENSWAY IN NEW DELHI

61. Mr. Madandhari Singh: (a) Will the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture be pleased to state if it is a fact that cultivation was done departmentally this year near Queensway in New Delhi?

(b) If the reply to part (a) above is in the affirmative, what was the expenditure on cultivation and labour charges, etc ?

(c) What was the area?

(d) How much was the produce?

(e) What was the total expenditure and income?

Mr. B. R. Sen: (a) Yes The cultivation in the Central Vista was done by the Central P W D and the Horticultural Division under the direction of a Committee on which both the Agriculture and the W M and P Departments are represented

(b) to (e) The Honourable Member may kindly see the reply given to Starred Question No 24 asked by Mr Sri Prakasa on the 28th October, 1946

TELEPRINTER LINES IN INDIA

82. Seth Govind Das: Will the Secretary of the Department of Communications please state

(a) how many Indian and foreign news agencies have applied for permission to lay teleprinter lines in India,

(b) the date on which the monopoly of the Associated Press of India in this respect comes to an end, and

(c) whether Government propose to give preference in this matter to any news agency which agrees to install teleprinters in any Indian language?

Sir Harold Shobert: (a) Altogether seven news agencies have applied for lease of teleprinter circuits

(b) The only agency which leased circuits for the distribution of news before the war was Reuters, the existing 5-year lease will ordinarily expire in 1949.

(c) There are no teleprinters in Indian languages As regards preferences, no reply can be given at present as the whole question of policy in the leasing of teleprinter circuits to press agencies is still under consideration of Government

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mr. President: I find two short notice questions have been tabled, one by Mr Madandhari Singh and the other by Mr Abdur Rahman Siddiqi Both of them practically relate to the same matter. If the Honourable the Leader of the House so wishes, they may be replied together or they may be replied separately

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: It would be preferable if I answer both of them together.

TOUR BY CABINET MINISTERS OF THE DISTURBED AREAS IN BENGAL AND BIHAR.

Mr. Madandhari Singh: (a) In view of the fact that the Honourable the Leader of the House with his three colleagues has recently concluded a tour of the disturbed areas of Bengal and Bihar, will he be pleased to state whether he proposes to give this House a comprehensive account of the situation in the affected areas of those Provinces?

(b) What actions do Government propose to take and what actions have already been taken by them to control the situation?

STATEMENT ON COMMUNAL DISTURBANCES IN BIHAR.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state whether Government propose to make a statement on the communal trouble in the country and particularly in the Province of Bihar?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Sir, the question which Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi has read out is somewhat different from what is given to me. However, it is a question of wording.

I have accepted these short-notice questions not without hesitation, for it is no easy matter to deal with them. Any proper survey of the communal troubles in the country would be a big undertaking, hardly suited for a relatively brief answer to a question. Yet I have welcomed these questions, for it is the right of Honourable Members to inquire into matters of the most vital significance to the country, and of the House to know what the Government is doing about them. The House will realise that the subject is one which has excited passion all over the country and rightly agitated people's minds. It is difficult to deal with it without raising controversies which embitter. It is not my purpose or desire to say anything which would add to this bitterness or raise a fresh controversy in this House.

The newspapers are full of communal troubles and riots and bloody murder and much worse. No one, certainly not the Government, desires to suppress facts. This House must be seized of the facts so that it may form proper judgment and devise remedies. The facts are bad enough, terribly bad. And yet what often appears in the newspapers is something far removed from facts and the manner of presentation is such as to inflame public passion. I trust, and I am sure the House will agree with me, that it is the duty of all of us, and more especially of the Honourable Members, to be exceedingly careful in these days of crisis and disaster, to take every care not to say or to anything which might excite the people and worsen an already bad situation. One of the worst features of the situation is the dominance of rumours which exaggerates everything and sometimes creates out of nothing. The most fantastic accounts spread rapidly and are believed in. We have to suffer not only insecurity and public disorder, but something which is even worse because it feeds and nurtures that disorder. This is anarchy of the mind. It is just when crisis faces us that we have to maintain the equilibrium of our minds.

To give an account of the communal trouble in the country is to deal with a chain of events going back into the past. One evil action leads to another which again becomes the ostensible cause of further evil. The preaching and practice of hatred and violence inevitably sows seeds which yield bitter fruit. If we sow the wind we have to reap the whirlwind.

Ever since the Interim Government took charge of affairs they have been intensely occupied with these communal troubles. The House will remember that this Government took office very soon after what is called the great Calcutta killing which began on the 16th August. All our work was shadowed by these events and we tried our utmost to deal with this situation. The House knows that the Government of India may not interfere, under the existing constitution, with Provincial autonomy. In so far as any one can interfere under the constitution, it is the Governor-General and not the Governor-General in Council. Nevertheless, as Indians in responsible position to whom the country looked for guidance, we tried our utmost to help. Throughout this unhappy period, whether it was in Calcutta or elsewhere in India, or Noakhali and East Bengal, or Bihar, the Government were acutely conscious of their responsibilities and keenly desirous of combating the peril that had encompassed the country. There has been much public criticism of our seeming inaction because necessarily we could not function in public in regard to these matters. If facts were known, I do not think that this criticism would be considered to be justified.

[Pt Jawaharlal Nehru]

A succession of events, which are known to this House, led to the great Calcutta killing. That was followed by the great tragedy of Noakhali and East Bengal, and that again led to the terrible happenings in Bihar. And now Bihar is leading to other outbursts of brutality and violence. There appears to be a competition in murder and brutality, and unless we put a stop to this, the immediate future of our country is dark. That it can be put a stop to, I have little doubt. Not by a reliance on mere armed force, though that may be necessary occasionally, but by the efforts of all those who influence public opinion, can we put an end to this horror which comes in the way of all political and social progress, and indeed which is already making life a burden for many of us. It must be clearly accepted that we cannot settle any problem by the methods of hatred and violence.

Recently I have come into intimate contact with masses of people in Bihar and I saw the horrors that a simple and likeable peasantry can perpetrate when it loses of all balance and sanity. I found that during the Calcutta killing a large number of Biharis had lost their lives. Their relatives had returned to Bihar together with many other refugees and had spread out all over the rural areas carrying stories of what had happened in Calcutta. The people of Bihar were stirred profoundly. Then came news of Noakhali and East Bengal. These stories, and more especially the accounts of abduction and rape of women and forcible conversion of large numbers of people, infuriated the populace. For some time they looked to the Central Government and hoped that this would give them relief and afford protection. When they did not see any such help or protection forthcoming, they grew bitter and criticized strongly the Interim Government for its apparent inactivity.

Various incidents occurred in Bihar which added to the general excitement. Towards the end of October there was trouble in Chapra District and in Bhagalpur city. This was soon suppressed. Then came, on the 31st October, trouble on a big scale in Patna District, overflowing into Gaya and Monghyr Districts. It was in essence a mass uprising, large numbers of peasants burning and killing mercilessly. As always happens on such occasions, criminal and anti-social elements took part and even took the lead in certain areas. One of the difficulties of the situation was that the areas could not be easily reached because of lack of communications and flooded conditions.

This mass uprising lasted almost exactly one week. Just as it started suddenly, it ended almost equally suddenly. This rapid ending of a wide-spread movement, which was on the verge of spreading to other districts, was remarkable. The military, of course, came in at a somewhat later stage and helped in restoring order. But a much more powerful factor in this restoration of order was the effort of a large number of persons chiefly Biharis, who spread out all over the villages and came face to face with the peasant masses. The news of Mahatma Gandhi's proposed fast also had a powerful effect.

Grossly exaggerated accounts have appeared of the number of casualties during these troubles caused both by infuriated mobs and by military firing. It is difficult to give at present even approximately accurate figures of casualties. But it can be said with certainty that some of the figures appearing in newspapers are completely wrong. They are usually based on accounts of panic-stricken refugees who had lost all balance or judgment.

The Bihar situation was brought completely under control after a week and is quite now. Evidence of a return to normality is the desire of people to return to their villages. The great problem there now is how to rehabilitate these people. The Bihar Government have undertaken responsibility to lodge, feed and provide other necessities including medical relief to the evacuees. I understand that they also propose to give financial assistance to the sufferers in order to help rehabilitation.

As I have stated, the news from and about Noakhali created a very profound feeling in Bihar and the rest of India. I am not in a position to say much about present conditions in East Bengal. But recent reports from reliable witnesses have drawn particular attention to the vital problem of restoring women who were abducted and forcibly converted. This problem is not only important in itself but also because of its all-India repercussions. It is, therefore, urgently necessary that every possible step should be taken with all possible speed to restore them to their people. Only then can beginnings be made of rehabilitation in East Bengal.

It is clearly the duty of the State to give every possible assistance to the sufferers from these disturbances. I hope that Provincial Governments will undertake this duty in adequate measure. This will help also in producing a feeling of security among the people and a psychological atmosphere for a return to normalcy.

Recent events around and near Delhi must be fresh in the minds of Honourable Members. It is time that we put an end to all this sorry business all over India, and I trust that every sensitive Indian, whatever his political views might be, will co-operate with others in this vital and urgent task.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I ask the Honourable Member whether in view of the fact that the happenings in Noakhali were grossly exaggerated by the Press, what steps Government propose to take to see that such false news is not published in future so that we may not be faced with similar happenings in the future?

Mr. President: Order, order. Looking to the nature of the questions which desired for a statement from the Honourable the Leader of the House, I was just considering the position as to whether this should be treated as a normal question and supplementaries permitted. Both the Honourable Members who put in questions, one of them clearly says whether the Government "propose to make a statement" and the other question says that 'comprehensive account' is required. I am afraid if I were to treat these as short notice questions like other questions and allow supplementaries, then all that the Leader of the House has requested will go in vain. But that is not the only consideration on which I am proceeding. If under the Rules, these could be properly treated as questions, then I must allow supplementary questions, but as those are requests for statement and statement alone, I do not propose to allow any supplementary questions treating these as ordinary questions. The answer should be treated as a statement.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT

RIOTING AND BLOODSHED IN DELHI CITY

Mr. President: I have received notice of a motion for adjournment from Maulana Zafar Ali Khan.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan (East Central Punjab Muhammadan) Sir, I move for the adjournment of the House.

Mr. President: I am merely stating that I have received a notice of motion and the reason stated thereon is "the failure of the Government in not being able to stop effectively the rioting and bloodshed in the City of Delhi". It seems there are many hurdles in the way of this motion. In the first instance, notice of this was not given before the commencement of the Business of the House as required by Standing Order 22 which says

"The member asking for leave must, before the commencement of the sitting of the day, leave with the Secretary."

This notice was received by the Secretary two minutes past Eleven. That is after the House commenced business. That is the first hurdle.

The second hurdle is that notice is to be given not only to the Secretary but to the President and the Member of the Government to whose Department it relates. I understand that no notice has been given to the Honourable Member of the Government to whose Department this adjournment motion relates. Is that a correct statement of fact by me? Will the Honourable Member, Maulana Zafar Ali Khan, say whether he has given a copy of this notice to the Honourable Member of Government?

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: I gave notice about half an hour ago to the Secretary.

Mr. President: More than half an hour ago from now.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: I thought the Secretary would hand it over to the Member concerned, the Home Member.

Mr. President: Did the Honourable Member in fact give any notice before eleven of the Clock?

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: That is a technical shortcoming.

Mr. President: Then did he give notice to the Honourable Member in charge of the department? Obviously not. So no further consideration is necessary in respect of this motion and I cannot accept it.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi General): Sir, may I request the Honourable Home Member through you to make a statement on the situation in Delhi, about which we all feel immediately concerned?

Mr. President: That is a matter between the Honourable Member and the Home Member. They can settle it outside the House, but if my permission is wanted for making a statement I shall see whether it should be given or not. At present I do not commit myself to anything.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

Mr. President: I have to inform the Assembly that upto 12 noon on Wednesday, the 18th November, 1946, the time fixed for receiving nominations for the purpose of election of one member to be a member of the Committee on Public Accounts, one nomination was received. As there is only one candidate for the vacancy, I declare Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang to be duly elected to the Committee.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO THE STANDING COMMITTEE ON PILGRIMAGE TO THE HEJAZ.

Mr. President: I have to inform the Assembly that upto 12 Noon on Wednesday, the 18th November, 1946, the time fixed for receiving nominations for the purpose of election of one Muslim member to serve on the Standing Committee on Pilgrimage to the Hejaz, for the unexpired portion of the life of the Committee constituted on the 1st April, 1944, and due to expire on the 31st March, 1947, one nomination was received. As there is only one candidate for the vacancy, I declare Hajee Chowdhury Mohammad Ismail Khan to be duly elected to the Committee.

Mr. S. C. Joshi: Copies were kept here and Honourable Members who desired to have them were requested to ask for them, and those who asked for them got them

BANKING COMPANIES (RESTRICTION OF BRANCHES) BILL—concluded

Mr. President: The House will now take up the consideration of the Banking Companies Bill Mr Sanyal will resume his speech

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal (Presidency Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, yesterday I tried to make out in my own humble way the drawbacks and the objections in respect of the present Bill I tried to make out my case on the ground principally that since this matter along with other matters is before a competent committee and since that committee is going to meet very shortly after the termination of this session, this haste seems to be very much undesirable While on this point I shall invite the attention of the Honourable Finance Member to the graduation in the time and the gradual wisdom of Government in bringing a matter which was originally not in the main conception of the Bill For example, even if we take the Honourable Finance Member's proposition, as we must take it, regarding the facts namely, that from 1938 there was a rapid march in the number of banks and branches, I will draw attention to the fact that between 1938 and 1944 nothing was done, and in 1944 when the first comprehensive Bill for consolidation and management of banking concerns was taken up there was no provision which is analogous or similar to the provision which is now before the House In 1944 the legislature or the authors of the Bill did not consider it at all necessary to go into the question of restricting the operations of banks, old or new Then in 1946 when the bigger Bill came as a substitute for the previous Bill this question came in a much more restricted form, namely, that when new branches are proposed to be opened the Reserve Bank will go into the question of public interest involved But now it is said that what is wanted is to put into immediate operation only clause 18 of the previous Bill I submit that there is a great deal of difference between this Bill and the previous Bill in that not only the question of public interest will be concerned but also wider and more complicated and sometimes very elusive questions of the financial structure and capital position of the bank itself

Now, Sir, yesterday I submitted and I maintain that it is a very controversial question, and this matter is so very intimately connected with other provisions of the Bill that there is no point in hurrying it through at this stage What is the time that will be gained by Government? If the Bill is passed today it will have to go to the other House and we are not sure whether they will be able to dispose of it there, because some other legislative business is already before them which they will have to dispose of before they can concentrate on this Therefore I submit that since the Select Committee is going to finish its business in December or at least some time before the opening of the next session of the House, much will not be gained by getting this Bill passed, and certainly much will be lost because certain untoward circumstances may be brought into existence which, even if Government in their wisdom think will be necessary for the financial interest of the depositors, will ultimately prove to be an impediment to the proper and natural development of some of the very legitimate organisations which go by the name of banking concerns. Yesterday I made reference to the fact that on the one hand there is a contraction imposed by Government in the matter of capital issues, while on the other hand there will be a restriction in the matter of opening branches. So from both ends new enterprises will suffer, and not only new enterprises all over the country but some of the provinces which are comparatively backward in banking matters will particularly suffer. For instance, Bombay and the Punjab have gone much more ahead than other provinces in banking matters. They have got a hold over the whole country, but that does not apply to other provinces. For instance, in my friend's province of Assam there are not more than one or two banks, new banks must come into existence and new branches must also be allowed to function. In Orissa again there is no bank worth the name. Of course Bihar and Bengal stand in a better position than Assam and Orissa, but still compared with the developments in the Punjab and Bombay they are as yet in a state of infancy, and nothing should be done to impede the progress of their banking institutions today. It may be contended that this Bill does not restrict altogether the functioning of these organisations but that it gives the Reserve Bank a power to grant or to refuse permission for these concerns. There is the rub, because neither this law nor the legislature have framed any adequate rules for guidance in the matter of granting or refusing such permission. After all to say vaguely that the Reserve Bank will consider the financial structure, is the rule of the thumb. It is open to the Reserve Bank to say that a bank in Assam, for instance, which is proposing to open a branch has not the financial structure approximating to the standard. There is no standard, there is no statutory provision, there is not even any standard rule. So the Reserve Bank of India will always have the option of refusing any application however desirable that application or that enterprise might be. The Reserve Bank of India has got its own autonomy, it is a sort of autocratic autonomy. The Reserve Bank of India has in the past fattened upon the flesh of all organisations and enterprises and in return the Reserve Bank has not rendered anything. Even last week I know some of the banking concerns in my province—Bengal—have been put under a great handicap. I will not mention names. As I promised yesterday, I will take some of these cases personally to the Honourable the Finance Member and I hope he will pay his attention to the situation with which these banking concerns are confronted. The Reserve Bank keeps in their custody large amounts of money from the other banks, but what do they do in return? Last week some of the banks were put in a very tight corner. Some banks had to close their doors. I have authority to submit that this situation has been brought about less on account of mal-administration on the part of banks themselves than on account of the fact that they were not awarded proper facilities by the Reserve Bank in the matter of expanding their capital issue. But when this exigency arose, did the Reserve Bank of India do anything? Did it try to stand by these struggling banks which were passing through a crisis? After all, if the Reserve Bank enjoys powers, it has got to shoulder the corresponding responsibilities also. The Reserve Bank has turned out to be an institution of bureaucrats. Sir, I cannot speak on behalf of everybody, but on behalf of myself and on behalf of those who think on the same lines, I would appeal to the Government to retrace their steps in the matter of giving more and more powers to the Reserve Bank of India. I would far rather welcome this authority being kept by the Government themselves because at least today when the Government is in the hands of persons who are representatives of progressive political parties, they will go into the questions of their merits and they will be responsible. The Reserve Bank of India will deal with things in the abstract and they will neither have any responsibility nor responsiveness. They refuse a particular application however good and sound on merit that application may be. May I ask what is the remedy? The Central Government has not even the power of hearing appeal. There is no other body which can intervene if the aggrieved bank or if the dissatisfied party wants to make out a case that their application should have been considered on merits.

[Mr Sasanka Sekhri Sanjal]

Then, Sir, there is another aspect. I do not feel happy to make a reference to that, but still I will be failing in my duty if I did not voice the protest of many sections who have reported this matter to me. Supposing a Bank is proposed to be opened at Assam or Orissa, they will have to go to the authorities of the Reserve Bank from that distant province. There is no personal touch between the composition of the Bank and the composition of the Reserve Bank. You know how things turn out as a result of this? These bona fide promoters of banks and banking concerns have to get hold of intermediaries—a sort of unauthorized machinery which has cropped up and developed round the archives of the Reserve Bank, persons who have got neither any legal nor moral locus standi—who stand as a link between the Reserve Bank authorities and enterprising concerns. That is to say, a bank before it can get a permit must get hold of some unlicensed agent. This is not fair. They are not functionaries who are authorized either in the legal or ethical sense of the word. But they have a great deal of influence, and any new concern or any branch of a new concern must have to pay something as a mark of respect to these people before they can cross the threshold of the Reserve Bank of India. I do not mean to say that there is anything wrong within the composition of the Reserve Bank itself, but I submit and maintain that since between the Reserve Bank and the remote corner of the village there is no normal or constitutional or any other natural connection, therefore people who have got to get their business done have to flock to such functionaries and agencies which more or less constitute a sort of blackmarket, and that must be avoided. Therefore, to sum up, I express my objections to this Bill on the ground that it is hasty, on the ground that it is piecemeal, and on the ground that it tries to rush through a matter which is highly controversial, and there is no need for this haste and hurry.

Coming to the structure of the Bill itself, my Honourable friend in clause 3 has proposed something regarding the location of banks. It says

“No banking company shall open a new branch or change the location of an existing branch.”

Sir, today I can concretely deal with propositions and they are not hypothetical and academic, because change of location may mean the change of village, or the change of town, or even the change of building itself. What is happening in East Bengal? Buildings of certain banks have been devastated, papers have been destroyed, and in some cases papers have been removed by the authorities. Is it expected that that bank must function in the original village and in the original building, and that the bank cannot come into operation without going through the process of getting an authority from the Reserve Bank of India? From the exigencies of the situation, it may have been so necessary that a bank which functioned in one village yesterday must function elsewhere today otherwise it will come to a crash. So is it the desire of the Government that in these context of things, these parties and these institutions must cry a halt and then go to the ashes and then wait for a permit from the Reserve Bank? It is a permit which will be absolutely infructuous! What is the provision that is going to be made? A burnt house may create the necessity of a new house for an old branch of a bank. That will mean a change of location. What about this state of things? Therefore, I will appeal to the Honourable the Finance Member to look into this question and, if necessary, get it amended suitably.

Then I come to a more technical, but certainly a very fundamental aspect of the Bill,—penalty. Is this penalty going to be a sentence as we understand it in criminal law, or is it going to be damage as we ordinarily understand it? This leads to the more real question. Who will inflict this penalty? There must be some judicial authority. Will it be criminal authority or civil authority? Will this penalty be determined by a trial in the civil court or by a trial in the criminal court? The language is absolutely incomplete. It does not give an indication and therefore the trouble lies there. After all a man cannot be tried for any contravention of any law unless that law specifically provides that he will be tried under the Criminal Procedure Code or tried as a criminal offence. Without going into the larger question, I will even draw a comparison between this Bill and the bigger Bill which is before the Select Committee. In that more comprehensive Bill, there is a provision which says that the contraventions will not be tried except by a Magistrate of the status of Presidency Magistrate and not lower than that. So far by a clear implication, this is a provision in the Bill that the contravention of the provisions of the law was proposed to be treated as a crime. But since the present measure does not make it clear, we cannot take it for granted and we cannot assume that it will be a crime and not a contravention of the civil law. Therefore, the procedure must be determined. It must be stated who are the authorities who will try and how it will be tried.

There is another matter, that is the sanctioning authority for such prosecutions. After all, during the last ten or twelve years when special legislations have brought into existence a new set of crimes, a salutary feature has been introduced that there must be some specific sanctioning authority for such prosecution. That is very fair and necessary, because under the ordinary criminal law, where offences are done, anyone can set the law in motion except when they relate to certain functions and certain public servants. Otherwise a man in the street can put the law into operation. That is not the purpose in the case of such special legislation because if anyone has the authority to set the law in motion, then very undesirable complications may set in. Here where a particular officer goes for an inspection, probably the bank authorities may have some difficulties at that time. It may be that the Manager may be busy, wants some time. This might prick the vanity of the officer concerned and might complain to the Court for taking action. Therefore some sanctioning authority is necessary. I could understand if the Finance Member proposed that no such prosecution will be allowed except with the sanction of the Finance Department or some authority of the Reserve Bank or something like that to go into the alleged contravention before the matter is brought into the Court. Idle and vexatious complaints it is certainly desirable to avoid. There are control orders and other orders where District Magistrates and Local Governments are given powers, a similar provision should be made in the Bill.

Therefore, I submit that if it is possible for the Honourable the Finance Member to hand over this Bill to the Select Committee which is already in existence, that will be a very fair state of things and it will neither prejudice the Government nor the other party. We are there let us go with an open mind on this case. A difference of a month or two will not bring the heavens upon us. And the other course to which I hinted was that this hasty and rushed legislation might bring about unpleasant complications at the end.

With these observations I commend my motion for acceptance by the House.

Mr. President: Amendment moved.

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Lajpat Ali Khan, the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal, Sir Gwasjee Ichhan Mr. K. G. Ambekar, Mr. Ram Nath, Mr. M. A. F. Huzel, Mr. Geoffrey W. Tve Khan, Mohammad Yamin Khan, Haji Abbas Sattar, Haji Ishaq Seth, Seth Yusuf Abdul Haqim, Mr. Mohd. M. Killeddar, Mr. Manu Subedar, Shri Mahan Lal Sakseena, Shri Anantharaman Ayyangar, Mr. P. R. Gole, Sri T. A. Rameshram, Chettai Sri R. Narayan Sadas, Sardar Manohar Singh and the Mover with instructions to report by 31st December 1946 and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Mr. K. G. Ambekar (Government of India, Nominated Official). I see from the speech to which the House has just listened that there is considerable misunderstanding with regard to the scope, measure and the necessity of the Bill before the House. I feel therefore that it would facilitate and expedite the passage of this measure if I were to intervene on behalf of the Government.

this stage and place before the House some of the facts and figures which have led the Government to ask for immediate legislation

The Honourable the Finance Member, in view of the very crowded legislative programme before the House, confined himself to the general features of the Bill and did not go into the details. I feel I would not be wasting the time of the House if I went into these details if they would remove some of the misapprehensions

In the first place, I would like to deal with the point raised by Mr Sanyal about the lack of information regarding the new branches which have been opened since 1st January 1946, and particularly since the Banking Companies Bill was introduced

The reason why the figures were not given is that these statistics are not received till the end of the year. Banks are required only to submit figures and supply information regarding their branches, etc., at the end of every year. All the same, we have not proceeded without any basis. The point on which we have got definite information is regarding the opening of new branches by schedule banks, and these figures I can lay before the House now. In the first quarter of 1946 the new branches of the schedule banks opened were 79 in the period from April to June 1946 the figure is 73 and for the period July to September 1946, it is 140

You will see that during the half year since the Banking Bill was introduced, as many as 213 branches have been opened by schedule banks alone. As every one knows the schedule banks form a very small proportion of the total number of banks in this country

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official) What is the proportion?

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: There are 93 scheduled banks and there are about 500 non-schedule banks. So if you go on that proportion it will be something terrific. But I should not imagine that it goes by the same proportion.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadian Rural). It is merely hypothetical.

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: I am not saying so. At the same time the branches are expanding at a fast rate.

Shri Mohan Lal Saxena (Lucknow Division Non-Muhammadian Rural). What was the number of branches opened in the corresponding period of last year?

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: You mean in the first quarter it was 79 in the second quarter 73 and in the third quarter 140. What were the corresponding figures for last year, so that we can see whether there is a real urgency?

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: I am sorry those figures are not here. I thought I had supplied myself with all the figures that Honourable Members would want.

Anyway, the point I wish to make is with reference to Mr Sanyal's argument that the development of branches is not taking place for the purpose of forestalling and vitiating in advance the provisions of the Banking Companies Bill. Government's standpoint in this respect has been entirely misunderstood. It is not stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, nor did the Honourable the Finance Member say that banks are actually going about opening new branches in order to forestall or vitiate these provisions. The fact is that expansion is happening and a very large number of branches are being opened and the provisions of the Bill are being forestalled, that is to say, these banks are coming into existence and there is no means of stopping it. That is all that was meant when it was said that the provisions are being forestalled.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Will you give the figures for the entire year 1945?

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: Those were given by the Honourable the Finance Member. At the end of 1945 the number of banks was 5,266. At the end of 1944 the number was 4,550. If you deduct the latter from the former the number is about 700, i.e., there has been an increase of 700 banks during 1945.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: There is no abnormality in it

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: It is not a question of abnormality. My point is that the increase is taking place in very large numbers and this expansion is accompanied by certain very undesirable features which the Honourable Finance Member mentioned. What I want to explain by facts and figures is the abuses to which the Finance Member referred. I am not going to say this on the basis of hearsay and popular impression or the prejudices of a bureaucrat but on the basis of actual facts and figures collected after investigation. I have got here a list of 77 banks with their names, their paid up capital, the number of branches, where these branches operate and the manner in which they operate. If I were to read out all those, I am sure it will give a shock to the whole House. I do not want to take up the time of the House by going into the case of each bank. I shall however mention a few salient cases.

In the first place, I have a bank here in Calcutta

Mr. Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce). May I request the Honourable Member not to mention any specific banks by name, as they will collapse tomorrow? You can give case A or case B.

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: The Honourable Member may rest assured that I am as conscious of my responsibility in this matter as he is. There is a bank in Calcutta with a capital of about six lakhs and it has got 43 branches. These branches are spread over Bengal, Bihar, C P and the U P and nearly all of them are working at a loss. This is on the basis of a proper investigation and not on hearsay.

Again there is another bank in Calcutta with a capital of 9,36,000. It has got 67 branches. You might say that it has sufficient amount of capital. This bank was also inspected and the result showed that its capitalised expenses amounted to as much as 2,47,000 as on the 4th October 1945 and they have wiped out 38 per cent of its paid up capital.

Mr. President: In giving these figures will the Honourable Member state whether it is authorised capital or issued capital?

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: I have got figures for reserve and paid up capital.

Mr. President: The whole of the capital need not be paid up. Only a part of it may be paid up.

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: That is certainly so. This bank has opened 6 branches during the last three years and only 15 of them are reported to be working at a profit. The bank is frittering away its resources on opening branches and the way in which the branches are opened, is curious—lavish advertisements and entertainments at the time of the opening of branches. A this expense is incurred in spite of the fact that there is this huge amount of capitalised expenditure of three lakhs already there.

I have a third instance of a bank in Calcutta with a capital of 7,60,000 and it has 42 branches. This capital on examination was found to have entirely disappeared and the value of the capital and reserve actually comes to a minus figure.

Then I have a most wonderful case, where a bank with a capital of 1,38,000 has got 77 branches. Capitalised expenses amount to 72,000 and they have wiped out nearly 58 per cent of the paid up capital. The bank has paid dividends at six and seven per cent during the years 1943-44 in spite of the existence of this capitalised expenditure. The bank is also following a reckless policy of offering high rates of interest on deposits to depositors. The depositors are not paid back their deposits and they have come to us with a complaint.

There is another bank with a capital of 1,65,000 and 30 branches. We have received complaints from the depositors that they are not getting back their money. Another bank with a capital of 1,00,000 has 28 branches spread over Travancore, Bihar and Bombay. This bank is in the habit of closing its branches without meeting its obligations at these places. The creditors at some of these places have already come to the Government with a complaint.

Then there is a seventh bank which has a capital of 1,43,000 and it has 22 branches. It has a capitalised expense amounting to 28,000 and they have wiped out 97 per cent of the paid up capital

I will come now to smaller banks. There is a bank with a capital of 69,000 and 50 branches. These branches are spread over Assam, Bengal, C P and Orissa. There is another bank with a capital of 87,000 and 86 branches.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor: Non-Muhammadian Rural): The poorer the man, the larger the number of children!

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: What is the remedy for this state of affairs?

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: First of all I am giving the facts to the House in order to point out the moral. I shall now come to banks with a capital of less than Rs 50,000. There is a bank in Calcutta whose capital and reserve paid up capital is Rs 46,000. It has 19 branches—in Calcutta, Benares, Jullundur, Ambala and other places. These branches have been opened during the course of a few months and we have already received complaints from the depositors that they are not getting back their money. Another small bank with a paid up capital of Rs 24,000 has 34 branches. It declared a dividend of five per cent in spite of the fact that it has a capitalised expense which is more than one third of the capital. There is another bank with a capital of Rs 10,000 and 21 branches.

Sgt. N. V. Gadgil: And yet they get depositors!

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: They do get depositors.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan (Finance Member): That is what we are trying to prevent.

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: I have got a whole list of 77 banks here and I have only mentioned a few typical cases. After listening to this I do hope that the House will realise the gravity and seriousness of the situation. These are facts which are not generally known to the public. To say that these banks are conducted by business people who know their business and therefore we should leave them to their own discretion is to fail to take notice of the fact that these banks are not conducted with their own money. Unlike industrial companies banks are operated with the money of depositors more than on share capital. In the matter of shares you can expect a man investing his money to have some business sense. But the poor depositors are taken in by the high sounding name or the big signboard of a bank and put their deposits without really knowing that they are throwing away their money into the drain. Therefore in the case of banks it is really the responsibility of the State to see that this sort of fraud is not exercised on the public and to save the public from their own folly.

One more point which was raised was that this is going to penalise new banks, and that the older banks which have already established a large number of branches will be allowed to retain their gains. So far as the more substantial banks are concerned, I do not think anybody will object to their retaining those branches, but the main point is this: where the extension of the kind which I have described now has taken place in the case of unsound banks, the economic forces are bound to bring their own retribution. These banks are not going to last. What they do at present is that when they find that one branch where they have taken deposits is not able to repay they open another branch and take more deposits there and pay off the deposits in the first branch, but this sort of paying Peter by robbing Paul cannot go on for ever, and this process has already started. I have the case of a bank in Calcutta which was started in 1934 and which has four branches in 1941. Then it was taken over by a new and enterprising and enthusiastic managing director, and by the end of 1948 this bank had opened 14 branches in various places in Bengal, Bihar and United Provinces and the Punjab. The result was that it went on getting all these deposits and could not repay them and now the Calcutta High Court has ordered its winding up. I have got instances of four other cases where the Calcutta High Court has already ordered winding up and there are about 7 cases pending.

[Mr K G Ambegaokar]

before the Calcutta High Court. You can see what is happening. All these banks are going to come into liquidation, they are not going to pay back their depositors, and all these lakhs and lakhs of rupees of hard earned money is going to be lost. Can we say that we are taking hasty action in stopping this kind of loss to the poor public?

There is of course a provision for inspection of banks, but that is really like bolting the door after the horse has gone away. We must attack this evil at its source, and the only way we can do it is by restricting the indiscriminate opening of these branches.

Various other points have been raised. One is that the backward provinces will suffer and that provinces and banks which have already expanded and have a large number of branches will gain. I am afraid that is misunderstanding the principal object of this Bill altogether. It does not prohibit altogether the opening of new branches. What it wants to ensure is that places which have not got proper banking facilities should get them, rather than that branches should be opened in places which are already over-banked. The result of over-banking is, as the Honourable Finance Member has already said, not to offer new banking facilities but only taking away deposits from the banks already there, and this can only be done by offering a very high rate of interest; that in its turn leads to the giving of loans at very high rates of interest, and naturally when parties are prepared to pay high rates of interest on their loans they are not parties to whom ordinary prudent business people will lend money. The result of this kind of competition in places where there are already sufficient banking facilities is that ultimately the bank gets into a position where it has given away all its funds in bad loans. So it is definitely necessary that we should check the further expansion of banks in places where there are sufficient banking facilities, and this is what this Bill will do. What it will do is that by checking that sort of growth, it will certainly encourage the opening of new branches in new places, and provinces like Orissa and Assam which are said not to have proper banking facilities will, by this measure, be benefitted rather than be injured.

I will just deal with one more point before I finish. It has been asked, why this haste? It is stated that the Banking Companies Bill has already been referred to Select Committee, and why should we not wait till the Select Committee has reported and the Bill is passed in the next session? The difficulty is that the urgency of the problem has become extremely serious, as the House would have realised from the facts and figures which I have quoted, but it is not a matter of waiting for two or three months only. The Select Committee on the Banking Companies Bill has not yet met.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: It has met once.

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: It has not met for examining the Bill, it met only for a preliminary discussion. I am myself a member of the Select Committee. It is proposed to hold a meeting during the interval between this session and the next session, and it is hoped that the Bill will come before the Assembly at the next session. If we are lucky we may be able to get it through. That is very problematical, considering the very heavy legislative programme that is before the House. But even if it is passed at the next session, it will take another six months before it is brought into force because regulations have got to be published under the Bill, so that it will be practically a year before we will be in a position to stop further expansion of banks, and what will happen during that time? Are we going to allow indiscriminate expansion of branches and severe losses being caused to the public meanwhile?

In regard to the technical points about the Bill which the Honourable Member pointed out I hope he realises that this Bill being only a part taken out of the Banking Companies Bill is necessarily not so complete. On the other hand, it is not just clause 18(6), because certain other powers have got to be given here. If you consider the other clauses of the Banking Companies Bill and this Bill, you will find that it is practically on the same lines. The objection of my honourable friend to the Reserve Bank being given all this authority is, I am afraid, based on certain prejudices against the Reserve Bank, which I certainly cannot share, and which are, I think, due to his being misinformed. After all the Reserve Bank is the Central banking authority. The prejudice which is felt against the Reserve Bank may be due to the fact that it does not go to the help of various banks, that prejudice is due to the fact that people do not know what are the statutory functions of the Reserve Bank. There are certain things that the Reserve Bank can do, there are other things which it cannot do, and certainly it is not the function of the Reserve Bank, which holds the reserves of all the other banks to go and give these reserves to banks which are financially not in a sound position. The Reserve Bank always comes to the help of banks which are sound but which are in temporary difficulties. But what it does not do is that it does not go to the help of banks which are financially intrinsically unsound. It will not be right for the Reserve Bank to go to the help of such a bank. By doing so, it will not only endanger its own existence but endanger the existence of all the other banks whose money it holds. I should also refute one little charge made against the Reserve Bank, that the Reserve Bank is not directly approachable and people have to employ all sorts of intermediaries. I know personally that there is nothing more open than the Reserve Bank. Anybody can walk in any time and see the Governor of the Bank. I myself have seen that the poor Governor of the Reserve Bank, who should be thinking of the most serious problems of this country, is being flooded by visitors who ought never to be allowed to see the Governor. People who have to do serious business should have some time for their work, and here because the Governor is easily approachable by everybody and anybody, everybody goes and takes up his time. I am sorry I brought in the Governor's name but it is so with all officers. There is no reason why anybody should employ an intermediary unless they have got something to hide. By having intermediaries, they will gain nothing. They can easily send in an application to the Reserve Bank and it will always be properly attended to. The feeling that the Reserve Bank is not approachable and therefore power should not be given to them is entirely wrong. You might as well say that the Government of India should not exist because it is not approachable from the far ends of the country. (Interruption) I am sorry I am going beyond my depths. Sufficient facts have come to the notice of the Government to make them realise the horror of the situation, the havoc that is being created and the urgent necessity of taking steps. It is not that Government have introduced this Bill in order to get away with something, without proper consideration. All the facts and figures have been gone into with the greatest consideration and it was after a lot of hesitation that Government took up this measure simply because they realised that if they did not do so they would be guilty of the greatest dereliction of duty.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanjal: Who is the authority who will impose this fine, the Reserve Bank or the Government of India or a Criminal or a Civil Court?

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: It has been described as an offence. An offence can be taken cognisance of by a Criminal Court.

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: My friend has not replied about the opening of branches which have been destroyed by flood fire or otherwise.

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: The word location will be interpreted in its proper sense—from one place to another and not from one building to another.

With these words, I appeal to the House to try and appreciate the gravity of the situation and not to introduce any dilatory motions which might make it difficult for us to take immediate action.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I heard with very great interest and sympathy all that fell from my Honourable friend Mr. Sanjal as indeed I had heard two previous speeches by him on the Banking Bill and if I may modestly say that, I am thoroughly apprised of the actual problem, which is worrying him. I am entirely at one with my friend Mr. Sanjal with regard to the capital issue and with regard to the Reserve Bank. On the capital issue, I want to use the privilege which I have as a member of this House and say here and now that nothing could be more erratic than the manner in which the capital issue branch of this government have acted specifically with regard to banks where no foreign purchase of equipment or anything like that was involved. In the streets of Bombay it is openly said that there was a regular tariff of illicit gratification in the Capital Issue Department varying with the amount of capital. This, Sir, is an allegation which I make for the Honourable the Finance Member to put down for investigation. Some people did come from Bombay at all events and got away in three days with the licences, whereas others were kept waiting for six months and 18 months. It was 18 months in the case of a company of which I am a director. This capital issue department has behaved abominably particularly with regard to banks. I cannot imagine any financial or any other sound reason for refusing to enable a bank to increase its capital. This was the most suitable time, when bank shares were quoted high, when banks were making very great profits, for small banks to increase their resources. It is a just and proper grievance of my friend and though this does not arise directly out of this Bill, I trust the Honourable the Finance Member will deal with this aspect and give some kind of re-assurance that banking companies will not be starved by refusing permission with regard to this.

Mr. K. G. Ambegaokar: Would the Honourable Member recommend the grant of permission for capital issues even in the case of banks which are definitely unsound and which have lost all their capital?

Mr. President: These points may be taken up after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr President (the Honourable Mr G V Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Sir, I wish my Honourable friend the Finance Secretary had not been so impatient or so sensitive to a just and proper criticism of the Capital Issue Department. Since he has raised this issue, I would be detained for a couple of minutes over this matter. Does he imply that all rejections or all acceptances were on financial grounds? If so may I know who examined the finances of the applying banks? And is there any guarantee that those who got the sanction got it because they were on the Provincial or the Central Boards of the Reserve Bank or through their influential friends? Does it mean that all the sanctions were done on a proper footing? Sir, without the slightest hesitation I say that Sir Allan Lloyd and Co. were not the competent party to examine these issues. They had not time and they had certainly not the equipment to go into this; and the suggestion that all this was done in order to safeguard shareholders who might otherwise have come in as shareholders of these banks is a very far-fetched one. Has the Capital Issues Capital Department safeguarded other shareholders to whom the sanctions have been given? In any case, may I know why a disclaimer was given on the floor of this House by the then Finance Member to my question that the capital sanction does not in any sense involve a guarantee or a certificate even that a particular enterprise is sound? Then, Sir, if I am told that it was the Reserve Bank who advised the Capital Issue Department, as I am sure I shall be told, then may I know why the Reserve Bank failed in its further public duty and permitted institutions who were not sound enough to be permitted to increase their capital? But they permitted these institutions to survive. There are at present remedies in the hands of any creditor and any shareholder to get the affairs of a bank examined and compulsory liquidation by the High Court could be ordered. Why was not then, this public duty done either by the Reserve Bank or by those who wanted to help the Capital Issue Department? I reiterate what I said before with full sense of responsibility that in the streets of Bombay it is common talk that there was a regular scale of illicit gratifications in the Capital Issue Department varying with the amount of capital which you were trying to raise and that scores of licences were secured by persons who had adopted these particular means. Will the Government make an inquiry in this matter?

Now, Sir, as I said, I entirely agree with the capital issue complained of by Mr. Sanyal and I appeal to the Honourable the Finance Member to give an assurance and also to direct the Department to look into it that applications by banks who want to increase their capital in order to put their affairs into proper order ought not to be impeded. With regard to the Reserve Bank he and I are entirely at one. The officially recognised departmental tradition is one which neither this country nor this House accepts and it will have to be adjusted and modified. The Reserve Bank has played the position of a policeman. It has done several things listlessly. Like an octopus it has grown and it has exercised powers without obligations and it has not certainly taken the care, as, indeed, the Finance Secretary mentioned that it was not their duty, that it should have. It should be the duty of the Reserve Bank to take care of institutions, to guide them and to help them and generally to permit them to be consolidated. While speaking on the Banking Bill, I had pointed out—and I will not detain the House with any great detail about it—to the necessity of appointing a Curator of banking in India and he should have a Curator under him in every province, who would be in direct touch with all the banks and who would understand their needs and their difficulties and, if necessary, use the funds to help them, not the funds of the other banks which are the reserves which the Reserve Bank keeps but the extensive funds of the Government which the Reserve Bank has got—and the Reserve Bank is fortunately restricted from receiving accounts of other parties—through funds in the hands of the Reserve Bank and the extensive profits which it transfers to Government, even if it was necessary to engage one or two crores of rupees in order to help little institutions. That was the point which I emphasised and I trust my Honourable friend Mr. Sanval will join with me in the Select Committee in order to enforce in the bigger Bill which is there that the Reserve Bank, while being endowed with more and more powers, should also have obligations likewise in order to see that the banking of this country is in a very healthy condition. So far as my friend's position to this particular small Bill is concerned I regret I disagree with him. What I feel is that, as they say, when the head is aching, he is applying medicine to the chest. He does not want this Government to go ahead with this Bill because there have been difficulties and very real difficulties which he pointed out and with which I sympathise but those difficulties cannot be put right in the manner in which he seeks to do by merely having this Bill not passed during this session. Sir, this was a point on which I accused this Government not of being hasty but of being dilatory. I do not know whether this Government regards itself as heirs or successors or assigns of the previous Government. But let me tell the House a little of the history.

It was in 1931 that the Central Banking Committee reported and both the majority and minority reports were entirely unanimous on the subject that the central banking authority of this country should have absolute powers in order to regulate the number of branches and other activities of the banks and in order to bring them in a very healthy condition. When Sir James Grigg arrived in this country, I was the Chairman of the Indian Merchants Chamber and in the first formal visit of the then Finance Member I pointed out the desirability of taking up the recommendations of the Central Banking Committee and implementing them by legislation. Did he do anything about it? To his discredit, I may say he did not. What about his successor Sir Jeremy Raisman? For six years this man had power over the finances of this country which he abused. Did Sir Jeremy Raisman undertake the banking legislation? No, Sir, except during the last three days of his existence in this country and then the Assembly was re-elected and so the old Bill lapsed. In other words, I accuse this Government in their capacity as successors, heirs or assigns of the previous Government of having delayed unduly and too long this particular measure and I am therefore glad that the Honourable the Finance Member has brought this Bill up. But apart from this general issue which I am putting to the House I think my

[Mr Manu Subedar]
Honourable friend the Finance Member has not exaggerated the evil in his opening remarks, the great evil to put an end to which this particular Bill has been brought about. He has mentioned some aspects of it and I may tell this House one or two other aspects of it. I do not want to take too long a time over this issue. It would be interesting in order to allay the feeling in this House that this Bill is premature or that it should not be rushed through.

Sir, does this House know what is known as interlocking finance? My friend Mr Sanyal, I am afraid, was speaking with too much provincial bias from Bengal. While recognising the particular problem which he stressed, I do feel and I do appeal to this House not to be led away by the purely provincial issue in Bengal or Assam. There is an all India issue about this. Banks are growing up. They are growing in wrong places and of the wrong type and at the wrong time and it is therefore necessary for Government or the Government's financial Agent, the Reserve Bank, to attend to this. I was saying that there are aspects of this in other parts of India which call for urgently for this particular measure. The House may have heard of what is known as the interlocking finance. There is a triangular game between the Bank, an Insurance company and an enterprising party, there are unwholesome dealings assigning away all these institutions, they are being hawked round in market and the money of one institution is used for window dressing and for various other purposes in another institution until either a mug is found to buy it over at the end at an inflated price or the thing collapses. The sort of game is going on and we have to stop it. The particular aspect of it affecting insurance is in the Insurance Bill which too unfortunately has been hung up and it is necessary for this House to take this Bill without delay.

Then, Sir, take the aspect of tax evasion. There is an enormous amount of tax evasion going on. I am afraid the Finance Department does not know the whole story. If they knew it, I am sure they would take action on it. Now, Sir, that some of us consider ourselves as watch dogs of this Government for finance purposes, I am sure it will be our duty and obligation to bring to the Finance Department the methods of tax evasion. What are the methods of tax evasion? Let me give a case for the advantage of some of my Honourable friends here. With regard to branches, a Bank suddenly opens a branch in an Indian State a deposit is put in the third name may be the name of a cook of the particular man. That deposit is put there and against this deposit and on the joint signature of the two parties, a loan is raised in British India. To the income-tax people the party says that he is in debt, he has incurred a loan and he has to pay interest charges and he therefore gets deduction from his tax to the extent of the interest he had to pay to the Bank whereas really speaking it is his own money. Such benami bogus transactions are taking place in obscure branches that so many Banks have raised, particularly in recent times, and particularly in some of the Indian States. Sir, the question of branches is one which has appeared before this House. Many years ago, when Banks were not expanding their branches, it was thought necessary to have a special Act for the Imperial Bank and to give them special concessions and special considerations and subsidies in order that something like 340 branches might be opened in this country. From that time we have progressed a good deal. The Imperial Bank, I understand, in recent times is actually reducing the number of branches. It has therefore knocked the bottom out of the claim for special privileges and the special Act which it has and I trust that when the time comes or in this Banking Bill itself, the special law which the Imperial Bank has got will be repealed and the Imperial Bank like any other institutions will be placed in the general and common law of this country. Whereas it was necessary for Government at one time to subsidise and to encourage the expansion of branch banking, it is now the other way. I have every sympathy with the type of small banks which my Honourable friend referred to. In fact, in the minority report, I specifically indicated that the more desirable type of growth of banking in this country would be the district bank in which the manager and the directors would know the people all round, would know the industries in the surrounding, the people to assess, the credit to assess, the assets, the guarantees or securities offered and so on and it is such Banks that ought to be linked up with other Banks for outside purposes and that would be a very healthy growth. Instead of which we have adopted unfortunately the wrong type, namely that a Bank at a very large centre opens branches, hundreds of them, it takes Managers who may be B Com 's or something like that, and the Manager is sent down to the place to which he is entirely new. He therefore proceeds with great caution, so great a caution indeed that even good parties who come to him for accommodation are denied this and everything is done by rule of thumb, everything is done by reference to head office. That, Sir, is very defective banking. Indeed, I have my bias for small Banks, but I think it will be much more healthy in this country instead of large octopuses who have hundreds of branches and which control them from the Centre. But it becomes absolutely intolerable position that instead of confining their activities to their own surroundings and districts and to the people whom they know, the industries and enterprises which are familiar to them, the small Banks venture on the wrong path, namely on multiple branches, and the type of figures which the Honourable the Finance Secretary read out to us make it quite clear that this is an intolerable position. It is an intolerable position, it is not only against the interest of the shareholders of the particular institution, of the depositors, of the public concern but also of the human material which is engaged in these institutions. What, may I ask, will happen at the first breath of deflation which starts in this country? Some of these, not only small Banks, but I fear some of the so called large ones might come down like a house of cards if sufficient precaution is not taken. I want all the precautions which the Government are taking to be used wisely. Sir, considerable apprehension was expressed in this House that the Reserve Bank will not use the powers given in a reasonable manner. I would appeal to the Honourable the Finance Member to tell such sections of this House as are feeling this apprehension that Government will month by month depute one of their officers to see that the Reserve Bank does not abuse these powers. Personally I have no apprehension that they will be unreasonable, but it is good to take away the fears even when wrongly aroused. Now, Sir, my Honourable friend has distressed himself quite unnecessarily. I feel that these powers are essential, they were envisaged in the two Bills which were published, there is a whole strength of public opinion behind these powers and most of the opinions which have been received are in favour of giving these powers, though I know some of the opinions received by Government on this Bill are adverse to giving these powers. But the manner in which the power should be used, the guarantees to the public that these powers shall not be abused and the general position of the Reserve Bank, the great unpopularity of the Reserve Bank in certain sections and how to put an end to it, these are some of the issues which we shall doubtless take up in the Select Committee. I hope that in the light of what I am saying and in the interest of the small Banks themselves my Honourable friend Mr Sanyal will not press his amendment but permit this legislation to be carried through.

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam Valley Non-Muhammadan) Sir, I rise to say a few words regarding the injurious effect that this Bill is likely to have on the Banks in the backward provinces like Assam, to which a generous reference was made by my Honourable friend Mr Sanyal. During the last two days we have given our loyal support to a series of emergent measures which in other circumstances we would have no hesitation in summarily rejecting. The reason we supported them, is that not only we considered them to be emergent but also because we have unbounded confidence in the Interim Government. We are confident that these wide powers which have been given to them will be not only not abused by them but they will see that they are not abused by their officers. Sir, I confess that at times I had shuddered to think what the result would be if for unfortunate reason—God forbid—this Interim Government were to resign and what our fate would be if these powers were to be exercised by the Honourable Members sitting behind the Treasury.

[Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhury]

Benchers and their subordinates But the increasing unanimity and friendliness which the two major parties in this House have been showing now gives us hope that such a contingency will never arise But turning to this particular Bill I would say that it does not stand on the same footing as the Bills that we discussed in the last two days There is nothing of a frightful emergency so far as this Bill is concerned, and I think it would be prudent to consider this Bill in Select Committee, particularly with regard to three points: (i) whether it would not be advisable in the circumstances prevailing in some provinces like Assam and Orissa, to exempt them from the operation of this measure, (ii) in view of the categorical statements made by my Honourable friend Mr Manu Subedar on the corruption in regard to capital issues by the Reserve Bank if it would not be advisable to adopt a provision like the one of which notice has been given by my Honourable friend Mr Ishaq Seth that there should be provision for an appeal against a decision of the Reserve Bank of India to the Government of India, and (iii) whether it would not be advisable for us to lay down means of punishing a breach of the provisions of this measure, that is to say whether it should be treated as an offence to be tried by a Criminal Court or dealt with by the administrative machinery. These are chiefly the points which it would have been better to discuss in Select Committee

Now, Sir, turning to the province of Assam I am ashamed to say that in our province we have less than a dozen banks. If this Bill had been brought before there might have been some justification for it, if it were brought say a couple of years ago we might have been saved from inundation of branches of banks from other provinces At the present moment the province is developing its own banking business and to cut short that progress at once by restrictive legislation of this nature is very unfortunate Sir, the Government of India have forcibly deprived the people of our province of the just price of their agricultural produce by putting them down at a rate which would not be more than Rs 4/8 per maund of paddy, but in spite of that our people are getting some money in their hands now, and they think it would be advisable for them to invest their money in banks of which the directors are known to them personally, instead of investing in branches of banks which have their head offices elsewhere but take the deposits from our province and invest them in other provinces As the banking business is now developing in the province, if this restrictive measure is adopted now the whole enterprise of the province will be stifled. It is urged today, as it has been urged before that we are not absolutely debarred from opening branches and that the Reserve Bank will allow us to open branches wherever wanted But our experience of doings of the Reserve Bank has been very bitter Whenever any bank had applied for an increase of their capital the matter has been referred to the Reserve Bank, and under one pretext or another the Reserve Bank has constantly rejected such applications At the same time we have found that where the applicants themselves can come to Delhi or Bombay and make personal representations they can induce the authorities to grant their prayer, but banks which are content merely to send their applications meet with a refusal on some ground or the other Sometimes it is said that the position of the bank is unsatisfactory Quite so, the position of a bank cannot be satisfactory when you do not allow them to increase their capital Then it is said that there are so many branches of different banks in the district that no further increase of capital is necessary that is to say, in the interests of advanced provinces like Bombay or Bengal we are told that we must not open any more branches or increase the capital, so that our own banks may languish and the banks from other provinces may flourish That has generally been the fate of banks in our province There has been a shrewd suspicion in regard to this—a suspicion which has not been concealed—that for some months past the Government of India have been entirely in the hands of the capitalists, and it is in the interest of the capitalists that the last Banking Bill was introduced in this House and it is in the interest of the capitalists again that this Bill is being introduced now, so that the existing banks may flourish and no new banks may raise their heads and compete with them. Sir, I will not take the time of the House by repeating the arguments which have been advanced by my Honourable friend Mr. Banyal and which I fully endorse. I will only say that even if this Bill is not referred to Select Committee we have got to support as it is and we shall support it, only I would do so with great alacrity and enthusiasm if the Finance Member will give me this assurance that so far as provinces like Assam and Orissa are concerned, he will give particular attention to their prayer for increase of capital issue and for opening branches. We are not ambitious enough to think of opening branches in a province like Bombay or the Punjab and compete with them, we only want to have the liberty to open branches in our own province so that we can interest our rural population in these banking concerns. Our villagers, as I said, will invest only in those banks of which the directors are personally known to them and in whom they have confidence, they cannot have confidence in banks of which they have heard little or nothing. If an assurance were forthcoming that we will be allowed to develop our business by opening new branches and increasing our capital issue I would support this Bill with much greater enthusiasm and if I may add gratitude to the Honourable Finance Member.

Mr. Tamsuddin Khan (Dacca cum Mymensingh Muhammadan Rural): Sir, one cannot but agree with the objects underlying this measure, but I regret to say that I entertain some very grave apprehensions about it. I shall not dilate on the general grounds of objection because my Honourable friend Mr. Banyal and several other speakers have already dealt with those objections. It has been admitted that so far as banking facilities are concerned, our country is as yet very undeveloped. There are vast areas in this big country

3 P. M. where there are no banking facilities whatsoever. That being so, it is apprehended that the drastic provisions of this measure will be of a reactionary character and that it may put a clog on the wheel of progress. But, as I have said, I will not dilate very much on the general grounds, but I shall very humbly draw the attention of the Honourable the Finance Member and also of this House to certain special circumstances.

It has been said that this is a very urgent measure, and therefore if should be passed into law here and now, but I think, Sir, that the present time is extremely inopportune for a measure like this. I refer to the disturbed condition of the country. Probably my point will not be clear to the Honourable Members unless I explain the situation in detail. On account of the unfortunate happenings of the last few months and which are still continuing, it cannot be gainsaid that there is an extraordinary communal tension prevailing in the country. On account of the recent Calcutta riots, Honourable Members probably know what has taken place there. The City has been divided into different parts and the two major communities have been segregated into different sections of the City. It is common knowledge that so far as this banking business is concerned, one community is very backward and another community has advanced a good deal. Now take for example the portion of the city of Calcutta occupied by the community which has not been able to develop banks. What has happened? I know from my own personal knowledge that branches of banks have automatically stopped there or they have been removed because they could not simply function. I do not blame them, they could not function in areas alien to them owing to the prevailing circumstances. Therefore, for a time there were no banking facilities whatsoever in vast areas of Calcutta. What happened in those circumstances was that certain other banks run by the community which preponderates in that area—I should not say preponderates because that is the community which now exclusively lives in that area—have opened or are trying to open branches of banks there. Now, if you pass this Bill into law it will be impossible to take speedy action of this character, and thus a few banks that are owned by that particular community will not be in a position to take quick action in opening banks. That is not only true about the City of Calcutta. Take other parts of the country. Wherever there is this tension, there is a sort of ostracism between the two communities, there is an economic boycott of each. Sir, if you will excuse me citing one or two examples I might tell you that in a particular case a homeopathy Doctor practising in the mofussil ordered for certain medicines from Calcutta soon after the riots. He was told in reply that these medicines were not in stock, but a few words in that letter were scored but they could still be read. The line which was scored out read like this: 'The medicines are not in stock, but because you belong to a particular community you could not be supplied even if they were available.' That is the relationship. I do not blame any particular community, that has been the tendency in the whole country.

Take the mofussil areas of those provinces where this tension exists. I refer to the district of Mymensingh. Of course it is happily free from extensive riots, but there is a good deal of tension there also. It is, as you know, Sir, the largest district in the whole of India, and it is larger in population than the province of Sind. There both in the town of Mymensingh as well as in the mofussil you will find banks only run by a particular community, with one or two exceptions. Now, if on account of tension increasing there, or on account of the tension that now exists, those banking concerns are compelled to take away their branches from the town of Mymensingh or the district of Mymensingh, what will happen? There will be no facilities whatsoever for the people of Mymensingh so far as banking goes.

Khan Abdul Ghami Khan (North-West Frontier Province General) No facilities for rioting.

Mr. Tannuzuddin Khan: I do not know what my Honourable friend means by that but he seems to gloat over certain things which he does not know. It is not a thing to gloat over. It is an unfortunate happening, it is an unfortunate position and every one is desirous of seeing it end as soon as possible we shall not solve this communal problem by shelving it and by simply hiding our head in the sand ostrichlike and ignore the danger around. We shall have to take the bull by the horn and tackle the problem courageously. That is how you have to do it. If in this House there is a particular community that is at a disadvantage in any respect, it should be the bounden duty of the members belonging to the other community to see to the difficulties of that particular community and it is in that spirit that I am bringing this matter before this House.

Sir, my entire contention is that there is no such urgency about this matter. I fully agree that there are abuses and devices must be found out to put a stop to these, but if you rush through a measure like this just at present I am afraid that the remedy will be worse than the disease. That is my contention. We have been allowing these banks to grow uninterrupted for such a long time, and a good deal of abuse has cropped up. My Honourable friend the Finance Secretary has given some very drastic examples of these abuses. I agree those are very bad examples, but so far as those banks at fault are concerned, this measure is not going to cure what has already happened. I think measures should be devised so that these banks who are guilty of these delinquencies may be brought to book but this measure is not going to do anything like that. It is going to put a check on the opening of new branches and let us see how that is going to be done. If you look at the provisions of clause 3 you will find

"(3) No banking company shall open a new branch without obtaining prior permission in writing from the Reserve Bank."

In sub-clause (2) it is provided

"The Reserve Bank may before giving the permission" take into consideration its financial condition and history,

Those things are described in sub-clause (2). Of course they have to take into consideration those things but in doing so facilities will have to be denied to banks which are very very necessary under the present emergent circumstances. If you look to sub-clause 3 there is another unnecessary provision. You giving this power to the Reserve Bank. The Reserve Bank in order to carry out this function will have naturally to examine the account and other books of the banks concerned but so far as that examination of books is concerned you are providing that those books must be examined with the previous approval of the Central Government. What amount of time will be lost in all this? The Reserve Bank is given the power to give permission to banks. In the ordinary course of things they will have to examine the books of the applying banks. Therefore what is the object in providing that the Reserve Bank must take the previous approval of the Central Government in order to be able to examine the account books of the applying banks? I do not see any reason for this.

My whole objection is that although this is a necessary measure, the present time is extremely inopportune for it. We have waited long. The heavens will not fall if we wait for a short time more.

Again my honourable friend, Mr. Sanyal, has given notice of an amendment that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee. From his speech I understand that he is opposed to the Bill altogether, but thinking that outright opposition will be ineffective, he has taken the middle course, namely, to refer the Bill to a Select Committee.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: On a point of order, that is not the reason . . .

Mr. President: Order, order.

Mr. Fazluruddin Khan: But reference to a Select Committee to my mind appears to be redundant. From the Statement of Objects and Reasons you will see that this Bill is nothing but clause 18(6) of the Banking Companies Bill. That Bill has already been referred to a Select Committee and the provisions of this Bill are nothing but clause 18 (6) of that Bill. Therefore, it has already gone to a Select Committee. There is no meaning in sending this measure to a second Select Committee. I do not know if there is any flaw in my reading. If there is any, I hope, that will be explained by the Honourable the Finance Member. But I appeal to him that he should consider the matter very seriously. I do not think that any great harm will be done if we wait till the more comprehensive measure is taken into consideration by the Select Committee and is brought before this House. There is some evil, but I have already said that the remedy we are going to apply may be under the present circumstances worse than the disease.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: My honourable friend, Mr. Sanyal has moved a motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee. In other words he agrees with the principle as embodied in this Bill, that is to say, that it is necessary to regulate and control the opening of branches by various banks.

Now, Sir, I think I must admire the ingenuity of my friend that instead of opposing this measure right out, he has suggested something which would, in fact, mean the death of this Bill. Now, Sir, I would like to examine the various objections that have been raised with regard to this measure.

Mr. Sanyal said that the Government were in great haste. To that my honourable friend, Mr. Manu Subedar has replied, that it has been otherwise; that the Government has been very dilatory in this regard. Therefore, Sir, I am inclined to agree with my friend, Mr. Subedar, and disagree with my honourable friend, Mr. Sanyal. After the facts and figures which were given by the Joint Secretary, it must be clear to the Members what the enormity of the harm is that has been done already and that is being done every day to the banking interests of this country.

There is one impression that the speeches have left on my mind, and it is suspicion about the manner in which these powers will be used. Sir, this suspicion has been built up, and justifiably so, on account of the past history of the Indian administration, and I do not blame the Honourable Members for harbouring this suspicion. But there is a change and I can assure my honourable friends that as long as I have anything to do with this Department which is under my charge, I shall see to the best of my ability that any powers that are taken by the Government or entrusted by the Government to any other authority, are not misused and are not abused. I think my friend, Mr. Sanyal, said that "Well, it will not be the Government that will be exercising these powers These powers will be given to the Reserve Bank and what if the Reserve Bank abuse these powers? Sir, I do not for a moment accept the proposition that the Reserve Bank would abuse these powers But if the Reserve Bank becomes so unreasonable and abuses these powers, then the remedy is in the hands of this Government and the Honourable Members of this House, and that remedy is to repeal this Act And therefore, Sir, I do not think that the Honourable Members should have that amount of suspicion about the use of these powers by any authority under the Government or by any authority to which certain powers are entrusted by them

There was another point which was raised by Mr Sanyal and I think my honourable friend, Mr Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri also referred to it as to how the penal clauses of this Bill will be given effect to If my honourable friends would look at the Criminal Procedure Code they would find that an offence has been defined as 'any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force' Now this Bill provides an offence as defined under the Criminal Procedure Code, and then, Sir, in section 5, part 2, you will find that all offences under any other law—of course part 1 relates to offences under this law—shall be investigated and enquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force regarding the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying or otherwise dealing with such offences Therefore these offences will be enquired into and dealt with under the Criminal Procedure Code So on that point, Sir, I do not see that there is any difficulty

Now, Sir, there was one point to which I should like to refer It was raised by my friend, Mr Manu Subedar, and emphasized by the Honourable Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri It was the question regarding the activities of the Capital Issue Department

Now, Sir, an allegation has been made that in the past some corrupt practices have taken place in this Department I am not aware of any such practice but if Honourable Members will bring any specific case to my notice I can assure them that I shall have it thoroughly examined

The other point was that with regard to the future, the Capital Issue Department should be more liberal, so far as the issue of capital was concerned and I think Mr Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri wanted to know with regard to his province of Assam in particular It is the desire of the Government that banking in this country should expand and should flourish It is the desire of this Government that banking business in this country is carried on on right lines and I can assure my friend that if any issue of capital will assist in that direction the people of Assam, the Department will not hesitate to help the people of Assam in developing their banking facilities

I think there is one misconception about this Bill which is before the House Honourable Members who have criticised it seem to be under the impression that this Bill is intended to prevent the expansion of banking business It is nothing of the kind Surely Honourable Members would agree with me that the expansion of banking business should be done on right lines and in the interest of the people of this country Now, the Reserve Bank is to make enquiries with regard to certain matters, after which it has to decide whether the opening of a branch should be allowed or not I would refer my Honourable friends to clause 3, part 2 of the Bill and I want to ask them whether there is anything in this which is really objectionable or which would prevent or stop further expansion of banking business I am sure Honourable Members would agree with me that it is desirable that before new branches are opened certain enquiries should be made and it should be made certain that the opening of branches would be in the interest of banking business and the depositors What is it that the Reserve Bank will have to enquire into? The clause says that before giving the permission referred to in sub-section (1) to any banking company the Reserve Bank will take into consideration firstly, its financial condition and history Is it contended that the financial condition and history of a bank should not be taken into consideration before it is allowed to open new branches? Secondly, the general character of its management. Surely no Honourable Member would desire that the management of a bank should be objectionable or that its past management should not be gone into thoroughly before it is allowed to open new branches and get new customers for its banking business. The third thing is, adequacy of its capital structure. Here again, as the Joint Secretary pointed out, some banks with a subscribed capital of Rs. 80,000 or 40,000 open as many as 50 to 60 branches. Surely it is necessary before you allow a bank to go on opening branches to find out, what is its subscribed capital and authorised capital and what are the earning prospects. The Joint Secretary has pointed out how some of these banks have paid the depositors their interest on their deposits and what has been the earning capacity and that in fact they have been living on the capital. Lastly, the Reserve Bank will examine the public interest to be served by the branch. Surely it is necessary to see that any branch of a bank which is opened is for the good of the people and it is in public interest. Now, Sir, there is nothing in this which really would do harm to any bank in any way, which really wanted to see that its transactions were conducted in the interest of the people and in the interest of the banking business of the land.

The immediate need for this legislation has been pointed out by me in my earlier speech and later on by the Joint Secretary. The conditions are getting worse every day. I am told that so far no action has been taken and therefore why not wait for another year before you take any action? That, Mr. President, is a very weak argument, if I may be permitted to say so. If the Government has not done a right thing in the past, does not this House want the Government to do the right thing now or do they want the present Government to follow in the footsteps of the past Government? I believe that if a thing is desirable, if a thing is in the interest of the country and its people, no time should be lost before giving effect to it.

My Honourable friend Mr. Tamizuddin Khan has expressed certain misgivings on account of the present deplorable condition existing in the country. I have no doubt that when the Reserve Bank will examine the question of opening new branches it will certainly take that into consideration and his point would be covered by the last condition that is laid down here. "The Bank will see that the opening of a branch will serve public interest" and therefore I appreciate his misgivings but I have no doubt that the Reserve Bank, when examining this question cannot altogether ignore the conditions that are prevailing in the country or might prevail hereafter. Whenever you plan anything which is economical, you have got to take into consideration not only the financial aspect of it, but you have to take into consideration every aspect of the matter and I personally feel that the Reserve Bank will keep in view this fundamental principle that the object of this measure is not to restrict banking facilities but to regulate banking facilities in the interest of the banking business and the depositors and the people generally. I think if the Bank will have in view that fundamental objective, the apprehensions that have been expressed by my Honourable friend will be found not to be quite correct.

Sir, I think I have tried to meet every point that was raised and all that I would request this House to do is to pass this legislation now, if they want that further mischief should be stopped. Sir, the accumulated effect of all that has happened in the past is not in the best interests of sound banking and we must put our banking on a sound basis as soon as possible. This Bill deals with only one aspect of the problem. When we have examined and passed through this House the Banking Companies Bill, I hope after that the banking business in India will be placed on a very sound footing.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: In view of the assurance given by the Honourable Finance Member, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my amendment. The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Leslie Gwilt (Bombay European): Before you put the question, Sir, may I ask the Honourable Finance Member whether he will make available to the members of the Select Committee copies of this debate?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: My Honourable friend wants that copies of this debate should be supplied to the members of the Select Committee on the Banking Companies Bill. We will do our best to supply these copies—I think with your permission if your department will do it. The Select Committee on the Banking Companies Bill meets on the 21st instant, and so I do not know whether it is possible.

Mr. Leslie Gwill: I understand that proofs can be obtained from the printers, although the proofs will be rough, they can be obtained.

Mr. President: The best efforts will be made, that is all that can be said just now, it will all depend on the time the press takes for that purpose.

The question is

"That the Bill to restrict the opening and removal of branches by banking companies be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 4 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES BILL

Mr. President: Pandit Balkrishna Sharma was in possession of the House. The subject before the House now is the motion for reference to Select Committee of the Industrial Disputes Bill. Pandit Balkrishna Sharma.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh (Bombay City Non-Muhammadan Urban). He is not well. No.

Mr. Vadilal Lalubhai (Ahmedabad Millowners' Association Indian Commerce). Sir, the main object of this Bill is the establishment of peaceful conditions in the industries of the country and to achieve that object one should see that it is not in any way harmful to the interests of both employers and employees and also of the consumers. The main idea behind this Bill is to establish conciliation machinery by appointing conciliation officers, conciliation boards and industrial tribunals. My friend Mr. Joshi the other day said that there should not be any compulsory arbitration, as he was afraid that he may not find any arbitrator who may be impartial. I agree with him that it could be difficult to find arbitrators who have no bias one way or the other. Rather the bias today is on the side of labour and not on the side of industrialists, and that bias rather would harm the interests of the industrialists as against those of labour, but as we cannot get arbitrators who are impartial, it may not be said that the principle of arbitration is wrong and we may not have arbitrators. As the country is situated today, I feel that if there is any need of arbitration proceedings, it is today. We know that due to the war situation the last few years have strengthened both capital and labour. If capital and labour are allowed to fight the result would be unchecked strikes and lockouts. Capacity on both sides has grown so much that if there are going to be strikes in this country and if there are going to be lockouts also they would not be over within a month or two, but they may last for six months or more and we have just to consider whether this country can afford those strikes. If we cannot afford those strikes, it must be seen to it by the government of the day that the country as a whole is not harmed. We know what the strikes in the thirties in Bombay did. The strikes in the thirties did great harm to Bombay industry and to Bombay labour. The situation became so bad that we know today that labour wages which were the highest in India in Bombay are much lower than they used to be and the wages that were about 15 per cent higher in Bombay than in Ahmedabad are now today 10 per cent lower. If you look at it from the position of labour during war time we know that Bombay labour used to get much less not only in wages but in the dearness allowances also. It has cost Bombay labour 15 crores of rupees. Why so? Because a particular labour union will not ask for a rise in wages or higher dearness allowances for its own benefits. The situation in the country today, as I have stated, is such that we cannot afford to have any strikes, and although we may not have arbitrators as independent as we could wish and it is impossible to find a man without bias one way or the other it is today that we must have certain clauses in the Bill which would lay down arbitration not only for public utility concerns but for all industry.

India is a backward country, the industrial production is very low, and if even that low production is not to be harmed, it is necessary in the interests of the consumers and in the interests of labour and in the interests of the industries that, so long as we are not out of the conditions generated by the war, we must have compulsory arbitration, not only for public utility concerns but for all industries. I hope that in the Select Committee we may be able to see that at least for the time being we may have for some years to come compulsory arbitration for all industries and not only for public utility concerns.

The other factor in the Bill is that for industries other than public utilities there is no notice required for striking or for declaring a lockout. If that is so, how is the Government to come to know, before labour goes on strike or the employer begins a lockout, whether there is a dispute and this dispute should be sent over to conciliation. It would only happen after a strike or lockout has been declared. After some harm has been done Government will step in and ask both employers and employees to stop the strike or the lockout. That is why it is absolutely necessary, as has been realised by the Bombay Government and so in their Bombay Bill there is always some kind of notice which has to be given by both sides so that the industry may not involve itself all of a sudden in a big dispute and a big strike which it will be difficult afterwards to meet.

In this Bill there are several stages of conciliation. I agree with my friend Mr. Joshi that in certain cases there is no time limit as to when these conciliation proceedings should end. There ought to be some time limit and that too not a long one in which these proceedings should end. The procedure in this Bill is a very long procedure. First we are talking of conciliation officers. Then there will be boards of conciliation, courts of inquiry and industrial tribunals. The practical experience of the industry is that conciliation officers have not been able to help much in major disputes or proceedings before them. They have many times recorded that the dispute cannot be settled. If there are going to be conciliation boards there is no necessity for there being conciliation officers. No importance has been given in this Bill to the work of the conciliation officers. Wherever we refer, we refer to Boards of Conciliation. Thus I feel that the Government also realises that conciliation officers cannot do much and what it is suggested that there should be works committees where many of the disputes may be settled, it would be well to have a small machinery and remove the conciliation officers' process. If the Boards of Conciliation are also given the powers of courts of inquiry, we can remove that clause also and the Boards of Conciliation may be able to make a report to Government and the Government may appoint if necessary industrial tribunals. In this way, we may be able to reduce a lot of waste of time and we may be able to state that within a certain definite period the decision of the boards as well as the industrial courts may be made available, so that this defect in the Bill may be removed.

Regarding the powers of the industrial tribunals the Government has put in in clause 15 that they will accept the decision of the tribunal wholly or in part. If you appoint high eminent judges to decide the disputes, I cannot understand why the Government desires that they may ask the industry to implement the decision wholly or in part. I feel that it is possible that the Government may also find itself in difficulties. Government owns so many industries. They may add that the financial liabilities are so huge that they cannot be fulfilled. It is that is so, it is wrong that the Government which appoints the industrial courts should take power in their own hands to implement those recommendations.

Further it is stated in the Bill that once the conciliation proceedings start the Government will have power to ask both employers and employees to stop the strike or the lockout. It will not be correct to take those powers in the midst of a strike or a lockout. It is therefore necessary that the Government ought to decide just at the beginning of a dispute, when a notice has been given as to whether it is necessary. Is the dispute so big or the harm so great that no strike or lockout should be there? This position should be decided by the Government in the beginning of the dispute and not after the dispute has lasted for a month or two because in no country of the world can we find a government which has no bias. Governments are bound to have bias. Today there may be a bias on the side of industry. As soon as the Government finds that the industry is weakening and the strikes are succeeding then that government would immediately step in and say 'stop the strike, it is not worth while going on with the strike'. Tomorrow in a government with labour bias if labour may be weakening in that case it will be said 'no more strike or lockout. We are interfering'. In the present special circumstances of the country today when we have very few industries, when we are a backward country, when we are about to establish new industries and when industrial problems are in hand it is better that we must have compulsory arbitration for all industries and that there should be no powers to interfere later on but Government ought to interfere in any dispute by appointing conciliation boards or industrial tribunals just at the beginning of the dispute. There is no clause in the Bill which makes it obligatory on the employer or the employee to inform the Government as to there being a dispute amongst them. I feel that through some inadvertence a clause in this respect may have been left out. Unless the Government comes to know about a dispute, it is impossible for them to weigh the matter in right time and so a clause to this effect is necessary.

Then, Sir, with regard to the scope of the Bill, may I refer to clause 2 (k) where an 'industrial dispute' means any dispute or difference between employers and employees. I cannot envisage any dispute between the employers and employers unless it be a dispute regarding patent rights or trade marks. I see no necessity of these words being there in the Bill because if an employer has a dispute with any other employer over patent rights or trade marks, the law of the land is there to safeguard their interests.

Now, I come to the Works Committee. My Honourable friend Mrs. Maniben Kara said that the right of the workers to collective bargaining has been taken away. The Works Committees affect both the employers and the employees in different matters. The consensus of opinion amongst the employers also is that this Works Committee may not serve the purpose for which it is intended and so it ought not to be obligatory. But if Works Committees are found to be necessary both by employers and the employees of a particular establishment, they may be formed and so they should not be made compulsory in the Bill. Sir, the results of these Works Committees in various countries have not been satisfactory. They have been good in certain circumstances and they have been bad in other circumstances. It all depends upon the ideology of both the employer and the employee. If the ideology of a trade union is just to create trouble, these Works Committees might be a source of a great deal of nuisance, and in that case it would be better to keep this clause as permissive and not obligatory.

Regarding the penalty clauses, it has been said that the employees are considered as thieves and should be put into the prison. But if my Honourable friend reads the clauses properly, she will find that it applies to both the employer and the employee. It is common knowledge that no employer would like to be jailed for any offence whatsoever, but, after all, if an offence is committed by either party, the law must provide penalties. If there are going to be penalties, they ought to be imposed on both sides. I am glad to find that the penalties are equitably distributed in this Bill. It has been said that if an employee does not want to do the work, this Bill will force him to do the work. Sir, the industry does not belong either to the industrialist or to the employees. It belongs to the whole society or to the whole country. It produces goods not for one community or for the employers or the employees only, but it produces them for all who are the sons of the land they live in. And the country has a right to see that the production is not unnecessarily disturbed as a result of these strikes. We know that during the last year there have been sporadic strikes all over the country and we have lost 25 per cent of our production. Half of this has been due to the 8-hour-day, which has nothing to do with the strikes, but the loss of the other half is due to workers giving up their jobs at random and coming when they want and going when they want, with the result that there is today a greater famine of cloth than it was before. That is why I support this Bill and I feel that in the present circumstances of the country it is a Bill that must be supported by all concerned.

Hon. Lt.-Commander Aftab Ali (Nominated Non-Official) Mr. President, Sir, I regret that although I am rising to speak for the first time in this Assembly. I find myself compelled to oppose the Bill moved by the Honourable the Member for Labour. My Honourable friend Mr. Joshi has moved an amendment for the circulation of the Bill. While I am not opposing that amendment, I must frankly admit that I cannot myself agree with his proposal for circulation because I am totally and wholly opposed to a legislation which means nothing else but to take away from the workers the right to strike. I know today the Government consists of the leaders of our main political parties and it is difficult to attack it. There was a time when rightly or wrongly the Government could be attacked and one could also obtain headlines in the press. That state of affairs no longer exists and today I rise under the disadvantage that the Government of the day is occupied by the leading political figures of our main political parties. We have in the Leader of the House one of our ex-President, I mean, that of the All-India Trade Union Congress. I also remember that only a few days ago the Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan said that he and his colleagues have entered this Government with only one mission, namely, to help the poor, so I am still hoping that this Bill will be withdrawn.

It will be said Sir, that this Bill only intends to regulate the use of strikes by the trade unions and the working classes. But I will presently show that all this may apply in theory only in practice this Bill does take away the right to strike. I maintain Sir, that this Bill does take away the right to strike and this is absolutely undemocratic. If this Government want to take away that right by force, they may do so, but no Government can successfully take away the rights of the workers unless it either becomes a Fascist Government or a Communist Government. Then Sir no democratic Government—if it wants to remain democratic—can take away the right to strike. I know that in this unfortunate country of ours there are people who do not like trade unions. Whether my Honourable friends like trade unions or not I am afraid that until this country becomes fully Fascist or fully Communist, we have got to have Unions and so long as we have trade unions, the right to strike must remain there. Trade unions are not friendly societies or benevolent Associations or merely petition making bodies. Certainly when unions find that all efforts for settlement have failed and action has become necessary, I do not see any reason why these Unions should not take action to strike.

[At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Sir Mohammad Yamin Khan).]

I have also an offer to make. If it is seriously argued that this Bill does not take away the right to strike, will the Honourable Member for Labour agree to refer this Bill to the International Labour Office for their opinion. I, for one, am giving my word, that if the International Labour Office which consists in its governing body representatives of government, representatives of employers and representatives of workers if they tell that this Bill in its present total does not take away the right to strike, then I am prepared to accept the Bill and withdraw my opposition to it. Until that is done, no amount of whitewashing, no amount of arguing will convince me that this Bill does not take away the right to strike possessed by the trade unions. Sir, I belong to a group of trade unions which normally do not believe in going on strikes. I will prove presently that we have been able to obtain 400 per cent increment for Indian seamen without going on any strike. Only a few days ago, we have been able to conclude an agreement with two of our biggest inland Steamship companies covering over 20,000 people, an increment of an average of 40 per cent per head per month and involving a total increase of about 80 lakhs for them. Now Sir, I maintain that the unions with which I am connected would not be able to negotiate any agreement if they had not had that bargaining power, namely the power to strike, at their disposal. (Interruption) Yes, I refer to the agreement we have made with Messrs R S N & Co and I G N & Co and I think my Honourable friend was once connected with one of these companies. That agreement, as I have just now said covers over 20,000 workers and involves an increase of about 80 lakhs of rupees for a period of twelve months. This agreement took exactly eleven hours to conclude although the representatives of Messrs R S N Co and I G N Co only a year before refused to talk about any increase, even by a pice. The gentlemen who would not agree to discuss any increment thanks to their generosity, have now seen the wisdom of concluding an agreement with my organisation involving such a heavy expenditure for such a large number of workers. Now, Sir, my purpose in raising this point is this. While I am one of those trade unionists who think that it is wrong to go on strike and then fail but that does not mean that we can give up the right to strike, the only basis, the only weapon and the only bargaining power on which trade unions live and exist. If you take away that power, then our trade unions will become absolutely impotent and useless. Sir, we, of the labour movement, may be broken, in fact, we have been broken quite a few times in the past. I would not say that we might not be broken again, we may be broken, but we shall never be bended. Either we live as trade unions or we do not exist at all. So long as we live as free trade unions, we shall under no circumstances surrender our right to strike, whether you legislate or do not legislate. Sir the 1929 Act was passed by the previous Government with the same hope of preventing strikes. But Sir, we have already heard from my Honourable friend Mr Joshi that that Act could not be applied and that Act became a dead letter. Now Sir another new Act is being brought forward. If this Act is passed in its present form, you take it from me, that you will never be able to enforce it. You think that you will get away by making strikes illegal and giving absolute freedom to capitalists to exploit the workers. But you are terribly mistaken. You will never get away with anything like that. Therefore if it is your intention to secure industrial peace this is not the method to secure it. I assure you that I am no less enthusiastic about industrial peace. Quite recently we have formed a joint Maritime Board with the shipowners, consisting of British, Dutch and Indian shipowners in Calcutta and I will read out the Preamble of that Board.

"With a view to securing closer cooperation and providing a joint negotiating machinery between the British, Indian and other shipowners and Indian seafarers there shall be constituted a board known as the Calcutta Maritime Board for the purpose of—

- (a) prevention and adjustment of differences between shipowners and seafarers,
- (b) establishment, revision and maintenance of a standard rate of wages and approved conditions of service" etc.

It will be clearly seen that in the unions with which I am connected we are ourselves working to see that peace in the industry is not easily disturbed. But if you really want to have industrial peace in the country, then allow me to say that you are pursuing a wrong method a method which, I maintain, will only produce more unrest. I am not in favour of strikes if they can be avoided; I am not even in favour of trade unions after a certain stage. Nationalise the entire resources of the country, do away with all types of profiteering and the exploitation of man by man, create a society in which there shall be no necessity for maintaining trade unions and carry on a day to day struggle, and I for one, am prepared to liquidate our trade unions without the slightest hesitation. But what do you propose and what is the position in the country today? Have you any minimum law? Have you any law by which you can prevent any employer from paying whatever he likes to pay? I am told that it is coming. When it comes, you can bring in a Bill, but why before? Have you any law by which you can prevent employers from victimising and otherwise exploiting their employees? You have no such laws. Then, have you any other social security law for workers in this country? No, you only say you are bringing them. Have you any law by which you can restrict profiteering? Much I remind you that even Hitler in Germany before suppressing the trade unions, had to come out with a legislation limiting dividends to five per cent. While you do not restrict profiteering, while you allow the capitalists to make any amount of money they like and take out whatever they like from the industry leaving the industry to its fate, you come out with a proposal to prohibit strikes. Why don't you be more honest and say you do not want trade unions? That is a position which I can understand better. If you say you want trade unions then you cannot take away the right to strike which is the very essence on which any trade union can stand and grow. Sir, I am a seaman, I belong to no political party and therefore no one can say that I am raising my objection to the Bill from any political point of view. Frankly speaking, if this Bill simply aimed at bringing in some sort of restrictions against politicians who try to exploit workers or make them pawns in their political games, I for one would not have much to object. But you are not doing that. By making strikes impossible, by rendering trade unions powerless and impotent, you are encouraging or adding strength to those politicians who have been telling the workers that there is no salvation for them unless and until they take over the Government themselves. Sir, I belong to a school of thought in labour which believes in organising unions purely on economic lines reasoning with employers as far as possible and fighting them whenever it becomes necessary. And during the last twenty years that I have been connected with such organisations I have not gone on strike more than twice. I am not myself very much in favour of a strike, by going on strike the workers may win at one time and lose another time. And I have myself regretted many strikes when I saw that the strikes were undertaken without making the necessary preparations to win them. But at the same time I will never agree to any legislation which takes away the right to strike. A trade union will not be worth the name if it loses its bargaining power, namely the right to strike.

Sir, we all know that during the war years some of these legislative measures were adopted as war measures. The Honourable Member preceding me said that the Bombay workers had lost nearly 15 crores of rupees because a certain trade union did not demand any increase. That may be correct, but what is the remedy? Are you bringing in this piece of legislation for purely economic purposes or are you bringing it in for political purposes? If you are bringing it for political purposes you may take it from me that there too, you will fail—hopelessly. Take it from me, Sir that until and unless the differences between capital and labour are adjusted by negotiations and their mutual consent and until and unless capital and labour adopt a policy of 'live and let live', there can be no industrial peace. Sir, I do not know whether the word 'nonsense' is parliamentary or not; if it is, I will say that it is absolutely nonsense to suggest that there can be any industrial peace if there were no proper and strong trade unions. For industrial peace, proper and free trade unions are necessary. That is why I say that if by this legislation you propose to have industrial peace in the country, you are defeating your own object, because you are not ensuring industrial peace, you are only creating greater unrest because the workers will lose that sense of security which they have got now, namely, that once they can organise proper unions they can secure the justice due to them by negotiations as long as possible and by fighting when it becomes necessary. And you do not know what the consequences of that will be. You had your Government

[Lt.-Commander Aftab Ali.]

Servants Conduct Rules, but when the postal workers went on strike what did you do, and if they again go on strike what can you do?

An Honourable Member: Nothing

Hon. Lt.-Commander Aftab Ali: Therefore, if you really want industrial peace in this country so that the industry may develop and the country may grow, prosperous, for Heaven's sake, don't come forward with such legislation which will kill the trade unions. You have no idea that there are trade unions in this country, very big trade unions, which are no less interested in maintaining industrial peace than you are, but at the same time, none of these unions will be prepared to give up the very power which gives it the required strength. You are a Government and if we ask you to disband your army, you will never agree. You will naturally say if something happens, what shall we do. Similarly, Sir, we cannot remain trade unions unless we have that power, the power to strike, and that power we shall never surrender. You have talked of a month of imprisonment in this Bill—make it 'years' not 'months', and take it from me that we shall never surrender that right. The right to strike is ours and we shall have it.

Then, Sir, if there is any politics behind this legislation—I do not understand much of politics—I may tell you that you are again making a mistake. By taking away the trade unions' power and prohibiting strikes you are not only rendering them impotent, but you are also suppressing them, although I know you will not agree that you are suppressing them. Now, Sir, take my own case. I am not today worrying who is controlling the Government of Bengal. I am busy with my own organisation and I think that as a seaman, my business is to help seamen and my other co-workers and I am trying to help them to the best of my ability. As I have said, Sir, I am not now worrying who is controlling the Government of Bengal, but, Sir, with the passing of this Bill, I will have to worry about that too so that this weapon is not used against me or my unions. You know and think that labour has no chance of coming into power in this country, and if you did, would you ever think of passing such a legislation? You would not have thought of that. I know, Sir, our number is not large unfortunately, but you are driving us to quarters that we have been trying to avoid so far. And I may tell you that if you do that, I don't think you will be the gainer at all.

Mr. Deputy President: Order, order. The Honourable Member is making his maiden speech and I did not like to interfere and wanted to give him as much latitude as possible, but for the information of the Honourable Member I must say that it is not permissible to repeat the same thing over and over again.

Hon. Lt.-Commander Aftab Ali: Thank you, Sir. If the intention in bringing forward this Bill is to use labour for the advantage of certain politicians, it is not new. It has happened before, it happened in 1942, and such attempts are bound to be made by such people to make use of labour for their purposes in future, too. Therefore, Sir, if my contention is right that this Bill has also a political motive behind it, then again, I say, it will defeat the purpose of the mover, as it will defeat the economic purpose. Instead of making strikes impossible, it would have been better for Government to come forward with a Bill for educating the workers. The Government could have come forward with a legislation which would tax the industry in order to start schools and other educational institutions for workers so that they might not become tools in the hands of the politicians. But Government are not willing to do that. The other day when my Honourable friend, Sardar Mangal Singh, moved his Resolution for the nationalization of civil aviation, the Honourable the Home Member said that Government had not yet put their foot in the proper place and they might go into liquidation if it committed itself straight away to the policy of nationalization. But, Sir, how is it that the Government has come forward today with this Bill on which depends the whole future of our industrial progress? Today only a little while ago, the Honourable

Mr Liaquat Ali Khan said that Government have just come into power, and how is it that this Bill has now been brought forward? They all have said that they will do every thing with a view to help the people. But what is the hurry for this piece of legislation? Some Honourable Members say that they are bringing legislation for insurance and other social securities, for a minimum wage and other such things. Would it not be better to bring these measures first and then come up with a legislation like this? The whole idea behind this law is to stop the ever-growing trade union movement.

The unfortunate mistake that Nationalist China made is, I am afraid, going to be repeated in India. When China became a Republic, the capitalists of China thought that that was an opportunity for them to build up an industrial empire, ignoring the Chinese workers. I hope, Sir, that that Chinese mistake will not be repeated in India. There seems a tendency on the part of the body in power to do the same thing as was attempted in China. The Party ruling China—the Kowmintang has a Labour Department of its own and I have many Chinese friends connected with the Chinese labour movement. Almost all of them were appointed by the Chinese Government or the Party with the result that not only has industry been able to secure no progress in China, but the country has also been divided into two camps and a real civil war has now been going on there for years. I hope the seeds for such a civil war—not a civil war between ignorant workers and peasants but between the haves and have-nots are not going to be planted in India too! I for one would not like to have it. I want that the mistakes that China has made are not repeated in India and I would like our industrialist to give up the idea of building up any such industrial empire in India and ignoring labour altogether. So long as the Britishers were at the helm, the cry was 'let us get rid of them first and we will settle every thing else.' Now if the industrialists and capitalists of our country think that by putting out the Britishers they will take their place and deprive us altogether, that proposition is a mad one and it will never work. Therefore, Sir, without making myself unduly harsh due to my misfortune or good fortune that I became a seaman at a very early age of my life—at the age of 16—and which has made me perhaps ~~some~~ what bitter—I may tell my Honourable friends that I am also a man of peace. I am working for peace. I do not believe in forced transformation of the social order. I know that industry has a great part to play. But why does not industry recognise the fact that labour also has a great part to play. Once we agree that industry and labour have to be together and produce wealth then we shall make this country a fit place to live in—not a mere Hindustan, not a mere Pakistan but a real "Admistan", a place where human beings can live and live happily. The leaders of our industry and trade unions must accept this fact that for the future of this country they have got to recognise the existence of one another, and they have got to adopt a policy of live and let live. (Interruption) Sir, interruptions will not change me!

Mr Deputy President: Has the Honourable Member finished?

Hon. Lt.-Commander Aftab Ali: No, Sir. I was just waiting to see if there were further interruptions or not. I would like to appeal to the leaders of industry. I know they are also in this House in larger numbers than we poor people are. Let them profit by the Chinese mistake. I beg of all Honourable Members through you Sir to excuse me for my frankness. Sir, although, I am a Member of this House for nearly a year now, yet this is the first time I have stood up. Of course, I admit I have the obvious difficulty of not being a good speaker and that is why so far I have tried to go undetected but this Bill has forced my hands and I had to stand up and speak. Sir, we seamen do not understand diplomacy. We understand only simple things. When we see a spade, we call it a spade. When a wrong is being done we say it is wrong. When a right thing is being done, we say it is right. I sincerely feel that this Bill will defeat its very object. It is not going to establish peace. On the contrary, it is going to give us more unrest and more strikes. May be I am wrong, and I wish I am wrong. But I sincerely hold that this Bill as presented to the House is going to create more strikes and more unrest in the country.

[Lt.-Commander Aftab Ali.]

Therefore, I do appeal to the Honourable Member for Labour, as well as other members of the Government to withdraw this Bill and call a conference of representatives of employers and labour and let us discuss the whole thing because in many things we might agree for instance, the speaker who preceded me said that there should be provision for giving notice and although I believe in having the right to strike, still I consider it criminal to go on strike without due notice. It is equally wrong to create a strike for purposes other than those of the workers concerned.

There was a time in Bengal when there were quite a few jute strikes because two sections of our industrialists wanted those strikes. People who were interested in the jute prices going up, they unfortunately found some labour leaders.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-official) No labour leaders!

Hony. Lt.-Commander Aftab Ali Some of them were bribed and they brought about strikes with a view to either increase or bring down prices on behalf of speculators. Those things were criminal. Those so called labour leaders ought to have been caught and jailed.

Sir, I suggest that there are many things in this Bill with which we will be able to agree, because we also believe in conciliation and arbitration but not in compulsion. We do not know what the arbitrator will do. Conciliation we understand, we can negotiate and we can tell our workers what we can get. But this compulsion business we do not understand. As I said there are many things in the Bill with which we agree but if my friends think that today they have the power and they can do anything they like, it is of course up to them to do so. I will only say that the British Government also once thought that they were at all in all in this country and Sec 124A was the only way in which they could rule. The very fact that leaders of our political organisations are occupying the treasury benches today proves how utterly absurd it was on the part of the British Government to think that they could always rule by mere force. Similarly, I would hate to see our leaders making the same mistake which these foreigners did. Therefore, I would say again to the Honourable the Labour Member that there are many things in this Bill which can be discussed and agreed to.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member has said that several times.

Hony. Lt.-Commander Aftab Ali I would say only once more. I would ask the Honourable Member to withdraw this Bill and then after a conference in the future I have suggested to bring forward a Bill which will be acceptable to all of us.

The Honourable Shri Jagdhan Ram (Labour Member) Mr Deputy President, I do not want to inflict any lengthy speech on the House at this late hour. As a matter of fact many of the points which have been raised in opposition to this motion have been met by those Honourable Members who supported this motion.

At the very outset I must express my appreciation of the attitude of the Honourable Mr Griffiths (who is not here at present) who rose to oppose the motion for reference to Select Committee but as soon as he came to learn that the date has been extended he readily withdrew his objection and supported the motion for reference to Select Committee.

When my Honourable friend Mr Joshi, who is no doubt a veteran trade unionist rose to move his amendment for circulating the Bill for eliciting public opinion thereon, I was very anxiously listening to his speech. But I must admit that I was disappointed. Mr Joshi has grown old and so his ideas have become antiquated. All the arguments which he put forth in opposing the Bill were rather antiquated. I will not examine every point that has been urged by him but if I were to take only a few as examples, I may say that his objection to a number of industries and services to be counted as public utility services was rather beyond my understanding. As a matter, if anybody was to raise the objection at this stage that railway transport, steam service, electricity and other things are not of public utility or that these are not public utility services, because they happen to be owned, possessed or run by private individuals, I for my part do not understand it. The utility of a service or an industry does not depend upon its ownership but upon its utility to the public, upon its catering capacity for the service and the utility to the community. Everybody in the House will agree with me that electricity is a public utility service, whether it is owned, possessed or run by a private individual or by a public corporation. That does not make any difference. Similarly, the railways and other things are public utility services. These are the points on which my friend Mr. Joshi laid great stress. I am not going to lay as much of stress on those points.

- The main point of this Bill is conciliation, voluntary and mutual if possible, and compulsory, if necessary. These are the two main features of this Bill. Mr. Joshi's objection was that it is not possible to find impartial arbitrators and rather it is not possible to find impartial governments.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: That is true.

The Honourable Mr. Jagjivan Ram: If it is true for the present, it is true for the future also. But I say, Sir, it is not true and it cannot be true. Government as representative of the community is impartial and whether you admit it or not, Government thinks that it is impartial. Similarly it is not impossible to get impartial persons. The Honourable Mr. Joshi said and my Honourable friend Mr. Vadilal Lalubhai, who represents the employers, has been rather emphatic too, that persons are biased one way or the other. These are points which I do not think really have any weight. The main features of the Bill, as I said in my opening speech, are voluntary arbitration and conciliation if possible, and compulsory if necessary. Sir, Government as representative of the community has got to look to the interests of labour and to the interest of the consumer as well. Government cannot afford to be silent spectators when labour and capital are fighting among themselves to the detriment of the interest of the community and had it been the fact that when they fight among themselves, it is they and they alone who lose, of course Government would have considered whether they could afford to stand aside and let them fight among themselves. But when they see that the whole of the community suffers, the whole country suffers and the whole nation suffers, the government cannot afford to be a silent spectator of this struggle. And thus government can never admit and I on my part will never admit that there are persons and persons alone who can look after the interests of labour. My honourable friend who has just preceded me has been very emphatic that labour will rather break than bend. My friend may rest assured that from this side there will never be any effort either to bend labour or break it. I may assure my friend that labour will have every reasonable encouragement from the Government, but Government will also see that everybody gets a fair trial. (Interruption). I would request my friend to have patience and he will have everything relevant from me. So far they have been very emphatic in explaining to the labour their rights. We must also explain to them their obligations and their duties. I do not find here anything which need perturb our labour friends so much. Where is the political motive? I have not been able to read it in any of the clauses of the Bill, unless one chooses to import it from his own brain or from his own reading. Reading between the clauses of the Bill and reading between the provisions of the Bill, there is nothing to be found which can import any political motive into the provisions of this Bill.

My honourable friend, Miss Maniben Kara was very emphatic. I can understand her. She is for opposing the Bill right through, whether it is reasonable or whether it is unreasonable, whether it is desirable or undesirable. She sees everything black. I remember a couplet from the Ramayana—

Jakee rahee bhavana jaisee, Prabhu moorat dekhee tin taisee—

if she can see this Bill black, she will see everything black. I cannot help it, the government cannot help it, if she is determined to oppose this Bill, she must take it from me that government is determined to see the Bill through I must assure my friends who claim to represent labour, who claim to speak on behalf of labour, that we also have got some experience of labour. They alone cannot claim it as a monopoly to see to the welfare of labour. We have also to see to the welfare of labour, and we have to see to the welfare of the community as well. Seeing to the welfare of labour will be seeing to the welfare of the community as a whole.

I do not want to examine every point and to reply to every objection that has been raised. Most of the points have been replied to by my honourable friends who have supported the motion, and at this late hour of the day I do not want to prolong my speech. If I were to examine every point, I have got very relevant and cogent reply to every objection that has been raised here. If any relevant points have been raised they may very well be considered in the Select Committee, and I shall have no objection in considering them there and in making the Bill as useful as possible for the purposes for which it is meant. With these words, Sir, I oppose the motions for circulation and appeal to all Honourable Members to accept my motion for referring it to Select Committee.

Mr. Deputy President: I will first put the amendment for circulation of Mr Ahmed Jaffer, and if that fails then I will put Mr Joshi's amendment which is for a longer time.

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth (West Coast and Nilgiris Muhammadan): I do not think Mr Jaffer moved his motion for circulation.

Mr. Deputy President: Then there is Mr Joshi's amendment for circulation. Honourable Members should not walk when a motion is being put. I have been telling that this is the parliamentary practice, that when the Chair is on its legs, no member should remain on his legs, they should not walk even from one side to another, but sit down at once wherever they are.

I am informed by the Secretary that Mr Jaffer has moved his amendment. Then it has to be put to the House, whether it is accepted or not is not my

The question is

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 28th March, 1947."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is —

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st October, 1947."

To save the time of the House I would ask Honourable Members who really want to have a division, to rise in their seats so that we may know whether a division is necessary.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Sir, if your ruling is that we should stand, we will stand, but I would like to bring to your notice that the object of asking for a division is two-fold: we want the names of the people who vote to be recorded either way. We want it to be recorded that those who are in favour should have their names recorded and those who are against should have their names recorded. That object is not served by asking us to stand, because I do not know whether even if you record two or three or four names, the names of the other members will not be recorded. I therefore feel that the real object of having a division will not be served by your asking us to stand. After all, if you take the parliamentary practice in England, there are divisions even when there are only two or three or four members in a house of 600. Why cannot there be a division here with, I do not know, how many who will support me? I expect a good support.

An Honourable Member: Four.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: No, no, more. A division should be allowed.

Mr. Deputy President: It is absolutely clear that it is within the discretion of the Chair not to allow the time of the House to be wasted; this has been done several times by the late President, Sir Abdur Rahim, on many occasions.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I had protested against that practice then

Mr. Deputy President: I do not want to be harsh, because I am one of the members who sit on the floor and this right may have to be asserted, but if honourable members are very anxious that their names may be recorded at the expense of five minutes of the House, then I do not mind calling a division

Mr. N. M. Joshi: If you permit us to have a division on the next motion, I shall be content because that is a crucial motion

The motion was negatived

Mr. Deputy President: Now comes the motion for reference to Select Committee

Mr. Deputy President: I shall now put Mr S C Joshi's amendment

The question is

"(a) That the name of Mr P J Griffiths be added to the names of members of the Select Committee and the name of Mr A C Inskip be substituted for the name of Mr R C Morris

(b) That for the words and figures "7th November 1946", the words and figures "1st February, 1947" be substituted"

The motion was adopted

Mr. Deputy President: Now, I shall put Mr Siddiqi's amendment

The question is

"That the name of Miss Maniben Kara, be added to the names of members of the Select Committee"

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy President: Now, the question is "That the Bill to make provision for the investigation and settlement of industrial disputes, and for certain other purposes, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr N M Joshi, Mr S Guruswami, Mr A C Inskip, Mr P J Griffiths, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, Prof N G Ranga, Sri T V Satakopachari, Shri D P Karmarkar, Mr Vadiyal Lallubhai, Sree Satyapriya Banerjee, Sjt B S Hiray, Mr Abdur Rahman Siddiqi, Mr Abdul Hamid Shah, Mr Muhammad Rahmat-Ullah, Mr S. C Joshi, Miss Mamben Kara and the Mover, with instructions to report by the 1st February, 1947, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five"

DECISION OF INTERIM GOVERNMENT RE HIGHER PRICES FOR BENGAL CULTIVATOR

586. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state if it is a fact that the present Interim Government have decided that the Bengal cultivator shall not receive the higher prices which the world market is prepared to pay and the law of supply and demand may determine?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I presume that the Honourable Member is referring to jute prices. If so, the answer is in the negative. I would invite the Honourable Member's attention in this connection to the Press Communiqué issued on the 23rd October a copy of which has been laid on the table of the House.

Press Communiqué

EXPORT PRICES OF JUTE DECONTROLLED ENHANCEMENT OF EXPORT DUTY

The Government of India have decided to terminate the Jute Export Control Order, 1946 with immediate effect.

This Order, it will be recalled, was conceived as an anti-inflationary measure as also with the object of ensuring that supplies of packing material were made available at reasonable prices to all countries of the world for facilitating the movement of cereals.

The Provincial Governments concerned, however, did not take steps to continue the control over internal prices, with the result that jute prices in India have increased sharply while exports have been dislocated. In the long run controlled export prices of jute and jute manufactures cannot fail to influence the internal price level but this would involve a long process resulting in undesirable fluctuation of prices and dislocation of trade. The Government of India have, therefore, decided to withdraw the price control over exports.

At the same time, in order to reduce as far as possible the inflationary effects of uncontrolled export prices, the Government have decided to enhance the export duty on raw jute and jute goods. The high prices resulting from decontrol will benefit the growers of this commodity and a substantial part of the proceeds of the enhanced export duty will accrue to the principal producing provinces.

The Indian Tariff Act Amendment Ordinance, 1946, promulgating the new rates of duties has issued in a Gazette Extraordinary.

The Government of India intend to continue the quantitative control over exports of raw jute and jute goods so that exports of Indian jute may be equitably distributed among all countries of the world.

ALLOWANCE FOR EXILED AFGHAN SARDARS IN INDIA

587. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state if he has had any correspondence in recent weeks with the four Afghan Sardars at present in exile in India?

(b) Have Government been in communication with the Afghan Government in connection with these exiled Sardars?

(c) Are these Sardars in India by arrangement with the Government of Afghanistan? If so, what are the terms?

(d) Who bears the expenses of these Sardars while in India?

(e) Is it a fact that these Sardars are compelled to live in India on a maintenance of Rs 80 a month?

(f) Is this amount sanctioned and paid by the Government of India or the Afghan Government?

(g) Do Government propose to consider the question of increasing the allowance of these Sardars?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) The Honourable Member is presumably referring to the four Afghan Sardars mentioned in his question No 410, which I answered on November 12th. If so the answer is in the affirmative.

(b) Their case has been referred to the Afghan Government.

(c) These Sardars were implicated in an abortive revolt in British Tribal Territory against the Government of Afghanistan in 1939. They surrendered to the Government of India, upon an assurance being given to them that they would not be returned to Afghanistan against their will.

(d) The Government of India.

(e) Three of these persons receive an allowance of Rs 80 per mensem each; the fourth receives an allowance of Rs 132 per mensem.

(f) By the Government of India.

(g) The allowances were originally fixed on the basis of the emoluments earned by and the status of these persons in Afghanistan and have since been approximately doubled. The question is under consideration. It may be mentioned that it is open to the Sardars to add to their income by their own efforts.

AFGHAN SARDARS IN INDIA

588. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state the cause of these four Afghan Sardars being in exile in India? Were the Government of India requested to give these men protection and refuge in India, and was their monthly allowance fixed by the Government of India?

(b) Have Government ever made a request to the Afghan Government to supplement this allowance of Rs 80 a month?

(c) Do Government propose to consider the question of advancing these Sardars one lakh of rupees, to enable them to do some business and thus enable them to live in a manner more in accordance with their status?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The information required by the Honourable Member is fully covered by my replies to his question on the same subject asked on the 12th November and today.

POLITICAL ADVISER TO THE CROWN REPRESENTATIVE

589. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state—

(a) who is at present the Political Adviser to the Crown Representative, and

(b) the position of the Honourable Member vis-à-vis the Political Adviser?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) Sir Conrad Corfield.

(b) This was explained in my reply to Lala Deshbandhu Gupta's short-notice question on the 29th October 1946. The Political Department, of which the Political Adviser is the chief permanent official, is not part of or under the Government of India. It is directly under the Crown Representative.

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: May I know if the salary of this official is paid from the Indian exchequer or from the Indian States exchequer?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I presume it is paid from the Indian exchequer, but many things are paid from the Indian exchequer over which this House apparently has no authority

Seth Govind Das: Is the Honourable Member aware that according to the Legislative Assembly Circular No. 71 of the 21st September 1946, he is supposed to be responsible for the Political Department in this House?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Who is responsible?

Mr. President: The Honourable Member for External Affairs

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I have not got that circular before me. I do not know exactly what it contains. But if the House will remember, my answer to the short notice question of Lala Deshbandhu Gupta was a long one, explaining what the Political Department was. The Political Department as such has nothing to do with the External Affairs Department. The political service is a common service, but the Political Department is entirely under the Crown Representative, and the Chief official of this Political Department is this gentleman I just mentioned, Sir Conrad Colling.

Seth Govind Das: What I mean is that according to this circular, the Honourable Member is considered to be responsible in this House at least for what he calls the Political Department?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The Honourable Member is perfectly right. I am responsible only in so far as somebody has to answer questions. I am responsible for answering questions relating to the Governor General Public, but Governor General Public is not under the Government of India or the Governor General in Council.

Seth Govind Das: May I ask, if he is consulted in other respects also besides answering questions, as far as this department is concerned, by the Governor General?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: No, Sir, I am not consulted but occasionally we try to seek information.

Seth Govind Das: Does the Honourable Member know that many questions regarding this Department have been disallowed by the Governor General?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: They do not reach me at all if they are disallowed.

DESIRABILITY OF INTRODUCING HINDUSTANI FOR THE CONDUCT OF BUSINESS OF LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

590. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state

(a) whether Government propose to take immediate steps to introduce Hindustani in the conduct of business and proceedings of this House, and

(b) whether he is willing to assure this House that the business and proceedings of this Assembly will be conducted in Hindustani from the next session?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) and (b) The effect of rule 14 of the Indian Legislative Rules is to require the business of the Indian Legislature to be transacted in English. Government are prepared to consider such amendment of the rule as the consensus of opinion of the members may recommend.

It is obviously an anomaly for an Indian Legislature to carry on its work in a foreign language. A change will have to be made but it must be appreciated that the change over will have to face various difficulties.

Seth Govind Das: Does the Honourable Member know that on the 7th November in the Council of State an assurance has been given by the Honourable Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan on behalf of Government that if this House also agrees to this change he will allow Honourable Members to speak in Hindustani as soon as possible?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Even now nobody objects.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I was not personally aware of the exact terms of the statement made in the other House, but I have no doubt that so far as the Government are concerned, they would welcome if the House so chooses, any member speaking in Hindustani.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I ask whether it will be binding on the European Group also to speak in Urdu?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The Honourable Member is under a misapprehension. There is no question of its being binding on any one, it is a question of people being permitted to speak.

Mr. E. L. C. Gwilt: May I ask whether every Member of this House can understand Hindustani?

Mr. President: That will be a different matter.

Sri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Is the Honourable Member aware that many Members of this House do not understand Hindustani?

Mr. President: All these questions will arise when the matter of language is being considered by the House, and not before.

RESIDENTIAL ACCOMMODATION FOR MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

591. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state.

(a) whether it is a fact that residential accommodation for the members of this Assembly is much less than actually required for accommodating them;

(b) whether Government are aware that much difficulty is felt in accommodating them during the sessions of this House and some of them are left unaccommodated, and

(c) whether Government propose to make immediate arrangements for accommodating them all by the next session either by undertaking new constructions or requisitioning houses?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) Yes

(b) Yes. The main difficulty is not so much of providing accommodation during the sessions of this House as of providing M L A quarters to all the Honourable Members.

(c) Government do not now have the power of requisitioning fresh buildings. The Works, Mines and Power Department have under consideration various proposals for providing additional accommodation and, I understand, they propose to place them shortly before the Standing Advisory Committee of the Legislature attached to the Department. Attention of the Honourable Member is invited to replies given to part (d) of question No 813 and parts (d) and (e) of question No 814 by Mr. Manu Subedar, M L A, on the 7th November 1946.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Are Government aware of the very acute discontent on this subject among Members of all parties in this House and will they consider the desirability—as in Washington and U S A—of placing a house at the disposal of every Member from the beginning of the life of an Assembly, so that he may not be displaced during the period of the working of the Assembly and he may have his papers, files and personal effects there?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: It is obvious from the questions asked in this House that there is a measure of discontent, as the Honourable Member has pointed out. As for providing a house for each Member, Government would no doubt like to provide not houses but palaces for each Member. But there are obviously certain limitations. As I have already said in my reply, there is no question of lack of accommodation; Members can go to the Western Court and other hostels. But if each Member requires a separate house a certain difficulty arises because the housing accommodation is limited, but Government will try to provide more and more of this housing accommodation.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Will Government consider the fact that the houses which were built for Members of this Assembly are actually diverted to the use of Government officials in highly expanded departments? If so, would it be possible for Government to restore to Members of the two Houses the quarters originally built for them?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: It is obviously Government's duty to provide housing accommodation both for Honourable Members and for officers of Government. As a matter of fact the officers of Government have to spend all their time here whereas Honourable Members have to come from time to time, and we shall try to provide both. It is not an easy matter and the House would not desire us to turn out officers and give them no proper accommodation to live in. So the question is one of providing both and not to turn out one or the other, in which case the same difficulty will have to be faced at the other end.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable Member kindly use his influence with the authorities concerned and see that Members of this House who are not members of the Constituent Assembly are not forced to give up their bungalows, particularly in view of the fact that there are several select committees coming forward and the budget session is also very near?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Certainly, Sir, we shall do everything in our power to meet the convenience of Members in this matter.

Shri Sri Prakasa: In view of the fact that it would not be within the means of many of us to maintain palaces, will the Honourable Member kindly give up the idea of providing palaces for us, and in the meantime will he allow us to occupy the vacant rooms, about three hundred in number, on Canning Road?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I am glad that the Honourable Member does not require a palace, I would be gladder still if he would prefer hostels to separate quarters, in which case our difficulties would be solved. In regard to the three hundred rooms, I regret I personally know nothing about them, but his inquiry will be transferred to the proper department of Government and given effect to as far as possible.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR ACCOMMODATION, BOARDING, TRAVELLING AND PROTECTION OF MEMBERS OF THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY

592. *Seth Govind Das Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state.

(a) whether Government are aware of the fact that accommodation arrangements made for the members of the Constituent Assembly are neither sufficient nor is the proposed accommodation of the standard and type in which they will be comfortable,

(b) whether Government propose to arrange for better and more suitable accommodation as also make proper arrangements for their boarding and travelling and conveyance; and

(c) whether there are adequate arrangements for their protection while they are at Delhi on duty?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) and (b) Suitable accommodation for all Members of the Constituent Assembly has been arranged for in the best hotels in Delhi or New Delhi, in Government hostels where Members of the Central Legislatures and officers of the Government of India stay, and in Constitution House on Curzon Road, which has been specially equipped for Members of the Constituent Assembly. In addition, a few M. L. A. quarters will also be available for Members of the Constituent Assembly.

Boarding in hotels and Government hostels is of a standard type, but in Constitution House, special arrangements have been made, not only for vegetarians and non-vegetarians, but also for persons who may prefer South Indian, Bengali, European, or North Indian cooking.

As for travelling and conveyance arrangements, attention is invited to a circular issued to all Members of the Constituent Assembly on the 21st October

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

[15TH Nov. 1946]

(c) Suitable arrangements will be made.

Circular No CA 2/Ser /46
CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA

To

All Members of the Constituent Assembly of India

New Delhi, the 21st October 1946

SUBJECT —Travel and other facilities for members of the Constituent Assembly

Sir,

With a view to relieve you from unnecessary trouble, as far as possible, in making arrangements for your journey's to and from Delhi for meetings of the Constituent Assembly, we have arranged with MESSRS GOVAN BROTHERS, LTD, SCINDIA HOUSE, CONNAUGHT CIRCUS, NEW DELHI, to act as our official travel agents for the purchase of tickets, reservation of accommodation in trains and air services, etc

2 They will also receive Members at the stations, if desired, and provide transport from the station to the place of residence and vice versa, arrange sight seeing trips and provide transport for other purposes in Delhi

For performing the duties mentioned above in Delhi, they will station a trained man a few days before the Assembly session starts, and till a few days afterwards, at Constitution House (where the bulk of the Members are expected to choose to stay) in order to be in direct touch with the Members and the management of Constitution House

They will not make any extra charges for all these Services Members will only have to pay the actual cost of the transport provided

3 Members who desire to avail themselves of the facilities mentioned above are advised to contact in good time the Head Office of Messrs Govan Brothers, Ltd, or any of their branch offices at the addresses given below, so that arrangements for their travel, reception, etc, may be made well in advance —

4 The Railway Department (Railway Board) have suggested that it would facilitate the work of the various Railway Administrations if the authorities concerned are given advance notice for reservation of accommodation on railways in good time, and that in case any difficulty is experienced in securing accommodation, the matter should at once be reported to the General Manager of the Railway concerned in the first instance, instead of through the office of the Constitutional Adviser or the Railway Board. This will eliminate delay and permit prompt action being taken to remedy defects.

5 The Railway Administrations have been asked by the Railway Board to extend in your favour the period in advance of the actual date of travel within which tickets may be purchased to 30 days, so as to enable you to secure early reservation

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient servant,

H. V R. IENGAR,

Secretary, Constituent Assembly.

Seth Govind Das: With regard to part (c), will Government be pleased to issue licenses to Members for pistols of 45 bore for their own protection, because members of the Constituent Assembly and of this House are entitled to firearms if they are available, and as they are not available in the market will Government see that they are made available to Members who wish to have them?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The Honourable Member has himself said that they are entitled to have them but he wants Government to make special efforts to procure them for him. If I may say so, Sir, going about with a pistol of either 45 bore or any other bore is not exactly the way to protect oneself, it is more likely to give rise to trouble and apprehensions on the part of other people. I do not mean to say that Members will go about attacking others, nevertheless this idea of encouraging people to go about with pistols is most undesirable and improper.

GRANT OF COMPENSATION TO SYT UTTAMCHAND, HOST OF SHRI SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE IN AFGHANISTAN

593. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state

(a) whether one Syt Uttamchand, an Indian trader, was carrying on trade and business in Afghanistan,

(b) whether he gave protection to and was the host of Shri Subhas Chandra Bose after the latter had left India,

(c) whether thereafter he had to suffer heavily, financial and other losses;

(d) the extent of loss, monetary or otherwise, suffered by him, and

(e) whether Government propose to compensate Syt Uttamchand fully for all the losses suffered by him in this connection?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) Yes

(b) The Government of India have no information apart from the articles in the press ascribed to Mr Uttam Chand himself

(c) and (d) Mr Uttam Chand made a claim against the Afghan Government for about Rs 2½ lakhs (Afghani) or about Rs 62,000 Indian currency. Government are not in a position to assess the accuracy or otherwise of this claim. It is understood that the Afghan Government paid him a sum of Rs 12,800 Indian Currency in full settlement.

(e) The Government of India would not regard it as practicable to compensate Indians for alleged losses suffered in foreign countries.

SHORTAGE OF ELECTRIC SUPPLY IN DELHI

594. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: (a) Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state whether Government are aware of the fact that, due to shortage of supply of electricity, it is practically impossible to get a new electric connection either for residential or business premises or industrial purposes these days, and that the people of Delhi are being put to considerable inconvenience on that account? If so, what steps are being taken by Government to increase the supply of electricity?

(b) When do Government propose to bring about normal conditions in this respect?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Yes. The present load on the Delhi system is substantially above its safe generating capacity. Steps have been taken to increase the capacity immediately by 2,000 K. W. by the setting up of an auxiliary Power House on Bela Road. Orders have also been placed for two Turbo Sets of 10,000 K. W. each and the necessary steam raising plant to increase the generating capacity as a long-term measure.

(b) Some improvement in the supply position is likely to be effected early next year, but it will not be possible to restore normal conditions till the turbo-sets have been brought into commission in 1948.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know what is the percentage of electricity consumed by Government out of the 14,000 K W produced by the Central Power House?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: I must ask for notice of that question

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know if the Honourable Member is in a position to inform the House whether out of this additional energy that is likely to be produced by these Diesel Sets, some of it will be made available to public?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: Certainly, Sir

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is it a fact that the stoppage of war has made no difference so far as the consumption of electricity by the Government of India is concerned, on the other hand it has increased?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: I have not got the figures, but I have no doubt that the consumption of electricity has increased all round

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is he in a position to say whether more Diesel Sets cannot be procured from Military and placed at the disposal of the Central Power House with a view to increase the generating capacity?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: The matter will be investigated

HOUSES DE-REQUISITIONED DURING THE LAST SIX MONTHS

595. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: (a) Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state the number of houses that were requisitioned by Government under the Defence of India Rules?

(b) What is the number of houses that have been de-requisitioned during the last six months?

(c) What is the principle followed by Government in de-requisitioning houses?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) The number of houses requisitioned by the Central Government under the Defence of India Rules was 360 in Delhi and New Delhi and 97 in Simla. Information as regards requisitions by the Central Government in other parts of India or by the Provincial and local Governments is not available

(b) The number of houses de-requisitioned during the last six months was 21 in Delhi and New Delhi and three in Simla. Information as regards de-requisitioning in other parts of the country or by Provincial Governments and local administrations is not available

(c) 72 houses have so far been derequisitioned in Delhi and New Delhi and 94 in Simla. Each case was separately examined on merits, and orders of derequisitioning were passed after taking into consideration the suitability or otherwise of the house in question, the overall requirements of Government and other considerations, if any

Mr. O. P. Lawson: May I ask the Honourable Member with regard to his reply to part (c) whether he occasionally examines not the question of houses that are to be derequisitioned but the houses that are not to be derequisitioned?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: Every case is periodically reviewed including the houses that are not to be derequisitioned. Whenever any application comes in for derequisitioning it is very carefully considered

Mr. O. P. Lawson: In that case can the Honourable Member assure this House that there is no house under requisition at this moment which could be derequisitioned or for which alternative accommodation has been offered to the present occupier?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: There is one particular house which I have just ordered—about half an hour ago to be derequisitioned.

Mr. O. P. Lawson: Would he answer my question, Sir? 'That is not an answer to my question.

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: Will the Honourable Member repeat his question?

Mr. C. P. Lawson: My question was "In that case could the Honourable Member give this House an assurance that no requisitioned house is now in the possession of persons for whom alternative accommodation has been offered or for whom the present occupation is not absolutely necessary."

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: I am not aware of any case in which alternative accommodation has been offered to the present occupier in place of a house which is under requisition. Every effort is made to derequisition a house as soon as possible. I have prepared a very comprehensive statement showing the whole position which I propose to place before the Standing Committee of this House on Monday next. It is quite impossible for me to deal with any specific cases at this stage.

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: May I know whether Ramjas College buildings and grounds have been derequisitioned?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: I have no information.

LICENCES FOR IMPORTING COMMODITIES IN INDIA

596. *Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state

(a) the number of licences for importing commodities in India issued during the preceding three years,

(b) the quantity and particulars of commodities thus imported,

(c) the persons to whom those licences are granted,

(d) the number of licences for exporting commodities out of India issued during the preceding three years,

(e) the quantity and particulars of commodities thus exported, and

(f) the persons to whom export licences are granted?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) and (d) The information asked for is not readily available and its collection will involve considerable labour which will not be commensurate with the result achieved.

(b) and (e) The information asked for is available in the "Annual Statement of Sea-borne Trade of British India with the British Empire and Foreign Countries" for 1943-44 and the monthly "Accounts relating to the Sea-borne Trade and Navigation of British India" for the later periods. Copies of these are available in the Library.

(c) Import licences are fairly freely granted at present for a majority of the goods covered by the Import Trade Control Schedule regard being had to the legitimate interests of indigenous industries and the importance of maintaining orderly disposal of Government Surpluses.

(f) Ordinarily export licences are only granted to those shippers who had exported similar goods during a particular basic period. Some commodities are, however, allowed to be exported by the manufacturers irrespective of their past performance, while there are other commodities, export of which is allowed freely on application.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is care taken by the Government to see that luxury articles are not allowed to come into this country and thus much of the sterling balances are not frittered away?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: What is a luxury article is always a question of opinion.

STATE ACQUISITION OF MINERAL RIGHTS IN BENGAL AND BIHAR

597. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state if the Indian Coal Fields Committee has unanimously recommended the State acquisition of mineral rights in Bengal and Bihar and the incorporation of a National Coal Commission, and if so, what steps do Government propose to take to implement this recommendation?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: The question concerns the Industries and Supplies Department and should have been addressed to the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies

PLANNING BOARD

598. *Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Government have appointed a Planning Board? If so what are its terms of reference and the time when it is expected to submit its Report?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Government have appointed an Advisory Planning Board. Its terms of reference are

(a) to review the planning that has already been done by Government, the work of the National Planning Committee and other plans and proposals for planning,

(b) to make recommendations in the light of this review for the co-ordination and improvement of planning,

(c) to make recommendations as regards objectives and priorities

(d) to make recommendations regarding the future machinery of planning

The Board is expected to submit its report by the end of this year

Shri D. P. Karmarkar: With regard to part (c) of his answer, may I know if the Board is expected to consider detailed efforts in the various provinces, to invite such suggestions, and to submit to Government any detailed suggestions with regard to various plans?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: No, Sir. I have stated that the Board, which began sitting a week or two ago, is supposed to submit its report by the end of this year, that is to say it has roughly about two months or less to function. Obviously within a few weeks this Board cannot consider these various projects in detail. In fact they have been told not to do so. They have been told only to consider the broad aspects of planning and to consider more on two things firstly, objectives and the targets to be aimed at, and, secondly, the future machinery of planning and also at the same time to indicate in a general kind of way the priorities. The whole point is that so much work has been done so far in regard to planning, but it has been done in a somewhat disjointed way. Various Government departments have produced numerous projects—some of them excellent no doubt—but the point is to know exactly what we are going to do, and to co-ordinate and to lay down priorities and to have a machinery for planning. This Board is supposed to do that without regard to any particular projects or plans.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the planning Board will consider the question of planning the future of the working classes of this country, and if they are deciding the priority question whether the priority for the reconstruction of the life of the working classes will be considered by this Board?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I am not quite sure what the Honourable Member means. Planning means planning for the four hundred million people of India. I presume the working classes come in that group.

Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable Member inform this House whether he will be willing to consider the "People's Plan" prepared by Indian Federation of Labour, which expresses the views and aspirations of the Indian working classes?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: This planning board as the House will realise, is a temporary board for two months and it is going to consider all the plans that have so far been made.

Miss Maniben Kara: I take it that the "People's Plan" will also be taken into consideration by this planning board?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I presume so.

RECOMMENDATIONS BY THE INDIAN COALFIELD COMMISSION

†599. *Maulvi Abdul Hamid Shah: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state

(a) whether the Government of India propose to give effect to the recommendation made by the Indian Coalfield Commission,

(b) the policy of Government with regard to the nationalisation of the Coal Industry, and

(c) what steps Government propose to take for the control and guidance of the Coal Industry in India till it is nationalised?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: The question concerns the Industries and Supplies Department and should have been addressed to the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies

DISALLOWANCE OF ALTERNATING ELECTRIC CURRENT FOR DOMESTIC USE

600. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state

(a) whether Government have got the problem of alternating and direct currents of electricity with reference to their use for domestic purposes, examined,

(b) whether it is a fact that alternating current is far more dangerous than direct current, and

(c) whether Government propose to take steps to disallow the supply of alternating current for domestic purposes?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Yes. When domestic loads are small and lie within a comparatively small radius of the power station, use of direct current is possible, but with increased use of domestic appliances and increasing areas of supply, direct current service becomes uneconomic and unflexible, as it does not lend itself to expansion beyond a particular distance. For these reasons it is considered desirable that all domestic supplies should conform, as soon as may be practicable, to the standard of 230 volts single phase, 50 cycle alternating current.

(b) No. Such misapprehension gained ground during the later part of last century when it was not understood what adequate protective measures were necessary. Both systems are dangerous if proper safeguards are not taken. In fact, it is held that burns resulting from direct current can be more severe than those occasioned by alternating current of equal pressure.

(c) No, Sir.

Shri Sri Prakasa: With reference to the Honourable Member's reply to part (b) of the question, is it not a fact that the effect of direct current is to throw off its victim while the action of the alternating current is paralyzing, and therefore the alternating current is more dangerous? Has the Honourable Member any record of the cases of death occurring from the two currents?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: We have been told by our experts that alternating current is preferable and not more dangerous than direct current. All over the world alternating current is used in preference to direct current which is used only in small places.

Shri Sri Prakasa: If that is so, why have they in New Delhi deliberately got the direct current, and if you will permit me, Sir, I may inform the Honourable Member that Sir James Pitkeathley agreed with me on this point and he appointed a Committee to go into the matter which found that the alternating current was more dangerous for domestic purposes than the direct current. Will the Honourable Member kindly make further enquiries in the matter, for if he will, he will find that in New Delhi, Naini Tal, Lucknow, Calcutta—wherever there are seats of Government—they use direct current and allow us to die in mofussil towns from alternating current on the pretext of economy.

Mr. President: Order, order Let the question be answered.

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: Direct current was generally put in in most of these towns at the very beginning because it was cheaper and easier to put in direct current for a small supply. But as the area of supply increases and as the load increases, it becomes very uneconomic and dangerous to go on increasing the supply of direct current, and in almost every town, the supply may have begun with direct current but is gradually switched on to alternating current, as soon as the total goes beyond a certain load say 200 or 800 K.W. I am not an expert, nor have I experienced electric shock. But our experts, and I believe the experts all over the world, agree that alternating current is preferable to direct current, except where it is only a very small area and a very small supply.

Shri Sri Prakasa: As one who has experienced shocks from both types of current, and would much prefer the shocks of direct current to that of the alternating current, may I ask the Honourable Member if he is introducing the alternating current in New Delhi in view of the fact that the population is increasing, and if not, why not?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: The idea is to have alternating current all over, but it is not easy to switch over from direct to alternating current, because you have to change the fans and various other gadgets and the power stations. As and when it is possible, we shall certainly switch on to alternating current all over India.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Why? Is there no evidence of such shocks?

Shri Sri Prakasa: I received the shocks, and the evidence of the alternating current is still on my person, and none of the direct.

Mr. President: Next question.

ABOLITION OF PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

601. *Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House be pleased to state when the decision to abolish the Planning and Development Department was taken, and what the reasons for doing so were?

(b) Why was not the Standing Committee of the Assembly consulted before abolishing the Department?

(c) Why were no meetings of the Planning Committee held?

(d) Did the present Government re-consider the question, and with what results?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) The decision to abolish the Planning and Development Department was announced in a Communiqué issued from the Viceroy's House on the 29th June, 1946. The reason given for this was that "Planning has now reached a stage at which it can be completed and implemented by the individual departments concerned."

(b) I presume that this was considered unnecessary. This was done at the time when a Caretaker Government was appointed.

(c) I do not know, Sir, to which Planning Committee the Honourable Member refers.

(d) I would draw the attention of the Honourable Member to the Press Communiqué issued recently announcing the setting up of an Advisory Planning Board. I lay a copy of it on the table.

Press Communiqué

With a view to co-ordinating and improving Plans for the Development of the country, the Government of India have decided to appoint an Advisory Planning Board to review the Planning work that has already been done, whether by official or non-official agencies, and to make recommendations to Government regarding objectives and priorities, and regarding the future machinery of Planning.

The Board will be composed as follows —

Chairman Mr. K C Neogy
Members - Non-Officials: . . Prof. Meghnad Saha,
Nawab Ali Nawaz Jung
Mr Gangavihari L. Mehta
Mr. Shuab Qureshi,
Dr Zakir Husain, and
Prof K. T. Shah.

Prof K T Shah will also act as Honorary Secretary

Officials: Sir Shanti Swarup Bhatnagar, Director, Scientific and Industrial Research
Dr Nazir Ahmad, Member, Tariff Board
Mr H K Kripalani, Industrial Adviser, I & S Department
Mr S. A. Venkataswami, Director-General, I & S Department
Mr V Narasimham Rao, Financial Secretary
Sir Pheroza Khan, Agricultural Secretary
Mr E P Moon, Secretary, Development Board

Mr. E P Moon will be Secretary to the Board

The Board will meet early in November and is expected to complete its work in about two months

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: I refer to the Standing Committee of the House.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Is the Honourable Member referring to part (c)?

Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Yes, to the Standing Committee of this House

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I do not know why it was not held, unless it was that people concerned were not interested in its work

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Because the department was abolished.

Mr. President: Next question.

STATEMENT ON CONDITIONS OF INDIAN SEAMEN IN GREAT BRITAIN BY MR. DHYAN SINGH MUNGAT

602. Miss Maniben Kara: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state whether Government are aware of a statement pertaining to conditions of Indian seamen in Great Britain made by Mr Dhyansingh Mungat, Vice President, Indian Seafarers' Federation and appearing in the Vanguard, dated November 1st?

(b) What steps do Government propose to take to remove the defects pointed out?

(c) Do Government propose to lay on the table of the House information on the following points—

(i) the machinery set up for looking after Indian seamen's welfare in Great Britain,

(ii) the number of boarding houses run by public agencies, the places where they are situated and the average number of seamen catered for by those boarding houses,

(iii) the recreational facilities provided in those boarding houses or otherwise,

(iv) the type of accommodation and food and clothing provided in those boarding houses, and

(v) the average number of seamen visiting various ports in Great Britain for whom welfare arrangements are necessary?

(d) How do the arrangements made for Indian seamen compare with the arrangements made for seamen of other countries?

(e) What is the existing machinery for exercising the Government of India's supervision over the arrangements made?

(f) Are annual reports received? If not, do Government propose to introduce the system of asking for annual reports?

(g) Do Government propose to lay the annual reports on the table of the House and also make them available to the public?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: (a) Yes

(b) Government have no doubt that the conditions of Indian seamen in the United Kingdom, as in India and elsewhere, are capable of improvement, but they cannot accept the report as giving an accurate account of existing conditions. They cannot admit that the High Commissioner has shown very little concern for the welfare of Indian seamen in the United Kingdom, and I would also point out that in the only concrete example quoted Mr Mangat appears to have been misinformed. He stated that there was only one Indian Seamen's Welfare Officer for the whole of Scotland. In fact, however, there is an Assistant Seamen's Welfare Officer, as well as a Seamen's Welfare Officer, stationed at Glasgow. Nevertheless the Government have called for a report from the High Commissioner for India, and will consider the whole matter further when the report is received.

(c) A statement giving the requisite information, as far as available, is laid on the table of the House.

(d) Information about the arrangements made by other countries for their seamen visiting the United Kingdom is not available and hence comparisons are not possible.

(e) The information asked for has been furnished in the statement laid on the table in reply to part (c).

(f) No Government, however, have already asked for monthly reports to be furnished to them.

(g) Monthly reports contain detailed information and are not generally suitable for publication. Government however are considering the question of publishing an annual survey of the Seamen's Welfare activities not only in the United Kingdom but also in India and other overseas countries where Indian Seamen's Welfare Officers have been appointed. Copies of such surveys will be supplied to the Library of the House as and when published.

Statement

(i) The welfare of Indian seamen in Great Britain is looked after by the High Commissioner for India, London, assisted by 3 Seamen's Welfare Officers and 3 Assistant Seamen's Welfare Officers, stationed one each at London, Liverpool and Glasgow, and covering all ports falling within defined areas.

(ii) There are four boarding houses exclusively reserved for Indian seamen, two at Glasgow, one at Birkenhead and one at Liverpool. Information as to the numbers entered for is not available here and has been called for.

(iii) Indian newspapers and magazines, Indian musical instruments, Indian gramophone records and indoor games of various kinds. In addition similar recreational facilities are available at the clubs at Avonmouth, Falmouth, Manchester, Cardiff, Hull, Newport, and Swansea. Two new recreation centres are also being set up in the London area. Excursions to places of interest, special gatherings at times of Hindu and Muslim festivals, Indian film shows and Indian musical evenings are also arranged at most of the above centres.

(iv) The accommodation provided in the boarding houses conforms to the regulations laid down by the local health authorities. The seamen are supplied with Indian food and necessary bedding.

(v) The information is not available and has been called for.

Miss Maniben Kara: Mr Mangat attended the International Seamen's Conference held on 28th October. He personally visited the ports and he issued a statement on the conditions as he saw them. This statement created so much public resentment, even among the British public, that his statement was published in the Daily Herald, which is the organ of the Labour Party.

Mr. President: Order, order. What is the question? The Honourable Member is making a speech.

Miss Maniben Kara: The question is whether the Honourable Member is of the opinion that the High Commissioner has not neglected the conditions of the workers in Great Britain. I want to find out from the Honourable Member if the conditions which are described by Mr Mungat, who actually visited those parts and made a statement, are so bad. If so, the High Commissioner can certainly take up certain immediate measures and some extra welfare officers can be appointed to look after the interests of the Indian seamen.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: As I said Mr Mungat proceeded on the assumption that there was only one Seamen's Welfare Officer. Even that information of his was incorrect. As I have pointed out there are several officers there. Secondly, the High Commissioner for India is looking to the interests of Indian seamen. We have recently received a report that one hostel (viz., the Moghull Camp) which was not found very suitable had been given up and in its place the seamen have been transferred to Mere Hall (and the Missions to Seamen Hostel) which have much better accommodation. Whenever any complaints are made, they are looked into and the High Commissioner tries to obtain the best possible facilities in the matter. As I have already said, conditions are not as satisfactory as they should be, but the question is receiving attention.

Miss Maniben Kara: On this question I would say that I personally visited the Hostel.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member may put only the question.

Miss Maniben Kara: My question is that whether the Honourable Member is sure that in spite of the representation made to the High Commissioner, the latter has not neglected to pay attention to this matter, because those conditions still continue to exist.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: If there are any specific complaints the Honourable Member can refer them to me and I will specially refer them to the High Commissioner. So far there is no evidence that the High Commissioner has neglected to do this duty in the matter.

RESTRICTIONS ON EXPORT OF PLYWOOD FROM INDIA

† 603. Sri A. K. Menon: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state whether Government have received complaints regarding restrictions imposed on the export of plywood from India to foreign countries such as Rangoon, Colombo and East Africa? If so, do Government propose to grant permits to facilitate such exports?

(b) Is it a fact that during the war Government encouraged the output of plywood products for meeting the needs of the Government? If so, what steps do Government propose to take for assisting the disposal of increased plywood articles manufactured by the Indian Plywood Industries now, after the war?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The question concerns the Department of Industries and Supplies and should have been addressed to the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies.

PROPOSAL OF PROF B. P. ADARKAR ^{RE} HEALTH INSURANCE FOR WORKERS

604. *Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) what are the proposals of Prof. B. P. Adarkar regarding health insurance for workers in factories, mills and mines, etc.,

(b) what steps were taken by the Labour Department to give effect to the scheme chalked out by him,

(c) whether Government accepted all the proposals or not, and

(d) if not, what are the proposals which Government have accepted?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: (a) Prof. Adarkar's proposals regarding Health Insurance for industrial workers are contained in a report published as a priced publication in 1944 entitled 'Report on Health Insurance for Industrial workers'. The scheme outlined in the report was intended to cover workers in only three major groups of industries, namely, textiles engineering and minerals and metals. The benefits proposed were (i) medical care and treatment through a special medical organisation, and (ii) payment of cash benefits at specified rates during periods of certified sickness subject to certain limits. No scheme was formulated in respect of workers in mines.

(b) The scheme was further examined by M/s. Stack and Rao of the International Labour Organisation, who visited the country for this purpose at the invitation of the Government of India. They recommended—

(i) that medical care and treatment should be furnished through the agency of provincial medical departments,

(ii) that sickness benefit should be furnished to together with maternity benefit and workmen's compensation through a single comprehensive scheme, and

(iii) that the scheme should apply to all persons employed in all perennial factories employing 20 or more persons.

They also suggested certain changes in wage groups, rates of contributions and benefits. These proposals were further considered in consultation with Provincial Governments, organisations of employers and workers and in the light of further actuarial calculations. As a result of these discussions, certain proposals were evolved and they have been embodied in the Bill which was introduced in the Assembly on the 6th November.

(c) and (d) As already stated, the Bill before the Assembly goes further than the recommendations in Adarkar's report and is a definite improvement upon the original scheme.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I know whether the Government of India is preparing any scheme of health insurance for the benefit of the miners in India? *

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: It is engaging the attention of the Government.

Miss Maniben Kara: Will the Honourable Member inform this House as to how many years Prof. Adarkar took to gather the data, to prepare the report, to prepare the proposals?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The Honourable Member can refer to Prof. Adarkar's report itself.

SUPPLY OF ELECTRICITY TO GOVERNMENT SERVANTS IN KAROLBAGH

605. *Miss Maniben Kara: (a) Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please state whether it is a fact that

(i) double-storeyed Government quarters in Karol Bagh, known as '12 Acre site' quarters have not been provided with electric current,

(ii) one of the roads alongside these quarters is electrified on both ends but bulbs have not been provided in the portion in front of the quarters although electric poles and wiring exist;

(iii) the residents of these quarters have made several representations to the Department of Works, Mines and Power and to the Electrical Division of the Central Public Works Department about the supply of electric current;

(iv) these quarters are situated at the farthest end of Karol Bagh, and

(v) the supply of electricity to these quarters was sanctioned at the time of their construction in 1945?

(b) Why electric current has not so far been provided?

(c) What steps Government propose to take for the supply of electric current to these quarters to redress the genuine grievance of their occupants, and by what date the supply may be expected?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) (i) Yes, (ii) Yes, (iii) Yes, (iv) Yes, (v) Yes

(b) The licensee, the Delhi Electric Supply and Traction Co Ltd have not been able to provide electricity for these Government quarters because their quota of bulk supply of current from the Delhi Central Electric Power Authority is insufficient to meet the demand

(c) Government are setting up a diesel auxiliary power house at Bela Road, Delhi to augment the supply of the main power house which generates electricity under the Delhi Central Electric Power Authority. This auxiliary power house is expected to come into operation about the end of December 1946 when electric current will be available to the Government quarters at Karol Bagh. Government are, however, exploring other temporary means to supply power between now and the end of December

Shri Sri Prakasa: What sort of current will be produced from this Power House? Will it be direct or alternating current?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: I presume it is alternating

Shri Sri Prakasa: Why not make sure that it is going to be direct, it cannot be alternating if it is in Delhi?

(No answer was given)

CONSTRUCTION OF CHUMMERIES IN LODI ROAD COLONY

606. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please state

(a) whether it is a fact that Government have constructed about 200 single-seated and 480 double-seated chummeries in the Lodi Road Colony,

(b) whether it is a fact that in the double-seated chummeries any two persons are billeted together which, in several cases, results in the allottees putting up with complete strangers with sometimes incompatible temperaments,

(c) whether it is a fact that only two latrines, two baths and one kitchen are provided with sets of ten single-seated chummeries or five double-seated chummeries,

(d) whether it is a fact that due to varying tastes and dietary habits, it is not always possible for the allottees to share their meals in the common kitchens provided,

(e) whether it is a fact that complaints have been made to Government about these difficulties, and

(f) whether Government propose to look into the matter?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Yes

(b) Yes But if any allottee desires to move into any other chummary he is permitted by the Estate Officer to do so. All efforts are made at the time of allotment to see that suitable allottees are billeted together

(c) Yes

(d) The allottees who find any difficulty in sharing meals in the common or communal kitchens can make their own arrangements. The allotment rules provide for separate block if necessary, for (a) Muslims, (b) General Non-vegetarians, (c) Orthodox vegetarians, and (d) Scheduled castes.

(e) Complaints were received regarding (b) and provision was made in the rules for change of allotment. No complaints have been received as regards (d).

(f) Does not arise.

HIGH RENT CHARGED FROM GOVERNMENT SERVANTS FOR CHUMMERIES IN LODI ROAD COLONY

1807 Mr Ahmed E H Jafar: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please state

(a) whether it is a fact that Government servants occupying chummeries in the Lodi Road Colony are required to pay for a half-room or one-small room 10 per cent of their salaries which is the basis on which rent is charged from married Government servants for self-contained units of two, three or four rooms with separate kitchens, baths and latrines,

(b) whether it is a fact that Government servants are generally unwilling to occupy these chummeries on account of lack of facilities and high rent charged and for that reason about 180 out of 200 single-seated chummeries and about 300 seats in the double-seated chummeries are lying vacant,

(c) whether it is a fact that the Imperial Secretariat Association represented to Government in the matter in August last,

(d) whether it is a fact that a representation on the subject was made by about 400 residents of the chummeries in September last, and

(e) whether Government propose to look into the matter.

Mr B K Gokhale: (a) All Government servants occupying Government accommodation are required under the rules, to pay ten per cent of their emoluments or the standard rent of the accommodation provided, whichever is less.

(b) Government are aware of the unpopularity of these chummeries. The vacancies in these chummeries are as follows: 170 out of 200 single roomed chummeries, and 188 out of 480 double roomed chummeries.

(c) Yes.

(d) Yes.

(e) The matter is already under consideration. It is proposed to convert a large number of single roomed chummeries into small married and family suites. Other reasons for the unpopularity of these chummeries are also being examined.

PROVISIONS OF THE NEW DELHI RENT CONTROL ORDER

608. *Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: (a) Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please state whether it is a fact that under the provision, of the New Delhi Rent Control Order now in force, house-owners cannot have their own houses vacated for their bonafide personal use if they have at any time lived in Delhi during the previous twelve months?

(b) Was this restriction contained in the original Order? If not, when was it introduced, and why?

(c) Are Government aware that there are a number of persons employed in Government service at Delhi who own houses but who have had to live in quarters provided by Government for the efficient discharge of their duties, and had to let out their own houses?

(d) Are such persons also subjected to the restriction mentioned in part (a) above?

+ Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

(e) Is it a fact that Government servants on retirement have to vacate their quarters officially allotted to them?

(1) Do Government propose to exempt such persons from the operation of the clause of the New Delhi House Rent Control Order, 1939 relating to their residing in Delhi during the previous twelve months? If not, why not?

Mr B. K. Gokhale: (a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) This restriction was introduced with effect from the 25th January 1944. Prior to that date it was possible for house-owners to evict tenants on the ground that the house was reasonably and in good faith required by a land-lord for his own occupation, or for the occupation of any person for whose benefit the house was held by him. This created serious difficulties in practice and the Order was therefore amended.

(c) Government are not aware of any such cases. The allotment of Government accommodation is optional and nobody is forced to occupy any quarter except in rare cases where a Government servant is required to reside in his official residence for the efficient discharge of his duties.

(d) Yes.

(e) Yes.

(1) The question of rent control in Delhi is now being reviewed and the suggestion made by the Honourable Member will be considered.

EVICION OF TENANTS FOR NON-PAYMENT OF RENT UNDER THE NEW DELHI HOUSE RENT CONTROL ORDER

60. Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: (a) Will the Secretary to the Works, Mines and Power Department please state whether it is a fact that under the New Delhi House Rent Control Order, 1939, a house owner can get his tenant evicted for non-payment of rent, but that the Rent Controller cannot enforce this eviction if a tenant declares his willingness before the Controller to pay the rent?

(b) Are Government aware that, in a number of cases, tenants when summoned by the Rent Controller declared their willingness to pay the rent but actually did not do so?

(c) Do Government propose to amend the rules so as to provide that if the Rent Controller is satisfied that rent has not been paid for, say, two months or more, he should order immediate eviction of the tenant? If not, why not?

Mr B. K. Gokhale: (a) The position is as stated in Clause 11A(3) of the New Delhi House Rent Control Order, 1939.

(b) The Rent Controller reports that where tenants declare their willingness to pay the rent, he always fixes, in consultation with the landlord, a date by which the rent must be paid. Where tenants wilfully disregard such orders, the Rent Controller passes orders of eviction. But where the Rent Controller has reason to believe that the landlord avoided to receive payment of rent by due date, parties are again heard and decision given on merits.

(c) The entire question of rent control after the 25th March 1947, when the New Delhi House Rent Control Order, 1939 is due to expire, is now under consideration.

PRICES OF BUILDING MATERIAL IN DELHI

610. *Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: (a) Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please state whether Government are aware of the difference in prices of building material as they prevailed before the New Delhi House Rent Control Order, 1939, was enforced and those prevailing now? If so, what are the comparative prices of some of the main articles of building material?

(b) What is the basis on which rent of houses is fixed in Delhi?

(c) What are the reasons for retaining the House Rent Control Order in Delhi?

(d) Do Government propose to revise the rents fixed for houses in Delhi according to the prevailing prices of building material? If not, why not?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. A statement of comparative prices of some of the main articles as given by the Chief Engineer, Central Public Works Department is laid on the table.

(b) A reference is invited to Clause 8 and following clauses of the New Delhi House Rent Control Order, 1939, and Delhi Rent Control Ordinance, 1944.

(c) The House Rent Control Orders are being continued because the housing problem continues to be acute and makes it imperative to retain control on house rents.

(d) The entire question of rent control is now under the consideration of Government.

ADJUDICATORS AWARD ON THE DISPUTE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS WORKERS

611. *Sree Satyapriya Banerjee Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) whether the adjudicator regarding the dispute of the Government of India Press workers has given his award,

(b) if so, whether a copy of the award will be placed on the table of the House, and

(c) how long it will take to give effect to the award?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: (a) Yes

(b) No The award is under the consideration of Government and I do not propose to lay a copy on the table at this stage

(c) A decision is expected to be reached shortly

Diwan Chaman Lall: How long has this award been before the Government?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: It has been before the Government for some time

Diwan Chaman Lall: Does the Honourable Member think it necessary to expedite a decision on this matter?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram As I have already said we are going to expedite the decision

Sree Satyapriya Banerjee. Has the award been forwarded to the Workers Organisation of the Government of India Press?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Not yet

Mr N M Joshi: May I ask whether the Government of India is not bound to publish and give effect to the award in a reasonable time?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The Government of India is not bound to publish the report

Mr N M. Joshi May I ask whether they have got no moral duty also?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: They are examining the award. They have got a moral duty and that is to see that the workers get a fair deal. They are trying to do that and will continue to do it

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask that from the action of the Government of India in not giving effect to the award, are we justified in entering that the Government of India finds it difficult to give effect to the award?

Mr President: That is a matter of opinion

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable Member consider the desirability of the report being circulated among the Members of this House confidentially?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I cannot commit myself at this stage. The report is under the consideration of the Government of India and after the Government have arrived at some decision the report may be laid on the table of the House

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask our more question Sir? Will the Government explain to this House why so much delay has been caused in coming to a decision on the report of the Adjudicator?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The reasons are obvious. As I have already stated, the report is under the consideration of this Government. As soon as they have considered it, effect will be given to those portions of the report or to the entire report if it is found feasible

Mr. Satyapriya Banerjee: Is it a fact that the award is entirely in favour of the workers?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I cannot say that. It is still under consideration.

ENQUIRY INTO THE AFFAIRS OF GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESSES

612. *Sree Satyapriya Banerjee: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state

(a) whether it is a fact that an officer on special duty was appointed to enquire into the affairs of the four Government of India Presses in different parts of the country,

(b) if so, whether he has finished his enquiry, and

(c) the results of the enquiry and the steps taken or proposed to be taken to give effect to the recommendations of the special officer?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Yes

(b) Yes

(c) The Officer on Special Duty has submitted his Report pointing "out various anomalies. Most of them relate to pay and service conditions. As the Central Pay Commission are now busy investigating into the future scales of pay and conditions of service of all Central Government Servants a copy of the Report has been furnished to them. Steps to remove the anomalies pointed out by the Officer will be considered as soon as the recommendations of the Commission become available to the Government of India.

AZAD HIND ORGANISATION IN EUROPE

613 *Sree Satyapriya Banerjee: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state

(a) the number and names of those members of Netaji Subhas Chaudha Bose's Azad Hind Organisation in Europe who are in Germany,

(b) the number and names of those who are still in detention in Detention Camps and Camps for displaced persons in Germany,

(c) the number and names of those whose freedom of movement is restricted in Germany,

(d) whether his attention has been drawn to the plight of Indians in Germany as described in the Hindustan Times of 28th October, 1946, and

(e) the policy of the Government of India in this regard and how it is going to be implemented?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) The actual number and names of members of this organisation now in Germany are not known to Government. A list of the 92 Indian nationals believed to have been in Germany at the conclusion of the war is placed on the table.

(b) There are now no Indians under detention in Germany.

(c) Government are not aware of any restrictions placed on their freedom of movement other than those imposed by the local occupation authorities on all civilians in Germany.

(d) Government are aware that these persons, in common with all civilians in Germany, have experienced difficulties and hardships, though they have no evidence that the article in question is a correct statement of the position. They have asked for full information from the Indian Mission in Berlin which is in touch with every known Indian national in Germany.

(e) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to (b) and (c) of the reply given to Mr. Dani's question No. 453 on the 12th November 1946.

Mr Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable Member please state whether the Government is aware of the present whereabouts of Dr Barendia Chatterjee brother of Sriyukta Sarojini Naidu, who was last heard of in Russia, and who has not been recently traced?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: No, Sir, the Government are not aware of his whereabouts. But speaking, if I may say so, not as Government, I may inform my Honourable friend that for the last eight years I have been convinced that he has been dead.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether similar inquiries are made by the Government about Dr Jnanendra Sen Gupta, who was in Germany?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Inquiries are being made. We do not know anything about him, but we shall certainly enquire about the matter.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable Member consider the desirability of announcing the Government's intention of giving all facilities to those exiles in Germany who want to come back to India?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Sir, it has been clearly stated in answer to questions in this House and elsewhere that every Indian in Germany can come back to India. There are no restrictions on them to return to this country. The only difficulty is the difficulty of transport, and that is a common difficulty at many places.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: That is exactly what I am referring to. Will the Honourable Member kindly consider the desirability of introducing facilities so that transport and other difficulties are not put in their way?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I do not know if the Honourable Member suggests that we should charter a ship and send it over. But we are trying our utmost to get them back because it is both in our interest and in their interest, but the shipping companies are not controlled by us and the conditions in Germany are not wholly controlled by us. But as soon as we can possibly manage it, we shall get him back here. I might add that many of them are not willing to come back.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Is the Honourable Member not aware that in the priority list of the booking for passages, these Indians are always kept low in the list?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I have not seen that list.

Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Is it a fact that the properties of some of those who were internees during the war but since released have been confiscated by the authorities there and therefore they are feeling themselves stranded and unable to come to India?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I do not know anything about their properties being confiscated. I have not heard about it, but there is no question of their being stranded there for lack of money to come back.

Sardar Mangal Singh: May I ask whether it is possible for any of their relations to go to Germany and meet them?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: We are prepared to help any such relations who want to go there. I cannot guarantee whether we will be able to get over all the difficulties in the way, but certainly Government will give facilities as far as they can.

FACILITIES TO INDIAN NATIONALS IN FRENCH INDO-CHINA TO SEND MONEY TO INDIA

614 Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: (a) With reference to the answers to starred questions Nos. 440 and 441, dated the 22nd February, 1946 relating to exchange facilities to Indian Nationals in French Indo-China to send money to their families in India, will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state what arrangements have been made by the Government of India with regard to remittances to India from Saigon and whether any settlement has been arrived at? If so, will the papers be placed on the table of the House?

(b) What is the reason for not removing the blockade and debt settlement with the French Government for the past six months, in spite of the representations by the members of this House, thereby protecting Indian Nationals there and allowing them to bring the accumulated funds for the past seven years?

(c) Was any representation made by Indian Nationals at Saigon to His Majesty's Representative there regarding the removal of blockade on remittances and passage facility to India? If so, what steps have been taken by him to redress their grievances?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) and (b) Negotiations are still in progress with the French authorities in Indo-China with a view to enable Indian nationals resident in that country to make remittances to India in advance of the conclusion of a debt settlement agreement between India and France It is anticipated, however, that this agreement will be concluded very shortly. An offer to release rupees two lakhs out of the frozen assets of the Bank of Indo-China in India to balance remittances up to Rs 25,000 per month from Indian nationals in Indo-China to India was not accepted by the French authorities.

(c) Yes. Regarding remittances the answer is given in the reply to parts (a) and (b) above. As regards passages to India, about 200 Indians wishing to return to this country have been repatriated from Indo-China. 70 others who have since applied for repatriation are expected to leave Saigon by the end of November.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know what the total amount of the frozen assets is?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Although I have ventured to answer this question, it really is the business of the Commerce Department to answer such questions. If my Honourable friend will refer to the Honourable the Commerce Member, he will perhaps get more information in these financial matters.

PASSAGE AND OTHER FACILITIES TO INDIAN NATIONALS IN SAIGON

615 *Sri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state if it is a fact that the British Representative in Saigon told Indian Nationals, who approached him recently that he could not do anything unless the Government of India removed the blockade and entered into an agreement with the French authorities after settling the debt settlement?

(b) Is it a fact that in spite of their representations to the British and French authorities at Saigon regarding their passage facility they are not taking any action at all? If so, why do not the Government of India issue urgent instructions to their Representative there to take immediate steps?

(c) Is it a fact that Indian Nationals in Saigon are allowed to take with them only a sum of Rs 500 when they return to India on account of the blockade while Government have lifted the ban on such remittances to other countries? If so, why do not Government cancel the blockade in view of their sufferings for the past seven years?

(d) Do Government propose to move in the matter since such facilities were given to other Nationalities other than Indian and in view of the British Consul's reply to make necessary arrangements in the matter?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) The Honourable Member presumably refers to remittances. If so the British Consul General at Saigon told the representatives of the Indian community that he had an assurance from the French authorities that the question of remittances to India from Indo-China would be settled once the blocked rupee funds of the Bank of Indo-China were released.

(b) Nearly 200 Indians have returned to India from Indo-China since the end of the war. Others failed to take advantage of opportunities that offered and the shipping position then deteriorated. Nevertheless, it is hoped that 70 Indians whose applications for passages are now pending will, as stated in my reply to the immediately preceding question embark by the end of this month.

(c) The maximum amount allowed is Rs 250 per head. The British Consul General at Saigon has been authorised to advance this sum to each repatriate. The difficulties experienced by Indian nationals in this regard will disappear on the conclusion of a debt settlement agreement with France.

(d) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given today to parts (a) and (b) of his immediately preceding question.

(b) WRITTEN ANSWERS

HOUSING INDUSTRIAL WORKERS

616. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) the decisions taken by the last meeting of the Tripartite Standing Labour Committee on the question of the housing of the Industrial Workers,

(b) the decisions taken by the last meeting of the Provincial Ministers' Conference, and

(c) what steps Government of India propose to take on the decisions?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: (a) The Tripartite Standing Labour Committee at the last meeting passed a resolution requesting Central and Provincial Governments to set up Housing Boards for promoting the housing of working classes. The resolution also stated that the subsidy of 12½ per cent of the cost of building or Rs. 200 per house whichever was less, offered by the Government of India was inadequate in view of the abnormal increase in the cost of labour and material and suggested that the workers should not be charged more than ten per cent of their earnings as rent, that the deficit should be made good from contributions by Central and Provincial Governments, Local Bodies and Employers and that the Central Government should take immediate steps to determine the respective responsibilities of the various parties.

(b) No formal decision was taken at the last meeting of the Provincial Labour Ministers' Conference, but the matter was informally discussed.

(c) The scheme of subsidy to which I have referred to in my answer to (a) was designed to counter deflationary forces which, it was thought, might set in on the cessation of the war. This fear has proved to be unfounded. Prices continue to be high. Further investigations have shown that the cost of a worker's house with accommodation on the scale approved by the Standing Labour Committee would cost 2,250 exclusive of water supply and sanitary fittings and the cost of land. Any large-scale programme of house building at the prevailing high costs is likely to prove highly inflationary. To relieve the acute shortage of housing experienced in some of the Provincial cities and towns, Provincial Governments have been asked to prepare separate schemes to relieve congestion wherever it is acute and not to attempt at this stage a unified scheme for the whole country. Provincial Governments have also been asked to indicate the share of the cost to be borne respectively by industrialists, municipal authorities and the Provincial Government in regard to these urgent schemes. Central Government will co-ordinate and co-operate in any such measures by rendering reasonable financial assistance, the extent of which will be decided on the merits of each case. Central Government will also be prepared to render technical advice in regard to designs of houses with a view to economising costs. In view of the changed circumstances Government consider that the constitution of a Central Housing Board at this stage would be premature.

TRIPARTITE LABOUR CONFERENCE

617. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) when the last meeting of the Tripartite Labour Conference was held,

(b) when the next meeting of the Conference was due to be held,

(c) when the next Conference is proposed to be held, and

(d) if the Conference was not held at due time, why it was not held?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: (a) The last meeting of the Tripartite Labour Conference was held on the 28th of November, 1945.

(b) Following the usual procedure the next meeting should have been held towards the end of this month.

- (c) It is opposed to hold the Conference in March or early April, 1947
(d) Owing to pressure of business the Conference has not been called for this month

LEGISLATION re STANDING ORDERS FOR INDUSTRIAL WORKERS

618. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) when the legislation for standing orders for industrial establishments was passed, and

(b) whether the Act has come into operation, if not, why there has been delay, and when the Act is expected to be in operation?

The Honourable Shri Jagivan Ram: The Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act having been passed by the Indian Legislature during the budget session 1946 and having received the assent of the Governor General on 23rd April, 1946, came into force with effect from that date

AWARD OF ADJUDICATOR FOR GRIEVANCES OF EMPLOYEES OF GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, ALIGARH

619. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) whether Government have recently appointed an Adjudicator to consider the grievances of the employees of the Government of India Press at Aligarh,

(b) whether the award of the Adjudicator has been given, if so, what the terms of the award are, and

(c) whether the award has been given effect to?

The Honourable Shri Jagivan Ram: (a) Yes

(b) and (c) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the replies given earlier to Starred Question No 611

SALE OF COPIES OF THE REPORTS OF REGE COMMITTEE

620. *Mr. N. M. Joshi: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) whether copies of all the Reports of the Rege Committee are available for sale,

(b) if copies of all the Reports are not available, why inadequate number of copies were printed, and

(c) when the copies will be available in sufficient numbers?

The Honourable Shri Jagivan Ram: (a) Of the 34 ad hoc reports and the main report of the Rege Committee 32 ad hoc reports have been or are being placed on sale. The stock of twelve of these reports has run out

(b) and (c) It was obviously impossible to forecast accurately the public demand which, in some cases, has turned out to be more than estimated.

Arrangements have been made for reprinting the reports and copies are expected to be made available next month.

SHOOTING OF AN INDIAN LABOURER BY EUROPEAN MANAGER OF THE SANTAK TEA ESTATE IN ASSAM

621. *Sreejuti Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state if the Government of India have received any report about the incident which took place about three months ago in the Santak Tea Estate in the District of Sibsagar in Assam in which an Indian labourer was shot dead by an European Manager of the Estate?

(b) In view of the special condition of Tea Garden labour in Assam, does the Honourable Member propose to visit some Indian and European Tea Estate in that Province and study the conditions there first hand?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: (a) A report has been called for from the Assam Government

(b) I would certainly like to take in early opportunity to acquaint myself with the conditions of the Tea garden labour in Assam

APPOINTMENTS TO INDIAN DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

622 Sreejati Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state whether appointments will be invited from candidates not belonging to the existing services under the Government of India for appointments under the proposed Indian Diplomatic Services? If so, will selection of such candidates be initially made by the Federal Public Service Commission?

(b) What will be the minimum and maximum age limits of such candidates?

(c) When will recruitment be made to this service from outsiders?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) to (c) It will be necessary to recruit to the Indian Foreign Service some candidates from sources other than the existing services. Details such as age limit, the method of selection and the terms of the service are now being worked out and a public announcement will be made as soon as possible. Recruitment will start as soon as those preliminary details are completed.

EXPENDITURE ON REFUGEE EVACUEES IN INDIA

623 Mr. Manu Zubeida: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Commonwealth Relations please state how many refugees, evacuees and stateless people of European extraction are there in India and have Government complete information on the subject?

(b) How many persons received monetary support or allowance during the war period?

(c) What was the amount paid per individual or family?

(d) What was the total amount of expenditure incurred?

(e) Is any such amount being paid now to any class of people and if so to whom and why?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) the total number of Refugees, evacuees and stateless people of European extraction who came to India is, approximately, 12,000

(b) On an average, about 6,900 evacuees have received assistance during each year since the scheme of assistance came into force

(c) The amount of assistance payable to individuals or families is graded on the basis of their pre-evacuation income. A maximum limit of 75 per cent of the pre-evacuation income or Rs. 350 whichever is less, is generally imposed. Evacuees whose income does not exceed Rs. 150 per mensem are, however, eligible on the merits of their cases to draw allowances up to the level of their pre-evacuation income. Statements showing the scales of assistance in force at present for those residing in the Evacuee Camps and outside the Camps are laid on the table of the House.

(d) A sum of approximately Rs. 1½ crores has been spent on these evacuees from the beginning of the War up to the end of 1944-45. This expenditure is not however, debitable to the Government of India. The amount spent on Balkans and Maltese evacuees is debitable to His Majesty's Government and that spent on Polish evacuees to UNRRA.

(e) Yes. Financial assistance is still being given to Poles, Maltese and Balkans, etc., since they are as yet unable to return to the countries from which they were evacuated.

FREE SUPPLY OF VERNACULAR TRANSLATION OF DEBATES OF CENTRAL LEGISLATURE

624. *Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state whether Government have made any provision for publishing vernacular translation of the proceedings of the Central Legislative Bodies for the use of the public not knowing English?

(b) Do Government propose to give due publicity to the proceedings of the Legislature by supplying them free of cost to all first class Municipalities in India to start with?

(c) What will be the cost to Government if this proposal was accepted?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) No

(b) No The proceedings are fully reported in the press in the Indian languages and are thus given adequate publicity. The proceedings of the Central Legislature are on sale at a very low cost of -/5/- per copy and no doubt, all first class municipalities could afford to purchase the proceedings if they so desire.

(c) It is difficult to estimate the cost as the number of issues is dependent on the number of sessions held in a year and the number of meetings held during each session.

POLITICAL RELATIONS OF GOVERNMENT OF INDIA WITH NEPAL GOVERNMENT

624-A. *Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs be pleased to state the political relation of the Government of India with the Nepal Government?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: It is not quite clear what the Honourable Member means. Our relations with the Nepal Government are friendly and it is hoped to develop closer contacts. As Nepal is a neighbour country closely associated with India culturally and otherwise it is obviously desirable for the two Governments and countries to have close and friendly relations.

India's political relations with the Nepal Government have been conducted through the British Legation at Kathmandu. The British Minister and his staff are chosen from the Indian Services.

PERMISSION TO MEMBERS OF CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY TO MOVE IN EXCLUDED AND TRIBAL AREAS OF ASSAM, MANIPUR, KHASI AND JAINTHIA HILL STATES

624-B. *Sreejuti Rohini Kumar Choudhuri: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state whether the Honourable Members of the Constituent Assembly are allowed to move freely in the Excluded and Tribal Areas of Assam in the Manipur State and semi-dependent states of Khasi and Jaintia Hills without taking any previous permit from the Political Agent of the Manipur State, Political Officers of the Excluded Areas and of Khasi and Jaintia Hills?

If not, do the Government of India propose to issue necessary directions to enable the Members of the Constituent Assembly to move freely and acquaint themselves with the conditions in these areas for facilities of discussion in the Constituent Assembly?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Members of the Constituent Assembly are certainly free to move about in the Excluded Areas of Assam. As regards the Tribal Areas every facility will be arranged for all members of the Advisory Committee to acquaint themselves with the conditions in those areas. As regards Manipur and the Khasi States, enquiries are being made and a statement will in due course be placed on the table of the House.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

TENDER NOTICE FOR ARTICLES OF INDIAN MANUFACTURE BY THE CONTROLLER OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY.

83. Mr. Tamizuddin Khan: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department please refer to the tender notice issued by the Controller of Printing and Stationery for articles chiefly of Indian manufacture for consumption during 1946-47 and state

(a) whether any quotation for wire staples of indigenous manufacture was received against the call for tender, if so, how many were received,

(b) whether any sample of indigenous variety was found acceptable, if so, why imported wire staples representing the total Government requirements for twelve months were purchased immediately after the decision of the tender, in one lot disregarding the fact that stores to be purchased, as advertised, must be chiefly of Indian manufacture,

(c) whether it is a fact that amongst the tenders for wire staples there were at least one or two firms who have installed requisite machinery for the manufacture of wire staples in India; and

(d) whether any quotation for indigenous wire staples which were found acceptable on test was rejected (i) for higher price, (ii) or any other reason, if for (i) was any negotiation made with the firm to reasonably lower the rate, or if for (ii) the grounds for rejection may kindly be stated?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Yes. Three quotations purporting to be for supply of indigenous varieties were received.

(b) Yes. Out of the three firms, the sample of one firm was found satisfactory but the price was higher than for imported wire staples. Only requirements for about nine months were purchased in one lot—presumably to take advantage of available stocks. The policy regarding preference to be given to goods of Indian manufacture is stated in Rule 3 of the Rules regulating the purchase of stationery and printing stores for the public service.

(c) Yes. Two firms were reported to have installed machinery for the manufacture of wire staples. But on an inspection by the Progress Inspector, it was found that no elaborate machinery had been installed particularly for this purpose by the firm whose sample was satisfactory.

(d) As stated in reply to part (b) the sample of one firm was found to be satisfactory but the tender was rejected on account of high price. No negotiations were conducted with this firm for lowering its rate. The samples of the other firms were rejected on the ground of poor quality.

FALSE PROPAGANDA IN TRIBAL AREAS re BOMBING

84. Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: (a) Will the Honourable Member for External Affairs please state if false propaganda was made in the tribal territories that bombing was ordered by the Interim Government and that the Government of India wanted to cede their territory?

(b) What persons and organisations were responsible for such propaganda?
(c) Have Government taken any steps to put a stop to such propaganda in the future?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a), (b) and (c). The Government of India have no information beyond what has appeared in the Press. Certain persons in the tribal territories appeared to be under the impression that the bombing was ordered by the Interim Government. How this impression was created and who was responsible for it, is not known. As a matter of fact the bombing was ordered several weeks before the Interim Government took office and it was stopped very soon after. Government do not propose to pursue the matter further.

CONTROLLER OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY

85. Sree Satyapriya Banerjee: Will the Secretary of the Works, Mines and Power Department be pleased to state

(a) whether both the Controller and the Deputy Controller of Printing and Stationery are non-technical men, and

(b) whether Government contemplate the desirability of appointing men with technical knowledge in the matter to these posts, if so, when, if not, why not?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: (a) Yes

(b) Both these posts are of an administrative character and technical knowledge is not an essential qualification. Whenever vacancies occur, Government consider the suitability of all likely candidates, both technical and non-technical and select the person who appears to be most suitable.

NUMBER OF STRIKES IN INDUSTRIES IN PROVINCES.

86. Sree Satyapriya Banerjee: Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state

(a) the number of strikes, industry by industry and province by province during the period January 1946 to September 1946,

(b) the number of workers involved in these strikes,

(c) the number of hours of labour lost in these strikes, and

(d) the amount of loss to the national wealth?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: (a), (b) and (c). A statement containing the information desired by the Honourable Member is laid on the table of the House. In regard to part (c), the statement gives the number of man-days lost. Information regarding man-hours lost is not available.

(d) I regret I am unable to assess the loss.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER

LETTER OF GOVERNMENT OF CAPE OF GOOD HOPE TO GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ASSURING EQUAL TREATMENT TO INDIAN LABOURERS

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the Leader of the House been drawn to the news flashed from New York on the 5th of November 1946, which has been published in the daily Amstela Times of the 6th November, 1946, to the effect that among other documents a letter in which the Union Government invited the Indians to send their nationals to South Africa on assurance that they would be treated on par with the Europeans there, has been recently sent to the Indian Delegation at New York?

(b) If so will the Government be pleased to state, (i) if the information is correct, (ii) where the letter was found, (iii) if it was ever produced anywhere in connection with discussions about Indians in South Africa and (iv) if it was purposely withheld by the former Government of India?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: (a) Yes, Sir

(b) (i) One of the documents taken by the Indian Delegation to United Nations Organisation is a letter sent by the then Government of the Cape of Good Hope dated 1855 requesting the Government of India to send Indian labour to Natal. The letter explains the conditions under which the Indian labourers were expected to work in Natal, though the assurances given are not in the exact terms quoted in the press message.

(ii) In the old records of the Government of India among which considerable research was carried out on the present occasion

(iii) No, so far as the Government are aware. There was apparently no occasion to produce it in connection with any previous discussions with South Africa.

(iv) No, Sir

SPECIAL MARRIAGE (AMENDMENT) BILL

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh (Bombay City Non-Muhammadan Urban) I beg to move

"That the Bill further to amend the Special Marriage Act, 1872, for certain purposes, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr Jogendra Nath Mandal, Lt Col Dr J C Chatterjee, Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan, Shri Sri Prakasa, Sri M Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Mr Vadilal Lalubhai, Sjt N V Gadgil, Pandit Balkrishna Sharma, Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, Sardar Mangal Singh Shrimati Ammu Swaminadhan, Sri A K Menon, Mr Madandhari Singh, Mr Leslie Gwilt, Mr Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal, Sri Jagannath Das, Sree Satyapriya Banerjee and the mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Mr President, not only I ask the indulgence of the House, but the very serious attention of the House to the question that this Bill brings forth before this House. The question before the House is a very vital one and that question is whether the Hindu wife, the partner in Hindu marriage, is a sentient human being, with ideas of human happiness and misery. That is the point that I want to bring before this House. All the other things which have been alleged with regard to this Bill are in my opinion unimportant. Not only the Hindu woman is not dependent on the pity of the House, or the grace of the House, but I think that she has earned a right to be considered as a comrade, specially because of the comradeship of the fight that she put up in the recent fight for freedom. You will find in the book of the distinguished Leader of this House that he also is grateful to the Indian woman for the fight that she put up and the comradeship that she displayed in the recent fight for freedom that Congress waged in the cause of India. I am very glad to see the Congress in the Treasury Benches and we of the Congress are committed to this, that we will give equal right to all the rest of the minorities in India, irrespective of sex, race, caste, creed or colour. I say that the duty of the present government is to see that justice is done to the Indian woman. I do not deny that there are many objections raised to this Bill—that it is inopportune, that it is badly drafted, that it is incomplete, that it upsets the settled way of the Hindu sacramental marriage, that it interferes with the law of succession, and with the status of a Hindu in a joint family as a coparcener. I do not deny that there are certain defects in this Bill as it has been drafted. I shall be dealing shortly with some of the main defects that have been pointed out and I hope to prove to the House that those defects are not insuperable, that the difficulties, if there are any, can be surmounted and that we have to do our duty in spite of these defects. After all you cannot change an unjust system that has been going on for thousands of years without upsetting something or other. After all if a big stone is lying somewhere for an indefinite period, for ages and if you turn the stone over, so that there might be a little more sunlight admitted under the stone, you are bound to disturb many of the worms and many of the undesirable things which have taken shelter under that stone. You cannot help it. As I mentioned earlier, in view of the comradeship and the fight that the Hindu woman has put up in the cause of the independence of India I think the time has come when these disadvantages which have taken shelter for untold centuries, should be disturbed, and if that happens, it is no business of mine, and it should be no business of anybody, who has come in this House that he should pay particular attention if these minor inconveniences arise.

With regard to the objections that have been raised, I find that there are mainly three objections and I am going to deal with these three objections. The first objection raised is that Hindu marriage is a sacrament and you cannot change it from a sacrament to a contract. Sir, Honourable Members will remember that the other day even such a distinguished Hindu as the Honourable Rajaji in dealing with another Bill said that it was not certain that Hindu marriage was entirely a sacrament and there was no question of contract with regard to a Hindu marriage. I share that opinion, I do not think that Hindu marriage is entirely a sacrament.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari (Member for Education and Arts) Sir, I may explain? I did not say that the Hindu marriage was not a sacrament. I said that not only Hindu marriages but all marriages are sacramental, and also contractual.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: If that is his opinion that it is entirely sacramental

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: The word 'entirely' is wrong. I said all marriages were sacramental including Hindu marriages, I said all marriages were contractual including Hindu marriages.

Dr G. V. Deshmukh: I am very happy to get that explanation. One has only to look at the Vedic marriage service of the Hindus, and let him say that there is no contractual basis in this sacramental marriage. In the marriage service of Hindus the bridegroom and bride say, "We will do this, we will bring up a family, we will live for a hundred years, we will prosper", etc. And what is the meaning of this if this is not to a certain extent contractual? Not only that, what is the idea of saptapadi, the seven religious steps which are taken in marriage? Every Hindu knows,—and if he does not know he ought to know,—that with the seventh step the bride becomes the friend of the bridegroom,—the word used being "sakha". Sir, I do not want to upset my Hindu friends by criticising in any way the religious side, I hope I will not be misunderstood. So far as sacrament is concerned, I have the greatest respect, but my complaint is that the Hindus should think of it more seriously as a sacrament than they are conveniently doing at present. It is the same ceremony for both bridegroom and bride, and yet a sacrament binds one party and not the other. That is my objection. I say you do not pay sufficient regard to your sacramental and religious views. The bridegroom passing through the same sacramental rites can marry as often as he likes but the bride going through the same rites cannot marry more than once, not only when the husband is living but even after the husband is dead, because it is supposed that the marriage is binding not only in this world but also in the other world.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: Sir, on a point of order, may I know if the Honourable Member is moving the Bill that I have here in my hand or any other Bill about monogamy or divorce?

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I am moving the Bill that has been circulated to Members of the House. I am not thinking of moving any other Bill. I said these are the objections raised in the public opinion which has come to us, and I am discussing those objections.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: Sir, I am really not able to see any connection between the subject which the Honourable Member is discussing and the Bill that I have with me. It may be my stupidity, but I do not see any monogamy or divorce in this Bill.

Mr. President: The Honourable Mover is a doctor and therefore cannot perhaps explain the law. The point, so far as I can see, is this, this Bill seeks to amend the Special Marriage Act and that Act provides for monogamy and divorce. Therefore he is discussing those points.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: That is right, Sir, I am thankful to you. I am surprised that these objections should be raised by an experienced person like the Honourable Rajan. Surely he knows that in the Special Marriage Act there is a clause on monogamy and also a clause on divorce, and so if I have brought forward a Bill to amend the Special Marriage Act we have got to consider those two points. And if the Honourable Member will go through the opinions received he will find that a large body of opinion is of the view that this means bringing in monogamy and divorce, and upsetting the sacramental rite.

I have already explained to the House the object of the Bill. For the satisfaction of those who are very technical with regard to these measures I will repeat that the object of the Bill is to modify the Act. But it must be for some purpose, and I frankly admit, that the purpose is monogamy and modifying the form of divorce. I wish to be frank with the House and I do not wish to be unnecessarily interrupted. And the interruptions so far—I say with all respect—have not been quite relevant.

Sir, I began by explaining the object of the Bill. I also pointed out the objections which have been raised to the Bill. I am going to deal with three main objections and leave the House to deal with the other objections. The first objection is that somehow or other it is irreligious, I think it is a valid objection because among many religious Hindus there is a genuine feeling that it is disturbing the sacramental ceremony. With regard to that my point is not against viewing marriage as a sacrament, but my complaint is that it is not looked at in a sufficiently religious light. Every Hindu will tell you that we have about 25 or 30 sacraments. The life of a Hindu from birth to death and also thereafter is nothing but a sacrament. Now we find that every sacrament has gone with this one exception of marriage, and that also particularly in the case of girls only. So even according to religious opinion you can modify so-called sacraments. I wish to point out that this sacrament is being applied unjustly, so that objections based on that ground may not influence my Honourable friends. I think we have done wrongly in interpreting this sacramental idea in different ways in regard to the sexes. If it is a sacrament and if the girl can be married only once, on the same analogy the bridegroom also should not be allowed to marry more than once. But if you allow that in the case of boys I see no objection—however sacramentally minded one may be—to allowing it in the case of girls also, on the principle of equality and on the principle that the girl is also a human being. Now, Sir, there is one thing more. To those who are religiously inclined and who feel such a great deal about sacrament, let me point out something to them and I hope they will devote still more of their ideas to this idea of sacrament. I do not want to dabble in politics when I am dealing with a social measure. What has happened? After this sacrament, the status of the wife is absolutely unchangeable, nothing can change it. Unfortunately in this country you must have read recently of forcible conversions. Now, what I want to say is, that if there have been forcible conversions, after all, they are human, they are artificial, therefore whatever forcible conversions have taken place, if we have faith in sacramental theory of marriage, the Hindus who have been converted cannot be said to be outside the pale of Hindu society. In spite of forcible conversions, those who have faith in sacraments must admit that in spite of forcible conversions, they do not cease to be Hindus.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Clutter N. Muhammadan Rural): They do not.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I will recommend this idea of sacrament to all those Mandals, Saivaists and Mataikuppadias who have sent down their opinion on this Bill. I give them a better occupation, instead of finding objections if they can concentrate their energies on Hindu sacramental side, let them pronounce that whatever you may do, a Hindu particularly a Hindu girl who is married, let there be forcible conversion or whatever you like, her religion cannot be changed and she continues to be a Hindu.

An Honourable Member: They have pronounced like that.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: If that is the attitude taken by them, then I welcome it. I go one step further. I am logically considering the whole plan. I hope you, Sir, will not consider my remarks irrelevant. What is the reason for the whole enmity against Hinduism? I am suggesting this measure not only for Hindu-Muslim unity, but also for the purpose of achieving homogeneity and amicable relations for the whole country. You do not find so much enmity between other religions. Everybody seems to have a certain amount of enmity against Hindu religion. I have given a certain amount of thought to this. Why should this state of affairs continue or even exist? It is for this reason that we are not a proselytising religion. We are all born Hindus and as soon as under some excuse or other, the Hindus are contaminated, then immediately we ourselves—the more so than the members of the other religion, we ourselves are so anxious to drop them out of the Hindu faith. If a Hindu is a born Hindu, then no amount of artificial conversion can make him cease to be a Hindu. If all the religious bodies should pronounce, that whatever it may be, a Hindu is born a Hindu, and for all time he will remain a Hindu, if all the legal luminaries who have given the opinion that a Hindu marriage is a sacramental marriage should give the opinion that a Hindu, once he is born a Hindu, whatever may happen to him would never cease to be a Hindu, if such an opinion is pronounced, then I say a lot of enmity between Hinduism and other religions will disappear for the simple reasons that forcible conversion will not be valid. All this spite against Hinduism will disappear. I commend this suggestion to all the religious bodies and legal persons who have studied a good deal about sacrament. If you use sacrament in this sense, then I for one, will go perhaps more than my religious minded friends. That is so far as one objection to this Bill is concerned.

The second objection is to the clause which says that the registered date of marriage will be from the date of registration. Naturally therefore, the old sacramental marriage would cease. I find a good deal of prejudice imported in this view. You cannot continue as married parties under two systems. Either you must be registered if you want to take advantages of registration and therefore you must either be registered or must continue the sacramental marriage. I suggested in my Bill after a good deal of legal consultation, a basis that could be had in Bombay. I suggested that the registration will be the date from the date of status of registered marriage. Unfortunately I wanted to be logical and I said that the old marriage would be deemed to have been eliminated. It was not an ignorant or a hasty proposition that I had put down in this clause. To the best of my ability I consulted the best legal opinion in Bombay and they said, you cannot continue under two systems of marriage. Therefore one marriage ceases. If you suggest that it should be the date from the time of sacramental marriage, then what would happen to the children born in between. Will they be coparceners, will they have the personal law of succession applied to them, or will the law of survivorship be applied to them, or will the law of succession be applied to them? If you carry this date back to the date of the previous marriage, you are raising complications. Therefore you had better make it in your Bill that the date of the registered marriage will be from the date of registration. I find that in the Hindu code they have suggested that civil marriage should date from the date of the first marriage. I do not say that I had not seen this difficulty. As a matter of fact I had consulted legal opinion on this. But the point is if in this Bill I had suggested the same opinion that is given in the Hindu Code, then those objections that I have put before the House and which were pointed out to me, those would have appeared in the opinion. Therefore whether you have registration from the date of the civil marriage or whether you have it from the date of the first marriage, the question of provision for children is a difficulty which is there. Not only that. It was also explained to me that so far as succession is concerned, you have given many legal fictions and one of the legal fictions is the property that is invested cannot be divested. That is why I suggested that civil marriage will be from the date of registration and the children who are born before the date of civil marriage will be ruled by the personal law of succession. That is coparcenership, and survivorship of the children who are born after the marriage will be by law of succession.

Mr. P. B. Gole (Berar Non-Muhammadan) Should the father be considered dead after the civil marriage?

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: You have this objection even now. If he is considered dead in the case of civil marriage, is he not considered dead even now?

Mr. President: Order, order.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I am sorry, Sir, I should have addressed the Chair. But you, Sir, have no such difficulties to understand. That is why I was addressing these remarks to my friend. That is why under the circumstances I put the date for civil marriage as the date of registration. Where it is a question of not having looked after provision for children, one-third of the opinions are condemning the Bill. Where does this arise? Anyhow if you want a change, if the principle is accepted, I find the principle is accepted in the majority of opinions, then, whether you have the date for civil marriage from the date of the original marriage or from the date of registration, these difficulties are there and it is for us to see how to get over these difficulties. This is so far as provision for children is concerned. The breaking of marriage is supposed to be revolting to sacramental marriage. Incidentally, in explaining the position of children, I have also pointed out that there is no such thing as breaking of the marriage. Till this is registered as a civil marriage, whatever your status in marriage was continues. There is no period at which you are unmarried, there is no question of bastards or prostitution, it cannot arise, either you are sacramentally married or, as soon as the sacramental status ceases immediately afterwards your status is registered according to the civil marriage. Therefore the question of break of marriage does not arise. Personally I have no objection whatever the changes may take place but I am glad that I gave notice of this Bill and it is for this reason. I find that according to the opinion of the Bombay Bar Associations and the opinion of Hindu Social Reform Association, a very important body in Bombay—they have pointed out that this 1872 law has been very anomalous and bad, that this idea of inheritance and status of the party in the joint family should not have been tagged on, it should not have been associated with the idea of civil marriage. I think that representations were made.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) The Bombay Bar Association recommends deletion of section 15-A.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Wait a minute. It has drawn the attention of the legal profession at any rate towards the anomalies of the Act of 1872. If this Bill does not do anything more, and if it has only done that, and if my legal friends will pay proper attention to it, I will feel that have done more than could be done under the circumstances. (Interruption) You can speak afterwards. It has been pointed out a long time ago, as early as 1930 and even in 1935, that this law of 1872, the Special Marriage Act, should be amended, and amended on the lines that the personal law of inheritance and the other personal laws need not be changed, because somebody chooses to be married under this Civil Marriage Act. The House will not be doing a wrong thing in utilising this opportunity to modify the law of 1872 which after all we have been having for the last fifty years and in our bovine way we seem to go on with it, we paid no attention to it, and as soon as something is put forward then the legal profession, or some of them, seem to wake up and they find objections against any measure that is suggested and again they go sleep. I do not say that there are not others in the legal profession who bring to proper notice the defects in the existing law, and that it should be modified, but then I take it, it is no part of the legal profession to look after the amendment of laws. (Interruption) You are a lawyer.

Mr. President: Order, order.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I want to give a compliment to the legal profession and just at that time they will interrupt me, and when I am condemning them they seem to keep quiet. I do not understand this mentality. I wanted to tell them they were right. They should merely point out the defects of the law and the legislature being there it should be the duty of the legislature and the members of the Indian Legislative Assembly to amend or modify or make the law good, if it is bad. It does not matter whoever wants to take it upon himself, whether he understands about the law or not. That is not the point. The point is this. Very often as you know in all professions, including the legal profession, it is always the laymen who bring in reforms. In my own profession I can tell you that all progress in medicine has not been entirely done by men of the medical profession. Indeed quite a few reforms have been brought forward by laymen. To give you a case in point, Pasteur was not a medical man. He was not a practitioner at all, and yet the whole course of medicine has been revolutionised by Pasteur. Similarly all the modern drugs such as sulphamide and others have not been discovered by the medical profession. Therefore I am not frightened that because I am not a legal man I cannot bring forward legislation to improve the state of society. Indeed I am encouraged. Legal men take the expert's view, which is the narrower view. Very often it is an ignorant view, and therefore in the circumstances, instead of being discouraged, I find encouragement in bringing forward this legislation, and thanks to the courtesy of the House and of the legal Members of the Government of India, like Sir Nripindianath Sircar and Sir Asoka Roy, I have been able to do something in the matter.

Therefore there was no intention of any modification of the marriage, not even the intention of changing the law of succession. The Bill does not want to interfere with any sacrament. But what it certainly does is to give freedom to a married partner where she is led to think that her life is a misery. It is no good denying the fact that this has been brought in for the two main provisions, and that is the provision of monogamy, if she has no right to marry more than once, then certainly during the time that she is pinned down in this way, the man also will not marry any other person, and the corollary of this naturally is that if both consider that the marriage is unhappy, the divorce should take place. My friends who have read these opinions will see that it is mentioned in these opinions that this is a backdoor method, an indirect method of bringing in divorce. I cannot be charged with using backdoor methods. So early as 1939 I had given notice of a Divorce Bill—a Bill for regular open divorce, unfortunately we could not proceed with that Bill because my party then decided that we should not attend the Assembly. What the fate of that Bill would have been I cannot tell you; therefore it cannot be charged that I want to bring in anything now by indirect or backdoor methods. But this much is certain, that a frontal attack like this, or shall I say a reasonable suggestion like this the Hindu society is not prepared to accept, and therefore if a large society like this is not prepared to accept in a direct way and if the measure is useful, then all that you can do is to bring it in some way or the other, and that is the reason why I have brought forward this Bill

I think I have answered all the three main objections to this Bill and I think I will be only doing my duty and enlightening this House if I give them very shortly the genesis of this Bill, as to why I have brought it forward. As I told you, I brought forward a direct Bill for divorce. Somehow or other it was not acceptable to the Hindu society and there were other social Bills also on the agenda, and some other colleagues of mine were also anxious for the social reform of the Hindu society. Soon afterwards, the Hindu Code Committee was formed and it is common knowledge that that committee was at first formed merely for the sake of inheritance and succession, because it seems to me that although we the Hindus are considered the most religious body in the whole world, it seemed to me that we were more interested on the succession side than on any other side, so far as religion was concerned. When his state of affairs existed, I suggested then, to the Law Member that if you are going to have a committee appointed for this succession to property, then why not send all the Bills which were before the Assembly to the same committee? That is how the Hindu Code Committee was constituted. The Hindu Code Committee did very useful work, but what was the position of us who wanted to have some kind of reforms? The Hindu Code Committee produced this Hindu Code, which is very good, complete, academical and you may say almost something which should be referred to whenever there is any difficulty. Soon afterwards when the Committee was in Lahore I read in the papers that about 10,000 people invaded the town hall.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Not people, they were women.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I am very glad you have mentioned that. Ten thousand women invaded the Town Hall and they did not agree to the Code Committee. I am particularly glad that my Honourable friend, Mr. Gole, has pointed out this incident, because it was Mr. Gole and lawyers like him who brought forward the excuse that we should not do anything piecemeal and we should wait for the Hindu Code Committee.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-official): There are others who do not plead the same thing.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: This argument is only for those who plead this excuse. But they always change their argument. They say it should not be piecemeal and we should wait for the Committee's Report, and then when it suits them they say this is uprooting the whole Hindu society, and therefore you cannot expect the Hindu society to swallow the whole of this Code, and therefore you must go gradually. Now, what is going to be the position of some of us who are anxious that some kind of a reform should be brought in? I thought it was quite impossible to bring forward a fresh measure. In view of the fact that women were instigated by Sanatanists and by orthodox persons and they were tempted to go and attack the places where the committee was meeting, I thought that there was no hope. (Interruption) Don't tell me that women understood anything about it.

Mr. P. B. Gole: You understand it only.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I make bold to say on the floor of this House that all these women were instigated.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: We had heard that they were the instigators!

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: and not only that, but they were given wrong advice. I can frankly tell you what happened in Bombay. When this Bill was sent round for their opinion, the women frankly admitted that they did not understand the legal implications of this measure. They approached some of these distinguished solicitors and lawyers who pointed out all these disadvantages and the women got so thoroughly frightened that they started making representations.

Mr. P. B. Gole: They have made representations in this case

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: According to what they have been told

Even with regard to this Bill, Sir, I will give you an instance of what was pointed out to them. One of the lawyers, whom they consulted, happened to be a friend of mine. I asked him how did you do it, and he said what am I to do, they were frightened and that is the main reason why they attacked the Town Hall and other places. He said the women are told 'supposing the husband says in the beginning go and register, it is a good thing both for you and for him, and later on when you have registered the marriage thinking that it is in your interest, he may divorce you because there is a provision for that, so this is a trap for you'. I should like to know whether there is any Hindu woman who will not be frightened when she is told the whole thing in this manner. Naturally she will oppose the whole thing. These are the ways in which things are done. When I saw that there was going to be opposition to the Hindu Code and when I saw that Hindus will not accept a fresh Bill, what could a person like me and like some of my other friends, who are anxious to leave the society a little better than we found it, do? They can only do one thing. They can put in amending Bills. I know from technical point of view people will say that it is not correct and it should not be done in this manner. But we are prepared to take the odds and proceed forward with such measures.

Mr. President: Is the Honourable Member likely to take some time?

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Yes, Sir. This is a very vital question.

Mr. President: Today being Friday, the House will adjourn at 12.15, and re-assemble at 2.15 P.M.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch Till Quarter Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Quarter Past Two of the Clock. Mr. President (the Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Could I make one request? I have been asked to add three more names to the Select Committee in addition to those already there. That is the general request of the House. They are the Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari, Sri S. T. Adityan and Mr. Krishna Chandra Sharma.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member can continue his speech. I have not yet put his motion to the House.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: So I have brought to the notice of the House what is really the principle of the Bill. I have also dealt with the main objections to the Bill. My own opinion is that all these objections are not insuperable and that it should not be beyond the intelligence, goodwill and sympathy of this House to surmount these objections with regard to this Bill. I feel as I said at the beginning of my speech that the Hindu woman has won these rights for herself—that of being treated on an equal footing with men. And so far as the Congress is concerned it is committed to the principle. So far as comradeship in the freedom's battle is concerned, out of gratefulness we have to give her this right. I therefore commend my Bill to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President: Motion moved.

"That the Bill further to amend the Special Marriage Act, 1872 for certain purposes be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal, The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari, Lt. Col. Dr. J. C. Chatterjee, Khan Mohiuddin Yunus Khan, Shri Sri Prakasa, Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Mr. Vadhval Lalubhai, Sri N. V. Girdar, Pundit Balkrishna Sharma, Pundit Thakur Das Bhargava, Sardar Mangal Singh, Shri Sri Ammu Swaminathan, Sri A. K. Menon, Mr. Madandhai Singh, Mr. Leslie Gault, Mr. Sreenika Sekhri, Shri S. Jagannath Das, Sree Sat. Priya Banerjee, Sri S. T. Adityan, Mr. Krishna Chandra Sharma and the mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: I rise not to oppose but to support his Bill. The interruptions that I was attempting to make were intended to explain the object of the Bill as it stands rather than pursue any question of divorce, monogamy or other reforms which we might desire, but which are not the points involved here primarily. The Bill appears to me to have a simple object. There is a Special Marriage Act of 1872, now in force which provides for members of certain communities a form of marriage through which they can go by force of the Civil Law, whatever may be the orthodox opinion in respect of it. The law as it stands enables any bride and bridegroom, Hindu, or Buddhist or Sikh or Jain, provided they satisfy certain conditions, to go to a Registrar and have their marriage solemnized and registered, and thereafter certain incidents follow with regard to succession and other matters. Any arguments or objections that can be raised by Honourable Members or others to the Special Marriage Act of 1872, from the Hindu or other orthodox point of view, cannot now usefully be raised because it is already on the Statute Book and any law moved to annul that Act may be an occasion for bringing up such objections. But as things stand today, Hindus as well as Buddhists, Sikhs and Jains, can have recourse to the civil form of marriage with all its incidents without any difficulty. The present Bill is intended to remove only one disability and that is that any person who has already gone through a marriage which is doubtful in validity on account of the rigid code of Hindus or the others, can have recourse to this registration. Under the present law he cannot do it. Under the existing code, any man who has gone through a marriage with a woman according to the Hindu rights, to which possible objections could be raised on account of its being an inter-caste marriage or for other reasons, he cannot make the required declaration under the present Special Marriage Act to validate his union that he was not married, because it would be not quite correct for him to say that he was not married. This Bill seeks to enable, in short, persons who have gone through a marriage ceremony or form or contract already, to go through it again, in accordance with the Special Marriage Act, the parties being the same.

The Bill proposes to permit two persons who have already undergone through a marriage ceremony to go through it again in the civil form proposed here. Now there is nothing very wonderfully difficult or objectionable in this proposal. If a man, A, and a Woman B have gone through a marriage according to the Hindu rites, they are not allowed under the present law to go to the Registrar after a lapse of some time and have their marriage registered because they would not be unmarried persons. This Bill proposes that such persons can have their marriage registered. The only point that arises is this. If two persons are married according to Hindu rites, and if later their marriage is registered under this law that is proposed to be passed, what are the rights and the status of the children born in the interval. Since the interval may be as short as one day or as long as even ten years, in the latter case it is possible that there may be issues which were born out of the original marriage and there may be issues that may be born after this registration. That is sought to be solved in this Bill in a proposed section which suggests that the previous marriage shall be declared as dissolved on this registration. That is a point for much objection and I think that that can be disposed of in the Select Committee suitably and the objection can be removed. Otherwise there is nothing new in this Bill. The idea that this bill seeks to change the Hindu-law of divorce or monogamy or polygamy is I think quite wrong. These objections are as much applicable to the present Special Marriage Act of 1872, which is in force as they are applicable to the proposed Bill. Therefore I think that we need go into all that. It seems to me that this is a simple measure. It extends the scope of the present law so that it will be available not only to people who are for the first time desirous of going through a form of marriage but also to people who have gone through some doubtful form of marriage and are desirous of removing the doubt. Let it be remembered that no registration can take place unless both the parties—husband and wife—who have gone through a previous marriage ceremony are agreeable to it and go to the Registrar. Therefore there is previous consent. The idea that any divorce is imposed upon anybody who is unwilling or who is probably injured by that divorce, is totally out of place in this connection. That is why I sought to explain the thing at the very outset while supporting this measure. The fact is that in no civilized country in the world is anybody prevented from going through a civil form of marriage. If the religious laws prevailing in that country prevented it there is only one proviso attached to all those civil forms, that there should be nothing immoral about them.

The very first section here repeats all the provisions that are contained in the other Special Marriage Act of 1872 and this fact should remove possible objections. Neither of them should have any other wife or a husband alive, the parties must not be related to each other in any prohibited degree of consanguinity or affinity, etc., all these are repeated in this Bill. This Bill provides a simple civil form of marriage to persons, provided there is no moral or social objection to that union. It removes the disability of illegitimacy to people who have been living together and who wish to be husband and wife and against which there can be no possible social objection. I therefore hope that the House will accept this Bill and see it through.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Sir, I rise to oppose the motion that has been moved by my Honourable friend, Dr. Deshmukh for referring this Bill to the Select Committee. Let me at the outset make my position absolutely clear.

I stand for progressive legislation in social matters. Evidence of that was given a few days ago when I think I supported Dr. Deshmukh's Bill, perhaps more vehemently than anybody else in the House. Dr. Deshmukh well knows that during the period from 1935 to 1940 in the two or three pieces of legislation relating to social matters that he introduced in this House and succeeded in getting them passed I too have a very large share.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: No.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Go and see the proceedings and you will be convinced. I am sure that Dr. Deshmukh will be the first man to acknowledge it. I may further state, Mr. President, that the objectives which Dr. Deshmukh said he had in view in moving this Bill have my entire support. He stated that his object was to secure monogamous marriages and enable parties to have divorce when they find continuance of the marriage unhappy. So far as these objectives are concerned I have nothing but full support for them. But I respectfully submit, Mr. President, that the Bill as it is now before the House is entirely misconceived from the Preamble down to the last section. I know there is a combination of enthusiasm and ingenuity, as Dr. Deshmukh is supported by Hon. Raja Gopalachari yet we cannot be blind to the fact that this legislation is of a far-reaching character. My Honourable friend Rajaji may well say—and that is one of the ways of a very clever and able advocate—that this is a very simple Bill which seeks to extend the benefits of an Act which is already on the Statute Book to certain categories of people and therefore whatever objections one may have to the provisions that are incorporated in the Original Act are not valid so far as the discussion on the Amending Bill is concerned. I may very respectfully point out that the amending Bill seeks to extend the 'benefits' of the main Act and if that is so and if other categories are to be brought into the orbit of the original Act, it is only relevant that we should scrutinise whether what are described as benefits are really benefits or something else.

Mr. President, it is clear from the statement of objects and reasons of this Bill that Dr. Deshmukh wants "to give the benefit of modern legislation with respect to marriage to certain categories of people without in any way interfering with the religious sentiments of the communities concerned," and the particular piece of legislation which he has selected in order to confer 'benefits' upon persons in the Hindu fold is the Special Marriage Act of 1872 as modified by the Act of 1928. Now, in the discussion Dr. Deshmukh himself admitted that the Act of 1872 was very old that it does not keep pace with modern conditions and ideas and that there is a clearly established need for amending it and yet knowing full well that the provisions of that Act are not beneficial to the Hindu community today, he wants to extend the so called benefits to new categories. I should very respectfully request this House that it must be with a great sense of responsibility, that it must interfere with the marriage laws of the land. After all the marriage institution is the greatest contribution made by social thinkers for the security of society, for peaceful enjoyment of life and for securing social happiness. It must be with the greatest caution and circumspection that thinkers like my Honourable friend Rajaji and others should proceed to legislate in these matters. The foundations of marriage are love, mutual understanding, respect, consideration for each other, appreciation of the fact that the life of the couple is an adventure or an undertaking in which there must be joint and cooperative effort. Therefore, if any interference is to be allowed it must be allowed only when there is a clear case that such interference will be to the mutual benefit of the parties concerned. My honourable friend, Mr. Rajaji, said that all considerations about monogamy and divorce are not relevant. I just want to know what is it that is at the back of Dr. Deshmukh's mind in proposing this piece of legislation. I am sure he does not want Hindu couples who have lived together for ten or fifteen years under the sacramental marriage bond to go to the registrar for the fun of it, and get their old marriage dissolved and the new marriage registered, surely, not for the fun of it. There must be some objective, and as I analyse the sections in the light of the remarks he made, I find that there can be three objectives for a couple going to a registrar and giving the necessary notice. The first is that they want the course of succession to be changed. The second is that they want to have the monogamous marriage or married life throughout. Third, they want to provide for the certainty of a divorce. Now, there cannot be any other objective. My honourable friend Rajaji suggested, that there may have been marriages which may not have been strictly legal, and that it is for legalising such marriages that a Bill of this kind will be useful—my humble answer to that is that this is not what is contemplated by the Bill as introduced by Dr. Deshmukh. I respectfully bring to the attention of this House what Dr. Deshmukh says in the preamble of this Bill—

"Whereas it is expedient to extend the benefits of the Special Marriage Act of 1872 (Act III of 1872) to persons who profess the Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religion and who are already married according to rites or mode of contracting marriage other than under the Special Marriage Act, 1872."

Let us see what it means. If the marriage is valid, then there is no difficulty. If the marriage is invalid, that invalidity can only be pronounced when the matter is taken to the court. Now, clause 8 of this Bill, says "In section 10 of the said Act, after the word 'solemnized' the words 'or registered' shall be inserted." Under section 10 of the original Act you will find, Sir, the parties have to make a declaration. Both the bride and the bridegroom have to declare "I am at the present time unmarried." If the marriage is there and the doubt is about its validity, it can only be set at rest by going to a court of law. If however the parties themselves consider that the marriage through the ceremony of which they have already gone, is not valid, they will either make a declaration that they are not married or they may say they are married. If they make a declaration that they are not married, then this Bill will not apply. It is clear. If they say they are married, then only, this Bill will apply. The first marriage is dissolved as soon as registration is effected. But the first marriage which is illegal does not become legal by being dissolved, nor the children born between the date of the first marriage and the registration under this Bill become legitimate. The doubts about the first marriage, remain, but marital relationship after registration becomes valid beyond doubt. Under this Bill there is no opportunity provided to legalise a doubtful marriage. What the Bill contemplates are marriages which are valid, which are solemnized according to the rites or mode of contracting marriages other than under the Special Marriage Act.

Now, what is the consideration on which we shall allow this Bill to proceed? Is it in the best interests of the society? As regards the particular form of this Bill I want to bring to your notice—

[Sjt N V Gadgil]

Bill is entirely inconsistent with the preamble to the main Act The preamble of the main Act states

"Whereas it is expedient to provide a form of marriage for persons who do not profess the Christian, Jewish, Hindu, Muhammadan, Parsi, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religion and for persons who profess the Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religion, and to legalise certain marriages the validity of which is doubtful, it is hereby enacted as follows

In the main Act, the marriage is to be celebrated, and in order to facilitate the celebration of such a marriage that Act makes provision Here the marriage is already celebrated, the marriage is already there I therefore submit that the object with which the main Act has come into being is different altogether from the object with which the present Bill is introduced in this House. It is a matter for you, Mr President, to consider whether these two incongruous pieces of legislation can be so brought together and considered, whether the amending Bill which is fundamentally different from the main Act can be allowed to proceed But I do not want to take my stand on that ground My point is this that if Dr Deshmukh is really anxious to do a good turn to those who find their marriages unhappy, this is not the remedy As I said a few minutes ago, the couple must have some object in view It is not for the mere fun of it that they go before the registrar and get the first marriage dissolved and get the other marriage registered Do they want the course of succession to be diverted? In that case, I most respectfully submit that they are doing injustice to the children whom they have brought into this world, without their consent obviously This legislation is going to be retrospective If there is retrospective legislation

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: You are more anxious about them than the parents themselves.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: I will show you a way which will secure your object better More than that I do not want to say If it is a retrospective piece of legislation, then the important point that every responsible legislature has to consider is whether it is going to expropriate interests which have already come into existence Take a case where the children are already there, and because they are born in a joint Hindu family they have earned certain rights, and if by marriage under this particular piece of legislation their rights are prejudiced, I think the expectations that they have a right to entertain under the general system of law prevalent in the community are frustrated This is unjust This is unfair and against all canons of justice and equity

Mr President, I agree with Dr Deshmukh that there must be monogamous marriages Dr Deshmukh knows that in the Bombay Presidency a law to that effect has been already passed and it is now law of the land Now, does this piece of legislation advance the cause of monogamy? A person who has already two wives—he must be a fortunate man—is out of the purview of this Bill Clause 2A states neither party has at the time of the registration any other husband or wife living A man who has two wives cannot go before the Registrar If he wants really to have another wife this piece of legislation can be taken advantage of for a day or two, because as soon as the marriage is registered under this legislation he will have all the benefits which a marriage celebrated and registered under Act III of 1872 has In other words, he will have the right to divorce If he is anxious to get rid of his wife because that thought may occur to him any time in his life he can immediately go to the proper court and get a divorce The object of this Bill is certainly, not as far as I am able to see, to divert the course of succession It cannot be monogamy because if a man is anxious to have one wife there is no necessity for him to go to the Registrar's court and get the marriage registered under the provisions of this Bill If he is a firm believer in monogamy, I do not think his belief is augmented or strengthened by the mere fact that he makes a solemn declaration before the Registrar but the real object, as I understand it, is no other than to facilitate divorce Let us say it frankly and freely I stand for divorce I have always supported it (Interruption by Dr Deshmukh) Dr Deshmukh should have enough patience as a good doctor must have I stand for divorce Otherwise you cannot have marriage except for life That is too great a price In this connection the House may like to hear what the great jurist Bentham said

'It there were a law which forbade the taking a partner, a guardian, a manager, a companion, except on the condition of always keeping him, what tyranny, what madness it would be called' Yet, a husband is a companion, a guardian, a manager, a partner, and more yet, and still, in the greater part of civilised countries, a husband cannot be had except for life

To live under the perpetual authority of a man you hate, is of itself a state of slavery, but to be compelled to submit to his embraces, is a misfortune too great even for slavery itself Is it said that the yoke is mutual? That only doubles the misfortune

Since marriage presents to the generality of men the only means of satisfying fully and peaceably the imperious desires of love, to turn them from it is to deprive them of its pleasures, and is to do an evil of no small magnitude Now, what more terrible bugbear than the indissolubility of this contract? Whether it be a marriage, a service, a country, a condition of any kind, the prohibition to go out of it must operate as a prohibition to enter in When death is the only deliverer, what horrible temptations, what crimes may result from a position so fatal!"

As I said in the beginning of my remarks the foundations of marriage must be love, respect for each other, appreciation that it is a joint adventure which must be carried out with perfect understanding If that is gone and if hate, disrespect and intolerance take their place, I think the society ought to intervene and should by suitable legislation make matters easy for divorce Let us therefore say plainly that the object of this Bill is not diversion of the course of succession, nor promotion of monogamy but the object is to secure facility for divorce I then say—why go in this roundabout way If we think that it is a just thing, if we are convinced that that is the only method to secure maximum social happiness, we must plainly tell it to our society, our community, convince them, persuade them For some time it is possible we may be misunderstood but all the same we must tell them frankly that this is the right way Let us not do things in a manner which will create distrust What I am more afraid of is that the Hindu community will feel that instead of putting the issue of divorce straight before it, Dr. Deshmukh has tried to bring "by the back door" the law of divorce in the Hindu community Why should I go out of my way, if I want a divorce, to seek the provisions of this Bill and declare that my original marriage which was celebrated under the auspices of my parents, my friends, my elders, is dissolved Is there no sentiment about it After all the Hindu dharma is a way of life Let us not trifle with it Let us not approach it in a spirit of complete indifference Modern ideas I welcome but modern ideas must be incorporated in the old way of life in such a manner that when the old order changeth the impact will be as little as possible Let us herald the new without offending the old Let us not be bitter

I stand and swear by Hindu religion My marriage has been celebrated according to Hindu sacrament I want to stand by it If I want a divorce for a good cause, I am asked to go through a civil form of marriage, get my first marriage dissolved I do not consider for the time being the consequences that will accrue so far as my children born before the registration are concerned But why should I go through this ordeal of registration if I want a divorce? Why should I go through this humiliation of dissolution of my first marriage? It means that you can have divorce by going in a round about way This is a fraud In the interests of Hindu culture and in the interests of progress of Hindu community I appeal to Dr. Deshmukh to bring in a Bill and I make the same appeal to Rajaji to bring in a Bill which will legitimise the marriages, the category of which was referred to in his speech and which will also make provisions for divorce for those who want it on certain specified conditions Now what are you doing here? Are you really giving that benefit to those who get their marriages registered under this Bill? After all, the marriage law is an indication of the moral position in the society Just as a thermometer is an indication of the heat or a barometer is an indication of the weight of atmosphere, so your Marriage Law will indicate as to how your morals stand What will a foreigner think of us if he is to know that a Hindu gentleman who wants to have a divorce on very good grounds cannot get it because the Hindu Law is not there to help him and the leaders of the Hindu community with all their ingenuity and high intellectual order cannot find any other means except to have recourse to a legislation passed 64 years ago and which is sadly out of date and out of tune with modern ideas? I think that is not a state of affairs to be proud of. I would, therefore, very respectfully tell Dr Deshmukh and the Honourable Mr Rajaji that this is not the way to get the thing done. And, after all, are you really liberalising the law of divorce by simply making a provision for the couple to have a divorce under Act III of 1872?

Mr President, the Indian Divorce Act governs the parties married under the Special Marriage Act and the grounds for divorce are enumerated in section 10 of the Indian Divorce Act. That Act also is old. There may be clauses which will justify divorce today other than those enumerated in section 10. What have you done to liberalise this Act? If the contention of Dr Deshmukh is that the Act of 1872 is not liberal enough and it should be modified in so far as the provisions for divorce and other disabilities are concerned, he must bring in a new Bill. But so far as this Bill is concerned I submit that from the Preamble to the last clause everything will have to be changed if you want to make it upto date. There will be differences of opinion on every clause. Take the Preamble. It contains these words "according to rites or mode of contracting Marriage". According to some Hindu marriage is a sacrament and not a contract. There have been judicial pronouncements both ways. If it is held that it is a sacrament, then this Bill does not apply to it ipso facto. Therefore, I submit that, in the first place, the preamble of this Bill is inconsistent with the preamble of the main Act. It is a fact, it cannot be an amending Bill to the Act. It is fundamentally different. Secondly, taking the preamble as it is and if Hindu marriage is held as a sacrament, then I doubt very much whether the provisions of this Bill will be at all applicable to such a marriage.

Now, Sir, going further into the Bill clause 2(d) says

"The parties must not be related to each other in any degree of consanguinity or affinity prescribed in clause (4) of section 2 and the provisos thereto."

You will find from the main Act that the degrees of prohibition there are narrower. Now, take a case where a man has married his maternal uncle's daughter. It is perfectly legal according to custom in several provinces. If this couple goes before the Registrar, the first marriage will be dissolved. There will be this registered marriage and it can be successfully challenged by their own children or by somebody else interested in the course of succession. So, they will be neither here nor there. I do not know what will be the fate of that couple.

Now, if I were to go through the other clauses, you will not permit me to have a detailed criticism of them under the relevant Standing Order. All I can say is that if you want to re-draft the whole thing from the preamble to the last clause, why not bring in a new Bill altogether? It is just like a case in which I happened to ask the Chief Officer of a certain municipality, how is the state of the city? He said "Six persons have died of plague, 16 persons have died of cholera, 20 persons are down with malaria, drains and pipes have been broken, there have been half a dozen cases of arson, but everything is O.K. with the city". So, here also everything is O.K. with the Bill although the preamble is wrong, the other clauses are entirely either irrelevant or inconsistent and the last and the most important clause, namely, 15A, that is, dissolution of previous marriage on registration of new marriage, is not wanted even by my Honourable friend Rajaji as it is.

Now, Dr Deshmukh made a reference about a certain Bar Association and he ridiculed to some extent—I do not say intentionally or deliberately—the views expressed by Women's Associations, I may tell Dr Deshmukh that so far as the women of my province are concerned, they have more commonsense and they know the whole thing much better than most of us either do know or pretend to know. I may tell him that when the Bill to prevent bigamous marriages was introduced in the Bombay Legislative Assembly and circulated to elicit public opinion, I accepted the invitation of certain women's organisations to explain the provisions of the Bill. Mr. President, I have never addressed such a meeting in my long life. There were about 700 women. I was the only male in that gathering and there was one newspaper man who was allowed as a sort of bodyguard to me. I explained the provisions of the Bill for an hour and a half. Then for another 1½ hours some twelve women participated in the debate. Many of them opposed and many others supported it. But the level of criticism was so high that it would be wrong to say that anybody could fool womankind, at any rate so far as my Province is concerned that is my opinion.

Mr. President, you will find in the opinion—I do not want to refer to them in detail—that women's organisations have stated that the principles underlying this Bill are good and acceptable, but they do not like this Bill. They prefer the corresponding provision in the Hindu Code. I can assure Dr. Deshmukh that it does not mean that we should all wait till the Hindu Code is before the House and, is passed. No, Sir, I do not object to piecemeal legislation, if it is necessary. In fact that is exactly what I said during the debate on the safota marriage Bill. Analysis of opinions will show that nobody supports the Bill as it is. The orthodox section opposes it. But those who support the principles underlying the Bill are all opposed to this Bill. They prefer a separate Bill providing divorce in certain circumstances. The object of this Bill is no other than to enable a couple have divorce which at present they cannot have in the absence of any law of divorce in Hindu religion. Therefore my humble submission is, have entirely a new Bill for divorce. Are you really serving the purpose which you have in mind by taking this Bill through all the legislative stages? You will find, Sir, that it will not be very easy to get divorce under the provisions of the Indian Divorce Act. You will have to go through registration first and then go in for divorce proceedings. I would rather prefer as I said that you have a straight law which will deal with divorce so that it may be cheap in point of expenditure, it may be easy in procedure and one which can be well understood by members of the Hindu community.

Mr. President, I would have liked to criticise other provisions of the Bill, but as I know there are a number of friends who are very anxious to make their own contribution, I do not think I should prolong my speech any further, but at the same time, I would most earnestly request you, Mr. President to give ample scope so that the Hindu society may know that we are facing the issue straightaway and not in an indirect manner. Sir, I oppose the reference of this Bill to the Select Committee.

Shri Sri Prakasa (Benares and Gorakhpur Divisions, Non-Muhammadian Rural). Mr. President, Sir, in rising to support the principles underlying Dr. Deshmukh's Bill, I should like to assure the House that I have listened with every respect and much interest to the speech of that my Honourable friend Mr. Gadgil has just delivered. Coming as I do from the ancient and sacred city of Kashi, I should like to assure him that I am as good a sanatan dharma as he himself.

Sgt. K. V. Gadgil: I am not a sanatanist.

Shri Sri Prakasa: If my Honourable friend does not belong to the sanatan dharma, at least I do. That dharma has been well depicted in the two famous lines

*Satyam bruyat priyam bruyat
na bruyat satya-mapriyam
Satyam bruyat priyam bruyat
Esha dharmah sanatanah*

"Thou shalt speak the truth, thou shalt speak what is pleasing; thou shalt not speak the truth that is not pleasing nor a lie that is pleasing. That is sanatana dharma the eternal law." I am anxious, Sir, to tread warily on what must be a dangerous ground of social and religious reform. I am fully aware that one is to be on his guard when dealing with such matters; and I have no desire to infuse any heat in the discussion. When one has to deal with problems such as this, in a complicated society like ours where social customs and religious beliefs have got inextricably mixed up we have to be very careful.

Sir, to be quite candid, the first time that the problem of registration of marriages came before me was when Lord Sinha's marriage was disputed and his son was not given access to the House of Lords though Lord Sinha had been made a Peer. It then occurred to me that there must be something intrinsically wanting in the system pertaining to marriages in my country which could create a situation like that when the House of Lords could dispute the validity of the marriage of such a distinguished son of India as Lord Sinha. When things happen to humble people, they do not attract the attention that they do when they happen to big folk like Lord Sinha. It was then that I started studying the system of marriages that prevailed in India and also to think if there was any way of reforming those systems so that such situations may not arise in the future. My Honourable friend Mr. Gadgil said that love was the foundation of marriage. So far as I know in India marriage is the foundation of love. We love because we marry, we do not marry because we love. In the case of Mr. Gadgil, it may be different.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: I am both ways.

Shri Sri Prakasa: A close study of this Bill will assure Mr. Gadgil that there is no contemplation of any interference with the system of marriage. It is a purely permissive measure, and it is not good getting excited over its provisions and thinking that our religion is in danger. What my Honourable friend Mr. Gadgil and friends like him suffer from is the conviction that Hindu means only the high caste Hindu and that the vast majority of Hindus who are humble and who belong to the so-called lower castes are not Hindus at all.

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: I never suggested that.

Shri Sri Prakasa: If my Honourable friend did not suggest it, I should like seriously to ask him whether by implication he did not say that divorce was not known to Hindu society. I do not know of conditions in his part of the country, but in my part of the country divorces are most common among the humble castes of Hindus. If there is a difference between the husband and the wife, if some cause arises due to which the husband gets enraged with his wife or the wife gets disappointed with the husband, immediately a divorce takes place and society recognises that. And despite what is said in the Indian Penal Code the conventions of the land even as accepted by the law courts, have to recognise that. Sir, in India we have traditionally got many kinds of marriages—I believe there are eight kinds—and I understand there are many categories of sons who are recognised—I believe the number is twelve. And so it is almost impossible to say what custom exactly is Hindu and what exactly is not, and it is time that we worked up to some system of uniformity so that all doubts might be set at rest.

So far as I read into Dr. Deshmukh's Bill, I find that he makes three things quite clear. One is that those who want to take advantage of the provisions of the Special Marriage Act can do so. As the law stands today, when a man and woman have married once they cannot have this civil marriage afterwards, for at the time of the civil marriage both parties have to declare that they are unmarried. There are many persons who, rightly or wrongly, are not satisfied only by a civil marriage, they like to have some ceremonies, they like to go through what is roughly called a sacramental marriage—the burning fire and the oblations put into that fire, the going round and round the fire,—all these things seem to satisfy the soul of many people. But it so happens that if you have gone through a marriage like that you cannot possibly declare afterwards that you are unmarried, and therefore you cannot perform a civil marriage. I think such persons who desire to have a sacramental marriage and also wish to take advantage of the provisions of the Special Marriage Act should be allowed to do so; and I think that Dr. Deshmukh's

Bill makes that clear. My Honourable friend Mr Gadgil has referred to the apparent absurdity of the man and woman who have once married getting married again. At least in my part of the country, a thing like that is not unknown. It happens in the case of a couple who have 20 children if the same couple happen to have 20 sons and daughters—they go through the whole ceremony of marriage again with themselves. (Interruption.) Perhaps the idea is to give an extra holiday to the children themselves! In any case the fact is that in some circumstances, the same couple marry each other.

I think the law should make this point clear—if it has not done so already—that in case there are children of a marriage, at the time when a husband and wife desire to go through a civil marriage, those children will retain all the rights that they had under the law under which the husband and wife were first married and which prevailed when they were married. That I think is the case even today. I know of an old gentleman of Delhi—I will not mention his name—who wanted to marry a person of another caste. He found that he could not marry this particular person—he himself was a widower—except according to the Civil Marriage Act. He went through the marriage. The Civil Marriage Act as it stands today says that at the time a person marries under the Civil Marriage Act, his connection with his joint Hindu family is severed. So this gentleman's civil marriage severed his connection with the joint family. The sons of his first marriage which was sacramental, got their share of the parental property on the date of the father's second marriage, and this old gentleman walked away with his own share. That I think will occur even in the case of those who marry under Dr Deshmukh's Bill. The children if any, of the previous sacramental marriage will get what they would have otherwise got, and the father—let us say—who is contracting a civil marriage, will go away with his share. This is in accordance with law and custom as they stand today, for today too the father can separate from his sons as much as a son can separate from his father. His subsequent civil marriage only means that the father separates from his sons hands over to them their share of the property, goes away with his own share and marries under the Civil Marriage Act, and the children that came after this new marriage will get all the rights that this particular Act gives them. I think that is what Dr Deshmukh would like to do, and if the wording of the Bill is not satisfactory and does not connote what I am saying it should be put right in the Select Committee. Therefore, Sir, there is no prejudice as my Honourable friend Mr Gadgil suspects, to the rights of the children of that marriage.

Then Sir, the most important point is about the validity of marriages. A large number of marriages in India are really disputed. It is very common among the humble classes. So many of them get married very early despite the law that prevents such marriages. Then the man goes away in search of bread to a distant town and he returns after many years. The parents of the girl who had been married to him insist that the girl was really married to him. He denies, and there is a dispute, there being no record and no registration of the marriage. A large number of such cases come before the law courts in my province at least. These things should be set at rest. All marriages that are disputed or are likely to be disputed should be validated in some form or another, and I think that Dr Deshmukh has given a very good way out. I will refer to the case of Prof Indra. He is a well known person, the son of Swami Shaddhanand. He had contracted a perfectly proper marriage, but because it was an inter-caste marriage there was a dispute about its validity; and he consulted no less a lawyer than Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru who advised him to undergo a civil marriage because the earlier marriage was really a marriage at all according to the law as it stood at that time and husband and wife were married to each other again. Now there must be some way out of such perfectly proper marriages to be recognized by law in order that no disputes may arise in the future. There are conflicting judgments of the present High Courts of the land. Some regard the anuloma marriage—the marriage of a high caste to a lower caste woman as legal marriage, some do not; some regard inter-caste marriage as legal marriage, some do not. Now when we desire a certain amount of freedom in marriages, we must also see to it that marriages that are correctly performed, and in which there is no immorality or impropriety, should be recognized by law, and I think this Bill gives a guarantee that all such marriages shall be so recognized. So this Bill also helps in validating inter-caste marriages and all marriage relations which are perfectly moral and correct.

My friend, Mr Gadgil was rather worried about one form of marriage, which personally I regard a very improper system, and which prevails in the South where a maternal uncle can marry his niece, or where maternal cousins can marry each other. My friend fears that such marriages might come within the mischief of the new law and be declared invalid. If my honest opinion were taken I should like them to be declared invalid, but that is neither here nor there. So far as I understand Dr Deshmukh's Bill he disallows marriages within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity. When I had a talk with the late Law Member, Sir Asoke Roy, on this matter in the last Session of the Assembly, he said that there was really no definition about these degrees. There was some Bill before the Assembly at the time and this matter cropped up in the course of that Bill. So I was asking him as to what was and was not a prohibited degree of consanguinity. He said that in different parts of India different customs prevailed and therefore different laws about consanguinity prevailed, and so his advice was that we should not touch that matter to press for any definition. And so I take it that in the South where a marriage between maternal cousins is permitted such a marriage will not come within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity and therefore the question raised by Mr Gadgil will not arise at all. I think therefore, Sir looking at the problem both from the religious and the social standpoint it would be a good thing if we pass this Bill into law but as certain provisions have to be redrafted, it would be best to send it to the Select Committee and ask them to hurry up. No friend need have any apprehensions about the safety of Hindu society, which would only be further consolidated by the new law. The Bill helps to bring about a certain amount of uniformity in the law of the land pertaining to marriages for one thing, and then it also speeds up some much needed reform. I hope, therefore Sir that the House will unanimously support the measure of Dr Deshmukh.

REQUISITIONED LAND (CONTINUANCE OF POWERS) BILL

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

Mr. President: The other day the House ordered that the report of the Select Committee about the requisitioning Bill should be submitted by Friday. The Honourable Mr Mandal may just present the report and then we shall resume discussion on this Bill.

The Honourable Mr Jogendra Nath Mandal (Law Member) Sir I present the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the continuance of certain emergency powers in relation to requisitioned land.

SPECIAL MARRIAGE (AMENDMENT) BILL—contd

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Leader of the House) I have listened carefully to the speech of the mover of this motion as well as some other speeches in the House and repeatedly I have gone back to see what the Bill exactly was, because it seemed to me that the speeches often had nothing to do with the Bill. They rambled all over the place, referred to all manner of practices all over India while the Bill itself is quite an extraordinarily simple affair.

Now, the subject of marriage reform is a subject which obviously interests every individual and it is easy to think of all these ramifications but it does confuse the issue. The subject before us is very simple. For my part, I am entirely in favour of some kind of general provision for civil marriages, and hope soon this House will adopt some such measure. This measure does not go so far. It seeks to remedy, as far as I can see, certain lacunae certain difficulties which have arisen, and all of us know that there are numerous marriages amongst Hindus today which may or may not be considered strictly legal. Some people may not attach much importance to legality, but other people do and obviously whether they do or not, it does affect all manner of things—may be in regard to subsequent inheritance and other matters—whether the marriage is legal or not. Now in order to avoid those difficulties, this proposal is made for a couple, who have been married according to certain religious rites and who may perhaps doubt the validity of their marriage to go through the civil form to validate it. I may say at once that I do not approve of some of the provisions as suggested in Dr Deshmukh's Bill, more especially right at the end where he talks about the dissolution of the marriage when the civil marriage takes place. I do not see any reason why anything should be dissolved at all but the general principle underlying this Bill is to enable people who may have contracted marriages, which are not strictly legal, to legalise them by civil marriage. I do not see how anybody can possibly object to that. It is a permissive clause, it does not compel anybody. People have talked about divorce and other matters. Nobody in this particular Bill is changing the Hindu Law in regard to divorce which remains exactly where it was. I am not at the moment talking about the desirability of divorce or not. For my part it is desirable but it does not arise here. We are not dealing with divorce in this, and as my Honourable friend, Mr Sri Prakasa, said among Hindus the vast majority do indulge in divorce. We should not think too much about the top rank Hindus and consider the rest out of the pale. But this measure has nothing to do with divorce. That must be clear. It only enables a couple who may doubt the validity of their marriage to legalise and validate it. Doing so, they do not put an end to their previous marriage or dissolve it—I hope they will not—and no change ought to occur in the status of the children of the previous marriage. They remain under the law under which they had so far remained. I do not understand this question as to what will happen to the children if the second marriage takes place. It is true if there is a civil marriage, the couple then come under the Civil Marriage act and can then choose, have a divorce. They can do that. That does not affect Hindus generally. If those two persons choose to do so, I do not see why anyone should come in their way.

I do beg of the House to consider the Bill as it is, or rather the main principles because, exactly as it is, it may be that many members do not wholly approve—I do not approve of all the detailed provisions—but the main provision, the main principle behind it is good. I should like to go further. However, it has come in this limited form to us and it comes only as a proposal to be sent to the Select Committee which, I hope, can easily amend it, and rectify the errors committed in the original draft. So I do hope the House will approve of this proposal, not so much on account of Dr Deshmukh's arguments but on account of the Bill itself.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I am surprised in view of the preamble of Dr Deshmukh's Bill, to hear the remarks of the Honourable Sri Rajagopalachari and the Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. You will see Sir, that the preamble itself says that "to persons who profess the Hindu Buddhist Sikh or Jain religion and who are already married according to rites or mode of contracting marriage other than under the Special Marriage Act, 1872." It presupposes that the marriages under the Hindu Law and the Sikh Law are perfectly valid and for cases of valid marriages this Bill is being enacted. It is not with regard to marriages which may be invalid under Hindu Law or the Sikh Law that a provision is being made to legalise those marriages. The provision is being made to register marriages which are already valid. Therefore, I was really surprised when the Honourable Rajagopalachari, learned as he is, cited an instance where a marriage may be invalid according to Hindu law or the personal law of the party and where this should be legalised. I should have no objection to that the only object of the Bill was to legalise a marriage which would have been invalid under the present law of the land. But it is not so. The preamble of the Act says that the marriage is valid under the personal law of the parties and those marriages are to be registered in order to give them a right of divorce. That is what Dr. Deshmukh himself plainly stated.

In view of this preamble, I fail to understand how this wrong impression has been carried by the Honourable Rajagopalachari, a learned man in our shastri, and I do not know how Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru carried this impression, that the marriage which is invalid under the personal law of the parties should be validated by this Bill. It is not, really speaking, covered by this Bill. Marriages which are invalid under the law are not sought to be validated by the present Bill. Therefore, I am very sorry that the scope of Dr. Deshmukh's Bill is quite different from the idea which my honourable friend, Rajaji, carries regarding this Bill. That should be understood, because we are proceeding on the assumption that this Bill has been brought in to register marriages which were already valid under the personal law of the parties. That is what Dr. Deshmukh also said. If it had been so, that under the personal law of the party the marriage was invalid, then it would be perfectly proper for the parties to have it registered under the civil law. But that is not the object with which the Bill has been brought. If you refer to the statement of objects and reasons, you will see that here also the Honourable Dr. Deshmukh does not refer to the invalidity of marriages under the personal law of the parties. He says there is a very large volume of educated public opinion in favour of reform in the existing marriage laws. It is not a question of invalidity of marriage. The object of this Bill is to provide a means of having the benefits of modern ideas of legislation respecting marriage without in any way interfering with the religious sentiments of the communities concerned. Therefore, you will see, Sir, that here Dr. Deshmukh does not in his objects and reasons refer to marriages which are invalid by the personal law of the party but which should be legalised in order to give a legitimate status to the children. That is not the object. Therefore, somehow or other, I do not understand how it is being understood in this House, especially by responsible people that this Bill is intended to regularise or legalise the marriage which under the personal law of the party is invalid. As I understand the Bill it is not so. Therefore, I have got a very strong objection to this Bill, apart from the religious sentiments which are certainly hurt, so far as Hindus are concerned. You will find, if you just compare the provisions of this Bill with the provisions of the Civil Marriage Act, that it is very much against the very sections which have been enacted under the Civil Marriage Act. It will be extremely difficult to reconcile this Bill with the Civil Marriage Act.

It may be understood before I come to the sections that the word "register" is not defined here. But if we were to read clause 12, which adds section 15A, it shows that what is meant by registration is that the party shall be deemed to have dissolved the marriage with the other party and the parties shall be deemed to be married under this Act. Therefore, registration means—although what is really meant is not defined in the Act—solemnization of the Marriage under the Civil Marriage Act. It means nothing else because this new section 15A which is sought to be added shows that the party shall be deemed to have been married under this Act. Now let us understand the position. Instead of solemnizing the marriage under the Civil Marriage Act, Dr. Deshmukh says the marriage will be registered. Because the meaning of solemnization and registration in the view of Dr. Deshmukh seems to be the same, (because he has not tried to define what is meant by registration) let us see what effect it will have on the original Act. Now read Section 10. Section 10 of the original Act is "Before the marriage is solemnized (and Dr. Deshmukh wants to amend it by saying "or registered") the parties and three witnesses shall in the presence of the Registrar, sign a declaration in the form contained in the second schedule to this Act. If either party has not completed the age of twenty-one years, the declaration shall also be signed by his or her father or guardian, except in the case of a widow and, in every case, it shall be countersigned by the Registrar."

So as soon as it is signed by the parties and the three witnesses then the marriage is registered:

Then Section 11 says the marriage shall be "solemnised" or "registered", (the word "registered" is being added by Dr Deshmukh) in the presence of the Registrar and the three witnesses, provided that each party says to the other in the presence and hearing of the Registrar and witnesses "I take thee to be my lawful wife or I take thee to be my lawful husband." What does this mean? Parties who were married are to come before the Registrar at the time of the so-called registration of the marriage and say "I take thee to be my lawful wife" or husband as the case may be. This presupposes that up to that time he was an illegal husband or she an illegal wife. You mean to say that these words have no meaning. It is a solemn assertion which has to be made within the hearing of the Registrar and it means that before that the man or the woman were not legally husband and wife, unless of course my friend wants only to legalise marriages of persons who want to tell her before the Registrar. If that is so, we are not making any provision for honourable people and we are making a legal provision for cheats. For a man or woman who is already married to go before the Registrar and say "I take you to be my lawful wife" or husband as the case may be, is absolutely wrong. It is against one's own conscience, because it would predicate that before that they were not legal husband and wife.

Mr. Krishna Chandra Sharma (Meerut Division Non-Muhammadsen Rural) Have legal conscience

Mr. P. B. Gole: Legal conscience is something different in the view of my Honourable friend. I have got very serious objection to the amendment sought to be made by Dr Deshmukh.

Let us take section 15 of the old Act. It says

"Every person who, being at the time married, procures a marriage of himself to be solemnised under this Act, shall be deemed to have committed an offence under section 494 or section 495 of the Indian Penal Code as the case may be and the marriage so solemnised is void."

Now this section is not sought to be abrogated. If the previous marriage was valid and legal, then if a man contracts a marriage under this Act he commits an offence under those sections of the Indian Penal Code.

Mr. Krishna Chandra Sharma: Under which sections?

Mr. P. B. Gole: Sections 494 and 495. They are mentioned in section 15 of the Act. The position is this. Here is a person who was legally married before the proposed civil marriage and now he comes and says that he wants his marriage to be "solemnised" or "registered". It would mean that he technically commits an offence. Section 15 of the old Act is not sought to be abrogated by any amendment and so long as it remains as it is on the statute book people who go to the Registrar to have their marriage registered commit an offence under sections 494 or 495 as the case may be.

It is a very funny piece of legislation that Dr Deshmukh has brought. He says that he consulted many eminent lawyers and that after consultation this Bill was framed. With all respect to the Honourable Dr Deshmukh and to those legal luminaries who advised him to frame such a Bill, I have very serious misgivings about this Bill.

Take section 19 of the old Act. It says

"Nothing in this Act contained shall affect the validity of any marriage not solemnised under its provisions not shall this Act be deemed directly or indirectly to affect the validity of any mode or contracting marriage, but, if the validity of any such mode hereafter come into question before any court, such question shall be decided as if this Act had not been passed."

Suppose you register a marriage under this Act (Interruption by the Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari.) With great respect to Rajaji I would submit that it is not with respect to other marriages. I want to know whether the amendment that is sought put now by the addition of section 15 (a) would in any way affect his marriage solemnised under his personal law.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Notwithstanding any law to the contrary

Mr. P. B. Gole: Section 15 (a) says "Marriage between the parties shall be deemed to have been dissolved." That is what is sought to be done under section 15 (a). So long as section 19 remains on the statute book, how can this marriage, by adding section 15 (a), be dissolved? Unless you remove section 19 or amend it, it is not possible.

[At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan)]

The section says "nor shall this Act be deemed directly or indirectly to affect the validity of any mode of contracting marriage." Under this section if the old marriage was valid according to the personal law of the parties, that marriage remains and that is not affected by registration. If that is so, how can you say in this section 15 (a) that the marriage is dissolved?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: That will be removed.

Mr. P. B. Gole: For the present it is not. How are you going to remove it, I do not know. So long as Section 19 is on the statute book I do not see how under section 15 (a) the old marriage can be dissolved. Therefore I submit with all respect and with all honour to Dr. Deshmukh and Rajaji that I beg to differ from their views. This is a very incongruous position which is sought to be brought up by the enactment of this Bill.

There is a further difficulty. If you go further you will find that section 23 says

"A person professing the Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religion who marries under this Act shall have the same rights and subject to the same disabilities in regard to right of succession to any property as a person to whom the Caste Removal of Disabilities Act applies."

There is a proviso also that "nothing in this section shall confer on any person any right to any religious office or service." Now, a married couple who are validly married according to the personal law of the parties go to the registrar and get the marriage registered. What is the personal law of that man? He is really speaking, under this Act, severed from the family itself. His right of succession disappears. Not only that, but supposing his father were alive, the father gets a right of adoption. Not only that, but supposing the grandchildren who would otherwise get a right by birth in that property, for no fault of theirs, will be deprived of their right by birth on account of this, because the law as it stands is clear on this point. I am not conversant with Jain law because Jains are governed by Hindu law at present—though they say they have got a separate law of their own. I know certain Jain points say they have got an independent law of their own. Apart from that, I am ignorant about the Buddhist law and about the Sikh law. They may be governed by the Hindu law, but whether they also get a right by birth I do not know. (In He is a noble Member, Vol. 1) I am very glad to know that. Then the position would be this: that by this marriage the children previous to this registration, for no fault of theirs, lose their right by birth. Another question would naturally arise. Suppose they are legitimised by certain amendment of the present clause 12, what would be the position of those children? Should the son consider his father to be dead, because he becomes separate under the provisions of this Act? Should the son consider the father to be dead and offer oblations to him? A very strange position would arise. Here is a man who marries under the Special Marriage Act or who registers his marriage as Dr. Deshmukh wants it to be done; he dissolves the old marriage and the position would then be that he is severed from the family ties. His children would remain in the family, but they will lose their right of succession by survivorship. What should these sons consider? Should they consider their father to be dead and should they offer oblations? Supposing the man is religious-minded.

An Honourable Member: He is separated from the father.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Civilly he is as good as dead, because the father gets a right of adoption. . . .

Pundit Thakur Des Bhargava (Ambala Division Non-Muhammadian) He does not get it under the Bill

Mr. P. B. Gole: If you will see the new section 15A proposed to be introduced by clause 12 of the Bill, you will see it is so it says

"and this parties to such registration and their issues shall thenceforth have all the rights and be subject to all disabilities prescribed under sections 17, 18, 19, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26 of this Act"

You will see section 25 it says

"No person professing the Hindu, Buddhist Sikh or Jain religion who marries under this Act shall have any rights of adoption"

Section 26 says

"Where a person professing the Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religion marries under this Act the father shall, if he has no other son living, have the right to adopt any other person as a son under the law to which he is subject"

You will see that it is an anomalous position. The son is living, he happens to discard this old marriage performed under Hindu rites, and he takes it into his head to get the marriage registered under the special law. The father finds himself in the awkward position he finds the son is civilly dead and he can take another son and give that son a right by birth in that property under the joint Hindu family. This is strange. Dr Deshmukh should have paused a little to consider the very evil effects of such a legislation upon the whole of the society, upon the whole of the law of survivorship, the law of inheritance of the Hindus. I am really surprised that Dr Deshmukh should do this. On the contrary he says in clause 12 by which section 15A is sought to be added to this Act

"the parties shall be deemed to be married under this Act as from the date of such registration and the parties to such registration and their issues shall thenceforth have all the rights and be subject to all disabilities prescribed under sections 17, 18, 19, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26 of this Act"

This enactment would have been a simple thing if it had been restricted to cases suggested by the Honourable Mr Rajagopalachariar or the Honourable Pandit Nehru. I would then have been the last man to get up and oppose it. As I pointed out, if the Bill is restricted only to legal marriages, not to invalid marriages at all. This is what the preamble says, and until you change the

4 P.M. preamble I do not see how this can be done. (Interruption) If the preamble can be changed, the whole Act should be changed, in fact everything has to be changed. As I pointed out, this Bill which seems to revolutionise the structure of a Hindu family or a Sikh family, if it is going to be revolutionised in this fashion, and if as the Honourable Mr Rajagopalachari has just now said, even the preamble should be changed, then we have got a different Bill altogether. If you change the preamble, and change also the objects and reasons given for this Bill, then certainly the very object for which this Bill is said to be enacted is not before the House, nor was it before the public. We have gone to the public on this Bill. We have circulated this Bill and called for opinions on this Bill. These opinions restricted themselves to the legal marriages, legal under the personal law of the party, and from this point of view this Bill has been looked at. As the Honourable Mr Rajagopalachari just now said, we can change it. You have a right to change it, but you have not called for public opinion on that. We have gone to the country for eliciting public opinion on the Bill, together with this statement of objects and reasons and together with this preamble. The object for which this Bill is sought to be enacted in this House is there, and therefore we would be doing a very wrong thing if at this stage we change the preamble and the statement of objects and reasons. Certainly I would be the first man, as I said, to get up and say that under such circumstances, if the marriage is invalid according to the personal law of the party it should be validated under the Civil Marriage Act. I would be the first man to say that the marriage should be legalised, and if it can be legalised under the Special Marriage Act, it should also be done. I would not object to that; but I want to remind Rajaji that if that was the restricted scope of the Bill, I would not have been on my legs to oppose such a

[Mr P B Gole]

Bill Here the position is different You will find further difficulties in the way of the Bill

The Act itself says that it applies not only to persons professing the Hindu or the Sikh or the Jain religion, but it also applies to persons who do not profess the Christian, Jewish, Hindu, Moslem or Parsi religions Let us understand the position The law is there, and under the law those Muslims or Parsis or Christians who are married according to the personal law, the Christian or the Muhammadan law, they can go and say "we do not belong to any religion", and they can get their marriage civilly registered Now, it affects directly their personal law Although the preamble of the Bill refers to persons who profess the Hindu, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religion, is the body of the amendments that have been suggested nothing has been said about the religion of the man. On the contrary as soon as you enact this into law, the preamble of the present bill will disappear The amendments will be incorporated in the old law and the old law applies also to Jews, Muhammadans, Parsis and Buddhists All these provisions which Dr Deshmukh wants to apply to Hindus will be equally applicable to Christians, Muhammadans and others I do not know whether the Muslim Community or the Christian community want such an innovation in their law Do they want that a marriage which was valid according to the personal law of the parties should be again registered and that the old marriage should be nullified and they should be governed by the Succession Act and not by their personal law?

Khan Abdul Ghani Khan (North-West Frontier Province General) We have got a more reformed marriage than this law even

Mr. P. B. Gole: I am not conversant with Muhammadan law So far as this Bill is concerned, the Bill as soon as it is incorporated in the body of the original Act ceases to apply only to Hindus You will find that none of the amendments which are sought to be incorporated in the original Act refer to the religion of the man and therefore as soon as these are incorporated in the original Act, the provision about Hindus, Parsis and Sikhs will disappear and any person of any faith can go to the Civil Registrar and he can say that he does not profess any religion and have the marriage annulled Therefore really speaking the Bill is so badly worded that it will have to be drastically changed

Now, Sir, I will give you certain instances and you will find the disastrous effects of this Bill Suppose a man marries a second wife, the first wife having died leaving certain children When the second wife comes, she wants to deprive the children of the first wife of their right of succession Now the step-mother would be very glad indeed that her sons alone should succeed and that the children of the first wife should get nothing The husband can be prevailed upon by the wife to go to a Registrar and get the marriage registered, thus depriving the children of the first wife of the right of succession to the property What is going to happen! By means of this so called reform, do you want to perpetuate fraud, injustice and illegality upon the whole society I do not really understand why this Bill is being insisted on Who wants this Who has asked for such a change If I were to read the opinions on this Bill you will find that the majority of the opinions, even of men and women of reformed ideas, are dead against this Bill They think that there is great danger involved in enacting this Bill into law Why has Dr Deshmukh fought shy of opinions You send a Bill for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon The society does not as a whole want it They have got serious objections to it and here in the teeth of the opposition of the public you want to enact a law I can understand if the legislature wants to remove certain injustice but you cannot try to pass a Bill which the society does not want You are forcing this enactment upon society in the teeth of opposition This is certainly not warranted by any rules of justice and good conscience After all it is not for Dr Deshmukh to dictate what laws should govern the society I certainly am not going to accept Dr Deshmukh as a law giver and nobody will accept him as a law giver, much less those enthusiastic people who want to introduce innovations in the personal law of the parties Unless they are highly respected and held in high esteem by the public, nobody is going to hear them. Therefore it should be noted that so long as the society does not want any law, we should not force this controversial measure upon an unwilling society.

Before I proceed to give you some of the opinions that have been expressed on this Bill, I would bring to the notice of the House a very serious complaint made by the "Sanatan Dharm Pratinidhi Sabha" of Lahore. In their complaint they have stated that there was a practice previously that the Punjab Government was sending copies of such Bills to the prominent Hindu and Sikh religious and social bodies in the province for eliciting opinion. This time the Punjab Government has not cared to send the Bills to these bodies and they have contented themselves by reproducing the Bills in the Punjab Gazette which will not come to the notice of the public concerned. Hence opinions will not be expressed and submitted. They say that the Sabha has come to know about the Punjab Gazette with great difficulty and they also say that the Bills came very late. So far as the circulation of the Bill in the Punjab is concerned, it has not been done properly. In fact those bodies and societies which are likely to be affected by such a piece of legislation must be informed of what this House is going to do and if really speaking you want public opinion on these matters, it is the duty of the Government to see that all persons likely to be affected by the legislation know what the legislation is or is going to be. Having regard to the specific complaint made from the Punjab, I say that the Bill has not been circulated properly. As I will show hereafter, public opinion is so much against this Bill that it is unwise to proceed with it. Before this new Government came into being, the old Government was dead against such legislation. I know and many of us know the speech of Sir Asoka Roy on this point. He has stated that the Bill is against all laws, it is a lawless law.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: That is not correct. The Honourable gentleman is misleading the House.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I am not misleading the House. The proceedings of this House are there and they can be referred to by anybody. I know what Sir Asoka Roy said. He said that there were so many defects in the Bill and he advised that the House should not proceed with such a Bill.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: He pointed out those defects when sending the Bill to the Select Committee.

Mr. P. B. Gole: The motion was for circulation and that was debated in the House. At the time of circulation Sir Asoka Roy pointed out that this is going to be a very bad Bill. Of course, as Dr. Deshmukh agreed that the Bill be circulated, he did not object to it. But he was quite definite that this Bill was a pernicious Bill and it should not be enacted into law.

Diwan Chaman Lal (West Punjab Non-Muhammadsen): Many opinions are in favour of it.

Mr. P. B. Gole: There are very few opinions which are in favour of it. Even in the Punjab you will find that the opinions are not given by Hindus. I am referring to the opinions given by the Hindus and Sikhs because they are the persons who are likely to be affected by this legislation and it is their opinions that count and not the opinions of the Christians. The Christians think that if this Bill is enacted into law it will not affect them or the Musalmans. I have told you already that as soon as the preamble disappears and the amendments are incorporated, the original preamble will remain and this preamble will disappear, because the words are that it is expedient and necessary to amend a certain law. Unless in each section, where you want to amend, you refer to those particular persons who belong to such and such faith.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: The provision in section 2 is there and if that is retained this difficulty will not arise and cannot arise.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Now, Sir, I will refer to some of the opinions that have been collected. The opinions are not many because, I think, the Bill has not been properly circulated as has been pointed out by the "Punjab Dharma Sabha."

{ Mr. P. B. Gole }

Here is an opinion from the Assistant Commissioner and District Magistrate of Coorg. We shall go from the south. He says

"The evil consequences of the Bill are, however, very clear. As pointed out by Mr. A. Ayyangar and Pandit Balakrishna Sharma in the Assembly Debates a husband who wants to get rid of his wife or parents who want to disinherit their children can have their marriage registered and have their guilty desire fulfilled. There may be some cases where persons who have children by the deceased first wife are likely to be induced by the second wife to have the marriage registered in order to disinherit the children by the first wife. Married couple who are not pulling on well will find a remedy by getting their marriage registered and then immediately invoke the provision of the Divorce Act. Of course, there will be difficulty in such people coming to an agreement to have their marriage registered. In brief, it seems to be that the Bill is likely to do more harm than good to married woman and give lot of scope to uncommon litigation. In these circumstances I am not in favour of the Bill as it stands."

You will find that this District Magistrate of Coorg has definitely given his reasons why this Bill should not be enacted.

Then, Sir, I wish to quote the opinion of the Legal Remembrancer of the Government of Sind.

Sri S. T. Adityan (Madura and Ramanad cam Tinnevelly Non-Muhammadan Rural). On a point of order, Sir. Can a Member go on reading the opinions which have been circulated?

Mr. Deputy President: He is perfectly right in doing so. He has got the right to quote before the House the opinions which have been received in order to emphasise the point which he is making.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Is it right morally?

Some Honourable Members: Why not?

Mr. P. B. Gole: I just wanted to give you the opinion of the Legal Remembrancer of the Government of Sind. Although Dr. Deshmukh consulted the lawyers, the legal luminaries from every province are against this Bill. Not only the lawyers, but even the Governments are against this Bill. No Government wants this Bill and I will presently show how these Governments themselves do not countenance this Bill at all. The Legal Remembrancer says

"The Bill seeks to amend the Special Marriage Act 1878, in so far as it applies to Hindus, Sikhs, Buddhists and Jains. This note is confined to the effect which this Bill will have on Hindus, but the same remarks would apply with respect to Sikhs, Buddhists and Jains."

A Hindu may marry according to Hindu rites or under the Special Marriage Act. His marriage under this Act produces certain consequences which are briefly these: A person married under this Act cannot contract any other marriage during the life time of his or her wife or husband (section 16). (Under Hindu Law a husband can marry any number of wives). The Indian Divorce Act applies to all marriages contracted under the Special Marriage Act. (The Hindu Law does not recognise or permit divorce). The marriage under this Act of any Hindu who is a member of an undivided family affects his severance from such family (section 22), that is to say, he ceases to be a member of the joint Hindu family. Succession to the property of a Hindu marrying under this Act will be regulated not by his personal law but by the Indian Succession Act 1935.

The Bill provides that persons who are already married to each other under any form recognised by Hindu Law may get their marriages registered under the Special Marriage Act, provided of course both parties agree to such registration.

I had been telling that the enactment is to register marriages which are already valid and not to register marriages which are invalid. That is also understood to be the case by the Legal Remembrancer of Sind. He goes on

"The effect of the registration is described in section 15A proposed to be inserted by clause 12 of the Bill. On the marriage being registered the previous marriage between the parties shall be deemed to have been dissolved, and the parties shall be deemed to be married under this Act as from the date of such registration, and the parties shall have all rights and be subject to all disabilities prescribed under the Act."

Now let us try to understand the position. That is the opinion which I have read out by the Legal Remembrancer of Sind. Now perhaps Dr. Deshmukh would say that he would amend this section 15A, by saying that the registration itself should date back to the date of solemnization of the original marriage. If that is so, then the children under the old marriage or under the personal law of the party will be disinherited. They will be governed by the Succession Act and for no fault of their own because the husband and wife chose to get their marriage registered and the registration is to date back to the day of their marriage. There is no doubt that the children would be legalised, they would be legitimate, I grant it. But the right to succession which they acquire in the property by birth would disappear automatically. As the provision today stands in the Bill namely, that the marriage will be valid under the Civil Marriage Act from the date of the registration and the original marriage is dissolved, then the children by the original marriage may perhaps be treated as illegitimate. Their legitimacy would be questioned because the marriage was dissolved and the marriage is said to have come about by the registration itself. In both cases, whether you legalise the marriage on the date of registration or whether you date back the legality of the marriage or registration of the marriage from the date of the first marriage, the children prior to the registration are in jeopardy. Now, Sir, with regard to succession also, succession to the property of coparceners or succession to property of persons who are separate those sons will not be allowed to succeed because they are governed by the Succession Act and not by the personal law of the party. So many complications would arise. I point out to you the opinion of the Karachi Bar Association.

"My Association considered the matter and are opposed to the principle of the Bill. My Association thinks that it is not possible to provide for registration of marriages already celebrated under the Special Marriage Act 1872 and thus confer on the part - the right to divorce under certain circumstances, even though registration be by consent of the party. My Association are of the view that the Bill if passed may lead to such consent being improperly procured by the husband from the wife and the measure is likely to produce pernicious results."

That is the considered opinion of the Bar Association Karachi.

I now come to the opinion of the Provincial Hindu Sabha because after all my Honourable friend Dr. Deshmukh professes to be very proud of his Hinduism. Of course I do not know what his Hinduism consists in?

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Certainly not what it consists in your case.

Mr. P. B. Gole: If he does not recognise any religion, if he does not want to recognise the sanctity of marriage, of course it is one part of it, in other respects also, Dr. Deshmukh will come and attack although this will not be the forum. If he wants to know the truth he can go before an Assembly of Pandits and Shastis well versed in our lore. He will certainly not be able to establish his point.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Why should I waste my time?

Mr. P. B. Gole: I see you do not want to show courtesy to our learned people. That is only natural.

An Honourable Member: Because he himself is not learned.

Mr. P. B. Gole: They are all learned people and if my friend says that the Pandits and religious heads do not understand anything of our religion, then he will have to come forward and establish his own religion. So long he has not come forward with that mission he is only attacking our old scriptures, attacking our old sacraments. Therefore it is time for us to consider whether he should be allowed to do so. After all this is a mixed Assembly wherein all religions are represented. This is not a purely Hindu Assembly and therefore any enactment which this Assembly will legislate should be referred to people belonging to the particular religion. I find that in the Select Committee my Honourable friend has suggested the names of Members who do not belong to the Hindu faith.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: The House works as a legislature as a whole.

Mr. Deputy President: It has been the convention that members of other faiths come in just to help in making the law. They do not lay down the policy, they abstain from voting.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Mr. Gole has made a mistake in coming to this legislature. He should have gone to a religious body.

Mr. Deputy President: Order, order. The Honourable Member must be allowed to proceed.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I am not here to enact any such laws as Dr. Deshmukh wants. I am only here to protect my religion. I am going to protect it on the floor of this House. If Dr. Deshmukh is interested in attacking my religion, I am equally interested in protecting it. I have got a right to do so.

Sir, I was referring to the opinion of the Provincial Hindu Sabha on the Special Marriage Bill placed before the Central Assembly by Dr. Deshmukh.

"We are of opinion that it should not be passed into law on account of the following

They have given the reasons. I am only quoting one last reason given by them.

"If the Bill is passed into law divorce system will be in vogue in Hindu religion and account of this system Hindu religion will suffer and there will be quarrels in Hindu family."

That is the opinion of the Hindu Sabha. My Honourable friend Dr. Deshmukh cannot say that the Hindu Sabha consists of orthodox people. That body consists of many patriots who have advanced views regarding Hindu law and Hindu custom. Therefore he cannot say that it consists purely of Pandits for whom Dr. Deshmukh has scant courtesy.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: For his information, I may tell him that Mr. Savarkar, President of the Hindu Maha Sabha gave his opinion in favour of divorce which I quoted on the floor of the House.

Mr. P. B. Gole: Not on this one. We are at present concerned only with this Bill. He may have given his opinion on some other Bill. That is neither here nor there. I am concerned with the present Bill as it is and I want to quote to the Honourable Member the opinion of the Hindu Sabha in particular.

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: May I know, Sir, whether the convention about repetition will have no application when we quote other people's opinions?

Mr. Deputy President: I think the Honourable Member though he is entitled to quote the opinions, he should be brief and he should simply strengthen his case but not quote extensively because every Member is expected to have read the opinions which have been circulated. Only reference to certain portions is allowed ordinarily. But I fully realise that this Bill is a very controversial measure affecting a very extensive population of the country. Every opportunity must be given to Honourable Members to express their opinion but they should express the opinion in a brief manner and not repeat what has already been read by Honourable Members.

Sgt. N. V. Gadgil: May I bring one fact to the notice of the House, Sir? This Bill was sent for eliciting public opinion before the present Assembly was elected. Many of us have not read in extenso all the opinions which have been received. Therefore the presumption is not correct that all have read and in view of the fact that this is a controversial measure, it would be better that there should be a full frank and free discussion.

Mr. Deputy President: That is why I allowed the Honourable Member more latitude.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I am much obliged to you, Sir, for your ruling. I wanted to point out to the Honourable Mr. Rajagopalachari the object of my reading certain opinions. I was simply anxious to show that several governments, several Bar Associations and lawyers and Judges have considered this Bill as appertaining to marriages which are followed according to personal law. I am anxious to quote these opinions because somehow or other I got the impression—I believe the Honourable Mr. Rajagopalachari is also under the impression—that the Bill wants to cure a defect which existed in the original marriage, and for that the Bill is being enacted. That is not so. That is not so understood by people who understand law Government themselves do not understand it like that nor do District and Sessions Judges, and so the Bill is not so innocent or simple as the Honourable Sri Rajagopalachari thinks I will not read the opinions at length but only the pertinent points The Assam Government says

"This Government are also not inclined to support the Bill which they consider has defects both in policy and substance In particular this Government agree with the opinions in paragraphs 1 and 3 of the letter from the Secretary of the Lawyers' Association, Gauhati, and the letter from the District Bar Association, Sylhet, and in paras (a), (b), and (d) of the letter from the Secretary of the Bar Association, Sunamganj."

So you find that not only are Government opposed to it but also the Bar Associations and they all agree that the Bill will give rise to many complications and will upset the whole fabric of society It should not be passed into law

I will then give the opinion of the District Judge of Poona Dr Deshmukh comes from the Bombay Presidency and he probably thinks—though wrongly—that the people of that province wanted such a Bill

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: I do not think in terms of a small province, I think in terms of the whole country

Mr. P. B. Gole: The Honourable Member may also think as a citizen of the world But we are small people and only think in terms of our small Hindu society

The District Judge of Poona in the course of his observations says

"In the first place I am not satisfied about the necessity of an enactment of this kind The Special Marriage Act of 1872 was amended in 1923 and extended to Hindus, Buddhists, Sikhs and Jains, and educated people who Dr Deshmukh thinks would like to take advantage of the modern ideas of marriage legislation have in fact done so during the last 23 years The amended Act has been on the statute book and such of them as have not availed themselves of its benefit should not be allowed at this stage to change their minds perhaps because it is to their advantage to do so in the altered circumstances of their lives Whatever be our view regarding the sanctity of the ties of the marriage the jural relations once created by that tie should not be allowed to be lightly disturbed to suit the convenience of the changed circumstances in the lives of married people The true remedy for unhappy marriages is not to tinker with the legal character of the marriage, which has subsisted for a number of years but to give relief by providing for dissolution of such marriages by legislation intended only for that purpose"

I quote this District Judge's views because he is a very learned man who has carefully studied this matter He goes on

"Section 18 of part IV of the Code made provision for registration of sacramental marriages as civil marriage, but under that section a subsisting marriage shall not be dissolved but after registration shall be deemed to have been a civil marriage for all purposes as from the date of the original ceremony and not from the date of the registration as the Bill seeks to provide The Bill radically diverges in directions from the impending principal enactment which it seeks to anticipate"

Then I come to opinions from Madras

Babu Ram Narayan Singh (Chhota Nagpur Division Non-Muhammadan) Sir, is it necessary to quote all these opinions here?

Mr. P. B. Gole: The ruling has been given that I have a right to state the opinions here

Mr. Deputy President: But the Honourable Member must not waste the time of the House

Mr. P. B. Gole: I will not waste the time of the House

The Madras Government is against this measure The District Judge of Salem says (Rajaji's own district)

"I have consulted some of the judicial officers of the district and they are all agreed that the proposed measure is a dangerous innovation and is likely to lead to various complications."

The Collector of Godavari says:

"The proposed legislation makes more cumbersome the already long and cumbersome customary Hindu law of marriage."

He is also opposed to it

[Mr P B Gole]

Now, Sir, here is an opinion of a retired High Court Judge—Dewan Bahadur Sundaram Chettiar. He says

“The Special Marriage Bill introduced in the Central Legislative Assembly is in my opinion a hasty and imperfect piece of legislation.”

And he is of opinion that such Bills cannot be enacted as law.

Then, Sir, Mr Mudaliar, Advocate Madras, says

But there is no harm in clause 2 (Section 58 which is sought to be added) becoming law now. Clause 12 is of a very drastic nature.”

And he says he is entirely against it.

Then, Sir, Mr Vasudevan, Retired Health Inspector, Tellicherry, who seems to have examined the provisions of the Bill in greater detail, has also adversely commented on this Bill. I need not read out his opinion.

Now, Sir, I pass on to the next opinion which is by the Advocate-General, Madras who says

“The proposed legislation, as an amending Act, leads to the following difficulties

A Hindu can have more than one wife and in a case where he has a plurality of wives, he cannot obtain the benefit of the Act, because he cannot make a declaration.

Further the section says that no registration of the marriage under the amending Act, the marriage previously solemnised becomes null and void. If that is so, what is the law to be applied to the issues already born? Are they to have coparcenary rights, or are they to retain such right while the father himself becomes a divided member?

The group of sections made applicable includes Sections 17 to 19, and 22 to 26. The other sections 5 to 11 of the amendment are merely consequential, relating to the procedure. If under section 22, the marriage operates as division in status and under section 12 of the amending Act, the previous marriage is deemed to be dissolved, it will lead to considerable anomaly in regard to the rights of the issue in the Hindu coparcenary of which the father is a member. There is a lacuna in the amending Act because it says nothing about this matter.

Further when the purpose and intentment of the proposed legislation is merely to remove the incapacity for obtaining divorce, why should sections 22 to 24 be also made applicable? regard to the undoubted fact that these sections do involve a stigma and seem to concede that such a marriage under the Act is virtually an apostasy? If a marriage in consonance with the principles of monogamy is to be encouraged and if the right to obtain a divorce even in respect of Hindu marriage, is to be recognised as being in consonance with modern civilisation and culture it is indeed hard to understand why the parties to such a marriage should not retain their position in respect of succession, coparcenary, adoption, etc. as before. Here there is an incongruity.”

Sreejuti Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam Valley Non-Muhammadian) As no one has spoken from Bihar may I ask the Honourable Member to read the opinions from Bihar?

Mr. P. B. Gole: I will gladly do it, I would not forget Bihar.

Sgt. N. V. Gadgil: Who can forget Bihar?

Mr. P. B. Gole: I was pointing out, Sir, that the opinion of a very responsible person like the Advocate General of Madras is entirely against this Bill.

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: It is not a correct statement. He has not yet come to any conclusion, he has only pointed out some difficulties.

Mr. P. B. Gole: I will show Sir, that he is of this opinion. I thought that my Honourable friend, Rajaji, will take my word for it, but if he wants me to read out the opinion of the Advocate General, I will do so.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: Have we not got opinions of our own? Why should we be impressed by the opinions of others?

Mr. P. B. Gole: The Advocate General, Madras, goes on to say

“These considerations would strongly incline one to the view that instead of a truncated piece of legislation like this the law of marriage can be codified along with the rest of the Hindu Law, if that is possible and feasible, or as a self-contained one dealing with the various aspects and providing for the various contingencies. As an amendment, it seems to be a misfit.”

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: May I say a word, Sir? Why I asked the Honourable Member to read the opinions from Bihar was because the problem arising out of plurality of wives is very acute so far as that province is concerned

Mr. Krishna Chandra Sharma: Did the Honourable Member ascertain the ages of the persons who have given these opinions?

Mr. P. B. Gole: I suppose they are all sui juris!

The opinion of the Government of Bihar is as follows

"Most of the officers and non-official associations are against the proposed legislation"

"They are inclined to regard the vehemence of the opposition voiced by some highly placed and responsible officers as born of conservatism of an implacable type"

• So the opinion is vehemently against the proposed legislation

• This is what Justice Bennett of the Patna High Court says

"I do not think the Bill will serve any useful purpose, on the contrary, it is likely to create many difficulties—some of which were pointed out by the Honourable Sir Asoka Roy in the course of the debate on the Bill. Hindu Marriage Law Reform is likely to be more effective with less complications if it is done in the way proposed by the framers of the draft Hindu Code. This method of enabling people already married under particular religious rites to have some sort of a second marriage involving completely different civil rights and obligations, may be novel, but is fraught with dangerous possibilities, I am against the Bill."

This is the opinion of an eminent judge who cannot be said to be partial. He has learnt Hindu law and he knows what it is, and after studying Hindu law he finds this Bill so incongruous and so very against the principles of Hindu law that he is forced to give that opinion. Now, Sir, from Bihar, there is another "Shri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal." The opinion goes

"I am desired by the Council of the Shri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal, the All-India representative Association of Sanatan Hindus believing in the Vedas and other Hindu scriptures to register their strong protest against the Bill."

They have given at length their opinion about this Bill. I will only read to you two or four sentences from it

"The chastity of womanhood stands on the granite rock of the marriage ceremony. No king, no government, no society has ventured to affect changes in it since Satyayuga, the beginning of the first cycle of Yugas."

I am really surprised at the interjections of my Honourable friend, Dr. Deshmukh. He is so very anxious that all these religious scriptures and all the opinions of religious people should be treated with scant courtesy, they should be trifled with, and joked at, because Dr. Deshmukh enjoys a privilege which he would not get anywhere else.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh: As usual, he is again wrong in attributing these things to me

Mr. P. B. Gole: In paragraph 5 it is said

"In short, the marriage sacrament is thus the backbone of Hindu religious and scientific sociology. Any attempt to introduce such drastic changes as are provided by the Bill will result in complete disruption of Hindu society and religion, and consequently be resented vehemently, producing undesirable reactions. The vast population of the Sanatanist Hindus forming the greater portion of the Indian population will take it as a direct hit against their cherished Dharma."

That is the opinion of a religious institution from Bihar

The Honourable Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal (Law Member) When opinions of one High Court Judge and Shri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal of Bihar have been cited here, may I request my Honourable friend to give the House the opinions of the Bihar Government and the Patna High Court Bar Association as well?

Mr. P. B. Gole: I will refer to them also. But you will find throughout, Sir, the opinion is overwhelmingly against this Bill, and therefore really speaking it would be dangerous to enact such a Bill into law

[Mr P. B. Gole]

The Commissioner of Chota Nagpur (I suppose Babu Ram Narayan Singh comes from there) says.

"To my mind the Bill is a some what clumsy attempt to deal with this important and delicate subject. I understand that a marriage solemnized under religious rights can be cancelled by marriage by registration is revolting to the Indian thought."

He has also pointed out the defects so far as the draft of the Bill is concerned

Then there is the Deputy Commissioner of Palamu. There is also the opinion of Dayawant Sahay Varma, Pleader, Daltonganj. He is against this Bill. He says

"Laws relating to different forms of marriage already in existence in India are comprehensive enough to accommodate men of all tastes and fashions living on the Indian soil."

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member can continue his speech the next time it comes up

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Saturday, the 16th November 1946.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Saturday, 16th November, 1946

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr President (The Honourable Mr G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(a) ORAL ANSWERS

SARAI PURANI IDGAH HOUSING SCHEME IN DELHI

625. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Health Department please state

(a) if it is a fact that Sarai Purani Idgah Scheme for re-housing the poor in Delhi is executed, and

(b) number of families getting the benefit of that scheme?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: (a) The scheme has not yet been finally approved

(b) The Delhi Improvement Trust is taking a census of the persons who are likely to be affected by the execution of the scheme, and the number of families which will be entitled to the benefits of the state-aided re-housing scheme will be known on completion of the census

Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: May I know from the Honourable Member the stage at which the scheme stands at present?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: The scheme has been published for public objections and it is now under the consideration of the Trust

Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: How long will it take to get their final approval?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: I cannot say that

Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: May I know if the location of the alternative accommodation proposed to be provided for the persons coming under the scheme is close to the place of the scheme?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: I understand that the whole question of the accommodation of those who will be displaced is under the consideration of the Trust

Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: May I know what is the shape and design of the houses which are going to be provided to those people and whether they will have electricity and water supply?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: Yes, Sir Electricity and water will certainly be provided As regards the design of the houses I shall have to ask for notice of that question.

Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will notice be served upon the inhabitants when the scheme is finally approved?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: Yes, Sir. I believe that notice to vacate will be given in the case of those persons who are required to vacate their houses.

RESERVATION OF POSTS OF CIVIL SURGEONS FOR EUROPEAN I.M.S. OFFICERS

626. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Health Department please state the steps which the Interim Government have taken or propose to take to remove the reservation of several posts of Civil Surgeons for European I. M. S. Officers only?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: The posts are reserved under orders passed by the Secretary of State. The whole question of the termination of the I.M.S. (Civil) as a Secretary of State's service is under the active consideration of Government.

Seth Govind Das: Are the Government of India going to represent to the Secretary of State that such reservation is detrimental to the interests of this country?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: I have said that the matter is under the consideration of the Government and the point which the Honourable Member has made will certainly be borne in mind.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know if it is a fact that in Delhi we can have only a European I M S as civil surgeon and not an Indian?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: The post of Civil Surgeon, Delhi, is one of the posts which are reserved for European officers under the rules made by the Secretary of State.

REMOVAL OF COLOUR PREJUDICE AND FAVOURITISM IN W A C (I)

627. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state the steps which the Interim Government have taken or propose to take to put an end to colour prejudice and favouritism in the W A C (I)?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The Interim Government, Sir, are satisfied that steps to prevent favouritism or colour prejudice have been taken, and I may remind the Honourable Member that this Corps will be disbanded entirely by 1st April 1947.

Babu Ram Narayan Singh: What are the steps that have been taken to remove this?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The instructions of Government.

Shri Sri Prakasa: Could we know the nature of the colour prejudice and favouritism?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: If ever there was any colour prejudice or favouritism—and I deny that there was—that will now be stopped.

RECOVERY OF EXPENDITURE INCURRED IN INDIA ON BEHALF OF U K. AND EASTERN GROUP COUNTRIES

628. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Under how many accounts has the Honourable the Finance Member incurred expenditure in India for and on behalf of (i) the Government of the United Kingdom, and (ii) the Eastern Group countries?

(b) How much has this expenditure been during each of the last five years?

(c) How much expenditure is still being incurred, and for what purposes?

(d) By what processes and in what manner have these moneys been recovered?

(e) If they have not been recovered, what steps are Government taking for their recovery?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) Mainly under the Defence Service Account and to a minor extent on Civil Account mainly in respect of the following items—

- (1) Evacuees.
- (2) Internees
- (3) Lascars' pensions
- (4) Requisitioned ships
- (5) Mica bonus

(b) On Defence Services Account the expenditure has been as follows:

	In lakhs of rupees
1941-42	193.53
1942-43	305.99
1943-44	377.87
1944-45	455.13
1945-46 (Estimate)	340.56

The figures for the expenditure on Civil Account are not readily available but are comparatively small. They are being collected and will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

(c) The net expenditure that will arise in the Defence Services Accounts in 1946-47 on behalf of the Government of the U.K. is estimated at Rs 84.28 lakhs, mainly on pay and allowances of Indian troops serving overseas on Imperial duties, pay and allowances of troops in India and other formations required for the maintenance of troops and expenditure on stores for these troops, transportation charges, accommodation and other miscellaneous charges and terminal charges such as war gratuities, release leave pay, etc. In this connection a reference is invited to the Explanatory Memorandum on the Budget Estimates for the Defence Services 1946-47. Except for a trifling amount representing arrear transactions, there will be no expenditure incurred on behalf of the Eastern Group Countries in 1946-47. The extent of the expenditure on civil items mentioned in reply to part (a), which continues to be incurred, will be known when figures have been collected as indicated in reply to part (b) of the question.

(d) and (e) Under the Financial Settlement regulating the allocation of defence expenditure between His Majesty's Government and India during the war, the expenditure incurred by the Government of India on defence services and supplies less that portion debitable to India revenues is recovered currently from His Majesty's Government. That Government's liabilities in respect of the previous years have all been discharged by sterling payments. Similarly expenditure incurred in the current year on behalf of His Majesty's Government is also being recovered currently in the same manner. The civil expenditure is likewise being recovered from His Majesty's Government in sterling.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Will the Honourable the Finance Member examine the question whether, in regard to the supplies made to the Eastern Group countries (in which, I understand Australia and South Africa are included) any moneys for the past expenditure incurred by the Government of India on their behalf are still due and, if so, whether those countries should not be called upon to pay them to India directly instead of these debts being put in the sterling balances to the credit of India?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I do not think there are any outstandings but I will have the matter examined as suggested by my Honourable friend.

RENT OF REQUISITIONED PROPERTIES

625. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state by how much the rent of requisitioned properties has been brought down from the figure of nine crores of rupees a year given at the time of the last session of the Assembly?

(b) Which classes of premises are still under occupation, and why?

(c) Why did the process of de-requisitioning take so long?

(d) Is it a fact that for de-requisitioning, special men have been called out from England? If so, what are their names and their salaries?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) The position as at 30th September 1946 is as follows

	In lakhs of rupees
Rental of requisitioned property	630
Rental of hired property	152

There has been a decrease of Rs 1.84 crores since December-1945 and this has been achieved by the release of 4,152 buildings and 984 lands.

(b) I lay a statement on the table showing the classes of premises still under occupation.

(c) There is no longer any delay in the process of de-requisitioning once it is decided that the property can be released, but the requirements of the Armed Forces are still considerable, because those coming back from overseas are almost as many as those being demobilised.

(d) Yes, Sir. Of a total of 197 officers, 30 have been brought out from England. Three Deputy Assistant Directors and twenty-three Area Lands, HIRINGS and Disposals Officers have been recruited in the United Kingdom. A statement is laid on the table showing their names and salaries.

Statement (in reply to part (b))
Classes of premises still under occupation

Classes	Reasons
(i) Schools and other Educational Establishments.	{ Being used as hospitals and by other administrative units. The release of this class of accommodation is being given the highest priority.
(ii) Hospitals
(iii) Public Buildings and Institutes	{ Only 4 premises are affected in the whole country. Will be released as hospital requirements of the Armed Forces fall.
(iv) Commercial and Industrial buildings.
(v) Storage accommodation	{ Being used in most cases owing to the increased clerical staff of establishments and will be released as demobilization progresses.
(vi) Residential buildings
(vii) Other buildings including Hospitals.	{ Cannot be released until it is possible to dispose of stores. Until the establishment of the Armed Forces is reduced still further it will be necessary to retain a proportion of the buildings for residential purposes.

Mr. Manu Subedar: May I know why, from this enormous expenditure of Rs 9 crores a year or Rs 75 lakhs a month, the military department have failed to bring it down to anything less than Rs 7 crores, and why twelve months after the war this country should still go on bearing this very heavy expenditure? May I know whether it is due to the slowness of demobilisation, and whether demobilisation has not taken place according to the schedule originally fixed? May I know whether there have been any special causes for the delay in demobilisation?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I suggest that all these questions have been gone into fully in connection with the debate on the Bill to continue certain emergency powers in relation to requisitioned land. I have given a reply to all these questions before, and I hope the House will not wish me to repeat what I have already said.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I am asking the Honourable Member to make clear to this House now why a heavy sum of Rs. 7 crores should still be borne by this country, and whether it is due to incompetence or dereliction or whether it is due to delay in demobilisation which has left us with bill of Rs. 7 crores a year, which is a very heavy outlay.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I explained before that the armed forces of the country—the men in uniform—were still roughly four times the normal peace-time strength. I have already explained that we had large scale movements of troops from the east and from the west, and for these reasons—(these are the main reasons) and also because we have got property worth crores of rupees to be stored and guarded, etc., all of which require accommodation—the progress of derequisitioning is not so rapid as we ourselves would like it to be. As regards the particular point about the progress of demobilisation, demobilisation is slightly behind schedule—for reasons which I need not go into at the moment—but on the whole demobilisation has not been delayed to the extent the suggestion seems to be.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: In view of the fact that hundreds of bungalows which were built by Government during the course of the war round about various cantonments in India are being demolished and auctioned, why is it not possible for the Honourable Member to retain them and accommodate these officers who are coming from overseas in these hutments, so that the properties now in the possession of the Government which were requisitioned may be derequisitioned in the immediate future?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I can assure the Honourable Member straightaway that wherever there is accommodation available for troops coming from overseas theatres, special accommodation will not be reserved for them.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Why not derequisition all these properties which are in the possession of the army and remove all those officers who have enjoyed these palatial houses in the past to the inconvenience of the civil population, and shift them into hutment accommodation round about the various cantonments in India, which are now being auctioned for a song and are being demolished and thrown away?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I do not accept the implication that this happens on a scale on which my Honourable friend suggests that it exists.

Diwan Chaman Lal: Why was it necessary to import 80 European officers for derequisitioning?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I explained that in connection with another question only on the 13th November persons with technical qualifications were required, and unfortunately in spite of advertisements in the press here we could not get the requisite number of Indians possessing the technical qualifications.

Diwan Chaman Lal: Is it a fact that the academic qualifications were so engineered as to enable only Europeans to occupy these posts?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I do not think so.

Seth Govind Das: Are they being requisitioned temporarily or for permanent posts?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Requisitions are always temporary!

Diwan Chaman Lal: May I ask my Honourable friend whether it is a fact that among these 80 men lawyers have been imported from Great Britain?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I cannot say offhand, the lawyers might also be engineers or surveyors, it is quite possible that a lawyer may be a surveyor as well.

Diwan Chaman Lal: That means that my Honourable friend has not actually examined the position and therefore he is not in a position to tell the House what his actual qualifications are?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: That is not so; I have said that the men who have been recruited are those holding the necessary technical qualifications; if in addition to those technical qualifications, any one happens to be a lawyer, I do not think that it is a disqualification.

Mr. President: Order, order. I think this is getting into an argument.

Sardar Mangal Singh: May I know whether in view of the food shortage in this country, Government will give first priority to release agricultural lands that have been requisitioned by the military authorities?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Wherever possible I should say that agricultural land which was not immediately required has been given out for purposes of cultivation.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if at the time of the original requisitioning any such group of men—30 Europeans—were brought here for requisitioning purposes?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: No, Sir.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: If there was no need at the time of requisitioning to get these officers, why is it now that you have had to get thirty men out from England for derequisitioning? I want an answer to this question.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The volume of work went on increasing since the process of requisitioning began, and as the volume of work increased the number of officers had also to be increased.

Mr. Manu Subedar: May I know in what period the demobilisation is expected to be completed, so that that particular reason for continuing requisitioning would drop out?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I think the bulk of the armed forces will have been demobilised by October 1947.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Do these legal advisers know anything about Indian law and Indian conditions? Have they any other qualifications than knowing English law?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: How does the question of legal adviser arise out of this question, Sir?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: One of the thirty is a legal adviser?

Mr. President: There will be no further argument. I am calling the next question.

NON-INDIAN PRISONERS OF WAR IN INDIA

630. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state how many prisoners of war of non-Indian origin have been maintained in India, and where?

(b) What is the total amount of expenditure incurred during each of the last five years?

(c) Is any expense being incurred now? If so, how much per month?

(d) What steps have been taken for their repatriation?

(e) Are these moneys recovered from the Government of the United Kingdom? If so, in what form? If not, why not?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) The total number of prisoners of war of non-Indian origin maintained in India was 70,933 comprising 68,990 Italians and 2,548 Japanese. They were maintained at the following places:

Bangalore, Bhopal, Ramgarh, Dehra Dun, Yol, Bikaner and Baleli.

(b) The total amount of expenditure incurred during each of the last five years on the maintenance of prisoners of war of non-Indian origin is as follows:

	In lakhs of rupees
1941-42	8.76
1942-43	6.65
1943-44	7.23
1944-45	4.58
1945-46	2.90
Total	30.72

(c) The expenditure is now diminishing from month to month as prisoners are being repatriated. The expenditure for the month of September is estimated at Rs 8 lakhs.

(d) All Japanese prisoners of war were repatriated in May 1946. The number of Italians repatriated up to date is 65,192 and shipping has been allotted to repatriate the remainder by the end of November 1946.

(e) The entire expenditure on the maintenance of Italian and Japanese prisoners of war captured beyond Indian borders is recovered from His Majesty's Government in sterling like other recoverable expenditure incurred by the Government of India on behalf of His Majesty's Government. The cost of maintenance of Japanese prisoners captured within Indian borders during the Assam campaign is the liability of India.

Mr. Manu Subedar: My Honourable friend gave figures which were not quite intelligible. Does he mean Rs 8 crores a year was spent, or was it Rs 80 lakhs a month?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I gave the figure for 1941-42 as Rs 876 lakhs. All these figures are given in lakhs.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: May I know what portion of this Rs 80 crores has been debited to the account of the Indian exchequer and how much to His Majesty's Government?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I have not got the exact figure, but I think for purposes of allocating costs, the number of prisoners on whose account the cost was debited to the Government of India was 650.*

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: The rest goes to the account of H M G?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Exactly so.

Seth Govind Das: May I know, when these prisoners were detained in India on account of imperial policy, why should India bear the cost of their remaining here?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I said that the cost of all prisoners captured outside the borders of India had been debited to His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Apart from these costs, may I know whether the Government of India have incurred any heavy capital costs for putting up their camps and for their transit or in any other manner? I think these are maintenance costs which the Honourable Member mentioned.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I am afraid I must ask for notice of that question.

BURMA REFUGEES SERVING IN CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

631. Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state how many Burma refugees are still serving in the Central Government and in which Departments are they?

(b) Has the Government of Burma demanded the services of such men?

(c) What is the present position of these negotiations and how many men have already been sent back and how many are going to be sent from the services?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a), (b) and (c) Information is being collected and will be laid on the table of the House in due course. The Government of Burma have asked for the return of some of their employees and this request has in general been complied with. The remainder are employed only in temporary posts and to the extent that they are non-Indians, they will be covered by the recent orders about the ban on the employment of non-Indians.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Are Government aware that there is a lot of heart burning among regular Indian servants of the Indian Government that some of the places which should have been given to them have been given to these refugees, non-Indians from Burma and if that is so, will the Honourable Member make inquiries and try and repatriate these non-Indian refugees, who may be in Government service now, to their own country?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The inquiry which my Honourable friend wants to be made will be made and necessary steps will be taken

RADIO LICENCES IN INDIA

632. *Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state the total number of radio licences issued in India and the comparative figures for the last five years?

(b) What was the total number of radios imported in India since the beginning of the war?

(c) How many radios imported on Government account are still with Government?

(d) What has happened to the radios, which were in use by the soldiers and how many are there?

(e) How many new broadcasting stations are going to be installed and is the machinery for them on order? If so, where and at what price?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) The total number of current radio licenses in British India on the 31st August 1946 was 2,16,420 The figures for the previous five years are as follows

1941	1,36,804
1942	1,61,700
1943	1,71,616
1944	1,88,019
1945	2,02,224

The figures for the Indian States are not available

(b) The total number of radio sets imported in India through the commercial channels is 1,51,266 Radio sets imported on Government account total 53,917

(c) None

(d) Wireless sets issued to units remain the property of that unit until its disbandment when the sets are returned for re-distribution Due to the extent of troop movements to and from India during 1945 and 1946 and due to heavy wastage which occurred in action, it is not possible to state how many sets originally issued are still in service A census is being taken

(e) Plans, both long-term and short-term, have been prepared for the development of broadcasting in India The number of new centres that can be established will depend mainly upon finance, the availability of equipment and the provision of technical staff The scheme has, however, not yet been finalized and no order for the machinery has so far been placed The last part of the question does not arise

Mr. Manu Subedar: In view of the very small number of licences in this country and the very useful purpose which broadcasting is performing for the public, may I know whether Government will either undertake themselves or subsidize a scheme for the production of a popular radio set at a very cheap price, from Rs 20 to Rs 30?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Radio sets at cheaper rates are being prepared by some important companies and they have approached the Government about the matter. It is being considered.

Mr. Manu Subedar: That important company referred to by the Honourable the Home Member is offering those sets at about Rs. 95 and I feel that having regard to the very small intrinsic value of the raw material involved in this article, if it were properly managed, it could be produced at between Rs 20, 30 and 40 Will Government have an inquiry made into this problem and if necessary help and subsidise the manufacture of sets at a cheap price?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: If, as is suggested, cheaper sets can be made, the suggestion will certainly be examined.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it a fact that some time ago a model cheap set was manufactured by the Government, for being copied by other manufacturers in this country, at a cost of Rs 50?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I want notice I am not aware of that

CREATION OF CIVIC GUARDS AND CIVIL DEFENCE CORPS

633. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state

(a) whether Government are aware of the disturbances that are breaking out at different places, and

(b) whether Government propose to revive the system of civic guards and to establish people's own civil defence corps in all parts of the country in co-operation with Provincial Governments under the authority of the Central Government and in co-ordination with the military command?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Yes

(b) The organisation of civic guards was formed under an ordinance which has expired In so far as the Provinces are concerned, the question whether the same or similar organisation should be formed is within the discretion of the Provincial Governments

Seth Govind Das: Are Government contemplating the establishment of civic guards in the Centrally administered areas?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: No, Sir

Seth Govind Das: Will Government then consider that some sort of co-ordination of these civic guards is necessary, if these are established in the provinces?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Different provinces have different conditions and the Government do not propose to interfere with the discretion of the Provincial Governments

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: What is the information of Government, whether civic guards like cholera pills, create the trouble themselves?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know whether disturbances are taking place in the city of Delhi? Actually some stabbings have taken place and the police do not come to the aid of the people there?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: That question does not arise. This question relates to civic guards

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: It arises out of the first part whether Government are aware of the disturbances that are breaking out at different places

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: This question refers to the whole of India, not Delhi only.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Delhi is included in it.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: But the stray stabbing cases are not included in it.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Until some stabbing and death take place, the police are not to be found on the scene The whole of last night there was trouble here at Delhi

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: For the last ten days, the police have been working practically all the 24 hours and they have been thoroughly exhausted. I do not think it is wise to encourage running after police help at every place. People must learn to defend themselves.

Seth Govind Das: Under these circumstances, do not the Government think the civic guards would be helpful to the police in the centrally administered areas?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The system of civic guards for that purpose was found to be very unsuitable.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Does the Honourable Member want to encourage hand to hand fight?

Mr. President: The Honourable Member is now getting into a discussion.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: How do the Government propose to help these people?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: By encouraging the people to defend themselves.

UNIFORM POLICY AS LICENCES FOR FIREARMS UNDER THE INDIAN ARMS ACT.

634. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state

(a) whether Government are aware of the fact that Provincial Governments are, in practice, following varied policies in issuing licences for arms, firearms and ammunition under the Indian Arms Act,

(b) whether Government propose to initiate a uniform policy throughout the country in the matter of granting these licences on a systematised standard basis based on certain well-considered qualifications thought fit by Government, and

(c) whether Government propose to add in the schedule of exemptees under the Indian Arms Act all the members of both the Houses of all the Provincial Legislatures as also the members of the Constituent Assembly?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Yes

(b) Having regard to the different circumstances prevailing in different Provinces, the inter-relation between law and order and grant of arms licences, and the impossibility of laying down any hard and fast standard rules on the subject, Government consider that the discretion at present vested in the Provinces should remain.

(c) Government do not consider that such exemption is necessary. I have no doubt that the application of individual members who need protection by guns or other arms will meet with a satisfactory response from District and Provincial administrations.

Seth Govind Das: Are the Government aware that even for those people who hold licences it is not possible to get these arms if they go in the market to purchase them?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Licences to members referred to in the question will be freely given if applied for.

Seth Govind Das: I am not asking about the licences. What I want to ask is that in spite of the fact that people do possess licences and yet when they go to the market and try to buy these arms, they are not available in the market?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I am not aware of the fact that the licences find any difficulty in the purchase of arms because we have not received any such complaints.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: How is it that in the province of Bombay, though arms are available, people were prevented from buying them? Is the Honourable Member aware of the order issued by the Government of Bombay to the dealers of arms and ammunition in the province of Bombay that they cannot sell arms to any one? If so, will the Honourable Member consider the-urgency of removing this ban which has been already issued by the Bombay Government?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I do not think that the Government of India can interfere with the discretion of the Bombay Government in this matter

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: As a measure of prevention of offences against women, will the Government consider the desirability of including women-folk of our country in the exemption list?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Well, Sir, I am sure the Provinces will do the needful in the matter

Shri Sri Prakasa: Is it not a fact that dacoits and burglars have arms without any licences and that the law only operates against law-abiding citizens?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The dacoits and burglars have a general licence and therefore a Government licence is not necessary

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Member consider the desirability of issuing instructions to the Local Government of Delhi to renew all such licences as were cancelled for the simple reason that ammunition was not bought by the licencees during a certain period?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: If those licencees whose licences have been cancelled will apply, the matter will be considered

Shri Sri Prakasa: In view of the fact that dacoits and burglars have no need to take licences, will the Honourable Member repeal the Arms Act and allow law-abiding persons also to have arms without licences?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Certainly the law will be abrogated when the whole populace becomes burglars and dacoits

BROADCASTING STATION AT JUBBULPORE

635. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state

(a) whether Government are aware of the fact that two Broadcasting Stations are already located in the Marathi speaking areas, viz, Bombay and Aurangabad,

(b) whether Government are aware of the fact that broadcasts from Delhi and Lucknow Stations are made in a highly Persianised Urdu,

(c) whether Government have decided to construct a Broadcasting Station at Nagpur, a Marathi speaking town in the Marathi speaking areas; and

(d) whether Government will consider the advisability of establishing this Station at Jubbulpore in the Hindi speaking area?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Yes, but the Broadcasting Station at Aurangabad belongs to the Hyderabad State

(b) Government have received some complaints to this effect and the whole language question is at present under my active consideration

(c) and (d) The Honourable Member seems to be under a misapprehension. Language is not the only criterion for new installations and it is possible to cover two different but adjoining linguistic tracts from the same station. Government do not, therefore, propose to decide the question of a suitable location for a transmitter in C. P. on linguistic basis only

STUDENTS FOR SPECIALIZED TRAINING SENT ABROAD BY CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

636. *Seth Govind Das: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please lay on the table of the House a statement showing the number of students sent abroad by the Central Government at their (Government's) expense for higher and specialised training during the last five years, with their quotas from each Province, the country to which they were sent, the subjects for the training or the study for which they were sent and the expenses that have so far been and are hereafter to be incurred on them?

(b) Is it a fact that a considerable number of these students was sent to Great Britain, though higher and more advanced technological training could be had only in the United States of America, and agricultural training in the U S S R ?

(c) Do Government propose to revise this policy and send students in future to countries where best facilities for technological and agricultural training of the most advanced type are available?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) Two statements giving the information asked for are laid on the table of the House. These statements include only those Central Government scholars who have actually sailed. In addition, there are 102 selected candidates who are awaiting either admission or passage. No student was sent abroad by Government for studies during 1942 to 1944. A statement showing the revised estimates of expenditure for 1945-46 (Rs. 9.05 lakhs) and budget estimates for 1946-47 (Rs. 46.07 lakhs) in connection with the training of these scholars is also laid on the table of the House. It is not possible to give exact figures of expenditure as it will involve a great deal of calculation on the basis of when each individual student sailed.

(b) During the last two years 199 students have been sent to the U.S.A. and eight students to Canada, 214 to the U.K. and two to Australia. The country and institution in each case has been determined by the availability of suitable facilities for the particular subject for which a student was selected. Admission for all the students selected for one subject cannot be secured in a single institution or country. As regards the U.S.S.R. even if training facilities were available and even if we ignore the question of language it is not probable that that country would at the present moment receive foreign students.

(c) The scholars selected for advanced studies overseas are being sent only to those countries and institutions where suitable facilities for the subject concerned exist and are available for Indian students and no question of a revision of policy arises.

Seth Govind Das: Is it a fact that some students were sent abroad for such studies as they can have in this country and the degrees which they got in foreign countries are considered even lower than the degree which they can have in India?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: I do not agree

Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member make inquiries about it because the sending of students has been going on for a long time?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: Each time when an application is received, the subjects are noted and the point mentioned by the Honourable Member is fully examined

Shri Sri Prakasa: Is it not a fact that a large number of students who have been granted scholarships are stranded in India awaiting passage? If so, what arrangements are Government making to expedite their going abroad and not wasting their time here?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: Every effort is made to secure passages as early as possible. There is no question of stranding when the students are in their own native land and they are looked after properly by the Government as long as they are waiting to go.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it not a fact that after their selection and before they are admitted in any college, these students join any college in the United Kingdom? Some students who were granted M A degrees in this country went to the United Kingdom and finding no accommodation in the original places fixed up for them had to be admitted into Matriculation courses in those Universities?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: As far as I have examined the papers, such absurd situations have not arisen, but difficulties were there and we are trying our best to overcome them

Sri V. O. Vellingiri Gounder: Government have answered that a certain number of students were sent abroad for training in agricultural engineering this year, may I know what is their number and to what countries they were sent?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: The correct answer can be given only after notice

Sri S. T. Adityan: Is it not cheaper to execute higher studies in this country and thus save the amount that is spent over these foreign studies?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: It may be ultimately cheaper, but the question of urgency and time also arises in the matter.

Shri Sri Prakasa: May we know the nature of the care that the Government takes of those who, according to me, are stranded and according to the Honourable Member are not stranded, and who in any case, are wasting their time waiting for passages and not knowing what to do and in the meantime losing touch with their studies?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: The persons who have been selected and who are not able to go immediately for one reason or another either hold appointments already or they are admitted to other suitable institutions here or they are given a maintenance allowance during the period. This is what I have gathered from the papers. We need not exaggerate the difficulties

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is the present Government satisfied about the desirability of sending students in such large numbers for all and sundry subjects to be studied in foreign countries?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: Even the present Government is of opinion that for rapid industrialisation in certain matters students and scholars have to be sent abroad.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is the Government aware of the case of a student who was sent abroad for higher studies in bio-chemistry but was obliged to learn fisheries for want of accommodation in bio-chemistry class?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: There is no great harm in a young man turning from one subject to another.

RESEARCH ON ATOMIC STUDIES.

637. *Seth Govind Das: Will the Honourable Member for Education please state:

(a) what steps are being taken in this country in the field of atomic studies and research in its theoretical and applied spheres,

(b) if any laboratory has been or is being contemplated to be set up for this purpose in this country, and

(c) whether any students have been sent to the United States of America for the study of this subject, and what facilities have been granted or assured by the Government of the United States to these students for such study?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) The Council of Scientific and Industrial Research has set up a Research Committee—

(i) to explore the availability of raw materials capable of generating atomic energy,

(ii) to suggest ways and means of harnessing the raw materials for the production of atomic energy,

(iii) to keep in touch with similar organisations functioning in other countries and to make suggestions for the co-ordination of the work of this Committee on an international basis

On the recommendations of this Committee, the Council of Scientific and Industrial Research have formed two sub-committees (i) to draw up concrete proposals for a geological and physico-chemical survey of Travancore Thorium-bearing and associated minerals, and (ii) for carrying out a geological and physico-chemical survey of the uranium-bearing minerals of India with the help of special geologists to be deputed by the Geological Survey of India in this connection

As for the theoretical aspect of atomic studies the Universities in India have been requested to encourage instructions in the theory and the experimental technique of atomic physics

(b) No laboratory has been set up nor is it contemplated to set up one, but the Government of India have sanctioned the following three schemes to encourage atomic research

(1) Establishment of a Betatron at the Tata Institute of Fundamental Research, Bombay—Rs 82,400,

(2) Development of a school of nuclear physics and biophysics at Calcutta under Prof M. N. Saha—Rs 1,10,000,

(3) Research on trans-uranic elements, on the nuclear fission of heavy elements and on the absorption cross-section of neutrons at the Bose Research Institute, Calcutta—Rs 22,400

In addition to these grants the Government of India make a block grant of Rs 75,000 per annum to the Tata Institute of Fundamental Research for experimental Research on cosmic rays

(c) Atomic Research is still a jealously guarded secret in the United States & America. It has therefore not been possible to secure research facilities for our students in that country. Three students are however, engaged on research in 'Nuclear Physics' in the United Kingdom.

It will be observed that we have not been sleeping over the question of atomic research

Seth Govind Das: Will the Government see that at least in this country atomic energy is not used for destruction of life and property and for preparing bombs but is used for constructive work?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: That, that is the object may be seen throughout the answer I have given

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Are the Government aware of the fact that one of the Professors of Aligarh University was given a scholarship by a society in England to carry on research work and he has already proceeded to Manchester?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: If that is correct, I am glad.

• REGISTRATION OF NEW FIRMS AFTER CONTROL OF CAPITAL ISSUES

*†638. Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state how many new firms have been registered in India after Capital Issues were controlled?

(b) How many and which of them have been registered in partnership with foreign interests?

(c) Is it a fact that some of these partnerships have a share not only in the capital but also in control, management and ownership?

(d) If so, what are the names of such concerns?

(e) Is it a fact that arrangements are being negotiated or are completed for starting Textile machinery manufacturing undertaking in this country on the basis of foreign partnership in capital and management?

(f) If so, what are the reasons for allowing foreign vested interests to be created in the new sphere of manufacture of textile machinery?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: If the Honourable Member has in mind firms registered under the Indian Partnership Act, parts (a), (b), (c) and (d) of the question should have been addressed to the Honourable the Law Member, if he has in mind firms registered under the Indian Companies Act, then to the Honourable the Commerce Member. Parts (e) and (f) should have been addressed to the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies. I regret I am not in a position to give the information asked for.

CONTROL OF ALLIANCE BETWEEN INDIAN AND FOREIGN CAPITAL

†639. Mr. Vadilal Lallubhai: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state what steps Government have taken to check the growth of foreign interests in the form of alliances between Indians and foreigners?

(b) Have Government received any representations and protests from Indian business and commercial community expressing their concern over this issue in the method of India's industrialisation?

(c) If so, what have they done to allay these fears in the minds of Indian business community?

(d) What is Government's policy in this respect, if they have any?

(e) Do Government propose to enunciate a long term policy in this respect, and publicise it for the benefits of Indian business community and the public in general?

(f) Do Government propose to assure the Indian business community that no such alliances between Indian and foreign capital will be allowed to be entered into hereafter and lay down that Indian industrialisation will be achieved on the basis of development and expansion of Industries owned, controlled and managed by Indians?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: This question should have been addressed to the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies. I regret I am not in a position to give the information asked for.

HEALTH OF RICKSHAW PULLERS

640. *Mr. Madandhari Singh: Will the Secretary of the Health Department be pleased to state

(a) whether Government are aware of the fact that the health of rikshaw pullers in general is very bad because of their occupation,

(b) the statistics about their number in different Provinces of India,

(c) the death rate among them and the disease from which they die, and

(d) the proposals of Government to check them?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: (a) The Labour Investigation Committee, which investigated the condition of rickshaw pullers in certain cities in India found that as the majority of them are in the prime of manhood their general health is not unsatisfactory, but they suffer frequently from respiratory diseases brought about by exposure to the weather

(b) Statistics regarding the number of rickshaw pullers employed in the different Provinces of India are not available

(c) No information is available about the death rate amongst rickshaw pullers

(d) The Municipal authorities and the Provincial Governments are generally responsible for the Health and Welfare of rickshaw pullers

Seth Govind Das: Are Government aware that in Simla Hills these rickshaw pullers die at an early age?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: There was an investigation made into the health of the rickshaw pullers about three years ago and the result does not show that the Honourable Member's statement is correct

Sardar Mangal Singh: Will the Government of India ask the Delhi municipality at least to prohibit rickshaw pulling in the City?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: As far as the investigations which have been made show there is no reason on health grounds alone for prohibiting the pulling of rickshaws

Shri Sri Prakasa: What is the average age of a rickshaw puller about which an investigation has been carried on by the Honourable Member's department?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: I understand that in Simla licences are issued only to men between the ages of 20 to 40

Shri Sri Prakasa: What is the duration of the licence?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: One year.

Mr. Leslie Gwillt: May I ask whether the Honourable Member will encourage provincial governments to enquire into the average life of a rickshaw puller and in view of the fact that he becomes a rickshaw puller because of his miserable economic circumstances, will he also encourage provincial governments not to issue any more licences to rickshaw pullers, and to try and find out alternative employments for them instead of pulling rickshaws?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: The Government will consider making this suggestion to the Provincial Governments

Seth Govind Das: Will the Government see that at least a cycle is attached to rickshaws so as to relieve the pullers of some strain?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: That is still worse

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: That is really a matter within the discretion of provincial governments

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: Is the Honourable Member aware that the rickshaws which have got bicycles attached to them require more exertion than the ordinary rickshaws which are ordinarily pulled by them?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: I have no information on that point

APPLICATION OF SARGENT SCHEME OF EDUCATION TO MUSLIMS

641. *Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state whether it is a fact that the Sargent Scheme has been accepted by the Government of India with the proviso that special efforts should be made to help the Muslims and other educationally backward communities in the Education field?

(b) If the answer to part (a) above is in the affirmative, what provision in this direction has been made in the five year plans?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) The Report of the Central Advisory Board of Education on Educational Development in India, popularly called the Sargent Report, was accepted generally by the Government of India in 1945 with the proviso that until the recommendation of the Central Advisory Board of Education that educational opportunities should be available for all has been fully implemented steps should be taken to secure the provision of adequate facilities for Muslims and other minority communities and to accelerate the progress of the scheduled castes and backward communities.

(b) The decision of the Government of India was communicated to the Provincial Governments. A statement indicating the action that has been taken or is proposed to be taken by the Provincial Governments in regard to educational development in their areas during the next quinquennium has already been laid on the table of the House in connection with Starred question No 185. The responsibility of the execution of these plans rests primarily with the provincial authorities who will no doubt pay due attention to the consideration mentioned above. The schemes received have been framed in broad outlines and the details of the provisions made in the connection referred to in the question are not available in all cases. A statement of such provisions as are mentioned specifically in the five-year plans is laid on the table of the House.

A Statement indicating special provisions made for the Education of Muslims, Scheduled Castes and other educationally backward communities in the Five Year Plans. (Starred question No 641)

A Provincial Plans

1 Assam—(i) It is proposed to open at least 50 Primary Schools annually in all the Excluded Areas. The Control of Primary education in the Lushai Hills and the North Cachar Hills will also be gradually taken over by Government from the Missionary Bodies.

(ii) Three High Schools will be opened—one in the Lushai Hills, one in the North Cachar Hills and one in the Sadiya Frontier Tract. It is also intended to open five Middle Schools annually in the Excluded Areas and provide the necessary Inspectorate.

2 Bengal—It is proposed to improve 50 High Schools, both boys' and girls'. In selecting these schools, the interests of the educationally backward communities will be kept in mind.

3 Orissa—It is proposed to give more scholarships and provide books and slates to the students of scheduled castes, backward classes and hill tribes so that they may come forward in larger numbers to receive the benefits of education. There is also provision for payment of grants to hostels in which students from these communities will live.

4 United Provinces—(i) It is proposed to give grants to libraries for depressed classes.

(ii) It is provided that grants-in-aid will be given to non-official bodies including managers of non Government institutions which are already running hostels for students of all castes and communities and stand in need of monetary assistance for extending hostel facilities to scheduled caste students.

(iii) With a view to expending Depressed Class Girls' Education, it is proposed to give higher rates of stipends to the girls of these classes.

(iv) It is proposed to increase the salaries of Depressed Class Supervisors from Rs. 30 p m to Rs 40-2-60.

5 Punjab—(i) In the majority of tahsils selected for expansion of education, Muslim population predominates.

(ii) A liberal provision of Scholarships for all stages of education has been made, and in order to encourage education among the backward classes, an adequate number of scholarships will be reserved for them at each stage.

(iii) It is proposed to give a grant-in-aid to the Muslim Girls' School, Ambala Cantt for the expansion of the existing school building.

(iv) A grant is to be paid to the Anjuman-i-Khadim-ul-Islam, Jullunder City, for the construction of a building for the Islamia College, Jullunder

6 Central Provinces—The Central Provinces have got two plans for educational development—one general plan for the entire Province and the other Pilot Plan for selection areas. One of the selected areas for the introduction of the Pilot Plan is Baihar tahsil inhabited mainly by the aboriginals. Among the schemes incorporated in the Pilot Plan are introduction of Compulsory Basic Education and provision of Normal and High Schools

7 Madras—Madras has made the most liberal provision for educational expansion at the school stage for all communities, they propose to provide special facilities for College education for Muslim girls

B Central Plans

The Government of India have also approved of certain Development Schemes of the Aligarh Muslim University concerning Engineering College, Science Departments, Women's College, Training College, Salary of the Staff, Power Plants, etc. The Central Government's contribution for these schemes may reach Rs 70 lakhs

A scheme for Overseas Scholarships has been in operation since 1945-46. An amount of Rs 3.60 crores is likely to be spent on the training, etc., of the scholars up to 1951-52, this amount is inclusive of the Central Government's contribution at the rate of 50 per cent towards the cost of training abroad of scholars, sponsored by the Provincial Governments. In making the selection the Central Government take every care to ensure that suitable candidates belonging to the minority communities are provided for. The total number of Central Scholarships awarded in 1945-46 was 354 out of which Muslims got 90. Out of 213 scholarships awarded in 1946-47 Muslims got 58.

The Government of India have also sanctioned a separate scheme for the Scheduled Caste Scholarships for five years with effect from 1944-45. An annual grant of Rs. 3,00,000 is being provided for this purpose.

GRANT TO MUSLIM INSTITUTIONS FROM THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

642. Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: Will the Honourable Member for Education please give the total number of institutions receiving grants from his Department, the total sum involved every year and the proportion of Muslim Institutions thereof?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: A list of the institutions other than educational institutions of the Centrally Administered Areas which receive grants from the Education Department, is laid on the table of the House. The amount of grant paid to the institutions varies from year to year and the sums provided for in the current financial year are shown against each item in the statement. Most of the institutions receiving grants-in-aid are all-India all-Community institutions devoted to Research and Cultural activities of which the advantages and facilities are available to all communities. Of the institution set out in the statement the Aligarh Muslim University, if it can be counted as a Muslim Institution, receives a grant of Rs 3.8 lakhs out of a total of Rs 15.94 lakhs recurring grants.

In this connection the attention of the Honourable Member is also invited to the statement laid on the table of the House in reply to Starred Question No 185 on the 4th November 1946 which sets out what is contemplated in respect of additional grants to certain institutions including Aligarh Muslim University.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What kind of control do the Central Government exercises over the institutions to which grants are made, to see that the grants are properly utilised and the institutions are properly working?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: Consistent with the autonomy of important educational institutions every care is exercised to carry out the duties of the Government of India to watch the fulfilment of conditions which are set out in the policies as well as the grants themselves

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is it a fact that in the case of institutions to which large grants are made—like the Bhatnagar Institute to which a large sum of money is given—the Central Government introduces into the Board two Members of the Legislative Assembly? Likewise will the Honourable Member control the Bhatnagar Institute also by providing that in the governing body representation is given to two Members of this House because a large grant is made there?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: The control exercised varies from institution to institution. I do not understand the reference to the Bhatnagar Institute, but if it relates to the Council of Industrial and Scientific Research, the Honourable Member for Industries is the President of that Council

Sri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable Member kindly control himself from controlling the institutions to which Government give grants?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: There is more cacophony than clarity in that question

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: As this House has the right to nominate members to the Bangalore Institute of Science, why should not the same privilege be extended in the case of the Council of Industrial and Scientific Research?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: This Council is a mixed body wherein industrialists have a part, scientists have a part and Government have a part; and the President of the Council of the general body as well as of the governing body is the Honourable Member for Industries and Supplies. And I can assure Honourable Members that every paper goes to the Government Department and there is perfect control over this Council

PROPORTION OF MUSLIM OFFICERS IN THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

643. *Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: Will the Honourable Member for Education please state the total number of class I Officers in his Department and its attached offices and the proportion of Muslims therein?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: The total number of Class I Officers in this Department including attached offices is 50. Of these three are non-Indians. Twelve out of the remaining 47 are Muslims. Besides these, three Class I posts in the Archaeological Survey are reserved for War Service Candidates who will be selected on the recommendation of the Federal Public Service Commission.

Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: Were these Muslim officers selected departmentally, or by the Federal Public Service Commission?

*The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: They are already there. I do not know how they were originally selected.

Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: Are there any officers who were not selected by the Public Service Commission?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: If the question is about persons who are already holding posts there, I must ask for notice to answer that question.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Do I understand that the proportion of Muslims in the Honourable Member's Department is not in accordance with the Government rule under which Muslims must have 25 per cent? If so, what steps does he propose to take to see that the quota of Muslims is properly maintained in his department?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: I believe the quota is maintained. As I have already said, there are certain posts to which the communal proportion rule does not apply. It should also be remembered that promotions are not made on the communal proportion basis. I said 12 out of 47 are Muslims today. Out of these 47 some five are not subject to the communal rule, others about three are due to promotions. And if we subtract this—I hope my calculation is right—it would be about 39, out of which 12 are Muslims, and I do not think that this is below the communal quota. The Honourable Member will tell me if my arithmetic is wrong.

Mr. Siddiq Ali Khan: Is the Honourable Member aware that some of these 12 Muslim officers came in by competitive examination and not under the communal proportion rule?

Mr. President: That has been already answered, the Honourable Member wants notice.

PROVISION OF WAITING ROOM, IN INCOME-TAX OFFICE, DELHI

644. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is the Honourable the Finance Member aware of the great inconvenience caused to income-tax payers and their representatives who appear before the Income Tax Officers in Delhi, for want of waiting rooms, or any seating accommodation in the Income Tax Offices? If so, what steps do Government propose to take to remove the same?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Steps have been taken to provide waiting rooms in those Income-tax Offices in Delhi where they did not exist.

Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable Member kindly extend this convenience to places other than Delhi also?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: If the Honourable Member will give me more particulars I shall be glad to examine the question.

Shri Sri Prakasa: What particulars? Where there are no rooms there can be no particulars.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I want particulars that the lack of rooms is actually causing inconvenience to the public.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Are Government aware that in district centres income-tax assesses have to stand in the verandah or in the open because of want of rooms?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: In winter months it is better outside than inside a cold room.

Shri Sri Prakasa: But what about the summer months? Will the Honourable Member examine the topography of the income-tax office in Benares?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I am not sure about Benares, but in summer months also the shade of a tree is much cooler than a room without fans or other cooling arrangements.

Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable Member kindly take steps to hold meetings of the Legislative Assembly under trees?

Mr. President: Order, order. The question hour is over.

Mr. President: Mr Bhalja wants to correct one of his replies, which he may do now.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: In reply to a supplementary question on Question No. 630, I said that the number of prisoners the cost of whose maintenance was debited to the Government of India was 450. The correct figure is 650.

Mr. President: Before Short Notice Questions are put, I have to invite Honourable Members' attention to one point. It has been suggested to me, and rightly, that questions which really involve long tabulated statements and figures should not come in as starred questions. The result is that members are not able to study the statements and put supplementary questions and the questions take up more time of the House, barring out other questions. In this connection, I have to invite Honourable Members' attention to a circular which is always issued at the beginning of each Session. This very suggestion has been repeated there. I am referring to 5(a).

"A star should be placed in front of a question to which an Honourable Member wishes to have an oral answer on the floor of the House. Honourable Members are advised to put a star against only those questions in respect of which supplementary questions are likely to be asked, and not against those which merely ask for statistics or for the laying of statements on the table of the House."

So I just invite the attention of the Honourable Members to that. I do not want to interfere with their own discretion in this matter.

I might also invite their attention to another fact that we are not putting through more than about 20 questions a day. We have on the question list on an average about 40 to 45 questions every day. I may be wrong with regard to the exact number, but the point is that a large number of them cannot be orally answered and so they practically go in as unstarred questions. It would be better if Members while starring questions just take care to see that they do not star questions which require long statements or long particulars.

Seth Govind Das (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions Non-Muhammadian). Will the Honourable the President consider one more point for saving the time of the House and putting through more questions? In the last Session it was suggested that as is the practice in many provincial assemblies, replies to the questions may also be printed and circulated to members at least two hours earlier so that we may be able to put more supplementary questions.

Shri Sri Prakasa (Benares and Gorakhpur Divisions Non-Muhammadian Rural). May I respectfully suggest that you may unstar most of our starred questions. You take great care in improving the language and deleting certain parts of our questions, and when you undergo all that trouble, take so much pain over every question. I submit that it would be quite easy for you to demolish the star also.

Seth Govind Das: What about my request?

Mr. President: That question will be considered.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official) May I bring to your notice that sometime the Government Members when they do not want supplementary questions to be asked put the reply in the form of a statement and lay it on the table I suggest that Government Members should not also do that. When the reply is short they should read the information and not lay a statement on the table of the House .

Mr. President: If such a question arises, we will consider that matter About printing the answers, we shall see That matter was considered during the last session, and it now rests with the Government But any way, I am merely impressing on the Members the desirability of not stalling all but only such of their questions as are desired to be answered orally Unless the whole House agrees that I should delete the star, I am afraid I cannot do so

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadian Rural): I say most respectfully that we are not prepared to give you that power

Mr. President: It is not a question of giving me that power Even if that power is given to me, my difficulty would be that I cannot know what is in the mind of the Honourable Member with reference to supplementary questions. It will therefore be a difficult power to exercise I leave it to the Honourable Members to consider this matter

(b) WRITTEN ANSWERS

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION FOR DELHI

645. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: (a) Will the Secretary of the Health Department be pleased to state whether Government are aware of the general demand made by the people of the Delhi Province that the undemocratic character of the various local bodies of the Province, i.e., New Delhi Committee, Notified Area Committee, Fort Area Committee, should be ended and the Delhi Municipal Committee should be formed into a Municipal Corporation by merging the various local bodies in the same?

(b) Have Government decided to appoint a Committee to go into this question and consider the advisability or otherwise of forming a corporation? If so, when will this Committee be formed, and what will be its terms of reference?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: (a) Government are aware that there is a demand for the establishment of a Municipal Corporation in Delhi

(b) The matter is under consideration and an announcement on the subject will be made very shortly

RECOMMENDATIONS OF ARCHAEOLOGICAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE re PREVENTION OF EXPORT OF ARTICLES OF ARTISTIC IMPORTANCE

646. *Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Archaeological Advisory Committee have recommended to Government about the advisability of taking steps with a view to preventing unauthorised export of articles of artistic importance and to recover such articles already sent to foreign countries? If so, what steps do Government intend taking in respect of the recommendation?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: The Central Advisory Board of Archaeology at its third meeting held on the 10th September, 1946, referred the question of prevention of the export of valuable antiquarian remains and objects of art outside the country and of reclaiming, where possible, from European countries as many objects of antique value as were carried by them in the past, to its Standing Committee for examination and report to the next meeting of the Board to be held early in 1947 Government are awaiting the recommendations of the Board

ABOLITION OF DEATH PENALTY

647. *Prof. N. G. Ranga: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state

(a) if his attention has been drawn to a Reuter's message of the 28th October from London stating that in a letter to the Times, Dr Katju, the Minister for Justice in the United Provinces Government, has favoured the abolition of death penalty and says that it "serves no useful purpose" besides being barbarous; and

(b) whether Government propose to consider the advisability of bringing forward a Bill to abolish this form of punishment?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Yes

(b) No Attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me on the 30th October 1946 to starred question No 92 by Mr Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal

RETRENCHMENT IN GENERAL HEADQUARTERS.

648. *Sardar Mangal Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state the approximate dates as to when retrenchment in different Departments in the Central Government especially in the General Headquarters will take place?

(b) What arrangements have been made by the Government of India to find alternative employment for those who are going to be retrenched?

(c) Is it the policy of the present National Government to provide the retrenched staff with alternative employment before their present posts are retrenched?

(d) Is it a fact that the various Departments of the Government of India are advertising in the Press for further recruitment from civil life in order to fill vacancies in their respective Departments?

(e) Do Government propose to create an Inter Departmental co-ordination Committee so that the employees who are retrenched from one Department are given employment in another Department which advertises for the jobs?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) No definite date for retrenchment as such has been fixed but persons holding temporary appointments will be discharged in the ordinary course as and when they become surplus to Government requirements

(b), (c), (d) and (e) Government have not adopted a policy of postponing the retrenchment of superfluous posts until alternative employment has been found for those filling them. Departments advertise the posts only when suitable retrenched personnel are not available. Government have also promulgated their plans for resettlement of retrenched employees in the instructions a copy of which I place on the table. The Central Employment Exchange set up by the Labour Department constitutes such a co-ordinating authority as is referred to in part (c)

OFFICE MEMORANDUM, HOME DEPARTMENT GOVERNMENT OF INDIA No 70/69/45-Ests (R), DATED, THE 24TH NOVEMBER 1945, TO ALL DEPTS OF THE GOVT OF INDIA

SUBJECT — Resettlement of retrenched temporary employees of the Central Government

As a result of the end of the war it is expected that a large number of temporary employees of Government will have to be discharged. It has been decided that the Employment Exchanges set up by the Labour Department, will render ever assistance to these persons in finding other employment. The Labour Department will be shortly issuing instructions to give effect to this decision in respect of persons with technical qualifications. In respect of other temporary employees, Departments are required to observe the following procedure in discharging them and in making future recruitment —

I Registration in Employment Exchanges

(a) Well in advance of the date of discharge of a temporary Government servant—clerical, administrative or executive—the employing Department or office will fill up in duplicate the standard occupational record form (form X-1) and the standard confidential report in respect of every such person who desires assistance in finding employment, and will forward the forms to the Central Employment Exchange, Labour Department, Simla

(b) The Central Employment Exchange will register the forms, retain one set for its records and forward the other set to the Employment Exchange nearest the person's place of residence. The discharged employees should be asked to notify to the Exchange his arrival at his place of residence as soon as he gets there

II Recruitment

(i) An appointing authority before filling any permanent or temporary vacancy which can be filled otherwise than in consultation with the Federal Public Service Commission or on the results of competitive examination, will report to the Central Employment Exchange or the appropriate Regional Exchange the number of vacancies available and the qualifications required of intending candidates and call upon the Exchange to submit a list of candidates possessing the prescribed qualifications. Where the number of available candidates is likely to be large, the appointing authority may state the maximum number of candidates to be nominated by the Exchange

(ii) The Employment Exchange will then submit to the appointing authority details of all candidates who possess the prescribed qualifications and have not been described by the previous employer as unsuitable for Government service or, where the appointing authority has stated the maximum number of candidates to be nominated, details of the most suitable candidates from its registers up to the maximum number prescribed

(iii) The appointing authority, after selecting and appointing the most suitable persons from the panel of names submitted, will then report the fact of appointment to the Employment Exchanges which had nominated them in order to enable the Exchanges to maintain their registers up to date

(iv) No Department or office shall after the issue of these orders, fill any vacancy of more than three months' duration by direct recruitment of a person not already in Government employment otherwise than through the Employment Exchanges unless the Exchanges are unable to supply suitable Candidates—

Provided that appointments which have to be made in consultation with the Federal Public Service Commission or on the results of a competitive examination will continue to be so made, and in respect of vacancies which have to be filled on the results of a competitive examination, the authority concerned will inform the appropriate Employment Exchange of the number of vacancies which have to be filled and the qualifications required, and the Employment Exchanges will bring the vacancies to the notice of qualified persons registered with them

(v) The procedure outlined above does not imply any relaxation of the qualification prescribed in respect of any appointment. Persons recruited through Employment Exchanges are required, subject to any general orders issued in this behalf, the qualifications prescribed in regard to age, education, or other matters and appointments must be made in strict conformity with the rules regulating reservation of vacancies in favour of minority communities

2. It has also been decided that Directorate General of Resettlement and Employment will, as far as possible, ascertain the special aptitudes of persons registered in the Employment Exchanges and afford them training facilities to fit them for employment for which they show aptitude. Further instructions on this point will be issued by the Labour Department

3. A specimen copy of form X-1 and of the confidential report and a copy of the instructions for completing the forms are enclosed herewith. Any difficulty in filling up the forms should be referred to the Labour Department, which will also render any necessary assistance to any Department in completing the forms when discharge on a large scale is contemplated. Supplies of Form X-1 and of the standard confidential report form can be had on application to the Central Employment Exchange, Labour Department, Government of India, Simla

INSTRUCTIONS FOR COMPLETING THE CARD INDEX ENVELOPE (FORM X'1)

The card in the form of an envelope is designed to provide a complete personal and service record of an individual which will enable the Employment Exchanges to render the fullest possible assistance in the resettlement of the discharged employees. The envelope pattern is used so that any correspondence or other documents relating to the individual may be placed inside the envelope portion. Each card will thus form a complete record of the individual.

2 Cards will be completed only for these individuals who wish for assistance in finding employment.

3 Much of the value of a card will depend upon the care taken in its preparation. Slipshod completion of the forms may render it difficult for the Employment Exchange to place the workman in suitable employment. The following instructions should be carefully observed —

Items 1, 6 and 10—These are for completion at Employment Exchanges.

Item 2—The name must be entered in full and in block capitals.

Item 4—Delete inapplicable entries. The letters 'M', 'W' and 'S' are abbreviations for 'Married', 'Widower' and 'Single' respectively.

Item 5—Under the heading 'Usual trade or Occupation' the occupation in which the employee is at present employed by the Government should be entered. Under the heading 'Alternative Occupation(s)' should be entered details of any other occupations for which the employee is considered suitable.

Item 9—The fullest possible address must be recorded so that there may be no difficulty in informing the registered person of any suitable vacancies which may occur.

Item 13—Height and weight need not be filled in all cases, but only where the particulars are readily available or can be ascertained.

Item 15—It will not be sufficient merely to ask the employee whether he is willing to work anywhere and to record his answer. Efforts should be made to judge, by intelligent questions regarding his domestic ties and other similar matters whether he would in fact be likely to accept employment at a distant place from his home or not and the likely places, e.g., neighbouring provinces, etc., to which he is willing to move. The opinion so formed as well as the employee's reply should be recorded.

Item 16—Record the minimum salary the individual is prepared to accept bearing in mind the salary he is employed at in the Department.

Item 18—This is the most important section of the form and particular attention should be paid to the adequate completion of this item. It is not sufficient to know what a man's usual occupation is. The extent of his knowledge is necessary to complete the picture. The details entered in the 'qualification space' should complete the picture. Such items as shorthand speed, typing speed, knowledge of special filing systems, experience in accountancy etc., should be recorded. The examples are by no means exhaustive as the type of information desirable will vary for each occupation, but care should be taken to record as much useful information as possible under this heading.

Item 19—The individual's record of service will be given under this item. Under "Name of Factory" the names of the offices (both private and Government) or Employing Departments in which the individual has served will be given in chronological order, together with the type of work performed and the period of service.

Item 20—The date on which the discharged worker will be available for other employment will be entered under this item.

NOTE—All entries on the form should be made in ink.

Any additional information which cannot be entered in the columns provided on the card index envelope may be entered on form X-1A which should be filled inside the envelope.

COMMISSION TO ENQUIRE INTO INDIAN PRESS.

649. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Government are contemplating the appointment of a Commission to inquire into the finance, control, management and ownership of the Indian Press as has been done by the House of Commons for the British Press? If so, what would be its terms of reference, and when is the Commission likely to be appointed?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Government have no such proposal under consideration at present.

INDIANISATION OF DEFENCE FORCES

650. *Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state

(a) the total number of non-Indian Officers in the Indian Army, the Indian Navy and the Indian Air Force, and

(b) what steps Government are taking for the complete Indianisation of the said personnel in the Defence Forces?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a)

Royal Indian Navy	376
Indian Army	21,891
Royal Indian Air Force	Nil

(b) As announced in a press communique issued on the 13th November 1946, Government have appointed a Committee to advise them on the ways and means of nationalising the Armed Forces of India within the shortest time possible.

RE-EMPLOYMENT OF DEMOBILIZED INDIAN OFFICERS

651. *Shri D. P. Karmarkar: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state

(a) the total number of Indian Officers and personnel demobilised after the cessation of hostilities,

(b) what opportunities are given to demobilised Indian Officers to get re-employment in the Indian Forces, and

(c) whether it is a fact that a number of Indian Officers have served during the recent war with distinction, if so what efforts are made to reabsorb them in the Defence Forces?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) The total number of Indian personnel demobilized since the cessation of hostilities up to the 1st October 1946 is 9,58,563, comprising 5,005 Officers and 9,53,558 Other Ranks.

(b) Demobilized Indian Officers are eligible to apply for permanent commissions and Short Service Commissions in the Indian Armed Forces, provided they satisfy the conditions prescribed therefor.

(c) Yes, Sir, and none of those officers who wished to stay on have been compulsorily released unless they were otherwise disqualified. The question of re-absorption does not, therefore, arise.

GRANT OF COMMISSION TO OVERAGE EMERGENCY COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

652. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state if it is a fact that a large number of over age Emergency Commissioned Officers, on being granted regular Commissions, have been given seniority over pre-war regular officers of many years service and experience?

(b) Are Government aware that this policy is detrimental to the standard of efficiency in the Army?

(c) If more senior officers are urgently required to hasten the process of Indianisation, why are existing regular officers not given accelerated promotions instead of filling the senior ranks of the Army with over age Emergency Commissioned Officers?

(d) How is it proposed to replace the senior British Officers who may be leaving the Indian Army within the next year or so?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) No, Sir, out of 770 regular Commissions so far granted, only 86 officers who were over 25 at the time of the grant of Emergency Commissions have been approved for Regular Commissions. This was found necessary in order to retain a few officers who had rendered really outstanding service during the war. The date of seniority of these officers is ante-dated to their 23rd birthday so as to place them in their correct age group with the regular officers and thus avoid their serving under younger pre war Regular Officers.

(b) No, Sir, far from being detrimental to efficiency this policy is calculated to make full use of the services of outstanding officers who on account of their age would otherwise be lost to the Army.

(c) Senior ranks are filled by selecting the most suitable officers irrespective of whether they were originally granted an Emergency or a Regular Commission. The number of over age Emergency Commissioned Officers is so small that it cannot be said they are filling the ranks of the Army.

(d) It is proposed to replace the senior British Officers leaving India by promotion of the most suitable Indian Officers.

MUSLIMS IN THE MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT

653. *Mr. Ahmed E H Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state whether the communal proportion of 25 per cent allotted to Muslims in the Military Accounts Department has been observed? If not, what is the percentage of Muslims (excluding menials) at present in the Department?

(b) In view of the paucity of Muslims in the Department, have all the Muslims now serving in the Military Accounts Department been absorbed permanently?

(c) Do Government propose to ensure that no Muslim from the Military Accounts Department is retrenched until the allotted quota is filled?

(d) What is the percentage of Muslims in the Military Accounts Department in the following grades

(i) Clerks 'A' Grade, (ii) Accountants, and (iii) Deputy Assistant Controllers?

(e) In view of the small representation of Muslims in the above grades, do Government propose to ensure that special concessions are given to Muslims in the matter of promotion to the above grades?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) According to the latest figures available the percentage of Muslims in the Military Accounts Department are as under

(i) Superior Service Officers	12 1%
(ii) Others	15 9%

The percentage of Muslims in the following grades is as below

(i) Clerks 'A' Grade	8 3%
(ii) Accountants	7 7%
(iii) Deputy Assistant Controllers	6 1%

The question of the steps necessary to secure adequate representation of Muslims in the Military Accounts Department is under consideration.

DIPLOMAS OF THE DELHI POLYTECHNIC

654. *Sardar Mangal Singh: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education be pleased to state what steps have been taken by Government to secure recognition for the All-India Diplomas awarded by the Delhi Polytechnic from the Federal Public Service Commission and Provincial Governments so far, and with what results?

(b) Why have the students of the Engineering Department of the Delhi Polytechnic refused to take their final All-India Diploma Examination, and what steps have Government taken to redress their grievances?

(c) Are the Government of India prepared to accept this Diploma as equivalent to a degree for recruitment in their own Departments like Works, Mines and Power, Railways, Posts and Air, All-India Radio, etc ?

(d) When do Government propose to hold the Recognised All-India Diploma Examination?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) The present position in regard to recognition of All-India Diplomas has been outlined in statement 'A' laid on the table in connection with my reply to starred question No. 512 by Shri Mohan Lal Saksena

(b) The students of the Engineering Department of the Delhi Polytechnic refused to take their final All-India Diploma Examination in September on the plea that the Diploma was not recognised by the Indian Universities and the Federal Public Service Commission. Steps taken in this connection are outlined in reply referred to in (a)

(c) The matter is under active consideration of the Government of India Departments, concerned with the employment of Engineers

(d) The position regarding recognition has been explained in reply to part (a). A special All-India Diploma examination to be held during the last week of January 1947 has been arranged and it is expected that the students who kept away from the last examination will take advantage of the special facilities extended to them, and it is hoped Honourable Members interested will help in getting the students to attend and pass the examination so that their prospects may be put on safe ground

INCOME-TAX ON TOTAL PROFITS OF STERLING AND DOLLAR COMPANIES IN INDIA

655. *Mr. B. P. Jhunjhunwala: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please furnish a list of Sterling and Dollar companies carrying on business in British India?

(b) What are the names of the companies whose British Indian profits exceeded foreign profits during the years 1943-44, 1944-45 and 1945-46?

(c) Have these companies been treated as resident under Section 4A(c) of the Indian Income Tax Act and assessed to income tax on the total profits, i.e., including profits earned outside British India? If not, why not?

(d) Have all these companies been asked to submit a return under Section 19A? If not, why not?

(e) Have these returns been received? What is the number of foreign shareholders who were in receipt of dividends amounting to Rs. 25,000 and above?

(f) Has any attempt been made to assess these persons to super-tax at the appropriate rates? If so, what is the amount of super-tax realised from them? If no attempts have been made, why?

(g) Were any prosecutions lodged against any of these companies for failure to submit a return under Section 19A? If so, with what result?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) to (g) The information asked for is being collected and will be laid on the table in due course

POST OF JOINT DIRECTOR GENERAL IN OFFICE OF DIRECTOR GENERAL OF ARCHAEOLOGY

656. *Mr. Muhammad Rahmat-Ullah: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state if it is a fact that the Office of the Director General of Archaeological Survey, has now been divided into sub-sections, each under a separate Class I officer, such as Excavation, Conservation and Publications, etc ?

(b) Why has a new post of Joint Director General been created, when the work of the Director General has been so divided?

(c) Will he please lay on the table a statement showing the extra work for which an officer of the rank of Joint Director General is appointed?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: (a) No, there is no new division at the functions of the Director General of Archaeology in India into sub-sections although a certain number of appointments have been made or revived during the last two years to provide more adequately for control of various activities of the Archaeological Survey, i.e., exploration, excavation, publication, conservation etc.

(b) and (c) The post of Joint Director General of Archaeology was created not on account of the division of work as alleged but for the reasons given in reply to question No 1653 asked in this house on the 8th April, 1946.

Dr Mortimer Wheeler was Keeper and Secretary of the London Museum when he agreed to serve the Government of India. He was Lecturer in British Archaeology, University College, London, Honorary Director, Institute of Archaeology in London University, a Governor of the National Museum, of Wales, Member of the Ancient Monuments Boards for England and Wales, and Fellow of the University College of London, Vice President of the Society of Antiquaries from 1935 to 1939. It would be false economy to bring out an eminent person on a four year contract for the place of Director General of Archaeology and then to compel him to devote the greater part of his time to mere administrative duties.

It had long been felt that the admitted failure of the Department in the past to fulfil adequately the vitally important duties of conservation and exploration entrusted to it was due in no small measure to the inability of any Director General of Archaeology to maintain sufficiently close contact both with work in the field throughout India and with Government at New Delhi or to carry out the urgent task of training new entrants and remodelling the circles.

An Officer who possessed extensive administrative experience at headquarters and had a full knowledge of the scope and nature of the current reorganisation had to be retained at headquarters to assist the Director General of Archaeology in his task and to relieve him of a number of existing administrative duties. The present Joint Director General of Archaeology has the special qualifications and experience essential for this task having served at headquarters under two successive Directors General of Archaeology.

EXPENSES ON TOUR OF DIRECTOR GENERAL OF ARCHAEOLOGY TO PERSIA AND AFGHANISTAN

657. *Mr. Muhammad Rahmat-Ullah: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state if it is a fact that the Director General of Archaeology in India went to Persia in 1945?

(b) What were the reasons for his Persian tour? Was any report prepared and published by him? If so, do Government propose to lay a copy of that report on the table of the House?

(c) Is it also a fact that recently the Director General went to Afghanistan? What was the purpose of his going to that country, who bore the expenses, and who accompanied him on this tour?

The Honourable Sri O. Rajagopalachari: (a) Yes, the Director General of Archaeology in India went to Iran in 1945 along with Dr Mohammad Nasim, Superintendent of the Frontier Circle of Archaeological Survey.

(b) The Iranian tour was undertaken by the Director General of Archaeology in India at the invitation of the Iranian Government as a return visit for the Iranian Cultural Mission which visited India in 1944. A report on cultural contact between the two countries was submitted to the Government of India by the Director General of Archaeology, but it was withheld on account of references in it to Russian obstruction to which it was considered not wise to give publicity in an undue degree.

The mission to Iran had the warm approval of the members of the Central Advisory Board of Archaeology in which there are seven members of the Legislature. I may add that the members of the Board had copies of the report referred to in (b).

(c) The Director General of Archaeology in India made an Archaeological and cultural tour of Afghanistan at the invitation of the Afghan Government. He was accompanied by Mr Justice N G A Edgley, President of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal and Mr M A Shakur, Curator of the Peshawar Museum, who represented the Government of the North West Frontier Province. As the members of the mission were the guests of the Afghan Government, that Government met the major part of their expenses. Incidental expenses of the Director General of Archaeology in India and of Mr M A Shakur were of course met by the Governments of India and the North West Frontier Province respectively.

DESTRUCTION OF AEROPLANES BY GOVERNMENT AFTER THE CLOSE OF WAR

658. *Pandit Balakrishna Sharma: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state

- (a) if it is a fact that a large number of aeroplanes in good order were deliberately destroyed by Government as not needed after the close of the war
- (b) the reasons for such destruction, and
- (c) the use to which the broken materials were put?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) No, Sir. No aircraft belonging to the Government of India were destroyed. A number of aircraft belonging to the United States Government and H M G, however, were destroyed under orders issued by those Governments.

(b) The aircraft destroyed were all "combat" aircraft and useless for civil purposes, since they were designed entirely for operations.

(c) The produce from such machines, as for all unserviceable aircraft, is disposed of by the Salvage Organization. This is mostly bought as raw material by industry but some portions are brought back into the armed forces for further use.

SUPPLY OF QUININE AND CINCHONA TO PROVINCES

659. *Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Will the Secretary of the Health Department be pleased to state the quantity of quinine and cinchona powders and tablets supplied to different Provinces in India during the years 1942-43, 1943-44, 1944-45 and 1946 and the incidence of death from Malaria in these Provinces during the period?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulnam: Statements showing the allotments of quinine sulphate and cinchona febrifuge made by the Central Government to the various provinces during 1942-43 to 1945-46 and the number of deaths reported to be due to malaria during the years 1942 to 1946 are laid on the table of the House. TERMS AND CONDITION OF AGREEMENT FOR ENGAGEMENT OF R I A F PERSONNEL

660. *Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state if it is a fact that the members of the R I A F personnel have been called upon to sign an agreement to serve in regular engagement by the 30th November, 1946, although they have not been supplied with terms and conditions of their post-war service?

(b) Are Government aware that for this reason most of the R I A F personnel have refused to sign the agreement and that, consequently, their services will be terminated by the 31st March next?

(c) Are Government aware that these people are prepared to sign the agreement if an assurance is given to the effect that sympathetic considerations will be given to the questions of pay and prospects and that no discrimination will be made between I O R and B O R in the R I A F service?

(d) If so, do Government propose to retain the services of these experienced men instead of taking new recruits to replace them as they are doing at present?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) No, Sir

The Honourable Member's question may have arisen from the scheme which has recently been introduced whereby airmen may, if they so desire, defer their release for periods of six, twelve or fifteen months. Applications to extend their service under this scheme have to be submitted by the 30th November 1946 and the date from which the periods of deferment begin is the 1st January 1947. Under this scheme the present pay scales will not be altered until the new pay code comes into force. From that date the new scales will be applied, with the proviso that if existing pay, including war service increment, is greater than that admissible under the new pay code, the existing pay will continue during the period of deferment until the recipient becomes eligible for a more favourable rate (for example by promotion) or until the 1st April 1948 whichever is earlier. It is not the intention of Government to compel any airman to sign on for a regular engagement. They will however be asked to volunteer when the new conditions of service and pay have been announced.

(b) In view of the answer to (a), this does not arise.

(c) All ranks of the R I A F are aware of the fact that a committee appointed by the Government of India is considering the question of pay for all ranks of the Armed Forces. The longest period of deferment of service is for 15 months from the 1st January 1947. As explained in the answer to (a), Indian airmen who wish to defer their release are aware that whatever the post-war pay may be, they will not, during this period of deferment, receive less than they do at present. There are no British airmen in the R I A F and therefore the question of discrimination does not arise.

(d) The majority of Indian airmen are serving on temporary engagements. It is not the intention of Government to retain in the Service, any longer than is absolutely necessary, any airman who has not signed a certificate signifying his desire to defer his release. It is necessary to enlist new recruits to replace men who wish to be released and others whose regular engagements may be expiring.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF PAY COMMISSION re PERSONNEL OF R I A F.

661. *Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state when the Pay Commission is expected to make recommendations regarding the pay and allowances of the personnel of the R I A F?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Press Communiqué dated the 20th September 1946 on the subject, a copy of which is laid on the table.

The Services Post-War Pay Committee are considering scales of Pay for all the three Services these scales will be inter-related. Their recommendations for the R I A F will be made at the same time as their recommendations for the Army and the R I N. It is also the policy of Government that the rates of pay for the Armed Forces should, in future, bear a relationship to civilian wages and it will be appreciated that the linking of service rates of pay with the pay of civilian Government servants is a very complicated matter. The new rates of pay for the Armed Forces will however be issued as soon as possible after Government have reached a decision on the recommendations of the Central Pay Commission.

Press Communiqué, dated the 20th September 1946

"The Services Post-War Pay Committee has been working for some months on a new Pay Code for the Indian personnel of the three Services. The policy of the Government of India is that the rates of pay for the Armed Forces shall in future bear relationship to civilian wages in India.

Now the Government of India has set up a Central Pay Commission to enquire into the future pay and conditions of living of civilian servants of the Government.

Obviously the conclusions arrived at by the Central Pay Commission must be linked with those of the Services Committee. This means that it is unlikely that any decision will be reached before the end of this year and that it will not be possible to announce the new Services Pay Code before the end of the year or perhaps for several months after it."

B O R 's IN R I A F

662. *Sreejut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state how many B O R's have been taken in the R I A F during the last three months?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: None, Sir.

REGULATIONS re USE OF HEAD LIGHTS IN MOTOR CARS IN NEW DELHI

663. *Shri Sri Prakasa: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state

(b) whether there is any regulation as regards the use of dim lights and head lights in motor cars,

(c) whether there are any orders prohibiting the use of head lights and directing the use of dim lights only in particular cases,

(d) whether Government are aware that the motor cars in New Delhi do not use dim lights and that this often endangers the safety of pedestrians and others; and

(e) whether Government propose to issue instructions requiring motor cars coming from opposite directions to switch off their head lights and switch on their dim lights instead, when approaching each other?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) The Chief Commissioner, Delhi

(b) and (c) Yes Rule 6-15(1) of the Delhi Motor Vehicles Rules, 1940, requires motor drivers so to manipulate the lights that no undue inconvenience or danger is caused to any person by dazzle

(d) Yes

(e) The question of issuing instructions forbidding altogether the use of dazzling head-lights within the Municipal limits of Delhi, New Delhi, the Notified Area Committee and the Fort Notified Area Committee is under consideration

 RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE HINDI URDU RADIO ADVISORY COMMITTEE

 664. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutt Paliwal: Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state

(a) whether Government have arrived at any conclusions as regards the recommendations of the Hindi Urdu Radio Advisory Committee, if so what,

(b) whether Government propose to lay a copy of the Report of the Committee on the table of the House,

(c) whether it is a fact that the representative of the Urdu Anjuman advocated the broadcasting of news in Hindi and Urdu separately, and

(d) whether Government propose to assign to Hindi its place according to the numbers of Hindi-speaking people?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given by me on the 13th November 1946 to Seth Govind Das's question No 482

(b) I shall consider the question of publication of the report of the Committee when a decision is reached on its recommendations

(c) and (d) These are matters covered by the recommendations of the committee and will naturally claim my attention during the consideration of the whole subject

CONVICTION OF INDIAN ENEMY AGENTS IN INDIA

665. *Sree Satyapriya Banerjee: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state

(a) the number, names and addresses of Indians who have been executed as Enemy Agents,

(b) the number and names of Enemy Agents who came from East Asia and have been convicted as such in India,

(c) the number and names of persons who collaborated with those persons in India and were convicted for such collaboration;

(d) the number and names of those who have been convicted by a court martial and have not yet been released, and

(e) the policy of the Government of India with regard to the persons referred to in parts (b), (c) and (d) above?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) Thirteen persons were executed as a result of their trial under the Enemy Agents Ordinance, 1943. A statement giving their names and addresses is laid on the table

(b) The number including those mentioned in (a) above is 26. A list of their names is laid on the table

(c) There were two such persons, namely, Jyotish Chandra Bose and Haridas Mitra

(d) My information is that no enemy agent has been convicted by a Court Martial -

(e) The Government of India have already released ten persons who were undergoing imprisonment and were convicted in Delhi. The Government of Madras have released one person who had been convicted and was detained in Madras. The cases of the four remaining persons have been referred to the Government of Bengal with a recommendation for release as they are the concern of the Provincial Government.

BRITISH INDIAN ARMY

666. *Sree Satyapriya Banerjee: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state

(a) the arrears of pay of Indian National Army men who were in the British Indian Army during the period of their status as prisoners of war, and the reasons for withholding payment,

(b) the policy of the present Government of India regarding the payment of these arrears, and

(c) the policy of the Government of India with regard to the appointment of Indian National Army men in the British Indian Army?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) There are now no arrears of pay due to the I N A men.

(b) and (c) The Interim Government have not yet considered these matters.

ADVISORY COUNCIL FOR THE CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF DELHI PROVINCE

667. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state

(a) whether Government are aware of the fact that the continuance of undemocratic conditions in the Chief Commissioner's Province of Delhi is greatly resented by the people of the Province,

(b) whether Government are aware that a demand for the appointment of an Advisory Council consisting of elected representatives of the people with a view to advise the Chief Commissioner on all important administrative questions has been made by the people of Delhi from time to time,

(c) whether Government are aware that Mr Asaf Ali, the then Member for Delhi, had also addressed a letter to the Chief Commissioner on the subject, and

(d) if the answers to parts (a), (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to appoint an Advisory Council with a view to democratise the present system of administration in Delhi, if so, how long it will take, and what will be the nature of the Advisory Council, and whether its advice would be normally binding on the Chief Commissioner?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) and (b) The Government of India have received representations expressing dissatisfaction with the present administrative structure in the Province of Delhi.

(c) Yes

(d) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to my reply given on the 8th November 1946 to starred question No 345 by Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bharghava

CIRCUIT HIGH COURT AT DELHI

668. *Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Is the Honourable the Home Member aware of the long standing demand of the people of Delhi, for a Circuit High Court at Delhi? If so, do Government propose to do anything in the matter?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Such proposals or proposals of a similar nature have been brought to the notice of the Government of India at intervals between 1923 and 1937, but have hitherto been rejected on both technical and practical grounds. No representations on this subject have been received from popular bodies since 1937. The Chief Commissioner has, however recently reopened the question in correspondence with the Lahore High Court and I will in due course examine the proposals which result from this correspondence.

LOAN OF SERVICES OF AN OFFICER AS DIRECTOR OF ARCHAEOLOGY IN HYDERABAD STATE.

669. *Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Education please state if it is a fact that some time back the Hyderabad Durbar asked through the External Affairs Department for the services of a certain officer in the Archaeological Department on loan for appointment as Director of Archaeology in that State

(b) What action was taken by that Department in this matter, and how does the matter now stand?

The Honourable Sri C. Rajagopalachari: (a) and (b) A demi-official enquiry has been received on behalf of the Hyderabad State in regard to the loan, in certain contingencies of the services of an officer of the Archaeological Department for appointment as the Director of Archaeology in the State. A reply has been sent but there is no commitment on either side. No request has so far been made officially in the matter.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

DEARNESS ALLOWANCE TO PENSIONERS

87. Raizada Hans Raj: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state if it is a fact that the concession of dearness allowance has been given to Government Pensioners drawing pensions up to Rs. 100? If so at what rate and on what principles?

(b) Is dearness allowance allowed to pensioners drawing pensions between Rs. 100 and Rs. 250? If not, what are the reasons therefor?

The Honourable Mr. Luqat Ali Khan: (a) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, the rates of the temporary increase in the pensions are as follows—

Pensions not exceeding Rs. 20 p m—Temp. increase of Rs. 4 p m

Pensions exceeding Rs. 20 p m but not exceeding Rs. 60 p m—Temp. increase of Rs. 5 p m

Pensions exceeding Rs. 60 p m but not exceeding Rs. 100 p m—Temp. increase of Rs. 6 p m,

Pensions exceeding Rs. 100 p m but not exceeding Rs. 106 p m receive such increase as will bring the total pension to Rs. 106 per mensem.

These rates are based on the suggestions made by the Provincial Governments who are vitally concerned in the matter.

(b) The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. As regards the second part, it is considered that retired official drawing pensions between Rs. 100 and Rs. 250 p m are not in the same need of relief as are those drawing pensions below Rs. 100 p m. Moreover the heavy expenditure involved precludes any further liberalisation of the existing scheme, the additional cost of which is already about Rs. 127.5 lacs.

NON-RECOGNITION OF A. M. S. DIPLOMA OF THE BENARES HINDU UNIVERSITY BY MEDICAL COUNCIL OF INDIA.

88. Seth Govind Das: Will the Secretary of the Health Department please state

(a) whether it is a fact that the A. M. S. Degree of the Benares Hindu University is awarded after proper training and examination by the said University in modern medical subjects including Anatomy, Physiology, Materia Medica, Medicine, Surgery, Pathology, etc.,

(b) whether it is a fact that Degrees and Diplomas of this University are recognised by the Government of India, and

(c) whether it is a fact that the A. M. S. Degree of the said University has not yet been recognised by the Medical Council of India and if so the reasons for withholding this recognition?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam: (a) Government are aware that instruction is given in the subjects mentioned

(b) Yes

(c) The A. M. S. degree of the Benares Hindu University has not been recognised under the Indian Medical Council Act, 1933. The authorities of the University have not so far applied for the recognition of this qualification.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

FORWARD TRADING IN GOLD AND SILVER

Mr. Manu Subedar: (a) Have Government received a complaint or representation with regard to the future trading in gold and silver?

(b) Have their attention been drawn to a leading article in the Times of India, dated the 8th of October 1946?

(c) In view of the international importance of gold and silver, will Government have the entire machinery for forward trading in these articles examined in consultation with the Provincial Governments?

(d) Will Government have the question examined whether Government of India cannot interfere in order to lay down just and proper standards of trading, including deliveries against contracts?

• The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: (a) and (b) Yes, Sir

(c) and (d) Government are aware that the existing methods of forward trading in some of the bullion exchanges are highly undesirable and require to be rectified. Regulation of trading on the exchanges falls mainly under item 27 of the Provincial Legislative List but legislation can be undertaken by the Centre if all Provinces agree to this course. It is realised that proper regulation of exchanges is impossible without uniform and simultaneous action in all Provinces and that Central legislation would be the best way of achieving such uniformity. The Government of India have, therefore, already instituted enquiries into the working of stock exchanges and have asked all Provincial Governments whether they would agree to Central legislation for their regulation. Similar action in regard to bullion exchanges is contemplated. The Government are also bringing to the notice of the Bombay Government the desirability of taking early steps to check the speculative activities of the bullion exchange in Bombay.

Mr. Manu Subedar: Since Government are going to have a co-ordinating law for the whole country if the Provincial Governments agree, may I also bring to the notice of the Honourable the Finance Member that there are two or three places in Indian States where also forward dealings in future transactions of gold and silver are taking place (An Honourable Member! No) and it would be desirable—by negotiations no doubt—to bring them also to accept the same rules and conditions which would prevail in British India?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: All that I can tell my Honourable friend here is that the States will also be consulted in this matter and it can only be on their voluntary co-operation that anything can be done.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know from the Honourable Member if forward contracts are not in the interest of this country so long as Government is not able to purchase gold from foreign countries and it is not desirable to allow merchants to get as much gold bullion as possible?

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: That is also one of the matters that will be examined.

USE OF FIRE ARMS BY HOOLIGANS IN BENGAL AND AMENDMENT OF INDIAN ARMS ACT

Mr. K. O. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state whether the policy to be followed by the present Government in regard to the Indian Arms Act has come up for consideration with a view either to its repeal or substantial amendment? If so, when is any action in this direction likely to be taken?

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the use to which rifles, guns and revolvers have been and are being put in different parts of Bengal by hooligans in the commission of crime in connection with the communal riots?

(c) Is it any part of the duty of the Central Intelligence Bureau to keep watch over unlawful acquisition and use of arms of this character? If so, has the Bureau kept Government regularly informed about the extent of the mischief now prevailing, indicating the possible sources of supply of these arms?

(d) Do Government propose to take into early consideration the desirability of repealing or amending the Indian Arms Act, so as to facilitate the possession of arms by law-abiding citizens for purposes of self-defence?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: (a) No The second part of the question does not arise

(b) I have seen press reports to this effect

(c) The Central Intelligence Bureau is concerned only with securing information regarding loss or theft of certain categories of arms and ammunition. The matters referred to by the Honourable Member are primarily the concern of Provincial Governments

(d) The matter will be considered and if in the light of the decision reached it becomes necessary, the question of amendment of the Act will be examined

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With regard to the Honourable Member's answer to part (c) of my question, do I understand that the functions of the Central Intelligence Bureau are strictly limited to the extent that the Honourable Member has indicated, and that it is not open to the Government of India to extend the scope of the activities of the Central Intelligence Bureau so as to bring the enquiry that I have indicated within that scope?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: As I understand it, the scope of the Central Intelligence Bureau is limited to the position that I have stated

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I know under what authority has the scope of the activities of the Central Intelligence Bureau been thus limited?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Under the authority under which the Central Intelligence Bureau exercises its functions

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is it a Statutory authority which cannot be amended by any Government or Legislature?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: All acts can be amended by the Legislature

Shri Sri Prakasa: In view of the Honourable Member's promise made earlier this morning that he would repeal the Arms Act if every one turned into a burglar, and in view of the further fact that almost all of us are becoming stabbers, will the Honourable Member consider the desirability of repealing the Arms Act?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: All Members of the Central Assembly have licences to keep arms but many of them do not have arms

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With regard to my Honourable friend's answer to my last question may I know whether Government propose to take up the question of revising the scope of the functions of the Central Intelligence Bureau in the direction indicated by me?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The functions of the Central Intelligence Bureau are being shrivelled up instead of being expanded

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member kindly indicate the reasons for thus restricting the scope?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The reason is the expansion of Provincial Autonomy

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Since most of the Members of the House do not possess arms will the Honourable Member endeavour to make available to the Honourable Members arms and ammunition for which they will be prepared to pay?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: They will get them if they apply to their Provincial Governments

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I remind the Honourable Member that the Bombay Provincial Government has prohibited the sale of arms?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: That prohibition does not apply to the Honourable Member or the Members of the Central Legislature.

Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal: Will the Honourable Member be pleased to advise what a Member of this Assembly has to do when his application for arms to his Provincial Government is neither granted nor refused, but kept pending?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: In that case the remedy is to take steps to influence the Provincial Government

Mr. K. C. Neogy: The Honourable Member in reply to a previous question advised the people to organise self-defence instead of depending on the police. May I know what advice the Honourable Member has to give to those law-abiding people who are confronted by hooligans armed with firearms?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Government of the Province is responsible in that behalf

Khan Abdul Ghani Khan: In view of the fact that most of the victims of these riots are poor people who have not money for firearms, will the Honourable Member take that into consideration?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Every voter in the North-West Frontier Province is entitled to keep arms!

Sjt N. V. Gadgil: May I know from the Honourable Member that in view of the disturbances all over the country if respectable people are armed will not the disturbances be fewer?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I cannot express any opinion. It occasionally happens that the dacoits or goondas snatch away arms from those who have licences

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With regard to the gradual restriction of the scope and the activities of the Central Intelligence Bureau, as referred to by my Honourable friend, will the Honourable Member be pleased to refer to the relevant recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee in regard to the functions of this very body, where the importance of the work left to it in regard to detection of terrorist activities, has been mentioned?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Those activities were of a very different nature

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Do I take it that what is happening in the country cannot come within that description?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: They dealt with political terrorist activities

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What steps does the Honourable the Home Member propose to take, as the Member in charge of the Centrally Administered areas, to safeguard the life and property of the poor people?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: All necessary steps will be taken to protect the life and property of people in the Centrally Administered areas

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: Will the Honourable Member just tell me what is the position with regard to the possession of swords by almost every Sikh in Delhi? Is that freely allowed or are other communities also allowed to possess swords?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Sikhs are allowed to keep the kirpans on religious grounds

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: Is a sword a kirpan or not, because every Sikh is now wearing a sword?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Different places have different conditions. In the Punjab a Sikh is allowed to keep a sword and a kirpan. But in the Centrally Administered areas the Sikhs are allowed to keep kirpans.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: Will the Honourable Member inform the House whether in this province the size of a kirpan has increased to that of a sword?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: There is no scheduled size

Khan Muhammad Yamin Khan: Will other members be allowed to keep kirpans?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: If other communities adopt the Sikh religion, certainly they will be allowed

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: If a kirpan can be used as a weapon and it can be used for terrorising people, then why should other people, for their protection, not be allowed to keep kirpans, if one community is allowed to keep kirpans as an emblem of religion

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: If the other communities do not consider it a religious duty to keep such weapons, then they are not allowed to do so

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: Does the Honourable Member mean that, if some communities think that peaceful living is part of their religion and other people think that keeping of arms by which they can kill the peaceful people, is part of their duty, he will not allow the peaceful people to protect themselves?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: In a country inhabited by many sects and different religions the different religious susceptibilities of people are respected by the laws and customs of the country

Dr. Zia'Uddin Ahmad: During the regime of Sir Fazl-i-Hussain the point rose about the definition of the kirpan and it was said that its length would be in inches. But now it has extended to feet. It has now ceased to be a kirpan and it has become a regular sword

Mr. President: That is an observation!

Shri Sri Prakasa: Are Sikhs allowed only to keep kirpans and also to use them?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: They are allowed for both purposes

Haji Abdus Sattar Haji Ishaq Seth: My Honourable friend said that in the Punjab members of all communities are allowed to wear swords. In view of that, will my Honourable friend consider allowing others to wear swords in Delhi as a defensive weapon?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I am informed that Sikhs are allowed to do so. But they are not allowed to keep swords in the Centrally Administered Areas

NON-RETURN OF CASH AND THE VALUABLES REMOVED FROM PERSON OF ARRESTED I N A MEN

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: (a) Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state whether it is a fact that some cash deposits and valuable articles such as watches, fountain pens, etc., belonging to the I N A prisoners were removed by the British Military Police at the time of their arrest in personal search with the avowed object of depositing the same in the safe custody of the Camp authorities, and that in some cases their value amounted to several thousand rupees, but this property was never returned to the prisoners at the time of their release and that no record or accounts are available to show that the cash and valuables so recovered, were deposited with the Camp authorities?

(b) Is it a fact that some petitions were actually filed before the Court Martial Tribunals but the Tribunal's invariably replied that there was nothing on record to show that any private property belonging to the prisoners have been recovered in personal search?

(c) Is it a fact that a sum of Rs 5,200 was recovered from the person of Mr S M Bashir, (whose number at Jikargatchha Camp was L 8070 and at Kabul Lines, Delhi, B '1265) on the 29th June, 1945, at Calcutta Jettv and that he was told while he was at Jikargatchha Camp (near Calcutta) that the money had been deposited with the Camp Commandant, but this money was not paid back to him at the time of his release on the 27th December 1945, from Kabul Lines, Delhi?

(d) Did he send several applications to the Military authorities in this connection and also made a representation to the Honourable the Defence Member in September 1946?

(e) If the replies to (a) to (d) above be in the affirmative, what action has been taken, or do Government propose to take, in the matter? Will they order an immediate enquiry?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) In conformity with the prescribed procedure, all prisoners were searched before their arrival at the Holding and Enquiry Centres and money in their possession was removed by the Interrogation authorities. A receipt was invariably given for articles and money so removed. A record does exist of cash deposits and articles, etc., which were taken away from the I N A prisoners and the property belonging to these personnel was in the majority of cases returned to the owners on their release. In the remaining cases every effort has been made to trace and forward articles and money to those who did not receive them when released. The reason why some I N A men did not receive their articles is that in several cases the men gave fictitious or incorrect addresses with the result that money orders and articles sent to them were returned.

(b) The Holding and Enquiry Centres where the majority of personnel were held have now been disbanded and it is therefore not possible to ascertain whether petitions were actually filed before the Courts. There is, however, no mention of such petitions in the Court of Enquiry proceedings.

(c) A sum of Rs. 4,965 was taken from Mr. Bashir and it has not been returned to him so far. Enquiries are being made and the question of paying him this sum of money known to have been taken from him is being considered.

(d) Yes, Sir, Mr. Bashir did make a statement to the effect that a sum of Rs. 5,200 was removed from his person in July, 1945. This statement was made by him in a letter addressed to the Honourable the Defence Member on the 29th of September, 1946.

(e) Government are enquiring into the case of Mr. Bashir.

Lala Deshbhandhu Gupta: May I know from the Honourable Member the number of cases in which money orders were returned unacknowledged or unaccepted?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I must ask for notice of that question.

Lala Deshbhandhu Gupta: May I know the reason for the delay in making the payment to Mr. Bashir? What is the difficulty?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Government have to satisfy themselves that there are no claims outstanding against the person concerned before making the refund of the money taken from him.

Lala Deshbhandhu Gupta: How long will it take the Honourable Defence Secretary to make the refund?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I hope, not very long.

INVITATION TO MR. COMPTON MACKENZIE, TO WRITE HISTORY OF INDIA'S WAR EFFORT

Lala Deshbhandhu Gupta: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department be pleased to state

(a) whether the attention of Government has been drawn to a report published in the Hindustan Times, dated the 6th November, 1946, on page 2, and column 6 saying that Dr. Compton Mackenzie has been selected to write a short popular history of India's War Effort,

(b) whether it is true that he has been selected by the Government of India for this job; if so, the special reasons which led the Government of India to entrust this important task to an outsider; and

(c) whether he will be paid for by the Government for this job; if so, what will be the amount that will be paid to him?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) Yes, Sir

(b) and (c) The Government of India sent to the U. K. a representative empowered to discuss with publishers of good standing the question of obtaining the services of an author whose name was sufficiently well known to ensure good sales for a popular history of India's war effort. The decision to invite Mr Mackenzie to undertake this task was taken by the publishers in consultation with the Government of India's representative. The publication of this work will be undertaken by the publishers and will involve no expense to the Government of India who will merely provide facilities for the author. No Indian author of repute was found who was prepared to undertake the work on these terms, but Mr Mackenzie has stated that as soon as an Indian author could be found who would be willing to undertake the work on these terms, he would make no difficulty about the withdrawal of the contract made by him with his publishers.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know what steps were taken by the Government to find out whether any Indian author of repute was willing to undertake this work or not?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I might mention that Mr Panikkar, who is a well known historian was addressed on the subject and I understand that he did not show much interest in this matter.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer: May I know whether the Honourable Member took pains to consult the Education Department and also the various Universities in India on the subject to find out if one of their Professors in History was prepared to undertake this job?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The historical section of the G H Q. made the necessary enquiries from the persons they considered competent to advise in the matter.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is the Honourable Member aware that Mr Panikkar ceased to be a professor many years ago and has never been a Professor of History?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I do not think it is necessary to go into the merits of Mr Panikkar.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know whether any University Professors or other historians have been addressed on the matter?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I am afraid I have not got that information with me at the moment but in the press communiqué which was issued it was stated that attempts to interest Indian authors privately and through the press have hitherto been without result.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: False.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I do not think that the Honourable Member should say that it is false.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know if Government will now take steps to invite Indian authors of repute to undertake this work?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I have already said that if any Indian author of repute comes forward to accept this task on these terms, Government will readily provide the same facilities which have been provided for Mr Compton Mackenzie.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know if it is not a fact that the Government of India have agreed to arrange to send photographers and other accessories for the purpose to enable this gentleman to gather the materials at the expense of the Central Government?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: This is included in the term "facilities", which the Government of India will provide to the author to enable him to do justice to the task which he has undertaken, namely, the preparation of a popular history which will give an account of India's war effort (that has been considerable and we are specially proud of it) in language which would be creditable to the country.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know what the estimated cost of these facilities is?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: No estimate of the cost is available, but I do not think it can be very much. As I said the cost involved is only the cost of travelling and incidental costs, like what my Honourable friend mentioned, photographs etc.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Will it be some lakhs of rupees—approximately?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I am afraid I have not got the figures.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: In what language does the material exist for writing Indian History and has the Honourable gentleman got any familiarity with that language?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The material exists in English and Mr Mackenzie who is an author of world wide fame surely knows English.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I know if Government have considered the question that a popular history can better be written in an Indian language rather than in English?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: It is the intention of the Government of India to translate this work when it is ready in the Indian languages.

Shri Sri Prakasa: In view of the fact that the Honourable Member has given what may only be called a tendentious answer, may we inquire if the Government have already given tips to this author as to what he should write? When the Honourable Member seems to be very proud of his war effort does he expect the author to be the same? Will he be ready to give me the task? I hold a Tripos degree in History from Cambridge.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I suggest that it is a matter of opinion—whether the reply I gave was tendentious or not, but I can say straightaway that Mr Mackenzie himself has made a public statement that if the work he produces does not satisfy the Indian people, he will feel that he has not done his work.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: May I know whether Mr Compton Mackenzie is a very well known writer of fiction and whether the Government consider that in the writing of history, an author who has distinguished himself in writing fiction is best qualified?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: I think my Honourable friend is not well aware of the works written by Mr Compton Mackenzie.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: I want to know.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: In addition to fiction, for which he is famous, he has written a number of memoirs of Greece and other places when he served during the first great war of 1914—1918, and he has also written some historical works.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Will the Honourable Member now circularise and invite applications from professors of history in the various colleges and universities in order to find out if Indian authors of repute are available for this purpose, and offer them the same terms?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: The announcement made in this Honourable House is sufficient publicity to enable any author who is interested in this project to approach the Government of India. I should make it clear that in addition to this popular history the intention of the Government of India is to compile an official factual history which will probably consist of several volumes, which is being written in the historical section, by the Government of India's own officers; there will also be a student's history which will be utilised at the staff college which will not consist of the same number of volumes as the bigger and detailed official history.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Is that the intention of the late Government or of the present Government?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: That is the intention of the present Government also.

Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan: When the Honourable Member said that besides fiction this gentleman has written some historical works, what historical value have these works got? Have they any historical value?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: That is a matter of opinion. Surely Mr Mackenzie is a gentleman of world wide fame and I suggest that works written by him are prized works.

(Some honourable members rose to ask questions.)

Mr. President: Order, order. I am calling the next question. This has been sufficiently discussed.

STORE PURCHASE RULES FOLLOWED BY THE ARMY DEPARTMENT

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will the Secretary of the Defence Department please state—

(a) whether the Store Purchase Rules are followed by the Army Department in respect of orders placed abroad, if not, why not,

(b) whether it is correct that foodstuff and machinery now available in India are not purchased by the Army Department and imported from abroad, and

(c) whether the National Government have changed the policy of encouraging Indian Industry?

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: (a) The Store Purchase Rules have been followed by the Defence Department subject only to certain modifications necessitated by the war.

(b) No, Sir, Demands for machinery and warlike stores have been placed on the India Office only for those stores which could not be produced in India. All items which can be produced in India according to the required specification are procured from indigenous sources through the Industries and Supply Department. Indigenous foodstuffs purchased for the Armed Forces in India are obtained for the Defence Department by the Food Department in accordance with the estimates given by the Quartermaster General, India. The only foodstuffs imported are those which cannot be produced in India to the required specifications or in the required quantity.

(c) No, Sir, there has been no change whatsoever. The policy, as before, is to encourage Indian industry as much as possible. An Inter-Departmental Committee is actually now considering the question of defining what types of military equipment and stores can be locally procured through the Industries and Supply Department.

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE

Secretary of the Assembly: Sir, the following message has been received from the Council of State.

"I am directed to inform you that the Council of State at its meeting held on the 15th November, 1946, agreed without any amendment to the following Bills which were passed by the Legislative Assembly at its meeting held on the 11th and 12th November 1946, namely—

1 A Bill further to amend the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934

2 A Bill to provide for the continuance during a limited period of powers to control the production, supply and distribution of, and trade and commerce in, certain commodities

3 A Bill to make provision for the constitution of a special police force for the Chief Commissioner's Province of Delhi for the investigation of certain offences committed in connection with matters concerning Departments of the Central Government for the superintendence and administration of the said force and for the extension to other areas in British India of the powers and jurisdiction of members of the said force in regard to the investigation of the said offences."

RESOLUTION RE RUNNING OF CIVIL AVIATION AS A STATE DEPARTMENT—contd

Mr. M. R. Masani (Bombay City Non-Muhammadan Urban) Sir, it is generally considered to be a difficult position for a man when his convictions conflict with the interests of an organisation with which he may be connected. I have come to the conclusion that it is an even more difficult position when one's convictions happen to coincide or not conflict with the call of the organisation to which one may happen to belong. I happen to belong to a firm, which in its turn happens, among its multifarious activities, to run one of India's airlines, and so last week, when this debate was on, I desisted from speaking, and I would still have done so if it had not been for the fact that the debate on the last occasion widened from a discussion on civil aviation to a wider discussion on the pros and cons of nationalisation of all industries and services. One of the Honourable members, my friend Khan Abdul Ghani Khan, went so far as to say that our decision in this case would be a test for similar decisions to be taken in the case of other industries and services. It is that which induces me to put before the House a few considerations, and I trust that the Honourable House and, in particular, the Mover, Sardar Mangal Singh, and those who support him will accept my assurance that what I say here is based on my own views, previously expressed in writing on various occasions and over a long time, and are solely in furtherance of my duty to my own constituency and to the country.

On February 26 this year, when this House was debating the question of road-rail co-ordination, I had occasion to oppose the scheme on the ground that it smacked of monopoly. This is what I said on that day:

"I say this scheme savours strongly of monopoly. I would like to oppose the very conception of monopoly as applied to our transport service. I do so though I am a socialist. According to my socialist faith I do not believe it is necessary to support any and every measure of nationalisation. Nationalisation, after all, is an instrument, a means to an end, and if it impedes social justice in a particular case it impedes the spreading of democracy to the economic sphere of life, then, I Sir, would oppose it."

I then went on to say:

"India is big enough for more railways, more roads, more shipping and more air lines. We want healthy competition between all these modes of transport. That is the only guarantee that new technical developments will be utilised and that efficiency will be maintained on both sides. Therefore, if the railways fear competition their first duty is to put their house in order."

Now, Sir, these considerations in opposing monopoly apply with even stronger force than in the case of road transport to the development of civil aviation in our country. There was a certain amount of loose talk about nationalisation on the last occasion. The word was used in two diametrically opposite senses. The first meaning was that given to the term by Sardar Mangal Singh and his supporters and they understood nationalisation to mean State ownership and management. On the other hand my friend Diwan Chaman Lal, in moving his amendment, made it clear that he understood nationalisation to include State ownership or State control and he said that in that sense he also supported nationalisation.

I have taken the trouble of looking up the dictionary in trying to decide as to whether my friend Sardar Mangal Singh or Diwan Chaman Lal was right and this is what the Oxford Dictionary says. It defines 'nationalisation' to be "the action of bringing land, property, industries under the control of the nation." To 'nationalise' is "to bring under the control of to convert into the property, of, the nation", and Webster endorses this by saying—to 'nationalise' is "to vest the control, ownership, or the like, of in the nation." It is perfectly clear therefore that the correct meaning of the word 'nationalisation' is the meaning given by Diwan Chaman Lal and in that sense we of the Congress Party are committed to nationalisation. We propose to remain committed to it and we propose to implement our pledges in this behalf The Congress Election Manifesto is clear on this point It says:

"It will be necessary to plan and co-ordinate social advance in all its many fields, to prevent the concentration of wealth and power in the hands of individuals and groups, to prevent vested interests inimical to society from growing, and to have social control of the mineral resources, means of transport and the principal methods of production and distribution in land, industry and in other departments of national activity, so that free India may develop into a co-operative commonwealth

The State must, therefore, own or control key and basic industries and services, mineral resources, railways, waterways, shipping and other means of public transport "

This makes it perfectly clear that we of this party do not accept nationalisation in the narrow sense of State ownership and management We have, very wisely left the door open to social ownership or control as the needs of the situation may dictate

Our industries and services are developed in very varying degrees Some are old established and have made great advance Others are nascent They have just been born and are still at an elementary and rudimentary stage, and to apply the same footrule and standard of measurement to all these various industries and services would not only be dogmatic and doctrinaire but also disastrous to the country The only test one can apply is the test which my Honourable friend, Mr C Rajagopalachari, mentioned when he was Minister for Industries and Supplies, and that was that India's biggest need today is increased production We want much more of goods and much more of services and the only test, and the supreme test, by which we can decide what form of social control we shall apply to any particular industry or service is whether or not it will give us more production or better service, because that is India's prime need

Judged by that test, my attention would turn first to the administrative machinery that we possess at present I shall not comment on it beyond saying that we have inherited from the British Raj a very rudimentary machinery of Government confined primarily to law and order and the collection of revenue I would ask the House to accept the statement of the present Minister for Industries and Civil Supplies, Dr Matthai, who in the recent debate on controls expressed himself as follows

[At this stage Mr President vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Mr Deputy President (Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan)]

"Here we had to put into operation the system of controls through an administrative system which had grown up through the years with an entirely negative outlook We had at present an administrative organisation in the country built up over a period of 20 years, the main business of which during this period had been to prevent things being done and to maintain law and order It was a police Government on the foundation of which they had to erect a system of regulation rather than prevention"

The Honourable Mover of this Resolution and his supporters want exactly this police government, this rudimentary government, which has still to be built up, to be vested with the day to day management of a highly specialised service of this kind (An Honourable Member: What about Railways?) I shall come to that It is already an overburdened service and what you are doing now is to place on the Government the additional burden of running our airlines That, Sir, is far neither to the administrative apparatus nor to the country And I was not surprised that in the Statement of Policy made by the predecessor in office of the present Honourable Member for Communications on September 30, a frank admission was made by Government; and we were told in answer to a question on the 6th instant that it was then the policy of the Government of India as a whole That statement said that Government "machinery is not as yet so highly developed as to enable it to undertake actual operations in aviation" The then Communications Member went on to express the hope that "on account of private enterprise, greater facilities, efficiency and courtesy will be available to the passengers than if the services were to be nationalised at this stage".

The real issue before us today is not between private enterprise in an unregulated sense and State enterprise. The issue is a narrow issue between two different forms of nationalisation, namely, State ownership and management or State control without ownership and management (An Honourable Member: What about profit?) I shall presently come to that. During the last ten or fifteen years, many socialists in various countries, who had sworn by State ownership and management, have had occasion to revise their views in view of the menace of totalitarian dictatorship that has sprung up in that period, and I shall quote to the House the views of Professor G. D. H. Cole, an eminent socialist, whose name is well known as an expounder of Marxism and socialism during the last two decades. This is what he says in his book Great Britain In The Post-War World:

"There is no need to socialise at once all the forms of production it may prove desirable to socialise some time nor is there any reason why a form of production socialised at first, should not be handed back, under proper safeguards, to private enterprise if socialisation does not yield good results. Within a single branch of production there may be some parts which it is desirable to socialise and others which are best left under private ownership and control. The more gigantic the essential instruments of power become, the greater grows the danger that in centralising their administration, we may be drawn to create a political machine too vast and complicated to be amenable to any real democratic control, and may thus become ourselves the victims of the very power-mania, which we are organising ourselves to defeat. It is a clear lesson of recent history that democracy cannot be real unless it rests on small groups as its basic units—on groups all enough to be competently administered and led by men of normal stature and mental make up."

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member has two minutes more.

Mr. M. R. Masani: I have not taken more than ten minutes now by my watch, and the clocks in the House hence stopped. May I therefore have another five minutes?

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member must finish in two minutes.

Mr. M. R. Masani: If that is so, Sir, I shall now come to the kernel of the matter. My friend here talked of profits. My Honourable friend should know that measures have already been taken to see that excessive profits are not made in aviation by the industrialists. Under the present system of licensing, many forms of control are already in existence in regard to types of aircraft, the qualifications of the crew, the frequency of the services, the time tables, and fares, and so it follows automatically that profits can also be controlled through the control of fares. And I hope they will be controlled. But there is no need for State ownership in order to control profits. In fact, in so trying to hurt the man who is making profits, you will be hurting the country a hundred-fold.

The Honourable the Home Member really came to the root of the matter in his very brief but cogent intervention on the last occasion. He pointed out that our feet are not yet on solid ground and that therefore this is not the time to launch on hazardous ventures in the air. That is true not only politically and administratively, but also economically. Our primary duty to the people of this country is to meet the basic needs of life,—food, clothing, housing, hospitals and schools. Have we performed that duty? Has our administrative machinery been developed sufficiently to give our people even their basic needs? And if, unfortunately it is not, are we entitled to fritter away our energies on projects like this when we are failing in our primary duties? That is the real problem. And I do think that if we apply the test as to whether State control on the one hand or State ownership on the other will give better results in civil aviation and if we put aside pre-conceived ideas about this 'ism' or that, there is only one answer,—and I am confident that Government, when they consider the matter, must come to it,—and that is that the present system of strict regulation of every department and aspect of this service will give the best results. And if they do that, we can then concentrate on our task of doing first things first.

Mr. M. A. F. Hirtzel (Bengal European) Mr Deputy President, civil aviation is a subject in which my Group and I have neither any financial or any managing interest. We are interested solely as members of the public, as users and we are anxious that this debate should not come to a conclusion without our paying tribute to the excellent pioneering work which has been done by civil aviation in recent years. That is a fact, that is an achievement of the greatest importance to which we wish to pay our tribute of praise. And we are most anxious to see that this good work which has been begun and is going ahead should not be ended or impeded or sacrificed to any loose thinking regarding the question of nationalisation. We view this matter strictly from the practical angle. We have a good service and we want to go on having a good service and that, I suggest, is the best test of any transport system.

What has been the history of State management in India? My Honourable friend Mr Joshi interpolated in the last speech "What about the railways?" What about the railways, indeed! I suggest that any impartial critic who takes the trouble to go into the history of railway management will come to the same conclusions that have been come to recently, in a study of the subject, by Professor Natesan. I do not propose to follow Professor Natesan through all the details of a closely reasoned study, but it is very important, I think, that the House should have in mind the main conclusions which Professor Natesan, an impartial Indian critic, comes to. His final conclusion is that three charges can be sustained against State management. In the first place, administrative inefficiency and the creation of vested interests of the administrators in the continuance of a particular type of administration. Secondly, that State services are less responsive than privately operated services to public opinion. Thirdly, that there is a lack of initiative and flexibility.

Now, Sir, these are factors which must strike at the root of any loose and doctrinaire thinking or speaking on the subject of nationalisation, and I suggest that, if these considerations are not taken into account, the future of civil aviation will be equally vitiated. These are considerations which are not primarily political or constitutional. It is reasonable and proper that they should be debated in this House, but the decisions will be the worse rather than the better for the intrusion of political and constitutional considerations. These are administrative problems which require the utmost and most careful consideration.

What, Sir, again, has been the history of road transport? As a result of premature action and premature discussion, road transport today is in a state of suspended animation, if it is not actually dead. That, I consider, is a most unfortunate thing for this country. Road transport held out great hopes for the development of communications in areas where railways and other forms of transport cannot penetrate. But what is going to happen now? When are we going to have a policy? When are we going to have any enterprise? Then, what has been the history of our telephone systems? As you are aware, the telephone system in Calcutta has recently been nationalised. The result has been not an enormous increase in efficiency, but an enormous decrease in efficiency and an enormous increase in complaints. These are all administrative problems and they must be given most careful and most balanced consideration before any decision is taken.

Now, Sir, Diwan Chaman Lall, and the last speaker also, wisely pointed out that time is essential for active consideration and that there are various types of nationalisation, the respective merits of which must be fully weighed. Any mistake at this stage will be fatal not only to civil aviation but to a much more important thing, the building up of that reserve of fully qualified technical manpower which is essential to the even more important subject of India's defence.

For these reasons, we fully support the arguments put forward by Diwan Chaman Lall when moving his amendment that the problems should be fully investigated. In the meantime, we beg the House not to upset the rate of efficient development of civil aviation which is actually taking place. On this note I would end. We are getting what we want, do not take it away from us! Sir, I support Diwan Chaman Lal's amendment.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi (Calcutta and Suburbs, Muhammadan Urban). Mr. Deputy President, if for no other reason than for the very good reason of the Calcutta telephones, I would certainly oppose the nationalisation of anything. But the problem goes a bit beyond the inefficiency of State management. Our country has so far been treated as a raw material producing country and our rulers have never taken care of our interests as the ruled. There has been a definite divergence and opposition between the two interests. Now, with the advent of the new Government and I hope with the advent of the new Constitution as and when it comes, we shall have to begin work from the very beginning, and for doing that I would ask the Honourable the Mover of the Resolution to realise that the State will need the assistance of the people, —call them capitalists, call them labour or call them what you like. Money and labour will be required and, therefore, the State may deal with the wider problems affecting our people leaving smaller affairs to private enterprise.

Sir, nationalisation creates a sense of fear in me. We have not yet arrived at any clear definition of the word "nation" in this country. Different people have different notions of "nationhood". If we follow the principles and institutions which have rendered valuable service elsewhere and try to transplant them into our country, they may not give fruitful results. Until, therefore, we have arrived at a clear definition of what the word 'nation' in India, as to what it means and how the rights and privileges of the many component parts of the people inhabiting this land are going to be safeguarded against possible dangers from huge majorities, "nationalisation" will have to be considered.

I P M rather carefully by the Honourable Mover and by me. Sir, I appreciate that if the Honourable Mover understands by nationalisation "Indianisation" of civil aviation, then I am entirely with him.

Sardar Mangal Singh (East Punjab, Sikh). I do not mean that.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi: If he does not mean that, then he is taking us in to a direction which the Persian Poet has described as

Ein rah ke tu meravi ba Turkistan ast

(The road thou art walking upon leads to Turkistan—that is to destruction and death.) What I am trying to impress upon the Sardar Sahib is that instead of state ownership or state management, let us consider and think in terms of state control. Speaking as a Muslim, I should have supported this doctrinaire principle of nationalisation because I would have got my communal ratio of 25 per cent in state owned civil aviation. But I would like the Sardar Sahib and other Honourable Members in the House to realise that the worm called the Muslim is gradually but steadily turning. He is now paying attention to the economic aspect of life of the country. There are 16 aviation companies out of which 3 are Muslim. I hope they will increase. I feel that if nationalisation comes, we shall not be able to push Muslims into this field. If we do not stop here and the process goes on we shall remain where we have been kept, by the combination of British and Bombay and Calcutta capitalists, in the position of workers and the coolies. Let us have a chance of expanding our activities in this line and also in the general industrial and economic life of the country.

May I also draw your attention to the fact that air travel is a very expensive and exclusive type of travel? It will touch an infinitesimal number of our people. They will want everything that is best. I doubt, after what the Honourable Member representing the European Group in the House, has said whether this expensive travelling will be supplied by the State. Why not leave this small matter, perhaps one per cent of our people, in the hands of private enterprise, capitalists if you like, and certainly technical experts whom they can afford to employ for this highly specialised service. Sir, aviation is progressing and improving from day to day and governments as a rule are hide-bound. If measures of safety, speed and comfort for the travellers can be found, then let the matter go to private enterprise. May I also, Sir, suggest that till now these private companies have not demanded any subsidy? That shows that the Indian tax-payer is not likely to be called upon to pay any money for internal services. After the agreement signed three days ago with America, Government had better be asked to devote attention to external services. We shall allow Americans to come and land in our country but I should like to live and see an Indian plane landing at La Guardia aerodrome, in New York. The two aspects of the matter can go along together. The capitalists or the company and the Government can come to an arrangement by which the profits may be controlled but more than that, the State should control the comfort and safety of the travellers and improvement of aviation in the country from the Himalayas to Cape Comorin. If the private companies would agree to reduce the fares many more would travel by air and, it may be possible that a higher percentage of profits may be available to them. I would ask the Honourable Member to agree to the suggestion that state control of the most rigid type be imposed and not to insist on state ownership and management. It is being done to-day by the Licensing Board over which sits a Judge of the High Court. If the percentage of profits is controlled and the amount is kept low, we shall be able to serve the interests of that very small number of citizens of India who wish to travel by air without injuring those of the vast majority by wasting public funds.

Mr. Satya Narayan Sinha (Darbhanga cum Saran Non-Muhammadan) I move

"That the question be now put."

The Honourable Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar (Member for Communication) Member's right of reply. The question is

"That the question be now put."

Mr. Deputy President: I accept the closure subject to the Government Member's right of reply. The question is

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar (Member for Communication) Sir, at the outset I apologise to Honourable Members of this House for being absent at the time of discussion on the last occasion of this important Resolution. But I am sure they will excuse me because my absence was unavoidable. I had gone to Bihar to do my little bit for the poor victims of Bihar tragedy. It is a thing which is now uppermost in the mind of everybody and therefore I am sure that they will not consider my absence due to my not attaching any importance to this Resolution. As I have already submitted, the Resolution is a very important one and it relates as the Honourable Member has put it to the nationalisation of civil aviation. I believe by civil aviation he means air transport, because certain aspects of civil aviation already are owned by the State. So far as the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lal is concerned, I am gratified to note that it gives a breathing time to the Government so that they may be able to fully consider the pros and cons of this important question and then arrive at a conclusion. It is known to Honourable Members that the interim Government came into office just three months ago and I, as a Member of the Muslim League bloc assumed office less than three weeks ago. After assumption of office for three or four days I tried to understand the machinery that I was called upon to administer and to know the horse which I have to ride. Not only that, I found myself confronted with a very important question that is the Indo American agreement regarding civil aviation. Our negotiators were negotiating an agreement with the representatives of America, and in that connection I had to devote a lot of time for discussions with our own negotiators as well as the representatives of the other side. Meanwhile I had to go to Bengal and from there to Bihar. For one night I came but had again to go back to Bihar. When I came back again the same question was staring me in the face and I had to tackle it, and Honourable Members know that it was finished only day before yesterday when the agreement was concluded and signed. In these circumstances I think Honourable Members will appre-

cate that I had no opportunity whatever to fully consider the implications of this important Resolution; and therefore I am sure no Member of this House will expect me to make a declaration of policy, because policies that are declared without any consideration and very hastily are also forgotten very hastily. And if we are determined to carry out a policy the best and wisest course is that we should fully consider it before making a declaration. Any promises that are given cheaply are also broken very cheaply.

So far the policy of Government has been that which was announced perhaps in May last year, and it is to this effect.

"The policy of the Government of India is generally to promote the development and operation of air transport services, internal and external, by a limited number of sound and reliable private commercial organisations with their own capital and operated under normal commercial principles. In selected cases Government will take a financial interest, but not a controlling interest, in the companies operating their services and appoint a director on the board. This policy does not, however, rule out the operation by the State itself of any air transport service or services in particular cases, and such operation may be by the Central Government, a provincial Government or the Government of an Indian State."

In pursuance of this policy certain rules were framed and, as has been referred to by certain Honourable Members, a Licensing Board has been set up with an eminent judge of the Lahore High Court presiding over it and with experienced members, to consider the question of grant of licenses. Many applications have come to them, I will deal with them later on, but for the time being I must point out that so far as the question of control is concerned, in those rules some controls are provided. I am not in a position to say whether they are sufficiently effective but I believe they are fairly effective. Inter alia they provide for fixation of a per mile rate with a minimum and maximum, fixation of stoppages, approval of frequencies, approval of type of aircraft and equipment, financial stability of those who want to get licenses, and also approval of the personnel even if it is adequate, and even if these gentlemen have got licenses, unless they are up to the mark the Licensing Board will probably not grant licenses.

This is the position in which we find ourselves. But it appears—and it is quite natural in a poor country like India where an overwhelming majority is of the haves and only a few gentlemen have swollen pockets—that there is a cry for nationalisation of industries and not of civil aviation only,—nationalisation of all industries, particularly the bigger industries. The phrase "nationalisation of industries" is given different interpretation by different persons. Like the Chancellor's foot, its meaning differs from man to man. Some say nationalisation means this, some say nationalisation means that, and it was even said on the floor of this House this morning by Mr. Masani that there is great difference about the interpretation of the word between the compilers of dictionaries. But the fundamental principle, as it appears to a layman like myself, is this that people want that these industries should not be under the control of State and the profit from such concerns should not go into the pockets of private enterprisers. That is the spirit of the phrase.

Mr. Deputy President: It is now time for Lunch adjournment, but as I am told there is no other Resolution to be moved, I propose that we may sit a little longer and finish this so as not to come back after Lunch. The Honourable Member may proceed.

The Honourable Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar: I was giving my interpretation of the word 'nationalisation'. What I understood by the term is that the real object is to have control vested in a national organisation which is the State, and the object is that the profit that accrues from such concern should go to the public exchequer so that it may be utilised for the service of the poor. How to achieve it is a question which requires thorough examination. It is not very easy to suddenly take up these questions. Rome was not built in a day though nowadays it can be destroyed in a day. But we are here for construction and not for destruction. Therefore I submit that this House, composed as it is of very responsible and learned gentlemen, will support me in this view that Government should be given sufficient time to consider this question and to examine it.

[Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar]

In connection with nationalisation several suggestions have been put forward from time to time. One is that there should be State control, another party says there should be control plus financial participation, a third section says we must have control as well as controlling interest, a fourth class says that there should be completely State-owned services, yet another class says that for the time being we may allow internal civil aviation to be developed by private enterprise, and as we have no external aviation at present the Government may consider that so far as this part of civil aviation is concerned it should start as a State-owned service. Such and similar other points have been put forward from time to time for the consideration of Government. Then there are many other things which socialists like my Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh would like to be nationalised. The question is, what should be the time for a particular kind of industry to be nationalised and which industry should be given priority in this respect, because we are not to consider a thing bit by bit. We have to consider the whole field—and the socialists particularly should consider the whole field—and select and give priority to those things which have got greater implications and which apply to a greater number of people. Therefore so far as the question of priority is concerned, from that point of view also I think the Honourable Mover of the Resolution will concede to Government this much right that they should decide which particular industry should be nationalised first and which should be nationalised later on. If it is expected that everything is to be nationalised all at once then I must point out to him with all humbleness that so far as this Government is concerned, it is not so rich, it has not got such unlimited resources that it can take up the whole of the programme all at once. These are some of the difficulties that I want to point out for the consideration of the Honourable Member and it would appear after considering them even cursorily that the question is not so easy as some gentlemen think, and therefore I would submit that the Honourable the Mover will agree with me that it is not desirable at present to tie the hands of Government. In his speech the Honourable mover said that he did not want to embarrass the Government, and I am thankful to the Members of this House that they also said that they did not want to tie the hands of the Government and they did not want to embarrass the Government. Of course everybody was at liberty to put forward his suggestions for the guidance of the Government. If I have got a correct copy of what my Honourable friend, Mr Joshi, said on this question, namely that the House has got the right to make suggestions for the guidance of the Government, let me tell him that I concede that right to the House. Even if I do not concede, the House has got the right to guide the Government, and the Government will certainly give full consideration to whatever is said on the floor of the House.

I would not deal with some of the criticisms that have been made about State-managed affairs. Here this morning, the Honourable Member representing the European Group said "look at the fate of Calcutta telephones", look at the fate of this, and look at the fate of that—it deteriorated because of nationalization. So far as nationalization of Calcutta telephone is concerned, may be that it was not on account of nationalization that the telephone service is not working properly it may be due to war because it was nationalized during the war. Like other things it was probably the effect of war which did not sufficiently make the enterprise a success. I am not prepared to admit that because State got it, it deteriorated.

Sir, so far as the remarks of my Honourable friend, Mr Abdur Rahman Siddiqi, are concerned about the word 'nation' and 'nationalization' I will tell him that everything is in the melting pot. Nobody knows that when the question of state-ownership comes up—I will avoid the word nationalization—it will be the state ownership of the Centre, or the state ownership of a province, or a group or any other unit. This nobody can say. But so far as the fundamental principle of nationalization is concerned, I for one—and here I am speaking on my own behalf—consider it to be an absolutely salutary one. And, Sir, I think there are very few people in India—I mean Indians—who will be opposed to this principle, but as I pointed out the only question is the method, the manner and the time of achieving this objective

Sir, in view of all these things I appeal to my Honourable friend, Sardar Mangal Singh, to kindly withdraw his Resolution and not insist upon its passage at this juncture. So far as the amendment of my Honourable friend, Diwan Chaman Lal, is concerned, the views that I have expressed will clearly show that I am in general agreement with the substance of it, but there are certain words in this amendment which would embarrass the Government—on the question of time, and in some other manner also—and therefore I would request him also, since I have declared on behalf of the Government as a Member in charge of this Department that the Government is in general agreement with the substance of his amendment, not to press his amendment to vote

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) The amendment is innocuous

The Honourable Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar: If he reads it again I think my Honourable friend will find that if the object is to give sufficient time to the Government to consider it, then the amendment does create some difficulty

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: 'Early' is a matter of interpretation

The Honourable Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar: Yes, 'early' is a vague term, and it might be interpreted in different ways. Therefore, I would submit that as I have announced on behalf of Government that the Government agrees with the substance of the amendment, then why tie down the Government to a particular phraseology and press for it

Before closing my observations, I will make a few submissions regarding the points that were raised by various speakers on the last occasion. The Honourable Sardar Mangal Singh wanted to know how many applications have been submitted to the Licensing Board. I might inform him that 86 applications by 17 companies for 74 routes have been submitted

Another point about which he wanted an assurance from the Government was that if internal aviation is for the time being left to the private enterprise, then in that case the House will have an opportunity of discussion if there is any air crash. I would point out for his information that under the Rules certain duties have been cast on the Civil Aviation Department of the Government—the duties of inspection, of approval about the air worthiness of aircrafts, and all that—and in that connection I am sure the members will have an opportunity to discuss such points on the floor of the House

Seth Govind Das Sahib referred to Govan Brothers who were managing agents of one of the two big companies dealing with civil aviation. My information is that the interests of Govan Bros. now vest mostly in Indians, and some big financier of India has purchased their interests. So far as the Directors are concerned, all of them are Indians. Doctor Zia Uddin Sahib wanted information about control of rates and fares. I have already submitted that under the present rules the Licensing Board can control the rates and fares. Moreover there will be no question of monopoly of which he had some misapprehension

My brother from the Frontier Province, Khan Abdul Ghani Khan of course referred to the basic principle of nationalization and about that I have already made remarks

Rao Bahadur Siva Raj suggested that there should be some training of the pilots. For his information I may point out that the Government are subsidising flying clubs and very shortly a training centre will be opened. Opening of other training centres is also under consideration. So far as these Centres are concerned, they will train pilots, radio staff, aerodrome staff, and engineers

There is one small point in the speech of Honourable Diwan Chaman Lal. While he was supporting his amendment, he made a casual remark that in India there is no arrangement for manufacturing even a small part of an aeroplane.

[Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar].

With due respect I would submit that probably the information of the Honourable Member is not correct. There is the Hindustan Factory at Bangalore, two-third of the interest of which vest in the Government of India and one third in the Mysore Government. Over and above this two third interest the Government have invested some more money in it. Very material parts are manufactured in that factory.

There was one matter which probably the Honourable Mr. Siva Raj mentioned and that was about communal representation. One of the arguments that is advanced in support of nationalization is this that if it becomes a state-owned affair, then every community will get representation according to quota fixed for each. At present complaints are that some of the communities are taboo. I would only sound a note of warning to those who are dealing with civil aviation that they should take note of such complaints and should not give any cause for complaint to any particular community. At this stage this is all that I can say in this connection.

I am very thankful to the Honourable Members for their learned and informative speeches in connection with this resolution. Different points of view have been very ably expressed and I assure them that all the points that have been raised will be fully considered and when the Government has to form conclusion and the time is ripe enough for the formulation of policy, then all these points will surely prove as guiding factors in the formulation of such policies.

Sardar Mangal Singh: Sir, I have the right of reply.

Mr. Deputy President: That was when I put the question and the closure was accepted, not after the Government Member has spoken.

Sardar Mangal Singh: The question was not put. Nobody knows that the question was put.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member on the Government Benches has replied.

Sardar Mangal Singh: The question was not put. The Chief Whip shouted that the question be put and as no other speaker got up you did not put the question and under these circumstances I have a right of reply.

Mr. Deputy President: I have put the question. I was told by Honourable Members that there was no other Member getting up and therefore I need not divide the House. Otherwise I would have taken the votes. I said "The question is that the question be now put" and I looked towards the Honourable Member and he did not get up.

Diwan Chaman Lal (West Punjab Non-Muhammadian): On a point of order, Sir, if closure is carried the only person who has got a right of reply is the mover of the motion.

Mr. Deputy President: The Mover has got a right of reply. After the Mover has replied, then the Government Member has got the right of reply otherwise not.

Several Honourable Members: No, No.

Mr. Deputy President: The Standing Order says

"A member who has moved a motion may speak again by way of reply, and if the motion is moved by a non official member, the Member of the Government to whose department the matter relates may, with the permission of the President speak (whether he has previously spoken in the debate or not) after the mover has replied."

The words are "after the mover has replied".

Diwan Chaman Lal: Therefore the position is this if the mover of the Resolution desires to exercise his right of reply in spite of the fact that the Honourable Member has spoken, the Honourable Member will then be given, if you so desire, his right of reply again.

The Honourable Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar: Sir, I am not an expert of parliamentary procedure but if I have correctly understood it, the standing order which you have read out means this that the Member of Government has got a right to speak once before the closure motion is made and once after the closure motion is carried, in that case he can speak after the reply of the mover, if he wants to give a reply. When I got up after the closure motion the learned mover would have been perfectly within his rights to say that he has a right to reply. When I got up after the closure the Honourable Mover could have said that he wanted to exercise his right to speak and that I should speak later on. I have spoken now and though I do not grudge him that right if Mr. Deputy President accords him. Under the Standing Order he cannot speak. I am only giving my reading of this rule. It gives the last word to the Member of the Government after the closure motion.

Mr. Deputy President: I have given my ruling as the rule has been interpreted in this House on many occasions. As a matter of fact this happened in my own case in 1921 and I was debarred by Sir Frederick Whyte at that time and since then I have seen that the same ruling has been applied in this House. I am afraid the Honourable Member has lost his chance, which he had.

Sardar Mangal Singh: The closure motion was neither put nor carried. Ask the Reporter.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member knows perfectly well that the Chan did put the question "The question is that the question be put" and from all sides of the House nobody wanted to get up. I did not think it necessary to take the vote of the House but the question was put. Of course if the Honourable Member had got up then, under this rule he had the right to speak. On the present occasion the Honourable Member comes under this rule and I am afraid this cannot be allowed. If however the Honourable Member wants to withdraw his resolution, then I may permit him to do so.

Sardar Mangal Singh: I have not been given an opportunity to reply to the debate and I cannot say anything now.

Sri M. Ananthamaynam Ayyangar: There is no difference in this particular case, because the Honourable Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar is not a member of this House. He has no right to speak except that he has got the right to address this House. But he cannot exercise the right of a Member of the House. He can only address the House and the Honourable the Mover has the right of reply.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member probably did not listen to the wording of the Standing Order. The wording is not a member of the House but the wording is "member of the Government to whose department the matter relates". It is not necessary that the member should be a member of this House.

The Honourable Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar: Sir, with your permission, I would submit that if the Honourable the Mover feels inclined to withdraw his Resolution, then it will be in the interest of the House if you in exercise of your special powers give him the right to explain why he is withdrawing his Resolution.

Mr. Deputy President: That can be given, but not the right of reply. If the Honourable Member desires to withdraw the Resolution he can explain why he wants to withdraw.

Sardar Mangal Singh: Sir, I am at a disadvantage when I have to address a hungry House and I do not propose to detain Honourable Members longer here. In view of the remarks made by the Honourable Members on the Treasury Benches that they have taken charge of the Government at a difficult time and that they have had no time to consider all these things, I do not want to hustle the Government into a position about which they have had no time to consider But I would request them while they are considering this question to keep in view that certain lines should be operated by the State and certain lines may be given to private companies We will then be able to judge the results after sometime

Another point which I would like to urge is that in entering into contracts with the companies the contracts should be short ones, so that we may be able to review the policy if necessary

With these words I seek the permission of the House to withdraw my Resolution and if I may say so, I would like to accept the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lal

(The Resolution was, by the leave of the Assembly withdrawn.)

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 16th November, 1946

RE-ENTERING OF INHABITANTS IN BRITISH RESERVE, MANIPUR

(a), (b), (c) and (f). Though certain restrictions were formerly imposed, the present position is that indicated in the orders passed by the Governor of Assam on 14th August 1946, a copy of which is placed on the table

(d) Detailed information is not readily available. The local authorities have however, passed orders that the houses and other properties and any available money due on account of rent etc., should be made over to the former owners.

(e) Yes, and the Government of Burma have taken necessary action regarding the restoration of property to the right owners

ORDER OF THE GOVERNOR OF ASSAM

Shillong, the 14th August 1946

READ—Petitions of certain Indian merchants as in the enclosed list and from other persons for permission for return to the British Reserve in Manipur.

ORDER—His Excellency the Governor is pleased to order that—

(1) As there is no law excluding foreigners the petitioners and other Indian traders including those who never forfeited their right to the pottas held by them, should be allowed ingress into the British Reserve in Manipur

(2) Applications for new leases of lands they formerly held should be considered sympathetically by the Political Agent if the land is not required for other purposes.

(3) Such of the petitioners and other persons, already given permission to return to Imphal, as may be granted new leases should be liable to pay their land revenues and taxes in arrear, if any, for old ones, and this should be a condition precedent to the grant of a new lease

(4) Only one shop site should be settled with each trader with an additional site for a garage where necessary

(5) They should be allowed possession of their houses and other properties in the British Reserve in Manipur and, those who present such claims, be given any available money due to them e.g., rent collected from the Military authorities or other tenants. But they should be left to claim for further redress if there are any parties whom they can sue and to file judicial applications in the Court of the Political Agent in Manipur.

(6) The above orders should take effect immediately

INDIAN NAVY (DISCIPLINE) (AMENDMENT) BILL

Mr. G. S. Bhalja, (Secretary, Defence Department) Sir, I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, be taken into consideration"

Sir, this is a simple Bill and I hope it will prove non-controversial. Its object is to amend Section 90 of the Naval Discipline Act, which forms the First Schedule to the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934. This section was found deficient in several respects and therefore during the war Section 90 was amended by clause (d) of sub-section (5) of section 6 of the Defence of India Act which expired on the 30th September 1946. The amendment has been continued in force for another six months by section 2(1)(m) of the Emergency Provisions (Continuance) Ordinance, 1946. This Bill is intended to replace the Ordinance.

I said that Section 90 of the Naval Discipline Act was deficient in several respects. That section reads

"With respect to vessels in His Majesty's service in time of war, whether belonging to His Majesty or not, which are not wholly manned by naval ratings, but being either armed or under the command of an officer in His Majesty's naval service, the following provisions shall take effect if in any case the Governor General in Council thinks fit so to direct, and where such direction is given the same shall be specified in the ship's articles

(1) Every person borne on the books of any such vessel shall be subject to the Act,

(6) The Officer Commanding the Indian Navy and senior naval officer in His Majesty's service shall have the same powers over the officers and crew of every such vessel as they have for the time being over the officers and crew of any of His Majesty's ships."

Sir, the Act as it stands at present applies only in time of war but an emergency may arise before the outbreak of hostilities when officers and men of merchant ships other than naval ships may have to be taken up by Government for naval purposes, and yet such personnel would not come under the Naval Discipline Act. It is therefore necessary to remove the words "in time of war" from the present section.

Secondly, as it stands at present, the section refers to the ships companies, crews and officers of the merchant vessels which are taken up by government, and applies to them, as ship's companies, the Naval Discipline Act. It frequently happens that men serving in one of the vessels have to be transferred to another vessel or sent ashore for training purposes or to a hospital. It has been held that strictly speaking in such cases the Naval Discipline Act will not apply to those men. This is obviously an unsatisfactory position. So long as these men are in the service of government, they must remain subject to the Naval Discipline Act. This difficulty will be overcome by the Bill, which will apply to all men who enter into an agreement to serve government.

Thirdly, difficulties have arisen as to the exact status of men when they transfer from their former occupation to the naval service. In their former occupation, they may have been officers, chief petty officers, petty officers or ratings, and it was not clear what exactly the position was when they came under the Naval Discipline Act. The difficulty will be overcome by the proposed amendment which gives power to the Central Government to direct by order to declare the persons in question as officers or chief petty officers or petty officers or ratings as the case may be.

It should be noted that the Bill proceeds entirely on the voluntary principle, and no man can come under its operation unless he voluntarily enters into an agreement with the Central Government to serve His Majesty. There is nothing in this Bill which can possibly be said to savour of compulsion. This is made clear by the opening sentence of the proposed section 2 which reads as follows

"If—(and I am emphasising the word 'if')—any person who would not otherwise be subject to this Act enters into an engagement with the Central Government to serve His Majesty, etc., etc., and agrees to become subject to this Act upon entering into the engagement, that person shall be subject to the Naval Discipline Act."

I hope that this brief explanation will convince the House that there is no element of compulsion whatsoever in this Bill, and I hope also that the House will feel that there is nothing controversial in it.

The necessity for the enactment is obvious. I have said that there were certain deficiencies to be removed. I must emphasise that the first and foremost duty of the Defence Department is to keep plans ready for the defence of the country, and therefore I hope there will be no hesitation on the part of this House to pass this Bill, which I again emphasise proceeds on a voluntary basis, and which is really not controversial.

Mr. President: Motion moved.

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

Miss Maniben Kara (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I have two amendments to this Bill, and I would seek your advice in this matter, whether you would like me to move both these amendments at the same time, or whether you will allow the one for circulation to be moved first. I would like the Bill to be circulated for the reasons which I shall be stating just now.

Mr. President: It is a matter for the Honourable Member's choice. I do not see how she can move both at one time. She can move any amendment she likes.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official): May I say this, that if the first amendment fails, the necessity for moving the second amendment cannot disappear?

Mr. President: That is a different thing from saying that both may be moved, one after the other, at the same time.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I think my honourable friend, Miss Maniben Kara, wanted to know whether you will permit her, if the first amendment fails, to move the second amendment. That is really her point.

Mr. President: That will be decided when the point arises, not now.

Miss Maniben Kara: I beg to move.

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 1st March, 1947."

Mr. President: I might just inform the Honourable Member that in case the first amendment fails and she chooses to move the second amendment, there will not be a repetition of the same debate again.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Let the debate not be repeated, but she may be allowed to move.

Mr. President: Yes.

Miss Maniben Kara: I listened very carefully and attentively to the Honourable Member who moved this Bill, and I do not intend at this stage either to go into the merits or demerits of the Bill. Looking at the aims and objects of this Bill, this measure has been provided only for the case of emergency. This Bill, as you will see, affects the lives of more than 2,00,000 seamen and officers, and I am not convinced that there is any such hurry for passing this Bill, which will very vitally affect the lives of the Indian seamen, and the Indian officers. At this stage I do not intend to go into the merits of the question but I would once again insist that in this country where we have got big organisations of seamen and the organisation of officers, it is but natural that those people would like to know before any permanent measure goes on the statute book.

The Honourable Member has tried to show that by bringing in this Bill, the conditions of the seamen will not be vitally affected. I would just like to point out that after all the merchant seamen and the marine officers who are [Miss Maniben Kara] working with private shipping companies have also their obligations, because the Act of 1923, section 30(e) says

"The agreement may be made for a voyage of the ship or, if the voyages of the ship average less than six months in duration, may be made to extend over two or more voyages, and agreements so made are in this Act referred to as running agreements."

This means that the merchant navy personnel has to enter into some sort of agreement with the private company and when these people are all of a sudden coming under the navy discipline, I am not saying about the details as to what might happen to them, but certainly this is a method which is of vital necessity to the Indian seamen and the Indian officers. I happen to be connected with the maritime union of India and I happened to discuss this Bill with some of my friends who happen to be in Delhi, and from their information I could gather that they very strongly feel that this Bill is of a nature requiring some time for thinking. I would appeal to the Honourable Member also and point out that in his statement of objects and reasons he has said that the ordinance has already been extended for another six months. This Ordinance would have expired in September but it has already been extended for a further period of six months, and if that is so, I would appeal to this Honourable House to accept my suggestion for circulation, so that it will give time to maritime unions and the Indian Seamen's Union to consider this Bill, which is going to be of a permanent nature. Sir, I would also draw the attention of Honourable Members to this fact that during this war not only in this country but in other countries also the merchant navy services were taken over by the Government without the loss of any of their privileges. Those ships were chartered by Government which allowed the Indian seamen to have all the facilities and the freedom they had while serving the company. Even though they were essential services, their right to form trade unions were not taken away. The wages of the Indian seamen were anyway much higher than the naval ratings and were not reduced. I am not suggesting what might happen even under this Bill but the provisions are so important that they must be taken into account and the constituents must be given a chance to give their opinion.

I would further point out that the seamen of this country can be regarded as the most advanced part of the working classes from the point of view of political consciousness, because they have got a chance of coming into contact with so many other nations and the seamen of other countries and whether they are going to express their opinions for or against this Bill we do not know. This is not the time to consider the merits and demerits of the question. The points which I have raised may be satisfied by the Honourable Member. I do not know about it. But I have not had a discussion on this subject with many trade union people, with my seamen and my officers, and therefore I would appeal to the Honourable Member not to be in a hurry. The ordinance is already there. It has been extended for a further period of six months and this motion can be taken up in the next budget session and I would therefore request the Honourable Member even to postpone the consideration of this question. This would give time to the various organisations to read this Bill. For all I know they may not have much to say about it. There may be no amendments but I cannot understand why there should be such a hurry, especially as the Bill is going to vitally affect the lives of more than two million seamen and about 900 officers. In the last war even without this Bill the Indian merchant navy rendered all possible help. They have done very well in the last war. I am not prepared to give up all those rights and privileges which were given to them. Even in the Trade Disputes Bill Mr Griffiths did not discuss the merits and demerits of the measure. He took up the point that such a comprehensive Bill should be circulated and his constituents must be given time. In view of the fact that an Ordinance is already there, I would appeal to the Honourable Member not to be in a hurry.

Mr. President: Amendment moved

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 1st March, 1947"

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Mr. President. I rise to support this motion. The Honourable Member in charge of the Bill did not tell us what the urgency was for passing this measure during this short session. He had introduced the Bill only recently. We have hardly had time to study it and we are asked to pass it within this short period. Ordinarily when a Bill is introduced in a short session of this kind, Government naturally give time to the public, which is affected. The public affected by this Bill are ignorant seamen. I am not talking of the officers. They are educated. They may read newspapers. The seamen affected do not know about the existence of this Bill in this legislature. Not only that. The seamen are not like land workers. They are most of the time on the sea and naturally they must be given longer time. Many of them may not be in India at present. They may be outside on the sea. They may be near or they may be at a distance and when you pass a measure affecting the lives of seamen you must give them much longer time than the time which is ordinarily given to land workers. If a measure of this kind is to be passed in a hurry, the Honourable Member must make out a very strong case. So far as I could follow him he has not said a single word about the urgency of this measure. This is a measure which takes away the civic rights of certain citizens. If a man who is working on a merchant navy goes to a State navy, he loses many of his civic rights. He becomes a part of the army. The army discipline Act applies to him and therefore this is not an ordinary kind of measure and naturally the people affected must be given a chance to express their views. I therefore feel that the representative of the Government of India has failed in his duty to the House, in that, he did not make out a case for urgency. I would ask the Honourable Member not to treat this House in this manner. They should show consideration to this House. After reading this Bill in the light of the original Act, I must say that I do not follow the whole implications of this Bill. This Bill is an amendment to the original Act which provides for the application of the Naval Discipline Act to the Indian Navy. The Statement of Objects and Reasons to this Bill states. This Bill is intended to amend section 90 of the Naval Discipline Act as set forth in the First Schedule to the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934. Then, Sir, within the short time at my disposal, I secured a copy of this Act of 1934 and I looked at the Schedule. In the Schedule I have found that this naval discipline measure not only includes this Act of 1934 but along with it there are some British laws. The Schedule mentions I, George IV and I, William IV etc. I could not myself follow them and I tried to secure a copy of them but unfortunately I could not get them. Now, if you ask me to vote on a Bill which amends an Act and which also includes two British pieces of legislation, I must know what those British pieces of legislation are. I do not know whether the Honourable Member has got copies of these Acts. If he has, I would like him to read them for the benefit and instruction of this House. If he has not got them, what right has he to ask us to pass this Bill, which amends an Act which includes some sections of British legislation of which he does not possess a copy.

Sir, time at the disposal of members for study is limited and we can only spend an hour or two for that purpose. I could not get hold of that British law. My fear is that some of these sections affect the wages of those seamen, who are transferred from private service into Government armed forces. They also affect their civic rights, such as, the rights of being members of the trade union. There is no mention in this Bill regarding the rights of remaining members of a trade union. We do not know from the Bill itself whether these rights continue. The Honourable Member may give me an assurance that they continue, but how am I to know that this will be so? I have no time to study all that is mentioned here.

Similarly, about their wages. They are getting at present, I have no doubt in my mind, much larger wages in the mercantile navy than the wages paid in the Government naval service. Now, we do not know what is to happen to their wages. The Honourable Member has not said anything whether they can get the same wages or not. He mentioned one point which is of some importance, namely, that the man enters into agreement voluntarily. I do not say that this is not important. But what is exactly the meaning of that voluntary contract? I do not know it myself. My Honourable friend Miss Maniben Kara has stated that these seamen have long contracts with their employers, sometimes of six months duration, and the contract has to be renewed sometime up to 18 months or two years. We want to study the implication of this. The man has entered into contract with the owner of the ship. As an emergency, they take charge of the ship. I would like to know whether these men who have a contract with the owner of that ship are free as soon as the ship is taken by Government. So far as my knowledge goes when a ship is taken by the Government in an emergency the men naturally go along with that ship and they have hardly any choice at that time to leave the ship on account of the old contract which these men had with the owner of the ship. The Honourable Member said something about the transfer and he said that there are difficulties in the way of transfer. What he implies is that there is no difficulty in compelling the men to go into the Government service on the ship on which they have been serving, but if the Government wants to transfer them to another ship, then only difficulty arises. But why should a man enter into Government naval service who had made a contract with his employers only to serve as a mercantile naval man? Therefore all these things must require consideration, and the House must not allow the Government to pass this Bill unless the Government shows the emergency. The Honourable Member said that the Act as it is only gives them power during the war, I agree that it is necessary that the Government may possess extraordinary powers during the war. But the war has ended and even then the Honourable Member wants to possess not temporary but permanent powers. The Honourable Member has made it quite clear in the Statement of Objects and Reasons that he possesses those powers till the end of March. He has extended those powers by Ordinance. What is going to happen between now and January 15th or 20th when the next session of the Legislature will meet? Does he expect another war between now and the 20th January? If he does not expect a war, what is the urgency for passing this legislation because he possesses all those powers till the end of March? Has he got no time to pass this legislation as soon as the Legislature meets on January 20th? Between the 20th of January and the end of March there is enough time to pass this legislation. I, therefore, suggest to the House that they should not support this method of passing legislation. That is to say, to pass it in a hurry especially when it affects adversely the civic rights of the citizens of this country. I hope the advisers of the Honourable Member will give him the advice not to insist upon the passing of this measure in this session because it is a wrong thing to do. If he does not take this advice and does not follow the wise precept of not hurrying a measure of this kind, the House should not give him the permission to consider this Bill at this stage.

Sir, I have not said much about the merits of the Bill because I frankly confess that in spite of my efforts to study the Bill, I could not follow the whole Bill thoroughly. Therefore, I thought it was wrong on my part to speak on the merits of this Bill.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor, Non-Muhammadan Rural). Sir, my Honourable friend evidently has not been able to trace out that portion of the Act which this amending Bill seeks to amend. The Schedule which is referred to consists of the whole Naval Discipline Act passed by the Parliament in the United Kingdom. That has been made a Schedule. The Indian Naval Discipline Act of 1934 consists of only three sections and sets out the entire Naval Discipline Act of the United Kingdom as a Schedule to that Act. It has now been printed and is in the Library of the House. I have got a copy of Indian Navy Discipline Act of 1954 The Schedule to that Act is the very Act, the Naval Discipline Act passed by the United Kingdom. There was no difficulty in having it and I have got it here.

As regards the serious nature of the Bill itself, I would tell my Honourable friend that I wanted to make it a little more strict but having regard to his objection and the objections of my Honourable friend M^{rs} Maniben Kara I thought it might be left as it is. It seems to be to be absolutely innocuous. I should like to tell him what it means. In times of war it is open to the Government of this country to commandeer any of the merchant ships. When they do so, all the merchant ships and the entire company become part and parcel of the Indian Navy and become subject to the Indian Naval Discipline Act. In times like these, nobody can predict when the war will actually break out, but even before the war breaks out, the country has to make the necessary preparation. Therefore, to be on the safe side, they have brought in this Bill to allow the Government to commandeer any particular merchant ship for the purpose of war. All that is set out in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. This Act will be brought into existence and used as and when hostilities break out. They cannot wait till hostilities actually break out and then bring before the Assembly a Bill asking for those powers.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: What is the hurry now?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Even if one year is given, you are not going to improve the Bill, possibly on taking further advice you might make the provisions stricter and harsher. The Bill as it is at present is quite innocuous. There are two kinds of contracts which the seamen have to enter into. By the first agreement they enter into service with the merchant navy and from there they are transferred to the navy and ipso facto they come under the jurisdiction of the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act. Now they enter into another agreement with the navy people. They agree to subject themselves to the Indian Naval Discipline Act. It is not as if they are taken on to the navy, they are directly recruited to the forces without any further agreement. By the mere fact of his appointment to the Navy, he is subject to the Naval Discipline Act. As I said, his first contract is with the merchant vessel. Another opportunity is given to him when he enters the navy to find out whether he will be governed by the ordinary merchant seaman's Act or by the Naval Discipline Act. Therefore there are two opportunities for him. It is open to him to change the service and at the same time not commit himself to the Naval Discipline Act. He may or he may not be bound. This morning I read the clause twice simply to find out whether the provisions about the naval discipline should be there or not. It is well known to the House that at time of war or necessity merchant ships are taken over by the State as naval units. When once the merchant ships are taken over, then all the staff employed in the merchant ships automatically come over to the navy and they are subject to the Naval Discipline Act. If this provision is not enforced, then it may be that the seamen might join the enemy. The Naval Discipline Act constitutes a court of martial law. The seaman may refuse to hoist the flag, he may not object the orders of the officer commanding, or he may communicate with the enemy and march over to the enemy. These are the difficulties. When once the question is decided that the seaman must be transferred to the naval forces and should become one of the naval officers, then to that extent he must be brought under the Navy discipline. Far from tightening the grip, these provisions are dangerously in favour of seamen for whom both my Honourable friends are contending. Even if they get a thousand eyes and keep their eyes wide open, no mistake can be found against this provision that the seamen should come under the Naval Discipline Act. If they are anxious that this clause should be removed, then let the seamen continue under private owners of merchant vessels. But if they want to continue to serve in merchant ships after they are taken over by the navy, they must choose between two alternatives, continue in service and come under the Naval Discipline Act or leave the service. If they choose to continue in service even after the merchant ships are taken over by the navy, then they automatically come under the navy discipline. Otherwise, if they are given liberty to be aloof from Naval Discipline, then it is not in the interest of the country, it is not to the safety of India. The seamen ought to be thankful for this provision in this Act, because by putting in this clause, the seamen are given another opportunity to think over and decide whether they would transfer their allegiance to the naval forces and come under the naval discipline or not. I cannot see any good coming by circulating this Bill all round the country and I would suggest to my Honourable friend not to press the motion for circulation.

As regards the question of urgency, I would only point out to my Honourable friend Mr Joshi that he must know this better. He is constantly attending International conference as delegate for India. He is aware of the ferment all over the world. Even in the last Paris conference, they have not come to any decision about terms of peace. Nobody seems to be anxious about restoring peace to the world. Every country is arming itself to the teeth. Why should India alone lag behind? We have already suffered for over 150 years by the British rule. Hostilities may begin at any time and the path of prudence dictates that we should be ready for any emergency. Too much care and caution is not bad. I therefore request my Honourable friend to allow this innocuous Bill to go through the House and not to press either the circulation motion or the motion for reference of the Bill to the Select Committee. The seamen are given ample opportunities in the shape of two contracts to think over whether they would change over to naval discipline or whether they would remain under the merchant ships.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Leader of the House) Sir, when I saw this Bill for the first time, it seemed to me completely innocuous and non-controversial. When I see it again, it still seems to be completely non-controversial and to be a simple measure which can hardly lead to much argument. One point was raised which was casually mentioned here. The point was that if seamen are taken over by the navy, they would have to leave their Unions. Now, Sir, that was an important point. I referred this point to the mover of this motion and he assured me that they would not be obliged to leave their Unions as seamen. Naturally as temporary Members of the Navy, they would not function in the Navy in regard to naval matters in that way, but they would continue as Members of their Unions. So, one of the difficulties that I had, was removed, and I saw no further difficulty. Nor do I see that normally speaking a very simple measure of this kind should be circulated all over the country. I would ask the House and my Honourable friend who proposed this amendment to consider this matter and not carry it further. Nevertheless, I feel that in such matters, Government should not just press its way and get any Bill through, if there is no harm done by a slight adjournment or postponement thereof. I would therefore suggest to my Honourable friend the mover of the Bill that he might accept the amendment for the appointment of a Select Committee provided that Select Committee reports before the next session of the Legislature.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: So far as I am concerned, I shall be satisfied with a Select Committee and the report should be submitted before the next session.

Miss Maniben Kara: I shall be satisfied if the matter goes to the Select Committee.

I beg leave to withdraw my amendment for circulation.

The amendment was by leave of the Assembly withdrawn.

Miss Maniben Kara: As regards the Motion regarding the Select Committee, I have not yet obtained the consent of Members for including their names in the Select Committee.

Mr. President: This matter may be postponed for the time being. When we reassemble after lunch, this motion may be taken up and in the meanwhile the consent of the Members may be obtained.

REQUISITIONED LAND (CONTINUANCE OF POWERS) BILL

Mr. G. S. Bhalja (Secretary, Defence Department) Sir, in regard to the motion standing in my name relating to the Bill to provide for the continuance of certain emergency powers in relation to requisitioned land, the Select Committee has made important changes in the Bill and Government wish to have time to appreciate the full implications of these changes. Therefore I do not propose to make any further motion in this session.

Mr. Ahmed E. H. Jaffer (Bombay Southern Division Muhammadan Rural) Sir, what happens to the old lands we are already having? Those must be handed back immediately. Will the landlords wait until such time as the Bill sees the light of day?

Mr. Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce) Sir, if Government want permission to withdraw the motion on the agenda I have something to say on this.

Mr. President: There is no question of any motion being before the House. It is only included in the agenda and is not being moved.

Mr. Manu Subedar: I want to know whether in the interval when they acquire land they will give effect to the equitable principle which the Select Committee has urged in the Bill and they will not proceed to use their other powers of acquisition at the six-year-old value for the farmers whose land they have taken.

Mr. G. S. Bhalja: Sir, I think a discussion is not permissible when a motion is not moved, but if you wish.

Mr. President: I do not propose to have a discussion on this point. The position is clear—the status quo remains whatever it is.

INDIAN TEA CONTROL (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar (Commerce Member) Sir, I beg to move

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tea Control Act, 1938, be taken into consideration."

This Bill is a very simple one. Under the Indian Tea Control Act, 1938, the Central Government is required to issue a notification each year specifying the total quantity of tea which can be exported from India during the financial year. This is done under section 13 of the Indian Tea Control Act, 1938. As soon as this quantity is specified it is distributed by the Indian Tea Licensing Committee, a body constituted for the purpose under the Indian Tea Control Act, among the registered tea estates in proportion to their crop basis, and thereafter a tea estate which has been allocated an export quota becomes eligible to obtain in lieu and to the extent of its export quota, an export licence from the Tea Licensing Committee, to cover the export of tea. Under this Act there are two kinds of licences which are given, one is known as the ordinary export licence, and the other is known as the special export licence. The ordinary export licence is given for the purpose of exporting tea during the financial year in which it is due. But if for any reason any tea estate which is given an export licence, for example, for the year 1946-47, is unable to export its full quota during that financial year, the same estate is allowed under the Act before the 14th April following (i.e., 14th April, 1947), to apply for a special export licence. Now the period of the validity of the special export licence under the old Act of 1938, was two months only, that is, it would expire normally by the end of May, 1947. But during the war it was felt that there were certain difficulties in the way of the tea estates utilising their special export licences within the short period of two months, and therefore in 1943 the Indian Tea Control Act of 1938 was amended and the period of two months was extended to 12 months, with the result that an export licence which was obtained in one financial year could be used throughout the period of the next financial year as a special export licence.

[Mr I I Chundrigar]

There were certain other difficulties also, as in 1942-43, we were allowed to export 25 per cent more tea than our usual quota, and export licences for this extra quantity of 25 per cent which came to 58 million pounds were also issued. Now if all these licences are allowed to be used in the next financial year, there will be several complications. The idea underlying the Bill now is to revert to the position which existed before 1943 before the amending Bill was passed, and we now want to revert to the provisions of the old Act under which a special export license would be valid only for two months in the next financial year.

This is the simple provision of the Bill and I hope this House will accept this Bill, as we are now restoring the status quo which existed before the special legislation for the exigencies of the war period was passed by this House.

Sir, I move

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tea Control Act 1938, be taken into consideration"

The motion was adopted

Clause 2 was added to the Bill

Clause 1 was added to the Bill

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill

The Honourable Mr I. I. Chundrigar: Sir I move

"That the Bill be passed"

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That the Bill be passed"

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, I should like to know what the difficulties were, if any, which the tea exporter suffered from, if the period were limited to 1st May of each succeeding year and why it is necessary to relax it, also if there were any complaints during that period at all and they were sought to be rectified during the period of the war

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The only complaints received were what I told the House. If the ordinary export licence was issued in the year 1946-47, export was to be made before the end of the financial year 1946-47, i.e., up to the 31st March 1947. During the war some of the persons holding export quotas made a complaint that they had not the necessary shipping facilities and therefore they would not be able to ship their full quota during that period. Their only remedy under the old Act was to apply for a special export licence for the unexhausted portion of their export quota. It was given to them as a matter of course. Supposing they had an export quota of one hundred thousand pounds of tea and they had exported 80 thousand pounds, they would necessarily be given a special export licence for the remaining 20 thousand pounds, and that was valid under the old Act up to 31st May following. During the war, they complained that they would not be able to export it by the 31st May; and Government therefore thought that during the war period when the shipping facilities were not available and there were other difficulties in the way, that period can be extended up to the 31st March following, and that was done by the Act of 1943. Now we think that this facility is no longer necessary. On the contrary, if this facility is allowed all the present export licences will have to be automatically validated up to the end of March 1948, and that will work to the detriment of the owners of the Indian tea estates because with so many licences remaining unexhausted, they will be able to export at any time and the prices will remain low. Therefore it is in the interest of the tea-growing portions of India to revert now to the pre-war legislation, and that is what the Bill proposes to do.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I should like to know whether the further period of two months after the financial year is enough in the ordinary course to export all the surplus

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Yes, it is.

Mr. Mann Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce) Sir, do I understand that it is not Government's intention by this means to have additional restrictions on the export of tea? Because, then the tea grower will not really benefit as the Honourable Member said I assume that is not the intention but that the intention of Government is merely to regularise the procedure so that in due course all licences issued for a certain period should be completed and executed during that particular period. Is that the intention or is the intention a restriction generally on the volume of export?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The intention is very plain. Normally about 420 million lbs is exported. For this export licences will be given. If any of this quantity is not exported by the 31st of March, 12 Noon special export licences will be given for the unutilised balances, which will be valid up to the 31st of May 1947. If it is not exported by then, they will apply for the normal export licence for the year 1947-48 and the normal trade channels will function as before the war.

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

REGISTRATION OF TRANSFERRED COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar (Commerce Member) Sir I beg to move

That the Bill to amend the Registration of Transferred Companies Ordinance 1942 be taken into consideration."

I would like to explain this Bill in brief. The registration of Transferred Companies Ordinance, 1942, was promulgated with a view to permitting companies from different parts of the Empire which had to leave their countries of origin owing to the war conditions, to function effectively by transfer to India. Under the provisions of that Ordinance some companies, which had registered themselves at various places in the Empire where they could not function during the war period because of certain difficulties created by the war either owing to the overrunning of the country by the enemy or various other reasons, were given the privilege of registering themselves in India and carrying on their activities from here. Many of these companies want to revert to the countries of their original incorporation. Now if they so revert with the registration in India, they have got certain difficulties in their way, as a company registered in India now seeking re-registration in the country of their origin. The intention underlying the Bill is to remove those difficulties in the way of these companies. With this purpose in view, the Bill proposes that their registration in India may be cancelled and they may be allowed to re-register themselves in their countries of origin as if they had not been registered in British India at all.

In doing so, one question has to be borne in mind. These companies which were registered in India during the war may have got certain liabilities to the people of this country or even to other people, and Government proposes to see that all their commitments and liabilities to the people in India and others will be fully satisfied before their registration in India is cancelled. That is why we propose that the cancellation of this registration will be subject to such terms and conditions as the Government may prescribe, and the Government proposes to use the powers under section 2 (a) to impose such terms and conditions as may be specified in the order, for the purpose of seeing that all equitable adjustments are made and all the rights of the people of this country are safeguarded before action is taken under this Act for the purpose of cancelling the registration of any company. I hope that will satisfy the members of the House that the interests of the people of this country will be properly safeguarded before an order is passed under the provisions of this Bill.

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That the Bill to amend the Registration of Transient Companies Ordinance, 1942, be taken into consideration."

Mr. Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce) I have no objection to the motion. In fact it is a very necessary and proper thing which Government are doing. May I make a small suggestion to Government? There would be many liabilities of these companies which have been active, and some of them have made very large sums of money in this country during the period they operated here. There will be liabilities for income-tax. There are not only the obligations of these companies to the people of this country which the Honourable Member has said they would secure, but I would suggest that there is the obligation of these companies "to Government in respect of income-tax. Income-tax is taken in the following year on income of the current year and by the following year they may not be here. I trust Government will safeguard their own interest with regard to income-tax also.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Most certainly they will do

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural): Has the Government any information as to what has been the extent of operation of these companies in India and whether they have taken additional shares in this country? Why not special courts be appointed for winding up these companies so far as India is concerned? There may have been an emergency during the period of the war and that is why an Ordinance was promulgated, but there is no urgency now. If the Honourable Member wants still to continue the Ordinance, it should not be placed before this House so that what was an Ordinance originally may not be given effect to by an Act of this Legislature by providing corresponding provisions in that Act so as to empower the Government, or any other authority which the Government may set up, to allow a company to get itself transferred from this country or to cease its operation in this country. I believe, Sir, that instead of the Central Government itself, through one of its officers, taking the responsibility of finding out the liabilities of a particular company, which has worked in this country for nearly four years, before it is allowed to wind up its business and go away bag and baggage, they should appoint special tribunals to go into the various liabilities which it may have incurred during its operation in this country. If the companies registered under the Indian Companies Act want to cease operation, they have to get themselves wound up by application to the High Court. I would not suggest the same procedure in the case of these companies, but I would suggest that special tribunals be appointed to find out the liabilities of these companies, and after they are satisfied they should without any prejudice allow these companies to remove themselves from this country. I would urge upon the Honourable Member to see whether that ought not to be done and also to consider what haste and urgency there is. I find from the Order Paper, Sir, that this appears as item 13 and 14, and therefore I was not prepared with the relevant facts as regards the number of such companies, the nature of business they have been transacting and to what extent they have ramifications in this country, their obligations and liabilities, and how much the nationals of this country will be affected if they are allowed to go away from this country, and so on. And there is another difficulty which my Honourable friend, Mr. Manu Subedar points out: whether the foreign successors of these companies will be liable to pay the liabilities—income-tax and other liabilities which may come to light? These are all matters which have to be gone into. I would urge upon the Honourable Member to put away items 13 and 14 which may not have reached in this session. It is not a matter of urgency: there is no more war and if we facilitated their coming, let us not provide facilities for them to go without safeguarding the interests of everybody concerned. Sir, I apprehend greater danger in allowing this measure to go through at this stage.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: It has been suggested, that special tribunals may be appointed to wind up these companies and the question how far the people of this country will be affected is the second point to be considered.

As I said in my opening speech, we are taking every possible precaution for the purpose of safeguarding the rights not only of the people of this country, but the Government and everybody concerned. Now, I do not understand how things will improve by allowing the winding up proceedings being taken up before a court of law. The idea underlying this measure is that each company, before it is allowed to cancel its registration in India, will have to submit its balance sheet, a statement of its assets and its liabilities including those to Government for taxation, and after all these things are gone into and a satisfactory solution is found, then alone Government will pass an order for cancellation. Their registration in India was not made under the normal procedure of registration under the Indian Companies Act. That was done by a special Ordinance called the Registration of Transferred Companies Ordinance, 1942, and the cancellation of their registration would normally have been made under an Ordinance. But as the House was sitting, we insisted that the matter should come before it, so that the House may have an opportunity of seeing that the rights of the people of this country are fully safeguarded.

My friend may be aware that if a Company is registered in one country and then transfers its registration to another country, it is under some disabilities. The only thing underlying the present Bill is to see that these companies are not subjected to such disabilities. I may also point out to my friend, Mr. Ayyangar, that the earlier these companies wind up from India and go back to their country, it will be better for the people of this country. When their registration is cancelled, we want to see that they do not carry on their trading activities from India. But before doing so, the interests of our countrymen will be fully safeguarded. That is the idea underlying the Bill and I believe thorough provision has been made in the Bill to safeguard their interests. The terms of the proposed section, are extremely wide to place full powers in the hands of the Government. The said section reads thus:

"The Central Government may at any time by order cancel the registration of any company under this Ordinance on such terms and conditions as may be specified in the order."

So there are no limitations on the powers of the Government for the purpose of specifying the said terms and conditions, and each case will be considered on its merits and before an order is passed, I can assure the Honourable Member that all the points raised in the House and every question relating to the interests of the people of our country and the Government, will be fully considered before the order of cancellation is passed.

Mr. President: The question is—

"That the Bill to amend the Registration of Transferred Companies Ordinance, 1942, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

MOTION RE PAYMENT TO UNITED NATIONS RELIEF AND REHABILITATION ADMINISTRATION

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar (Commerce Member). Sir, I beg to move—

"That this Assembly do approve the payment to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration of the sum of rupees two crores for which a supplementary demand in respect of 'Miscellaneous' was voted by the Assembly on the 18th April 1946."

In this connection I will give a short resume of the previous history of the case. UNRRA was established in 1943 for the purpose of organising relief and rehabilitation measures in the interests of the inhabitants of war afflicted areas. The agreement which brought UNRRA into existence was signed by the Government of India's representative subject to the reservation that it must be approved by the Indian Legislature. In April 1944, the agreement was formally approved by both the Houses, and it became operative in respect of India. Thereafter, the Council of the UNRRA passed a resolution recommending that each member Government, whose home territory was not occupied by the enemy shall make a contribution for participation in the work of the Administration, approximately equivalent to one per cent of the national income of the country for the year ending 30th June 1943 as determined by the Member Government. There was also a proviso to the effect that "the Council recognises that there are cases in which the recommendation above may conflict with particular demands arising from the continuance of war or may be excessively burdensome because of peculiar situations, and therefore recognises that the amount and character of the contributions recommended is subject to such conditions."

If we had decided to contribute one per cent of the income of India for the year ending June 30, 1943, our contribution would have come to nearly Rs 40 crores. But under the proviso, namely, that the payment of this amount would be excessively burdensome to India because of the peculiar situations, we decided to make a contribution of Rs. 8 crores and that was passed with the consent of the Indian Legislature during the budget session of 1945. I may mention that thereafter UNRRA made various purchases in India, the total of which comes to about Rs 7,28.26 lakhs and so far as the balance is concerned they have spent something on administration expenses and the unspent balance is in the neighbourhood of Rs 21 lakhs. Thereafter a motion was made in the budget session in April 1946, for voting a supplementary grant of Rs 4 crores for making a second contribution to UNRRA and ultimately by consent of parties a motion in the following form was passed

"That a reduced supplementary sum not exceeding Rupees two crores be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in the course of payment during the year ending on the 31st March 1947 in respect of "Miscellaneous."

It was however subject to a statement made by the Honourable Diwan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar in this House, and it is because of that statement that I have placed this motion before the House so that the Members may have an opportunity of expressing their views on the different points. The statement which was made by Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar runs thus

"I suggest that the House may agree that a sum of rupees two crores may be granted, if circumstances permit and the Government on their part will watch the situation and make no expenditure out of the amount till the end of September, when we would have known what the position of the country is. If that is agreeable to all parts of the House, it can go out as the unanimous resolution that the House sympathises with UNRRA's request, and is prepared to expend up to two crores but that the Government should not expend any portion of this amount till the end of September when the position of the country will be better realised."

After the statement was made by Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar, Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose, Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang and Mr. Griffiths agreed with the suggestion made and then the grant was passed unanimously.

After this, the UNRRA has made a further list of articles which they required from India and I have discussed the question with their representative here. During the discussions it appeared that nearly 60 per cent of their requirements are in raw jute and jute manufactures and 40 per cent of their requirements are in other articles like coir yarn, synthetic rubber, some drugs and surgical goods from the Disposals Department. I also made enquiries as to what was the amount which has been paid by the other countries, so far as the second contribution was concerned. I may mention that our first contribution of rupees eight crores which in dollars was 24,042,078 (out of 1,878,267,285 dollars) came to about 1.27 per cent of the total first contribution. Our second contribution of rupees two crores will be 33 per cent. of the total second contribution received by the UNRRA from the various other countries. I may mention that the first contribution and that was the point which was raised by Mr. Manu Subedar in the last debate, 81 non-invaded countries and about 16 invaded countries made their contributions. So far as the second contribution is concerned, eleven countries have already made their contributions and our contribution, if made will come, as I said, to 33 per cent. of the second contribution.

As to the merits of the proposal I may mention that the UNRRA has been a very important international organisation. It has made various contributions for the rehabilitation of the invaded European countries. They have shipped nearly one million tons of seeds, plants, fertilisers, farm machinery and other things to the various European countries and also to China and as a result of the assistance given by the UNRRA these European countries and China will now be able to produce more food for themselves, so that the food situation all over the world will improve and India's chances of obtaining her food requirements from abroad will certainly be far better than they would otherwise have been but for the rehabilitation of these countries.

I may also mention that recently, the UNRRA has allowed 25,000 tons of wheat out of their own procurements to be diverted to India.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab Non-Muhammadan) From where?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar From the various European countries and a report about this appeared in the Hindustan Times also a few days ago. I have got a cutting of that report.

Diwan Chaman Lall: Is that borne out by the records of the Department?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The Department has received a letter from the UNRRA representative in India saying that they have received information from his headquarters that these 25,000 tons of wheat are being diverted to India. I was mentioning something more than what was said by the UNRRA headquarters themselves.

Mr. Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce) Will the Honourable Member make clear as to what is meant by 'diversion'? It is merely that something is given to us in advance from something given to us a little later. Diversion does not mean any kind of benefit conferred but repayment has to be made.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Certainly, Sir. These 25,000 tons are being given as a loan to India for our immediate needs which we will have to repay when conditions improve. Honourable Members will recognise that the immediate procurement of food is one of the essential matters.

Diwan Chaman Lall: I am sorry to interrupt the Honourable Member, but is he aware that the UNRRA has been competing with India in the matter of procurement of food and making it more difficult for India to procure her requirements of food?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: This is raising an old controversy, to which the Honourable Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar gave, I believe, a reply in the last debate. It was as a result of the explanation given by him that the House ultimately adopted this grant unanimously to the extent of two crores and the only position which was then left open for consideration was with respect to the situation in the country. The only reference to the food situation in the country that was made in the debate then was "the internal position of the country will be realised by the end of September" till which time no amount out of this sum should be expended. If India is to play her part in the international field, if India has already made such a large contribution as eight crores as her first contribution and has practically held out the hope of a second contribution of two crores subject to the examination of the internal situation in the country by the end of September. I feel that the House must consider going ahead with this programme, especially as it would not be spent in the purchase of articles which are essential to us but which are surplus and which can be exported by us.

[Mr I I Chundrigar.]

I may mention also that we have in addition received very small gifts from the UNRRA. Of course their amount is not large. They are parcels of canned food of the value of three lakhs. Then from their emergency food collections we have got a cash contribution of about Rs 10 lakhs. The value of gifts from New Zealand of Malted Milk, whole milk powder and other food amounts to Rs 15 lakhs. The point which has to be kept before us for prominent consideration is, whether looking to the status which we hope to occupy in the international world, we should not under the circumstances fail to fulfil the hopes which were held out at the time of our previous contribution and whether we would be well advised in dropping this assistance for the relief and rehabilitation of the various countries which were overrun by the enemy. Now, in our various statements we said that India will not live in isolation so far as the international sphere is concerned. We are putting up our candidate for the security council of the United Nations Organisation, and we look forward to play a very important part in the international world. Under these circumstances it is also our duty to go to the relief of other nations when they are in very bad need of relief and rehabilitation. We can imagine what would have been our own position if during the food crisis the other countries of the world no doubt for payment, had not come to our assistance and given us certain food supplies. If we looked to the other countries of the world to come to our rescue in times of need, when famine was staring us in the face, we should also under those circumstances look to the needs of other countries which require relief and rehabilitation, and that is why I said that this is a stage when we may confirm our former Resolution and approve the payment which was then promised, and most of which would be spent on raw jute and jute bags, our vurn and surgical and other instruments and other things from the Disposals Directorate. The original programme was that so far as the European countries were concerned, the UNRRA would give relief up to the end of December 1946, and so far as the far eastern countries are concerned the relief would be given to the end of March 1947. Since then certain shipping difficulties have come in the way, and it appears that only 69 per cent of the programme of 1946 has been carried out till the 31st August 1946. It is possible that the commitments made before will be fulfilled even after the dates specified, and I trust that the House will accept the motion which I have placed before them for their consideration. Sir, I move

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That this Assembly do approve the payment to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration of the sum of rupees two crores for which a supplementary demand in respect of 'Miscellaneous' was voted by the Assembly on the 18th April, 1946."

Mr. Mann Subedar: Sir, the Honourable Mr Chundrigar comes from my city of Bombay, and though I knew his reputation as a great advocate, I never had the opportunity of listening to him as I did today, he has indeed made the best of what is a very bad case, and undoubtedly this UNRRA case is very bad. In this House I had, on all previous occasions, to question and challenge the position of India with regard to these international organisations, and more specifically with regard to UNRRA, and I shall not on the last day of the session take up too much of the time of the House, otherwise I could go thoroughly into each item that the Honourable Member mentioned.

The position is different now. We are faced with a government including my Honourable friend Mr Chundrigar, in which we have absolute confidence. We would seek to guide them where it is necessary, but we are equally willing to concede to them and be guided by them where it is inevitable. Therefore there is no doubt that the motion will be carried, and we shall pass it, but may I correct a few current ideas?

It has been most melancholy whenever an Indian member on the treasury benches has got up in the past to talk about this particular subject, he has given an entirely false picture of India in the international field, which was not there. We are hoping to get there now, with the vigorous activity of this government, but at that time it was not there. We were tied to the chariot wheels of the United Kingdom; the whole of this UNRRA matter was a charitable institution set up by the United States of America to which they invited others to contribute. It was for the relief of war-ravaged countries of Europe and such relief was given in such a way that even members of United Nations who have seen the activities of UNRRA questioned and challenged at all places and in all countries, so much so, that the United Kingdom has washed its hands of this institution now and flatly refused to have anything to do with it, so much so that the institution has been already liquidated—I do not know who is going to spend the money and who is going to receive and do those activities, because I understand that this institution does not exist any longer. The House will remember that the United States has recently refused to divert any wheat to the UNRRA, on the plea that the institution no longer exists, and that its activities cannot be continued after it has been closed and liquidated. We do not know what the position is. I dare say there are some representatives of UNRRA—may be the remnant of the left-overs of the organisation, and I really think we ought to consider twice before we give any money, if by any fortunate chance it has not already been spent. The question was raised by me prominently last time and Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar's assurances were not satisfactory. I challenged him to show that the UNRRA did not compete with us. First of all the treasury benches were trying to carry on the illusion that the UNRRA would be able to help India, even Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar tried to mislead this House that the UNRRA was in a position to help, until I showed by chapter and verse that India was not eligible for help from UNRRA and that before the Food Board and before the world food distribution and the combined markets of the United States and Argentine and elsewhere, where India went for food, this institution was competing with us. It was raising prices against us and it was taking away shipping which was due and intended for India. Charity must begin at home. No less a sum than ten crores has been given by this poor country for the relief and rehabilitation of western white populations who were war-ravaged. We are sorry for them, we can show sympathy for them, but sympathy in this form ought not to go out, while charity is deserved at home. May I ask this same UNRRA which has sent fertilisers to China, which has sent seeds and other equipment and so on—why has it not done so to India? The House is aware that for fertilisers this country has spent no less than three crores importing fertilisers at heavy cost, in order to rehabilitate our land which has during the war period worn out. The Honourable Member talked about one per cent of India's income. Who made the commitment that India was to give one per cent of her national income for the relief of other people? The previous government's minions who were hand-picked by the previous government who misrepresented the position of this country elsewhere, who indulged in propaganda hostile to this country—it is a commitment made by those people, and they committed this country, I am told that 40 crores of rupees would have gone. I asked the other day whether the present government regard themselves as heirs or successors or assigns of the previous government, but their predecessors certainly claim that instead of 40 crores they have only given eight crores—only eight crores! Do people realise in this country what eight crores means to this poor country? Have they got any conception? It was a madness which came over the treasury benches whose printing presses added an unlimited supply of money at all times, so that they felt that they could throw their money about. The United Kingdom delegation to which our men were subordinate in those days, were trying, at India's expense, to show off to the world the might of the British Empire. India is big when India has to contribute but India is small when India is to receive something. My Honourable friend mentioned the percentages but would he examine the percentages of the reparations which this country got? Would he examine what India got in the matter of the shipping we expected from Germany as reparations? No. We got nothing. Even the ships which were given to this country, the Government's predecessors felt obliged to refuse.

[Shri Manu Subbaraj]

They said—we don't want these ships. When it comes to receiving something, we get nothing but when it comes to contribution, our people seem to be simply devoid of financial responsibility and obligation and we seem to be throwing our money away.

May I not enquire whether India is not the most war-torn country in the world? Has not this country undergone severe famines, severe floods and an endless series of strikes including the strikes of public servants and is not the country now in the grip of a state of lawlessness which involves financial liability on the Provincial Governments and the Central Government which I predict will run into hundred crores, with the result that there will be no money left for our own plans and programmes of development? In such a situation we are told that the UNRRA is anxious to take away some of the jute from this country, the jute which offers the very best means of buying anything we want from the world. It was just which did the success of the mission of my Honourable friend Dwan Chaman Lal in the Argentine and saved the situation. The UNRRA wants this jute by way of charity and we have to give it away. What do we get in return? We are told that we shall be regarded as something in the international world. Sir, I put it to the House whether this is not too big a price to pay for the kind of recognition which we are seeking and whether this is the best means by which India can do it?

The same benevolent institution called the UNRRA is offering to take away things from the Disposals Department. On the Disposals Committee I have specifically asked the Director General of Disposals not to send out any surgical goods and instruments from this country, because there is an overwhelming unsatisfied demand for these things and instruments. The Provincial Governments have got their health programmes. The Bhoré Report has recommended the expansion of hospitals and this equipment is already in this country and this country has a primary and unassailable claim on these things and not the UNRRA, which claims that it is doing some good to some countries somewhere in the world.

We are told that the isolation of India ought to be avoided. I agree. I want this country to send out goodwill missions. I want diplomatic and consular representatives all over the world and our best men ought to go and acquaint other countries as to what is there in India and learn from others what is outside India so that knowledge and mutual esteem might grow so far as India is concerned.

I do not object to India's participation in the UNO. Let me say with what distinction India's case is being put there and how that arch-Churchillian General Smuts is being routed. We are not isolationist in that sense. My conscience is biting me more on the financial ground. This country is too poor for crores to be spent in charity. During the dire famine days when our men were running anxiously about the world to get some additional supply of food, ten crores of India's money was allowed to go into smoke over this UNRRA and may I ask whether India has got any corresponding or comparable benefit? May I ask whether we have evoked any response from the rest of the countries, any response from the more powerful rich countries like the U.S.A. and even from those continental countries whom the UNRRA helped at our expense? May I know whether anything that we need here has been sent out by them particularly to relieve the famine? Did they say at least—we thank you and we are sending you at least a token help? No. Sir, that is not the case. The fact is that the UNRRA is a ramp and a racket set up by the U.S.A. and England for their own purposes in order to win popularity in Europe and when they found that the popularity can no longer be got in this way they have liquidated it. We were drawn into it unintelligently. Our money was spent in it without any return and I say that that is not the proper way to try to gain recognition in the international field.

The controlling point in my mind is whether this House should go back on what it has committed itself to in a moment of error. If my Government thought it fit to bring forward a motion of this kind, I take it that it is their opinion that having once committed ourselves we cannot now go back on our promise. The House will remember that my friend Mr. Ghulam Bhik Nairang and others said that India has a tradition of kindness, generosity and charity, that her people had feelings of humanity and that the cry of distress anywhere in the world rouses a response and an echo. These were the sentiments of this House when these monies were given. I do agree reluctantly that if the money has been promised we should not now go back but if there is any technical flaw, if by their own error this organisation has been liquidated and there is nobody to receive and properly administer these funds, if there is any loophole, I trust that Government will look into it and I trust that in any case the Government will not part with the goods which are necessary to this country.

* As the House is aware, 2,40,000 bales of cotton which this Government purchased in order to keep up the price of cotton and help the Indian cultivator were given away scot-free to this UNRRA and this, at a time when there is a fearful outcry from the villages that there is not adequate clothing for the farmers' women. Let us have some sense of proportion and let charity begin at home. If I invite the attention of Government to the suffering and distress in this country I am not doing anything wrong. Let us trust that the Government will look closer into this matter, do what is fair and proper, even what is generous and that while trying to carry out our promise, they will save whatever they can out of this racket.

Mr. Abdur Rahman Siddiqi (Calcutta and Suburbs, Muhammadan Urban). Sir, being a Muslim and the Honourable the Commerce Member is also of my fraternity, we are par excellence internationalists. I should, however like to have a sense of proportion brought into this post-war outlook on international affairs by the Honourable Member for Commerce and the present Interim Government of India. I should like the House to look at this problem from an angle which is different from the one the Honourable Member from Bombay has presented to the Government. Having been pushed into a war which was not of our making and having taken part in devastation here, there and everywhere, gentlemanliness, kindness, generosity and a sense of shame also, should force us to go and help the devastated regions and countries as far as we can. But if we look at this problem from a point-of-view of give-and-take, then it is all give and give and no take. We might get small parcels of foodgrains on payment and we might get Christmas boxes from the West, but if we were to calculate on the basis of the vast area of our country as well as the misery of the 400 million people who reside in it, we have got nothing. Yes, Europe was devastated, but, as the Honourable Member who preceded me has explained, China and India are also capable of suffering although silently and resignedly. But, Sir, this UNRRA—I do not like the name and its pronunciation does not appeal to me—to which we have given us eight crores of rupees has given us nothing and has not appointed any Indians to share in its management. I should like the Honourable the Commerce Member, and I am sure he has the spark of Muslim sentiment burning in his heart, to find out who are the people employed by this racket as characterised by my predecessor and as a formidable badmashi, as I should like to call it. I hope the Honourable the Commerce Member will find out from the Central Office of this organisation who are the employees of this wretched organisation. I do not wish to say something which will be considered as exaggerated or magnified, but is it not a fact that 99.9 per cent of the employees of my friend Mr. Fiorella La Guardia, are members of the Semitic race, my cousins, the Jews. I was in Cairo early in 1945, and there, except for a member of the British aristocracy—I have forgotten his name, he was Lord something—not one person in the organisation was either an Egyptian or a Greek or an Armenian or a Turk. Every member of this organisation was a Jew. You must have read in the newspapers, Sir, that in Austria, Hungary and the Danubian basin these Semitic cousins of mine are working the organisation. It is not the Austrian or the Hungarian or the Czecho-Slovakian that gets either food or clothing or shoes or medicines. All these go to one particular section of the people there and I want the Honourable the Commerce Member as well as the Honourable Member for External Affairs to tell us categorically whether they are going to support an organisation which has been organising the undoing of the Arabs in Palestine and other Middle East countries. It is all very well to talk internationalism and it is all very well to tell us in this House that our representatives have gone and shaken hands with this international figure and that international celebrity, but I look at the problem from a special angle. If this UNRRA is going to send shiploads of humanity through UNRRA funds, UNRRA food and UNRRA clothing to destroy the Arab in his own home, is it the intention of the present Government to force India to lend a hand in the killing of the Arabs in Palestine? Sir, you have heard and the whole House must have heard that only a few days ago news came from Italy and other parts of Europe that the UNRRA cannot control those who are in the concentration camps of the refugees and evacuees. They are being sent to fight the Arabs. If the Government of India has made a promise and it cannot back out of it, I would hand over the money and wash my hands of this UNRRA business for all time to come. Those who are controlling the UNRRA will not look at your misery or mine. They will, on the contrary try and utilise the money to make political capital out of it. England will try one way, America will come from the other side, and Stalin will try to thwart them and push them back. But all the time the Government of India will be party to the crime of destroying the Muslims of the Middle East. Should we be party to it? Should we allow our money to be used in organisations which help only one Group? Just as the Government of India is being forced to part with this money, Great Britain and America are perhaps forcing other weak and satellite countries of theirs to pay more money, and then in an angelic attitude they will say "We are repairing the havoc that we had created", and through this they will push forward their own schemes and designs of the new war they have already decided to start. It is, therefore, from this angle that I should like to appeal to the Members of the Government of India to-day not to soil their hands in this dirty business. Sir, I speak with some feeling because I have seen the working of this organisation in Egypt which was supposed to be in charge of Greece after its liberation and that is why I am trying to draw your attention to an aspect of this matter which requires at least at our hands very careful consideration. I said in the debate on the Brettonwoods Bank and Fund give away the money if you must and forget it. Similarly here if the promise made by the predecessors of the present Members of the Government of India must be kept, I P M give the money, but do not in any way agree to share the horrors that are being perpetrated in Palestine and Middle Eastern countries by people fed and clothed by the UNRRA and transported on UNRAA ships to uproot the home of the Arab and establish in its place the National Home of the Jews.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Sir, as I said at the commencement, the hope which was held out by the previous Resolution of the House—I intentionally used the word 'hope' in my opening speech—was subject to certain conditions. Those conditions are set out in the statement which I read out to the House. The condition attached was that the grant will be made if circumstances permit and the Government on their part will watch the situation and make no expenditure out of this amount till the end of September, when the position in the country will be reviewed. Now, Sir, under this condition which was then incorporated, Government propose to examine the situation to see how far circumstances would permit us to make that payment and how far also the internal position in the country has been bettered. My intention in putting this motion before the House was really to ascertain the wishes of the Honourable Members and the general sense of the House. I do realise the full force and significance of the points made by both the speakers that there is great distress in the country and the position regarding food is also such that the Central Government has actually to spend nearly 15½ crores for food subsidies. I think the better course would be to seek leave of the House to withdraw this motion and in the light of the criticism which has been made, Government will re-examine the whole position and after taking fully into consideration the wishes of the House and the changed circumstances, whether the change is for the better or for the worse, they will fully examine the situation and reach a decision after full consideration. I hope the House would grant me leave to withdraw this motion because the object which I had in view has been fulfilled. I have got the wishes of the House and Government will now reconsider the whole situation. I beg leave to withdraw the motion.

The motion was by leave of the Assembly withdrawn.

DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS FOR 1946-47

DEMAND NO. 7—FOREST

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan (Finance Member) Sir, I beg to move

‘That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of ‘Forest’.”

Mr. President: Motion moved

“That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of ‘Forest’.”

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, I would like some information on the following points. In the memorandum that has been circulated to us, I find the explanation for these two items. The first is the revival of the post of Officer in charge Woodworks section that costs Rs 50,000. When was the post abolished, why was the post abolished? How is it found necessary to revive that post now? If so, who is that officer? Is he an Indian or a non-Indian that has been brought in to fill that place? The next item is the shifting of Botanical and Utilisation Branch of the museums to their original sites. Where were they? Why was it necessary to shift them to another place? Why is it now thought necessary to bring it back to the original site?

Mr. B. R. Sen (Secretary, Food Department) When the Budget was framed it was not foreseen that the post of Officer in charge, Woodworks section would be necessary. After the Budget was passed it was found that the post was necessary and so the officer was appointed. The officer in question is an Indian Dr S N Kapur. The pay of this officer is Rs 1,500 per month.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What about the shifting of botanical and Utilisation branch museums?

Mr. B. R. Sen: I have not got the information at present.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I submit, Sir, that the information ought to be ready and laid before the House. This is not a starred question requiring ten days notice. When the supplementary grant was put before the House for voting the Honourable Member ought to be ready with all the information that is commented upon in the Explanatory memorandum circulated along with the Supplementary demands for Grants.

Mr. B. R. Sen: I shall give the information later.

Mr. President: In any case, further discussion on this Demand is not going to bring the information. So, I shall put the motion to the House.

[Mr. President]

The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Forest' "

The motion was adopted

DEMAND NO 9—INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 4,28,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department' "

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 4,28,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department' "

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, I want to get some information under this head. In the explanatory memorandum I find there is an item for good conduct pay from 1st March 1916 which accounts for an increase of Rs 1,66,00,000. I want to know whether every individual is recommended for this grant? Whether the individuals conduct is considered in making the recommendation? Or is the good conduct pay automatically given, whether an employee has good conduct or bad conduct? Is every one getting this?

There is another item under the same grant for certain new schemes such as development of postal facilities for rural areas. May I know from the Honourable Member what are the additional facilities on which this sum has been spent?

Sir Harold Shoober (Secretary, Communications Department) Sir, in regard to the good conduct pay I must explain to my Honourable friend that during the period of the war the Posts and Telegraphs Department had to work under conditions of very great stress and strain, and we had to think how in some way we could recognise this general pressure upon all or a large number of the non-gazetted ranks of the Posts and Telegraphs Department. In the first place I will make it clear that no gazetted officer received good conduct pay. But the short answer to the question put by my Honourable friend is that good conduct pay was paid to everybody who was entitled to it and it was not subject to any special examination of the conduct of the individual to see whether he has an individual merit that, nor was good conduct pay deducted on account of bad work or bad conduct. Good conduct pay has also been continued since the war, because I think all Honourable Members here, who are very great friends of the Posts and Telegraphs Department, will admit that the stress still continues.

The second point was about the improvement of postal facilities. With regard to that I think most Honourable Members have seen the post-war plan of the Posts and Telegraphs Department. It has been our aim to form a plan, which is a fifteen-year plan but in segments of five years and it has been our aim to get a post office in every village of about two thousand inhabitants. Apart from that, as Honourable Members are aware, we still are only able to give a postal delivery once or twice a week or sometimes three times a week. But we are endeavouring to increase the postal facilities, to increase the number of post offices as quickly as possible, and this particular five lakhs is the first step in a much bigger scheme.

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 4,28,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department' "

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 13-A—CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 17,83,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Constituent Assembly' "

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 17,83,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Constituent Assembly' "

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 22—COMMERCE DEPARTMENT

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 5,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Commerce Department' "

Mr. President. Motion moved

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 5,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Commerce Department' "

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, I find that this relates to the Preparatory Commission of International Conference on Trade and Unemployment in the United Kingdom. I find recently that this House is completely ignored in the selection of personnel for the various deputations and delegations. I should like that all traders, scientists and other competent people should be taken but Members of this House who are competent should be taken also. I should like to know the personnel of this Commission.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar (Commerce Member) Unfortunately I have not got the names with me just now.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Has any Honourable Member of this House been included?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: How can I say that when I have not got the names?

Mr. President: Can the Honourable Member give that information after lunch?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Yes, Sir

Mr. President: Then we will adjourn now

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch Till Half Past Two of the Clock

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr President (The Honourable Mr G V Mavalankar) in the Chair

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: The information asked for is this. The names of the Indian Trade Delegation to the Preparatory Committee of the United Nations Economic and Social Council on International Trade and Employment are:—

Leader.

1 Mr R K Nehru, I C S, Joint Secretary to the Government of India in the Commerce Department

Members

2 Mr B N Adarkar, M B E , M A (Cantab), Deputy Economic Adviser to the Government of India.

3 Dr P S Lokanathan, D Sc (Econ) (London), Editor, Eastern Economist, New Delhi

4 Dr B N Ganguli, Professor of Economics, Delhi University

5 Dr A I Qureshi, M Sc (London), Ph D (TCD), Economic Adviser to the Hyderabad Government

6 Mr D G Mulherkar, Secretary of the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry

7 Mr H S Mahk, C I E , I C S Prime Minister, Patiala State Secretary

8 Mr M A Mulky, M Sc (Econ) (London), Under Secretary to the Government of India, Commerce Department

I may mention that no part of the demand for the supplementary grant of rupees five lakhs refers to the expenses connected with the Preparatory Commission, and as my Honourable friend Mr Ayyangar had not given me previous intimation, I was not ready with the information

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: How is it then that in the memorandum circulated to us it is mentioned under Demand No. 22 as item (b) on page 5—“the Preparatory Commission of International Conferences on Trade and Employment in the United Kingdom. May I ask from the Honourable Member if he would consider the desirability of associating with such Delegations two non-official members of the Assembly also?

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: Non-officials who are considered suitable have been included in the delegation

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Guntur cum Nellore Non-Muhammadian Rural) Sir, that raises a very important point. On all such delegations it is only fair to this House as well as to the public that not only non-officials from outside but also non-officials who have paid special attention to such matters as come up for discussion under any one particular delegation are also given an opportunity of playing their proper role in such delegations gaining the necessary experience and afterwards coming back and enriching the debates of this House and also helping the public to understand what is being done in many of these delegations. I know it has been the practice of the Government in the past to make these things a sort of a close preserve and as my Honourable friend Mr Manu Subedar, put it this morning to select a number of hand-picked people and send them up and make it a sort of favour to them. We wanted to put an end to that sort of practice and it is also a fact that many of us in those days were not willing to associate ourselves with these various delegations that were being sent by the previous Government. But now that things have changed and most of the Members of this House are anxious to associate themselves with the Government and co-operate with it and help it and assist it, it is only fair that in future whenever these delegations are being thought of and their personnel is being selected proper representation is given to the various sections of this House.

One more point I shall make. There are various organisations catering to the needs of not only these commercial interests but also to rural interests—agrarian interests. They have been neglected till now. The Merchants chambers have become very strong organisations, Chambers also have become very strong, even trade unions have become very strong and effective. But when it comes to the peasants, the agricultural workers, and the Harijans, and the scheduled castes and various others and the rural masses as a whole that is not the case unfortunately. They are not so very well organised; they are not able to make their voice felt effectively and naturally on many an occasion their case has gone by default and they have not been thought of at all. I hope the Government—not only this particular Member, but all the Members of the Government—will keep this in mind and see that whenever a relevant occasion arises, those interests also are given due representation and weight.

The Honourable Mr. I. I. Chundrigar: I may mention that Government will try to utilize the best possible talents in the country, and there is no intention to exclude the Members of this House from these selections.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: But what about the other points I have made?

Mr. President: Order, order. The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 5,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Commerce Department'."

The motion was adopted

' DEMAND NO 23-A—DEPARTMENT OF WORKS, MINES AND POWER

* The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 15,75,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of the 'Department of Works, Mines and Power'."

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 15,75,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of the 'Department of Works, Mines and Power'."

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Sir, I learn that this Department is establishing a Board called the Power Board—I speak subject to correction in regard to the title of this particular Board. I learn that so far all the Members of this Board are Europeans. There are only two at present, but they are supposed to be three. There is still one place vacant. I do not know who is going to be appointed. I trust that no more Europeans will be appointed and I also trust that at the earliest possible opportunity the whole of this Board will be Indianized. If necessary, Government may take this occasion to send people abroad—may be for one year or two years—get them trained and experienced in this matter, and then after their return, let them be appointed.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I also support my Honourable friend's demand for this reason. I know, Sir, that two out of the three gentlemen are Europeans who have been brought out from the United Kingdom, and they are not in search of local talent which is available in this country. There are persons who have served in 'Tatas' and other huge industrial concerns but unfortunately the question of their suitability is left to the discretion of these Europeans who are naturally anxious to avoid their coming in. I therefore say that the choice and selection of Indians ought not to be left to these persons who are interested. That involves not only the question of appointment and payment of a salary to Indians to the tune of two or three thousand, but Sir, in addition, whoever is appointed has got the power to say that these articles which are necessary can only be brought from the United Kingdom and cannot be manufactured in this country. So we are losing doubly—the experience of individuals who are appointed in this Board and who will not permanently settle here.

The other one is that he will see with the least delay possible that all the accessories necessary for making ourselves self-sufficient in all the materials are manufactured in this country. Therefore I would urge upon the Honourable Member not to leave it to these persons who are likely to entrench themselves here but to take it upon himself to appoint a competent Indian to the third vacancy.

Mr. B. K. Gokhale (Secretary Works, Mines and Power Department) I am not at all sure that the Central Technical Power Board to which reference has been made really falls under any of these four heads.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: We do not want your Department at all!

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: It is a fact that the Central Technical Power Board which is supposed to have three members, has at present only got two members who are non-Indians. The third post is still vacant, and in connection with the filling of this post, Government have been making every effort to try and fill it by an Indian and the best possible man will be selected.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: By whom?

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: By Government. It does not rest with the other two members of the Board. The same applies to the other senior officers. Appointments are all made by Government and not by the Board except perhaps very minor appointments. The Federal Public Services Commission comes in and all the ordinary rules apply. I think the House may take it that the points raised will be fully taken into consideration in making appointments.

Another point raised was about the manufacture of electrical machinery. That point is also very much under the consideration of Government. But it is not something which can be dealt with very quickly, and it will take time. It is not part of the duty of this Board to undertake manufacture. I presume that will come under Industry and Civil Supplies Department. This Board is technical and advisory. They undertake investigation of electrical projects. Manufacturing goods is not part of the duty of this Board.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Ordering goods is part of its duty!

Mr. B. K. Gokhale: Certainly, and in accordance with the general policy of Government, every endeavour will be made to see that as many orders as possible are placed in this country.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: And as few as possible will be placed in other countries!

Mr. President: Order, order. The question is—

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 15,75,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of the 'Department of Works, Mines and Power'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND NO 26—FOOD DEPARTMENT

The Honourable Mr Liaquat Ali Khan. Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 11,84,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Food Department'."

Mr. President: Motion moved.

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 11,84,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Food Department'."

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I find under this head, among others, two items. The first is the creation of an office in Indonesia for arranging imports of rice. I read recently in one of the local newspapers that it is not possible to export a large quantity of rice for want of ships. I do not know what the position of this office is, and whether the persons in charge are in a position to negotiate. It appears that all those ships available for use for export of rice were taken over by the Dutch authorities who are trying to fight a battle royal with the republicans there. Therefore they are not available for us and the 500,000 tons originally arranged to be sent to us have been held up there and only 25,000 tons have been sent to this country. If so better men who can go round, should be sent. Far from opposing this motion, I would like that the status of the man in charge of this office should be raised to that of a Minister who should be able to deal with the entire East Asiatic Continent.

As regards the second one—as regards the Food Delegation to the U K, and the U S A American Famine Emergency Mission. Is it without cost to us? I thought they came at their own expense and when they returned they made a report. It is not clear from the Rs. 11 lakhs what amount we spent. We have also tried to contribute our mite to get over our difficulty.

Prof. N. G. Ranga. It is not usual for me at any time to congratulate the Food Department. In fact I have been one of its strongest critics. I am glad to be able to say that today I wish to congratulate the Food Department upon the initiative and enterprise that it has displayed in this particular regard, that is, in risking its money and sending its people and also steamers, trawlers and a number of consumer goods over to Indonesia in the hope of getting in return sufficient quantities of food to relieve our own distress in the country. The trouble they have taken has been very well justified. Already imports have begun to pour in and we are hoping that some more might come in very soon. But the Food Department ought not to stop here. Not only is it necessary that the status of our representative there should be raised but also the Food Department should venture upon similar missions and similar enterprises in regard to the other South Eastern Asiatic countries, especially Siam. We know there is plenty of rice there. We have been told that Siam has been promising to send rice to us but she has not been able to send it. We do not know why. We would like the Food Department to display similar enterprise in regard to that country also. There are other missions—the American Food Mission. I am in a position to assure Mr. Ayyangar that the money we spent on it was well spent.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I knew it!

Prof. N. G. Ranga: They went back to their country and supported all the contentions of our own Food Department in regard to our demands for food and maintained that we needed one and a half million tons of food to be imported into our country and made a very eloquent plea for these imports and supported India's case for food imports. If I am not mistaken, I think it was our own Government which suggested to the American non-official leaders that they had better send to our country a mission like that so that they could investigate things for themselves, see for themselves and on their return report to their people. Such missions are useful and I hope it would be possible for the Food Department to take the initiative in this direction in regard to Argentine and other food exporting countries so that those people also would be able to come here and satisfy themselves and on their return report to their people the hope of greater imports coming into our country more freely.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions, Muhammadan Rural). I would just like to ask what quantity of rice he is expecting from Indonesia. Is the quantity sufficiently large to justify the opening of an office in that country? I also want to know whether there is a chance of getting sugar from Indonesia, because at present there is so much shortage of sugar in India that the ration has been recently cut down and the price of sugar has been raised. If we could get sugar from Java or other places nearby it would be a great relief to the Indian people. But as a preliminary to that I would ask the Food Department to approach his colleague the Commerce Member that the enormous duty that they have already imposed upon the import of sugar should be abolished. The duty was good enough at the time protection was needed but now that we are short of sugar ourselves and we badly need imported sugar from Java and other countries, I think that duty should be abolished. I would request him to include in this programme not only wheat but also sugar and as a preliminary to that (and here he may take it for granted that we are all with him) the duty on sugar should be abolished.

Mr. B. R. Sen: Sir, the House will remember that during last session, there was a report of an offer made by the President of the Indonesian Republic of 750,000 tons of paddy to this country. Immediately after we heard about that offer we investigated the sources which brought that offer to us. When it became clear that the offer was genuine we started negotiations with that country. The first difficulty we met was this. The Dutch Government took the view that the Dutch East Indies as a whole was deficit and therefore even if there was a surplus in Indonesia, that surplus could not be regarded as a surplus to the Dutch East Indies as a whole. Therefore they wanted a guarantee from us that if later on the Dutch East Indies as a whole faced a deficit India would return a part of the quantities that she got from Indonesia. These negotiations took nearly three months to conclude. The matter went up to the International Emergency Food Council and it was decided that India should be allowed to take whatever India expected to receive from Indonesia without any definite commitment to the Dutch. After this point was settled the question arose of the movement of the paddy from the interior to the ports and the rail heads. It was found that the Indonesians were short of internal transport, the only transport that they could use was the bullock carts. It was represented to us that unless we provided them with a large number of motor trucks, the offer which they had made to us could not be implemented. We approached the Allied Commander in Indonesia who stated that from the military point of view it was undesirable to hand over motor trucks to the Indonesians. This matter was taken up with His Majesty's Government and it took nearly two months to settle this question. It was ultimately decided after the Interim Government had come into power, by His Majesty's Government that whatever military risks might be involved, the risks in India of famine were so great that the trucks should be supplied. We came nearly to the end of August before all these points were settled. It was not, as one of the Honourable Members suggested, due to lack of officers of a suitable status to represent our case in Indonesia that thus this delay took place. The delay was inherent in the nature of the problem. Throughout we had dealt with the Indonesian Government at the highest possible level. We sent a high officer from this Government, who had personal contact with the President of the Indonesian Republic. So the complaint is not justified. We have done everything possible to see the whole matter expedited if we have failed it is due to circumstances beyond our control.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What about ships?

Mr. B. R. Sen: There has been no difficulty about ships in regard to despatch of paddy from Indonesia. The main trouble has been lack of paddy at the ports. Till the other day the position was that the two major ports in Java, viz. Surabaya and Batavia were in the possession of the Dutch and the ports which we could use for getting out the Indonesian paddy were minor ports, where there were no proper arrangements for loading and unloading. The ships had to stay about two miles out of the harbour and we had to arrange to send lighters from India for the purpose of helping in the loading of ships. It has never been a question of lack of ships. As a matter of fact the difficulty has been that paddy is not there at the ports in sufficient quantities. Some of the ships which had been programmed for Indonesia had to be cancelled.

As regards the American Food Mission, it is true that before the Food Mission arrived in this country we ourselves had been thinking of devising ways and means of getting the Indian situation properly understood by the Americans. The House will remember that about the end of April, ex-President Hoover visited this country as the personal representative of President Truman to understand what the situation in this country was. He accepted our figures of demand and he presented those figures to the President of the United States and also to the public. Soon after, in order to get a proper and definite decision from the United States His Majesty's Government sent out the Lord President of the Council, Mr. Herbert Morrison, to argue our case. Mr. Morrison arranged a definite allocation for us but we found this allocation to be quite inadequate. The total quantity that was allocated to us was 1,165 million tons compared with over two million tons which we had asked for. When we heard about this allocation, we thought of sending out some of our reprerepresentatives to the United States in order to present our case more fully. Just about that time we got an offer from the India League, of which Miss Pearl Buck is the President, to send some prominent Americans to this country in order to understand the situation and in order to take back material which could be used for rousing public opinion in America with regard to the Indian situation. We accepted this offer with enthusiasm and we promised to give all possible help to the Mission. The total expenditure on the American Food Mission, about which Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar has asked for information, is Rs. 52,000 and that amount was spent mostly in providing for aerial transport to the Mission and for their stay in different cities in India.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What is the quantity of rice expected from Java?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The total quantity which was offered was 750,000 tons. We cannot say exactly how much is expected. It will depend upon the movement of the paddy from the interior to the ports. I may mention one point here. Since these negotiations started, there has been a truce between the Dutch and the Indonesians. If there is peace between the two peoples it is possible that the Indonesians would like to conserve their resources for the other islands of Dutch East Indies rather than send them to India. We are, however, hoping that with the consumer goods which we are supplying in quantities, we shall be able to induce the Indonesians to keep the promise that they had made.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad: You try to get sugar also.

Mr. B. R. Sen: Before coming to Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad's point, I would like to deal with the points raised by my Honourable friend Prof. Ranga. With regard to Siam from the very beginning we took an active interest in what went on in that country. The treaty between the Allies and the Siam Government provided for a Commission which was to go into the question of availability of rice in the country. The first assessment of the Commission was 1.5 million tons and this was later revised to 1.2 million tons. In any case the machinery was provided by the treaty itself. We lent the services of one of our officers to be the Chairman of that Commission on behalf of the United Kingdom. We lent his services on the definite promise that he was also to look after the interests of India while working on that body. Originally the treaty confined the membership of the Commission to U.S.A., U.K. and Siam. Since then India and China have been asked to have members on the Commission. It is true that the quantities which have come out of Siam have been small compared with what was expected by us but this has been due not to lack of effort on our part or on the part of His Majesty's Government but due primarily to the internal conditions in that country. At times there have also been difficulties regarding transport. But we hope the situation will improve and we will get substantial quantities from that country at least during the next six months.

Prof. Ranga also referred to our taking active part in getting grains from other countries like Argentina. That is a suggestion we have already taken up and one which my friend Diwan Chaman Lal is making when he reports on the work of his mission.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad has asked us about sugar. I cannot tell the House what the actual production of sugar in Java will be, but we have got a report of a speech made by the Secretary General of the International Emergency Food Council, Dr. Fitzgerald in which he says that sugar production next year will be very much better than this year. He has mentioned certain figures which I have not got before me just now, but on that report we have taken steps to press our case strongly for substantial imports of sugar next year. If we get substantial quantities of sugar, then the cut that we imposed this year on the sugar quotas to different provinces will, we hope, be restored.

Mr. Leslie Gwilt (Bombay European) May I ask the Honourable Member one question? I do not think he answered the question as to the amount of rice that has actually come out of Indonesia. I am anxious not to disparage what appears to be a very generous offer, but at some stage or other, it may be that the Government of India will find that they have been the victim of optimism. I presume that ships have been sent there and they may be very much better used elsewhere to bring wheat from, say, America.

Mr. B. R. Sen: I can assure the Honourable Member that the shipping programme is very carefully drawn up. It is not that we send ships to Indonesia and the ships lie idle there. Before the ships are allowed to go to ports in Indonesia, we have to report what quantities are available in the ports for loading.

As regards the quantities which have come out, the actual quantity till the end of October was 20,000 tons in terms of rice. Taking the quantity of grain which is in transit or lying in ports, I think the total quantity is 40,000 tons in terms of rice.

Mr. Leslie Gwilt: When did you start getting this rice?

Mr. B. R. Sen: The first shipment was, I think, at the beginning of October.

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 11,84,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Food Department'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND No 42—METEOROLOGY.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Meteorology'."

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Meteorology'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND No 45—MEDICAL SERVICES.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,71,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Medical Services'."

Mr. President: Motion moved.

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,71,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Medical Services'."

Sri. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: May I know from the Honourable Member what the functions of the Central Committee of National Association is and for what purposes this amount has been spent? What is the ordinary grant for it and what is the control exercised by this Assembly over the Central Committee of National Association? What is its composition, who is its president and how is it run?

Mr. S. H. Y. Oulsnam (Secretary, Health Department) Sir, the Central Dufferin Association, as it is called is an association which was founded by the Countess of Dufferin, the original funds were derived from subscriptions which were collected at that time. In addition, Government gives a yearly grant to meet part of its expenses, and that grant comes before this House in the ordinary way. Her Excellency is the President of this Association, there is an Executive committee of which the Auditor General is the Chairman, and which consists partly of official members and partly of non-official members, and on which there are two members of this House serving. Apart from the Central Association, there are a number of provincial associations which are similar charitable associations and which have the management of various hospitals in the provinces for providing medical aid to women and children. They obtain their funds partly from charitable sources and partly from grants from provincial governments and partly from assistance given by the Central Dufferin Association. This grant which forms the subject of this supplementary demand has been given to the central association to enable them to assist the provincial associations in obtaining some of the surplus medical stores which are at present available for improving the local Dufferin Hospitals.

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,71,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Medical Services'."

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 48—CIVIL VETERINARY SERVICES.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 4,50,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Civil Veterinary Services'."

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 4,50,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Civil Veterinary Services'."

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 53—DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND SUPPLIES

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 75,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Department of Industries and Supplies'."

Mr. President: Motion moved:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 75,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Department of Industries and Supplies'."

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, in this memorandum it is said. "This cut, however, is not likely to be realised in full owing mainly to (i) the expansion of the Disposals Organisation consequent on the taking over by the Government of India of American surplus stores, and (ii) the grant of arrears etc." The other day at question time, this matter came up and the Honourable Member said that 30 Europeans were brought from England, they must certainly have been brought out only on a contract of service, and the contract can be terminated by six months' notice—they need not be kept on for the full term of three years. At the time when various articles were purchased I believe there was no such huge organisation as at the time of disposal. I would like to know why this organisation has become so big, when the original organisation which made the purchases did not cost so much.

Again it says "taking over by the Government of India of American surplus stores." In answer to a question it was elicited from the government member the other day that out of the nominal value of the stores that were purchased, later on on checking Rs 8 crores worth of foodstuffs was not available. That is what the Honourable Mr Sen gave out the other day. I would like to know from him if he is in a position to state now how 8 crores worth of material which were taken over by way of surplus from American stores have been lost and who is responsible. What steps are being taken to recover that amount?

[Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar]

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: I am sorry my Honourable colleague, Dr Matthai is not present owing to indisposition but I shall reply on his behalf.

My Honourable friend Mr Ayyangar wants to know why the Disposal Department has been expanded. I would like to point out that the activities of this department have expanded without any notice. The Government have taken over the American surplus stores and if I may give some figures, that alone will convince my Honourable friend how vast must be the activities of this department to deal with this problem. The Government have taken over American surplus stores totalling some 6 lakhs of tons. It is not possible to arrange for the disposal of such big surplus stores without having an adequate machinery to tackle with this problem. Most of this expenditure is really on advertisements and on publicity and on making people know as to what are the goods that are with this department for disposal. There has always been a complaint in the past that this department was disposing of goods without giving sufficient information to the public. In other words it was maintained that this department was giving these goods to some selected persons for the benefit of those particular persons. Now, the activities of the Department have been expanded in the direction of advertising the goods. Regularly every month lists are issued of all the goods that are for disposal and the widest publicity is given. Therefore out of this 75 lakhs, nearly 40 lakhs is really for this particular purpose. Some of these will be realised by sale of these lists of goods that are published every year and that are sold to people. It is really on account of unforeseen circumstances that this extra expenditure will be incurred during the course of this year.

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 75,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Department of Industries and Supplies'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND No 60—CURRENCY

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 21,40,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Currency'."

Mr. President: Motion moved.

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 21,40,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Currency'."

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I oppose this motion for this reason.

The note in the memorandum at the bottom says that the excess is due to unanticipated increase in the requirements of bank note paper and the rise in the cost of paper. It is this lavish expenditure on paper that is responsible for inflation in this country. I do not know when this will stop. There is a provision in the Reserve Bank Act that whatever sterling paper is on the one hand, corresponding paper must be printed in the security press and thrown over the head of people for goods being taken away and themselves allowed to starve both in the matter of clothing and food. I would like to have an assurance from the Honourable Member that he will take steps to see that there is no further need to go on printing these notes and throwing them on the heads of people.

Hitherto we have been bound to honour all that paper which has been sent to this country in exchange for gold. Sections 40 and 41 of the Reserve Bank of India Act should be immediately repealed. I would continue to press my objections until my Honourable friend gives me an assurance and no more notes are unnecessarily printed in this country merely to honour sterling paper or other paper. Immediate steps ought to be taken to do away with the linking of our rupee to sterling by the repeal of sections 40 and 41 of the Reserve Bank of India Act.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: My Honourable friend has raised a number of questions. I only hope that he will continue to honour the paper currency of this Government in the same way as he was doing with the last Government. I can assure him that we have no desire to print more notes than what are required but as long as we have to, I am afraid we must buy the best quality paper. Nothing would please me more than to see my Honourable friend juggling metallic money in his pocket rather than carry notes carefully in his waist coat pocket. We are not here discussing the question of inflation and paper currency and then advantages and disadvantages. This extra expenditure has got to be incurred because of the rise in the price of note paper which we have to buy from England, until such time as we are able to produce the paper of the required quality in this country, so that forgers may not take advantage of it. I hope my friend will really not oppose this motion. It is very innocent. The intention is really not to print more notes than are needed. We have to print more notes of smaller denomination to make up for the old and paper notes that were withdrawn from circulation. I do not know why my friend thinks that this demand is meant to increase the paper currency of this country. That is not the intention and I can assure him that we will not produce more notes than are required for the economy of the country.

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 21,40,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Currency'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND No 61—MINT.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,46,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Mint'."

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 2,46,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Mint'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND No 62—MISCELLANEOUS

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 16,07,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Miscellaneous'."

Mr. President: Motion moved

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 16,07,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Miscellaneous'."

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Sir, I want to oppose this motion. I feel very strongly on this particular point of subsidising the imported foodstuffs to the tune of 15 crores of rupees. As the House knows very well, I have been maintaining consistently, but without achieving much success, that it is the duty of the Government to make India self-sufficient in regard to food. And in order to achieve that objective, it is necessary for this House and the Government and the consumers in our country to agree to pay adequate and remunerative prices to the producers. But unfortunately I have not been able to persuade the Food Department, irrespective of the particular incumbent who happens to be its Minister, to agree to these two unquestionable propositions. Why is it necessary for India to go on sending various ambassadors to different countries? Only to go there and beg those people on their bended knees to give us more and more foodgrains. Is it because India is not prepared to pay for them? We have been willing to pay and yet they are unwilling to spare these foodgrains to our country. I have myself been to Copenhagen the other day along with my Honourable friend Mr Abdul Gham Khan. We interviewed one after the other various delegations. We pressed them hard. We tried to persuade them in private and in the end when we failed in our private conversations, we made public appeals also in the forum of their own open plenary session and taunted them by saying that it will be wrong on their part to prefer the feeding of their pigs and poultry rather than sent those foodgrains to our country. In spite of that the foodgrains are not coming in sufficient quantities to our country. We did not ask for charity. We offered to pay them any prices they are willing to demand. And here is the Government coming forward and saying that the prices which they have been willing to pay and have been paying are much higher than the foodgrain prices prevailing in our own country. Why should it be so? It is because our Government has not been willing till now to pursue the correct policy in this particular direction. They have been pursuing, on the other hand, a wrong-headed policy and unfortunately for us all they have succeeded in making the Honourable Members in charge of this Department to re-echo their wrong-headed policies, programmes and decisions. What is the position? When it comes to industries and the production for industries, one after the other these Ministers in charge of Industries Department come here to this House and say that they are willing to raise the tariff walls against foreign imports in order to encourage industrial development in our own country. But when it comes to agriculture, they are not prepared to give us any sort of protection. Last time when we had that great economic depression and there were imports of wheat from Australia and rice from Siam pouring into this country and depressing the prices of agricultural produce, it took us several years hard struggle before we could persuade the Government to give a paltry protection to our own peasants. But now that the country is badly in need of foodgrains and our people demand only remunerative and decent prices, prices that will just cover their cost of cultivation, what is the answer that the Food Department has been giving? What is the policy that has been followed by the Food Department? They have been importing foodgrains into this country at prices higher than the prices ruling in our own country and then subsidising the distribution of these imported foodgrains in order that the local prices can be kept down at a reasonable level. But what do they mean by reasonable level? They mean a low enough level. And what do they mean by it? They want the prices to be at such levels as would be profitable for all the urban consumers, for all the service people, for all the professionals and for all those people who have been fattening at the cost of the Government and the public during the last few years of war inflation. In order to benefit these people our agriculturists have to be made to sell their produce not at remunerative prices, not at all at profitable prices but at prices that are purposely kept down with the help of these imported foodgrains.

This is an unjust dispensation. This is a dispensation that no national Government can possibly be proud of. A national Government should take the earliest possible opportunity to put an end to this kind of system. Sir, 15½ crores of rupees are being asked today to grant to this Government in order that they may be able to continue to succeed to keep down our peasants in our own country. I was asked to accept a sort of answer to a judicial inquiry into the proposition whether the present prices ruling in our own rural areas for our agricultural produce are remunerative or not. I said I was quite prepared for it. But why wait till then? Why should not the Food Department as well as the Government of India make up their own mind, first of all, to pay adequate and remunerative prices and then begin to ascertain whether those prices are remunerative at all. Then, they bring in a companionate argument "They must be just to the consumers." What did they mean by this? Did they think of this when they were granting to their own various officials the war time bonuses, dearness allowances, cheap gram shops and various other things? Did they think of all these things when they were granting all these various special concessions to the working classes themselves when the working classes took courage in both their hands and went on strike? They did not do so. Now they begin to think of just prices. To whom are they to be just? Should they not be just to the agriculturists? We do not ask for profits. Just as you are now fixing the prices for manufactured goods and wages for industrial workers, so also you should fix the prices in regard to agricultural produce. But on what basis? See that allowance is made for depreciation to our cattle, agricultural implements and various other things that we are obliged to maintain. See also to the rate of interest that we have to pay and the capital that we borrow from these money-lenders who are of the towns. See also that all the over-head expenses are allowed and in addition to all that . .

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official) But what do you want?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I want to tell you .

Mr. President: Order, Order. I may just remind the Honourable Member that this matter has been fully gone into and discussed during the course of the food debate which lasted for two days. If the Honourable Member wants to oppose this motion, he can just invite the attention of the House to the salient points of the debate and not repeat the whole of it.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I am not repeating the whole debate. First of all, it is not possible for me within ten minutes to repeat the whole of the debate that took place in two days. I am only anxious to make a few points. Therefore, I do not propose to give a detailed answer to my Honourable friend here, who is the spokesman for labour. I only say this. Labour have had a fair deal and they have got the money at the cost of the rest of the public. These Government officials have been getting it too at the cost of everybody. Similarly, it is only reasonable that I should stand up here for a fair deal for the producers of our own primary produce. Sir, when more wages are granted, there is inflation, when more salaries are granted, there is inflation, dearness allowances also produce inflation. And yet the Government do not think of inflation in those cases. But when I ask for remunerative prices for the agricultural producer, they think of inflation. This is a most extraordinary dispensation. I inveigh against this urban system that is eating into the very vitals of our own country among our people. These professionals, intellectuals, and industrialists, and these proletariats who are all living in towns, they have all monopolised the whole show and they raise the cry of bring down the prices. In order to bring down the prices, the first victim and the last victim is the peasant. In putting up prices, in paying taxes, in bearing the whole burden of the cost of this huge administration, it is the peasant that is being exploited. Even when he brings the essential produce to the market, you put him down by refusing to pay more than remunerative price. I ask for nothing more than this that the peasant should get the cost of cultivation. Let no profit be allowed to him, let all the profit go to the Government, the peasant is not hankering after profit, he only wants his cost of cultivation to be met. With all the sense of responsibility, in the name of the peasants of this country, I make this statement that the prices that are paid now, at least in South India, in C P, in Orissa and in certain parts of Bihar are not at all remunerative to the cultivator, are not even such as to cover the cost of cultivation. Therefore, I suggest that you should leave the fixation of price to the Provincial Governments, let the provincial governments say whether the present prices are enough or not. In the past the Government of India officials, including my Honourable friend Mr Sen used to say, if anything was brought forward here the provincial governments should decide that I am prepared to accept the proposition that the provincial governments should decide this issue. The Government of India convene a meeting of the provincial Food Ministers at the Central and tell them, look here, "if you want import or foodgrains for your province you must behave like good boys, to not ask for any rise in price on your own local food grains." What can these poor blighters do? They are supposed to be popular Ministers, they are responsible to the legislatures, but they are up against this big difficulty here that without these imports they will not be able to make their food budget balance itself. Therefore they have got to depend upon the Central Government." If so, they go back to their respective provinces and tell their own people, "now, look here, this is our predicament. What can we do. For God's sake let us have import of food stuffs, unless we fix the price of our food stuffs at such and such a level, the Central Government refuse to allow imports to us. Unless we agree to this proposition we cannot expect any import of food grains. Because we are good Congressmen or good Muslim Leaguers, we are responsible to you, you wanted us to take office. If you want us to remain in office and carry on the administration, then for God's sake allow us to accept the present level of prices fixed by the Government of India even though they are not remunerative." Well, Sir, this is the game that the Government of India are playing. I would not have been so unhappy if the old Government had remained in office. My own Government is now in office. The masses claim the occupants of the Treasury Benches is their own men. They are all exultant over this. In spite of the new Government having come in, if the old dispensation should continue, if the old wrongheadedness of the Food Department should persist, I warn the Government that it will not be long before there is a break in our loyalty to our political parties and our leaders. There is bound to be reaction, there is bound to be trouble and revolution in the offing.

So, there is one thing more I have to say. If you are going to put down our peasants in this way, then I am afraid the peasants will turn round and say, 'no more protection for Indian industries, no more high salaries, no more dearness allowance for Government officials, no increase in wages for workers, no more labour legislation, and all that.' I agree this will be an unreasonable proposition. It will be an unjust challenge from the peasants, I agree. But when a man is forced to the extreme and reasonable and square deal is not given to him, then he is bound to become unreasonable. There is one other danger. Already it is happening among our people. They prefer the production of non-food crops to production of food crops. Come to my own province and see for yourself. Our people are not willing to produce food crops, so much as they are anxious to raise tobacco, sugar cane, oil seeds and various other things. I know in northern India, you use oil seeds, but in South India do not eat oil seeds, we want cholum, rice and other things. But our peasants are not prepared to raise these crops. Why? Not because of propaganda, but because of their own decision individual decision one after another because production of food grains is the least remunerative indeed it is a losing proposition. Whereas by producing only these commercial crops, they are able to make both ends meet and also subsidise production of foodgrains. Therefore even if we are not prepared as kisan-congress people to provide for necessary leadership to help them in their threat to go on strike, to go on food strike, I know the Government by their policy is not going to engineer a food strike, I myself do not like food strike, but nobody likes the way in which the Government is treating the peasants. Our peasants will soon come to their own and will drive wisdom into our people, into the government officials who are at the helm of affairs who are all non-kisans and yet who are playing a powerful part in the political life of this country. If things do not improve, then I am afraid this unhappy and unpalatable alternative may have to be resorted to by those people who claim to be genuine representatives, genuine spokesmen and also genuine organisers of the peasants in this country. Sir, I oppose this motion.

Mr. B. R. Sen: Sir, as you yourself pointed out, this subject was discussed during the food debate. It is unfortunate that Prof. Ranga had to be absent from that debate. If he were here, he would have seen that all aspects of this question were gone into in detail. It is true that in order to arrive at the proper price level, one must have certain data, for instance the cost of production. But up to now, we have had no reliable material on the subject. Prof. Ranga has argued that the present prices are unremunerative. But what is the evidence he gives to prove his point? Mere statement.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Come to my villages.

Mr. B. R. Sen: During the food debate, I pointed out that we had just received the report of the committee which we had appointed presided over by Sir V. T. Krishnamachari and that report also lays down the mechanism by which the price levels in future should be fixed. Certain preliminary enquiries have to be made regarding the cost of production, the cost of articles which go into the cost of living producers and so on. They say that this collection of material will require time and in the transition period the Government should try and fix the price at parity levels, that is levels which have some parity with the cost of other things. Sir, the Honourable Food Member during the food debate gave reasons in detail why his conclusion was that the present price levels were not unremunerative and should be continued. In the course of his speech, he quoted certain figures about the rise in price levels of certain commodities. These figures are before Honourable Members of the House and they can examine these figures. The figures show that the price level of all foodgrains was about 150 taking 1939-40 as the basic period, the price level of other articles was less than 300, except in the case of one or two items. That being so, it seems reasonable to hold that the foodgrains prices at present are not unremunerative. Sir, I also quoted during the food debate from the report of the Woodhead Commission which had examined the price level which should be fixed for the post war period. Though it must be admitted that they did not have all the necessary data before them, the commission was composed of people who were able and impartial men and their findings must command our respect. They came to the conclusion that the price level for the postwar period for foodgrains should be 240 per cent of the prewar level and 240 per cent was represented by the price level in Madras. They thought that that was the level which all Governments should try to aim at. (Interruption from Prof. Ranga) I know it is very difficult to convince Prof. Ranga once he has made up his mind. I can only refer to the salient points which are mentioned in the course of the debate. Sir, I was rather surprised at his statement that prices in this country have been kept down by imports. For a statement of this nature to be made by Prof. Ranga is amazing.

Sgt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadan Rural): Are they competitive imports or are they absolutely necessary?

Mr. B. R. Sen: These are absolutely necessary.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I may draw attention to what they have themselves said. "To retain the existing price level"—this subsidisation is being granted.

Mr. B. R. Sen: The point is quite clear. The prices of rice and wheat which we get from outside with the freight and other costs come to very much more than the prices within the country, and therefore if the present price level which is considered high for the consumers is not to be raised still further, the difference between the prices of the imported grains and the prices of the internal grains must be subsidised. It is a clear proposition and I do not see any reason for a conclusion to be drawn from it like the one which Prof. Ranga has drawn. No one would be happier than the Food Department if they had not had to import such large quantities from outside the country. The Honourable Food Member also emphasised during the Food Debate that in the imme-

[Mr B R Sen]

date future the greatest emphasis of the Interim Government would be laid on increasing production in this country, and for that Government would do everything possible by way of financial assistance and otherwise

Sir I should like just to mention one point Prof Ranga mentioned that there will be a strike among the growers and so on He must remember that he has got his own Government now in power—it is not the old Government—and it is idle to administer such threats to the present Government He should have more confidence in his leaders, as I said to one of his colleagues in this House the other day during the Food Debate

Mr. President: The question is

“That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 16,07,00,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of ‘Miscellaneous’ ”

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 68—POST-WAR PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

“That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 1,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of ‘Post-War Planning and Development’ ”

Mr President The question is

“That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 1,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947 in respect of ‘Post War Planning and Development’ ”

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 72—PANTH PIPLODA

The Honourable Mr Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I move

“That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 5,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March 1947 in respect of ‘Panth Piplođa’ ”

Mr President: Motion moved

“That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 5,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March 1947, in respect of ‘Panth Piplođa’ ”

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir we have come to the last of the supplementary demands for this session and you will see that the entire demands cost nearly 22 crores Many of us would like to know how much supplementary amounts have been spent for Defence and External Services Formerly so long as Government was not manned by our own veterans it was their privilege and preserve The Viceroy was not placing it before us and the Assembly was not taken into confidence with regard to that matter Though it may be a little too late now I should like estimates of Defence and External Affairs also in the budget session, now that those estimates are in our own hands to be placed before the Assembly Possibly more than 50 or 60 crores may have been spent away on these departments in addition to the voted estimates We are kept absolutely in the dark and I hope they will be placed before us in the budget session of the House

Mr Manu Subedar (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau Indian Commerce) Sir, I wish to raise a point in regard to this though that has nothing to do with Panth Piplođa According to the constitution of 1919 under which this Government is functioning there was an artificial distinction between reserved and transferred departments There was also a distinction between voted and non-voted items, and as the tradition still continues, even in respect of these grants the words ‘voted’ and ‘non-voted’ have constantly appeared almost under every head I take it that whatever may have been the object of having those distinctions made, I already broke that down last April when I got an assurance from Sir Archibald Rowlands that so far as the Standing Finance Committee is concerned no distinction will be made between voted and non-voted and that all new programmes will be placed before the Standing Committee for their advice and sanction. In the same manner I will request the Finance Minister to go thoroughly into this item and to remove one of those unenviable and bad legacies of the past by which this Government comes to this House and puts down a mixed item column by column and says "On this I want your vote but with regard to the other I do not care what you say, I will have the money." That was the attitude of the last Government, that could not possibly be the attitude of this Government, and I think there is no necessity either. There would be some economy of paper and printing if this is done away with and it would be regularised. I shall be very happy if the Finance Member will give an assurance to this House that he will endeavour to eliminate this distinction between voted and non-voted.

The Honourable Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I am afraid the points made by my two Honourable friends hardly arise out of the demand for Panth Pipoda, but anyhow with regard to the request made it is not really possible to meet the wishes of the two Honourable Members unless the Government of India Act of 1935 were changed. I would refer my Honourable friends to section 67(3).

"The proposals of the Governor General in Council for the appropriation of revenues or monies relating to the various heads of expenditure shall not be submitted to the vote of the Assembly nor shall they be open to discussion by either Chamber at the time when the annual statement is under consideration."

That is the position with regard to this matter. Anyhow the matter has been raised and I shall certainly examine it and if within the law it is possible to meet the wishes of Honourable Members they may rest assured that I shall give my sympathetic consideration to it.

Mr. President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 5000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the calendar ending on the 31st day of March, 1947 in respect of 'Panth Pipoda'."

The motion was adopted.

DISCUSSION OF DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS

Miss Maniben Karz (Nominated Non-Official) Sir, I move

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. N. M. Joshi, Mr. P. G. Solunke, Mr. H. M. Ghazanfarulla, Syed Sher Shah Jeelani, Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Seth Sukhdev, Mr. Madandhari Singh, Mr. C. P. Lawson, Mr. Bhagratshi Mahapatra, Sir George Spence, Col. Kumar Shri Himmatsingh and the Mover, with instructions to report on the opening day of the next Budget Session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Mr. President: The question is

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. N. M. Joshi, Mr. P. G. Solunke, Mr. H. M. Ghazanfarulla, Syed Sher Shah Jeelani, Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Seth Sukhdev, Mr. Madandhari Singh, Mr. C. P. Lawson, Mr. Bhagratshi Mahapatra, Sir George Spence, Col. Kumar Shri Himmatsingh and the Mover, with instructions to report on the opening day of the next Budget Session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS FOR 1946-47—RAILWAYS

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali (Member for Railways and Transport) I am not quite sure whether I should make a short statement which may cover the entire field of the demands which are going to be placed before this House. I think it would be by far the most convenient way of dealing with them if I offer an explanation of the aggregate effect of the demands instead of taking one demand after another. I may also mention, Sir, that these supplementary demands are submitted for the vote of the House during the autumn session, because it was argued during the Budget session that supplementary grants for the current year should not follow but precede the normal budget demands. It is but only in the fitness of things that it should be so, because towards the end of the financial year much of the expenditure incurred in excess of the budget really becomes an ex post facto report and therefore the House can have a legitimate grievance that the true picture of the excess was not presented to them, in good time.

The aggregate of all the demands which I shall submit to the vote of the House today is of the order of 26½ crores which is made up of all the ten items put down on the list of demands including a sum of about ten lakhs which are non-voted. Of these ten demands seven relate to working expenses under practically all heads except demand No 6(d) which relates to the maintenance and operation of ferry steamers. The remaining three demands fall under 'Railway Board', 'Audit' and 'Miscellaneous'.

The estimate of the ordinary working expenses of railways for the current year was placed by my predecessor at 125.73 crores and the estimate of the miscellaneous expenditure was 1½ crores. The excess as may be gathered from the details, which appear in the memorandum placed before the Railway Standing Finance Committee and which are in the hands of Honourable Members, has arisen from various causes and is distributed over almost all the heads of working expenses. An excess of 25 lakhs under 'Miscellaneous Expenditure' is in respect of the three demands under 'Railway Board', 'Audit' and 'Miscellaneous'.

The common factors of all the demands except Demand No 3 'Miscellaneous' are arrears of dearness allowance and the interim relief recommended by the Standing Finance Committee of Railways which form the basis of the settlement with the All-India Railwaymen's Federation in June last. The cost of giving retrospective effect from the 1st July 1944 to the revision of the dearness allowance originally sanctioned from the 1st January 1945 is estimated by railways to amount to 2.28 crores and the amount which will have to be paid by way of interim relief and for which I shall seek the vote of the House under the various demands for working expenses amounts to 8.43 crores. The total cost of the interim relief is a few lakhs more, namely 59,000 under Demand No 1 and 115,000 under Demand No 2 and a small unassessed amount under Demand No 12 and 3.03 lakhs under Demand No 6(d). The expenditure under Demand 12 and 6(d) of the normal budget demands is expected to be met from savings under other heads in those demands.

The estimate of the loss on grainshops in the budget was placed at 11.33 crores on the assumption that prices in 1946-47 would come down to a level lower than that which prevailed in 1945-46. But actually the prices of grains and pulses have gone up and recently the Government have sanctioned a substantial increase of the price of sugar. Consequently the present estimate of the loss on grainshops is 14.53 crores.

Again as a part of the settlement with the All-India Railwaymen's Federation in June last, an assurance was given by the Railway Board that until the Adjudicator's Award has been considered no railway employee who was in service on the 15th September 1945, would be discharged unless he refused to accept alternative employment. The terms on which alternative employment would be offered were also liberalised. As a result of this railways have not been able to keep their expenditure on staff to the level estimated in the budget and an extra provision of 96 lakhs is necessary. It will thus be seen that an increase of 14.87 crores is due directly or indirectly to staff charges.

Out of the balance, 7.66 crores represent a throw forward from the last year. This is not a genuine excess any more than the corresponding saving last year was a genuine saving. It is a purely paper transaction arising out of the peculiarities of Government budgeting which proceeds on the assumption that the railways go out of business every year on the 31st March and recommence their business on the 1st April. Whatever liability is not discharged by the 31st March, naturally, therefore, results in a saving and the consequential payment in the next year becomes an excess which must be specially voted by the Assembly.

[At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Khan Mohammad Yamin Khan).]

There are, however, a few items which constitute a genuine excess. They are (i) Fuel—1.2 crores, (ii) Repairs and maintenance—90 lakhs, and (iii) Other miscellaneous items—111 lakhs.

When my predecessor presented his budget for this year the total fuel bill was expected to be 20.37 crores. On account of the additional train services which have been introduced since, the present estimate is 21.57 crores, i.e., one crore and twenty lakhs more. We have also to spend 90 lakhs more on repairs and maintenance. These excesses should not be deplored by the House because they indicate that railways are striving hard to catch up with the arrears of repairs and maintenance on the one hand and that they are trying to increase their services to meet the growing demands of the public. There are other miscellaneous items aggregating to 1.14 crores, out of which an item specially worth mentioning is 'Compensation'. We have to provide 18 lakhs for compensation arising out of recent train accidents, which all concerned and much more so the railways sincerely deplore. For goods lost or damaged the budget estimate was placed at 117 lakhs. I have now to increase it by 15 lakhs. Honourable Members have expressed considerable concern and very rightly so over the growth of our expenditure under this head, which increased from 4.26 lakhs in 1938-39 to a crore and a half in 1945-46. Honourable Members may not feel happy over the supplementary demand of 15 lakhs on this account although even now the expenditure will be below that in 1945-46. From the trend of some of the questions that were asked during the session, it appeared that some members at least were not satisfied that we were meeting the claims made against the railways to the fullest extent. But the figures which I have quoted reveal an entirely different tale and prove that we are doing our utmost to meet all legitimate claims which are maintainable under law. It would be unreasonable to expect us to meet claims which may not be genuine or which may arise from the neglect of the rules under which the public are called upon to declare the value of their goods entrusted to railways for safe carriage. Railways expect the travelling public and others who book their goods for carriage by railways not to think of small economies and to take a little more trouble to insure their belongings and goods at a little extra cost. Let me at the same time explain that this excess does not necessarily connote that measures like strengthening the Watch and Ward which the railways have taken to ensure better care of the goods entrusted to them have not been tolerably effective. The increase should be taken to be due to the intensive effort which has been made by railways to expedite the settlement of outstanding claims.

This is all that I have to say about the increase in working expenses proper. Coming now to the miscellaneous expenditure more than 17 lakhs out of the excess of 25 is under 'Surveys'. This shows that our surveys are proceeding at a more rapid pace than we had hoped for at the time of the budget. Consequently the Government will be able to take decisions more quickly in regard to the post-war construction projects. This demand for an extra 17 lakhs will therefore, I am sure, be welcomed by the House. Out of the rest, 2/3rd lakhs are due to arrears of dearness allowance and the interim relief and the balance is due to various miscellaneous causes including Contingencies and temporary

[Mr. M. Asaf Ali.]

Miscellaneous establishments The most important of these miscellaneous establishment in which the House will feel interested is the High Power Committee which the Government have decided to set up as a result of the recommendations of the Railway Standing Finance Committee. I may inform the House that we have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. K. C. Neogy as the Chairman of this High Power Committee.

Finally, I may inform the House although this question does not arise directly out of the demands, which I am to submit to the House today, that the Government have taken definite steps to accelerate the pace of the programme for the production of locomotives in India. Our plans have been matured and preliminary steps are already in progress and it is hoped that the bulk of our requirements in respect of locomotives will be produced in India within three years from now. The period of three years may appear to be somewhat long, but we must not forget that gigantic works of construction which will have to be taken in hand cannot be completed overnight. Sir, I have done as far as my explanatory remarks are concerned and I shall now proceed to move for grants put down on the Order Paper.

DEMAND No. 1—RAILWAY BOARD

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 3,78,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Railway Board'."

Mr. Deputy President: Motion moved.

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 3,78,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947 in respect of 'Railway Board'."

Mr. S. Guruswami (Nominated Non-Official): I should like to oppose the demand for the grant made by the Honourable Member for Railways because of the reference he has made to the agreement between the Railway Department and the All-India Railwaymen's Federation and this has not been implemented in full. I should like to point out Sir that in June last when this country was faced with the threat of an all-India strike with the connivance of the members of the Railway Finance Standing Committee pressing was brought to bear upon the workers to withdraw their substantial demands and one of the points of agreement whereby the Railwaymen's Federation should withdraw their strike notice and that there should be no inter-union relief.

Mr. Deputy President: Order, order. I must inform the Honourable Member that when a supplementary sum is asked for, questions of policy cannot be discussed. The only thing that can be discussed is whether on its merits this particular grant can be sanctioned. But to discuss the policy of the Railway Board or whether it should remain in existence these are matters that can be discussed at the time of the budget. But if the Honourable Member is going to say anything why this particular demand should not be granted, he may do so.

Mr. S. Guruswami: I am not discussing the general policy of the Railway Board but their failure to implement the agreement reached between the All-India Railwaymen's Federation and the Board. My objection to this grant is based on this. The Board agreed to implement a certain agreement.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member is again going into the same position.

Mr. S. Guruswami: Very well, Sir, I shall not quarrel about words. But I shall take this opportunity to point out a big interim which has not been mentioned by the Honourable the Railway Member. He failed to point out that the interim relief has not been granted to those who were in railway service between July 1945 and 1st August 1946. This is failure No. 1.

No. 2 is this. He has failed to give the benefit to several thousands of railwaymen who have been designated by him as casual labourers. On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway their number is 26 000. Perhaps the men involved in this category would come to nearly a lakh on all Railways and these men are deprived of dearness allowance. They are deprived of the benefits of the grain shops and also of the benefits of the interim relief. In these two respects—by the failure to give the interim relief to these railwaymen who served the railways between 1st June 1945 and the 1st August 1946, in spite of the representation made by the All-India Railwaymen's Federation, and by the failure of the Railway Board to give to those already in service and those who were in service from 1st July 1945, the Railway Board has been guilty of failure to observe the agreement. Not only that, they assured the All-India Railwaymen's Federation that there would be no retrenchments during the period of adjudication.

Mr. Deputy President: I am afraid the Honourable Member is beating about the bush. I have informed him that he cannot discuss the failure or otherwise of the Railway Board on a supplementary grant. He can do that at the time of the Budget Session. But here now he can say whether this expenditure which the Railway Board has incurred is unnecessary or should not be allowed on certain grounds, and he can throw it out. But the question of policy, whether the Railway Board has failed to do certain other things which were in their power to do, that does not come up at this time. That has been the ruling in this House for many years.

Mr. S. Guruswami: My point is that the supplementary grant is intended in respect of the Railway Board. They do not deserve the grant that they have asked for for the failure to implement the agreement that was reached between the Railwaymen's Federation and the Railway Board.

The third point which I was developing was this, that there was an agreement to suspend retrenchment during the pendency of the adjudication. I have received a complaint from the B. B. & C. I. Railwaymen that they propose to close the Wagon Erection Workshops at Mahalakshmi. Nearly 600 men are to lose their jobs, because of the decision of the Railway to stop the works. You are talking of developing wagon construction and what are you doing here? You are closing down the workshops in Mahalakshmi. Is this the way of developing wagon construction in India?

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member is making a speech and probably he may be right in what he says but I can give him permission to speak when the question comes up under working expenses or expenses of the traffic department or he may speak when the Miscellaneous item comes up.

Mr. S. Guruswami: Sir, all this is due to the violation of the agreement reached with the Railwaymen's Federation. I have mentioned three important points which require explanation if the Honourable Member for Railways wants a willing vote for the supplementary demand which he has moved.

Sreejunt Bohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam Valley, Non-Muhammadan). Sir, if the Honourable Member in charge of the Railways comes to know more of the affairs in his department he will be shocked by one singular fact that one province in this sub-continent of India has been entirely excluded so far as representation in the railway services is concerned. There is only one officer coming from that province and that officer happened to be appointed because he was already in the Assam Bengal Railway, when it was a company-managed railway and was subsequently brought under the control of the State. Since then no officer has been appointed from that province at all. Not to speak of an officer.

Mr. Deputy President: Order, order. The Honourable Member must understand my ruling. I have explained the distinction. This point can be raised at the time of the budget and then the Honourable Member will be perfectly in order to say that a particular grant should not be made, on account of the grievances which he has got. But once having agreed that the Railway

[Mr. Deputy President]

Board must expend and this having been done, the House is only asked for its sanction to the extra expenditure, which has come before the House in the shape of a supplementary demand. Members may be perfectly in order when they say that this extra expenditure should not be granted on the ground that it is not being properly utilised or is being used for objectionable purposes but they will not be in order if they discuss another matter of policy.

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, these grants are now being asked for on account of the pay of officers, who have been appointed during recent months, that is to say, after the budget was passed and I say that this amount should not be given, because these appointments have been made in contravention of the policy which ought to be adopted by the Railway Board. I shall be told in reply that appointments on the railway are not made on a territorial basis but on a communal basis. I grant it but is it possible for anybody to believe that even on a communal basis one province alone should be entirely excluded from consideration? Is it conceivable for anybody to believe that a province which has carried on its administration with credit as an autonomous province and a province which has led the way of suffering that province is incompetent to produce really competent men? Can anyone believe that? My submission is that there is a ring of officers who are in charge of filling up these posts and they give these appointments to their relations.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: On a point of order, Sir, I am unable to understand why this debate is proceeding, because if Honourable Members will look at the memorandum in their hands they will realise in respect of which particular item this sum is required and I do not see how we can go round that limit.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official): May I say one word, Sir, as regards this point of order. The Honourable Member made a speech lasting for over 15 minutes. May I ask him on what item he made that speech? He made a general statement concerning all items and when we are now speaking he asks on what item we are speaking. It is not a fair question to ask. He made a fairly long statement despite the impatience of the House to get to the next item on the programme. He took up the time of the House and made a long general statement and nobody objected but he objects to other people making general statements.

Mr. Deputy President: I think the Honourable Member for Railways is perfectly right in pointing out to the House that on page 12 of the proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee for Railways, dated the 6th November, 1946 which has been circulated to Honourable Members, the purposes for which this demand has been asked have been clearly given. Any Honourable Member going beyond this will not be in order.

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, the matter is of very recent occurrence and it has occurred subsequent to the passing of the budget. The Railway was taken over by the Government now. While the railway was under company management the company was more sympathetic to the people of the province than what the Government is now. There were people of the province employed in that railway and they were all transferred to Calcutta thus causing great inconvenience to them.

Mr. Deputy President: Order, Order. I am afraid the Honourable Member must know the distinction which I have very clearly made. These things can come only at the time of the budget. Supplementary grants only refer to certain items of expenditure and if an Honourable Member objects to certain items, that they should not have been granted or that certain posts should not have been excluded, then of course he will be perfectly in order. This is not the time to discuss the whole policy of the Railway Board or its failure to discharge its duty. It should not be done at the time of the supplementary grants but at the time of the Railway Budget. That has been the ruling many times in this House as Honourable Member must be aware.

Sreejot Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, could you not make any allowance for a new Member?

Mr. Deputy President: For the guidance of new members I have explained the position at this length, so that they may know how to proceed. It is the business of the House with which the Chair is concerned and the Chair has to keep up order and to conduct the proceedings according to the rules and Standing Orders.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I want to take only two minutes on the question of interim relief.

The Honourable Mr. Asaf Ali: Interim relief is covered by working expenses all over. There are so many items.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Therefore, Sir, I want your guidance. They are spread all over and I think my friend Mr. Guruswami was right in making a sort of general statement in reply to the Honourable Member. I want to speak only for two minutes on that question, if you will permit me, I shall speak now, or if you permit me later, I shall speak then, as that item is spread over all demands.

Mr. Deputy President: I think the Honourable Member will be in order in speaking on 'Miscellaneous Expenditure'.

Sgt. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division Non-Muhammadan Rural). Sir, the trouble has started because the Honourable Member for Railways began a novel practice—instead of moving one demand and inviting criticism on that whether of policy or on financial grounds, he prefaced the whole thing by a long speech raising many points, and this has occasioned criticism from several sections of the House. I want your ruling, Mr. Deputy President, that the criticism of members should be confined to the items actually moved or to whatever has been referred to by the Honourable Member in his speech.

Mr. Deputy President: When making his speech, the Honourable Member tried to make a speech on all items at once and then he reserved only the moving of the items one by one as he did not like to make a speech on every item and support it by facts.

Dr. Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Division Muhammadan Rural). No more speeches, Sir. The question may now be put.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras Ceded Districts and Chittoor Non-Muhammadan Rural). May I submit that the Honourable Member's speech helped us very much to understand exactly what the items are? We are spending about 27 crores by way of supplementary expenditure, and you and I, Sir, in the Standing Finance Committee voted to the tune of Rs. 9 crores spread over a number of these items. I thought any of our friends might be allowed an opportunity to say what he thought regarding that item. As regards the manufacture of locomotives, we know the Honourable Member is in earnest and wants to speed it up, that also is spread over a number of items. As regards the High Power Committee, the Honourable Member gave a resume of what is contained in the various demands, and I thought some of our friends who are taking interest in this matter would appreciate the speech. There is no limit if each one of us goes on speaking on each item. Instead of that, one of our friends will take up each item and make a few observations. If you will permit me I will say a few words about it. (Some Honourable Members: No, no!) We are not sitting tomorrow and hence we may have to sit for a few minutes after five. I am trying to avoid discussion. 27 crores is not a small matter, and if you will permit I will finish in ten or seven minutes.

Mr. Deputy President: The Honourable Member wants to speak on what?

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: In respect of such matters as come under these items I will give an undertaking that I will not speak on any other matters. After all the Chair is entitled to devise methods of procedure for proper conduct of business and it has got extraordinary power too.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Nominated Non-Official) On a point of order, Sir, you may follow any procedure on the present occasion, but that procedure should not be allowed to become a precedent. A ruling must be given that whatever procedure is followed now should not be a precedent for the future. This is developing into a general debate.

Mr. Deputy President: I have given my ruling that the debate must be confined to the items of expenditure, and in discussing supplementary grants members are not entitled to review the general policy of the department. They can do so only at the time of the general budget. But now they should confine themselves to the items of supplementary expenditure, whether they agree with it or not. That has been the practice hitherto followed and it is laid down in May's Parliamentary Practice and I have been shown several rulings to this effect. Every Honourable Member has got a copy with him and they know it well. But here as the Honourable Member has already made one speech, another member says he wants to make a speech once and will not speak on any other item. So, I say that can be allowed.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I shall confine myself to the demands and to the excess or new demands that have come into existence. First of all, I would have wished—you and I, Sir, were all members of the Standing Finance Committee—that having regard to various items of importance that come up before the Standing Finance Committee, the Honourable Member himself will hereafter preside. There is nothing out of the way in my suggestion. Any member of the government who is nominated can be the Chairman. Hitherto the Financial Adviser has been the Chairman. We are beating the air there. The Financial Commissioners cannot lay down policy and these big items involve policy. I would make that suggestion for the acceptance of government after full consideration.

Then, as regards dearness allowance, costing nearly Rs 9 crores, we are certainly obliged to our honourable friend, Mr. Guruswami, for having averted a crisis which would otherwise have occurred, also honourable members and the Standing Finance Committee and all others co-operated in averting that great calamity and disaster. As regards the distribution of this Rs 9 crores, the policy was laid down by the Standing Finance Committee. Unfortunately the Railway Board to this day consists not entirely of our own nationals. Other nationals take a different view, and I will not be satisfied until this is entirely managed by Indian nationals from top to bottom. Friction has arisen. We have given nine crores but in distributing it why should there be any trouble? There is friction there. My honourable friend, who tried to co-operate with us, in the Finance Committee and outside also, would have been easily satisfied by small adjustments here and there. That is exactly what he wants. But if there is trouble he can go and start a strike tomorrow. It is not worthwhile to quarrel with Mr. Guruswami. I am not instigating him. I am only advising government and the Railway Board in particular not to allow small differences to exist where we have tried to do away with major differences.

I would like to say one word. We have agreed that when the Pay Commission decide this matter it will have retrospective effect and we also suggested that the Pay Commission should be requested to dispose of the salaries and wages of railwaymen first, as the first item. But no steps have been taken so far, they have put it off to the end. I do not know when it is coming on. It is up to the Railway Board and the Honourable Member to insist on the Pay Commission taking up this matter first and disposing of it, because we have agreed that we will give retrospective effect to whatever recommendations are made, whereas the rest of the Government of India have not made any such commitment. There is an overhanging burden upon us and therefore the government must take note.

As regards these grain shops, it has become a sink-pit. I am told the richer men are taking advantage of it. Various articles which the ordinary people do not want are being purchased. We have tried to vote and give 14 crores on account of the higher cost of materials—we are spending 14 odd crores over these grain shops they have become sunk pits and the sooner they are closed the better, the sooner the higher charges are given and the basic pay is fixed, the better for us. We will know exactly and the workmen will also know actually what they ought to get, instead of this round-about manner which does not count at all.

As regards the High Power Committee, I am glad that the Honourable Member has announced that a very experienced and able parliamentarian, a gentleman who knows the details of the work and has served on various committees, Mr Neogy, is going to be the chairman of the High Power Committee. As you know that is intended for the purpose of implementing what decisions are taken by this Pay Commission. They may say that the basic salary shall be increased, in which case we must make both ends meet and curtail unnecessary expenditure in various ways, we must also try to produce all the various articles needed and to advise on steps to economise expenditure on railway administration. The sooner it comes and begins to work the better. I would only urge that the Honourable Member should not find talent only outside the Assembly but also try to find inside the Assembly also for this business. So far as the manufacture of locomotives in the country is concerned, I would urge upon the Honourable Member to go to England himself and see things for himself. It only takes two days to go and two days to come back. He can very well spend a week there and find out in what ways real progress can be made so that we need not wait for three years. He can see what instructions can be given to the High Commissioner and other officers so that they can push the thing through as early as possible.

As regards coal, there is an excess in the fuel expenditure. There is a recommendation by my Honourable friend Mr Neogy as a member of the Coal Committee that all the coal fields should be purchased by the State, so that in the matter of fuel the railways may be self-sufficient, which we are not now.

As regards surveys the previous government had its own view. We are spending 17 lakhs under the head Surveys. During the war a number of lines were dismantled. Instead of restoring the old lines in consultation with the Local Governments, new lines have been surveyed. I would say that this item may be curtailed. The previous provincial governments did not really voice the views of the community. Other agencies might be adopted or the present Governments may be consulted in regard to the surveys of new lines. I would ask the Railway Board to consult the popular Governments afresh before other surveys are proceeded with.

There is the question also of loss of goods in transit. The station master and the guard and the other persons in charge should be made responsible. In the matter of wagon supply, I would like to state that when I presided over a conference of railwaymen, one of them said 'What am I to do when overnight they give Rs 200 for getting a wagon. How can I refuse this amount?' Under the company managed system they were paying less. They wanted the railway servants to make as much money as possible from the general public. The Honourable Member, I take it, would like to put a stop to corruption as quickly as possible. The quality of the administration depends on the decrease in the loss on transit. Mungoes are sent and they are stolen. Somebody eats them away at the other end or on the way. The test will be how far my Honourable friend during his term of office will be able to curtail this item of unnecessary waste to the tune of a crore and a half.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I am very grateful to my friend Mr Ayyangar for speaking a word in favour of railwaymen.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I am always with you.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: The Government got a settlement of the strike which was likely to take place at that time very cheap. The credit is not due to the Government of India. It is due to the fact that at that time there was a critical political situation in the country and the railwaymen did not like to [Mr N M Joshi] complicate that political situation and therefore they accepted the terms offered to them by the Government of India on the advice of the Standing Finance Committee. The Government of India should not take advantage of that fact and refuse to give interim relief to people who deserve it. At present as my Honourable friend Mr Guruswami has stated, that interim relief is not given to what they call daily rated men. This term daily rated is wrongly used. These daily rated men have been serving for years on the daily rate. I do not know why they are called daily rated. They work in the same workshop for years together and on the ground that they are daily rated and temporary, they are not given any interim relief. I would like the Government to remove this injustice. It might cost a little more but that cost is worth incurring. Secondly if there are any closures of workshops causing retrenchment, I would point out that the Government of India have given their word to the railwaymen that they will not cause any retrenchment for some time. I would therefore like the Honourable Member to give his earnest attention to these matters and even though it may cost something more, he should satisfy the railwaymen as regards the interim relief.

Mr. I. S. Puri (Government of India Nominated Official) I will only deal with two points that have been raised today—one is about interim relief and the other is about the survey expenditure.

As regards interim relief, my friend Mr. Joshi, I think, misunderstood the position when he said that those who are called daily rated men have not been given any relief. The order which was issued in August 1946 provided that the Governor General in Council had been pleased to sanction with retrospective effect from 1st July 1946, a temporary addition to pay of Rs 4/8 per mensem to each monthly rated railway servant in receipt of pay not exceeding Rs 250 per mensem, and of 2 annas 9 pies per day to each daily rated servant. So the daily rated men were entitled to relief in the same way as the monthly rated staff. The point raised by my friend Mr. Guruswami was that those men who were not in service at the time that the interim relief was sanctioned, that is 1st August 1946, were not getting the interim relief. This point was the subject of a question in this House and the Honourable the Railway Member gave the reason why the Government did not find it possible to extend the concession to those who had left the service at the time that the interim relief was sanctioned. The object of the interim relief, as was explained by the Honourable Member, was that those in service should get some lump sum by way of relief. This consideration did not hold in the case of those who had already left the service and there were also practical difficulties in the way. This question was raised, I may mention, by the All-India Railwaymen's Federation when they discussed the matter with the Railway Board and the position was made clear to them and the Railway Board at that time understood that the Railwaymen's Federation had accepted the position as reasonable.

As regards the survey, the position is that all these surveys have been undertaken in respect of railway lines which the various provincial Governments wanted and wherever the new meters have asked for projects to be undertaken, the Railway Board have undertaken to survey those lines. Either these lines are already under survey or their surveys will be undertaken when the staff who are engaged on other surveys are free.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 3,78,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Railway Board'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND No 2—AUDIT

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I beg to move.

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,68,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Audit'."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,68,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Audit'."

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 3—MISCELLANEOUS EXPENDITURE

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 19,23,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Miscellaneous Expenditure'."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 19,23,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Miscellaneous Expenditure'."

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 6-A—WORKING EXPENSES—MAINTENANCE OF STRUCTURAL WORKS

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 4,37,75,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Maintenance of Structural Works'."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 4,37,75,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Maintenance of Structural Works'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND No 6-B—WORKING EXPENSES—MAINTENANCE AND SUPPLY OF LOCOMOTIVE POWER

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 5,44,60,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Maintenance and Supply of Locomotive Power'."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 5,44,60,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Maintenance and Supply of Locomotive Power'."

The motion was adopted

DEMAND No 6-C—WORKING EXPENSES—MAINTENANCE OF CARRIAGE AND WAGON STOCK

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I beg to move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 6,48,45,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Maintenance of Carriage and Wagon Stock'."

Mr. Deputy President: Motion moved:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 6,48,45,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Maintenance of Carriage and Wagon Stock'."

Mr. S. Guruswami: Sir, I should like to oppose this grant because I have received no explanation in regard to the point that I raised that the wagon workshop at Mahalakshmi is to be closed shortly and thousands of men who are working there are to lose their jobs. I have received no explanation on that point. The Financial Commissioner for Railways replied only to the point raised by my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi about the daily rated staff. There has been some misunderstanding on that point. The point that I raised was not about the daily rated staff but about those who are treated under the category of Works charges—Establishment, who are denied the benefit of the interim relief and who are now in service and who have been in service from 1st of July 1945. In spite of the fact that they have been continuously in service for several months they have been deprived of the benefit of the interim relief. I have received no explanation from the Financial Commissioner for Railways why these men who are still in service have been deprived of this interim relief. Their number runs into thousands. In the G.I.P. Railway alone their number exceeds 26,000. This is a gross violation of the agreement between these men and the Government, and I would request the Financial Commissioner for Railways, who has been in touch with this question from the beginning and who knows also that there has been a representation from the Federation on this point, to give a satisfactory answer if he wants a willing vote from our side.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I have noted the fact that my Honourable friend Mr. Guruswami has always been a vigorous advocate of labour and railwaymen and I am perfectly certain that he is now trying to justify his reputation, otherwise I have always found him extremely helpful. In fact, when the South Indian Railway strike was going on, I found him much more helpful than I had ever expected him to be. The point which he has now raised, I am afraid, is somewhat beside the relevant question which we might have debated here. I am not aware of a single railwayman who is in the service of the Railways and who has not received the interim relief.

Mr. S. Guruswami: On a point of explanation.

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: I do not give way. The only persons who are not in receipt and who cannot receive any interim relief are those who are no longer in the service of the Railways. Do you want us to make a hunt for these gentlemen all over India and find out who were in the service of the Railways at a particular date and then go to their houses and say, "Now, will you kindly take this dose?", I cannot understand the logic of those who want the money to be paid to those who are no longer railwaymen. Therefore, I regret to say that I cannot possibly accept the suggestion which has been made by Mr. Guruswami on that point.

Coming to the next question namely, the closing down of a particular workshop, I am not aware of any workshop which is going to be closed down unless people initiate a go-slow-programme and, if they do, I certainly will see that everyone of them is chucked out.

(Mr. Vadilal Lalubhai got up to speak.)

Mr. Deputy President: Does the Honourable Member want to speak? The Government Member has already spoken.

Mr. Vadilal Lalubhai (Ahmedabad Millowner's Association Indian Commerce). Yes, Sir; only on a point of information. I would like to know whether a man who was in employment when these people were paid this interim relief should be paid or should not be paid? Anybody who has served has been paid and whatever has been paid to others must be paid to him also, just as the bonus or the increased dearness allowance or any other kind of payment that has been paid to others ought to be paid to him also

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, this is not a point on which any information is really asked for because my learned friend is a Member of the Central Pay Commission and he ought to know these matters much better than I do. He has examined this question from day to day.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

'That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 6,48,45,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Maintenance of Carriage and Wagon Stock'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND NO 6-E—WORKING EXPENSES—EXPENSES OF TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 3,41,51,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Expenses of Traffic Department'."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 3,41,51,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Expenses of Traffic Department'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND NO 6-F—WORKING EXPENSES—EXPENSES OF GENERAL DEPARTMENTS

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 1,19,31,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Expenses of General Department'."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 1,19,31,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Expenses of General Department'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND NO 6-G—WORKING EXPENSES—MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSES

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 4,02,56,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Miscellaneous Expenses'."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 4,02,56,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Miscellaneous Expenses'."

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND NO 6-H—WORKING EXPENSES—EXPENSES OF ELECTRICAL DEPARTMENT

The Honourable Mr. M. Asaf Ali: Sir, I move

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 83,77,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Expenses of Electrical Department'."

Mr. Deputy President: The question is—

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs 83,77,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1947, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Expenses of Electrical Department'."

The motion was adopted

Sjt. N. V. Gadgil: Now that the Demands for supplementary grants are over, it is the general desire of the House to adjourn the House now.

The Honourable Mr. Jagjivan Ram (Labour Member) My Bill will take only ten minutes and if the House should sit for a little time longer, my Bill will be finished

Mr. Deputy President: Unless some Honourable Member on behalf of Government says that no further business of the House is going to be moved, I have got to go through the agenda as it is before the House. It is the duty of the Chair to carry on Government Business

Mr. N. M. Joshi: The House can sit for half an hour more and transact the labour legislation.

Mr. Deputy President: It is for the Honourable the Leader of the House to say whether he wants no more Business to be put through

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Leader of the House): Only four minutes more are left for five of the Clock and the House will not be able to do much within that time

Mr. Deputy President: It seems to be the general desire that no more business should be taken up. The House will now adjourn

The Assembly then adjourned sine die.

NOTIFICATION

Salt

New Delhi, the 9th February 1946

No 2 Camp—In exercise of the powers conferred by clause XVII of sub-section (2) of section 37 of the Central Excise and Salt Act, 1944 (I of 1944) and in supersession of the notification of the Government of India in the Finance Department (Central Revenues) No 27-Salt, dated the 1st October 1927, the Central Government is pleased to remit the duty imposed under subsection (1) of section 3 of the said Act, on salt manufactured in or imported by sea or land into the Province of Bombay, when such salt is used ~~within~~ the said Province or with the special approval of the Central Government in any other place, for any industrial purpose other than the preparation of refined salt or as an ingredient or preservative in any article of food or drink subject to the following rules—

1 Any person intending to use salt in an industrial process (hereinafter referred to as the manufacturer) and wishing to be admitted to the concession shall make an application to the Collector of Central Excise, Bombay, stating the process of manufacture in which he intends to use the salt and the approximate quantity of salt required in the year. If he wishes the concession to extend to more than one factory or works, a separate application must be made for each such factory or works, even if they are situated in the same premises.

2 Any person having his factory or works in an Indian State adjoining the territorial jurisdiction of the Collector and intending to use salt manufactured in or imported by sea or land into the Province of Bombay shall submit his application to the Collector through the Political Officer of the State concerned and all such applications shall be referred by the Collector of the Central Government for sanction.

3 The Central Government or the Collector while sanctioning an application may, if necessary, fix the maximum quantity of salt upto which refund of duty may be allowed in a year. The sanctioning authority may fix different maximum limits for different factories or works run by a manufacturer. The limit so fixed may be varied from time to time by the sanctioning authority.

4 If the application is sanctioned, the manufacturer shall forthwith execute and lodge with the Chief Accounts Officer, Central Excise Collectorate, Bombay, an agreement in Form B appended to these rules. He shall also pay to the aforesaid Collector a supervision fee of Rs 100 to cover the cost of inspection and any other departmental expenses involved. Provided that if the concession is granted after six months of a financial year have expired, the supervision fee payable for the said year shall be Rs 50 and that if the full annual fee of Rs 100 has been paid and a concession is surrendered before the expiry of six months of a financial year or in the case of a new grantee, within six months of the grant, Rs 50 shall be refunded.

5 The rebate of duty will be allowed on salt used on and from the date of payment of the supervision fee into the Treasury or from the date of execution of the agreement whichever is later.

6 After the execution of the agreement, the manufacturer shall in the first instance provide himself with duty paid salt either from (1) a Government salt-store, or agency depots in Gujarat, or (2) a licensee of a private salt works or (3) a firm of salt dealers approved by the Collector of Central Excise, Bombay. At the close of each quarter the manufacturer shall submit an application for the refund of duty on the salt used, supported by the receipt in Form C of the firm of approved salt dealers or the agency depot from which salt has been purchased or by the salt removal permit in Form D in the case of salt obtained from a licensee of a private salt-works or by the certificate in Form F in the case of salt obtained from a Government Salt-store. Forms "C", "D" and "F" are appended to these rules.

7 No refund of duty shall be allowed unless an application for such refund reaches the officer of the Central Excise Collectorate appointed in accordance with rule 10 below, within three months of the close of the relevant quarter.

8 For the purpose of these rules, duty on salt purchased in the market shall be deemed to have been paid at the rate in force on the date of purchase.

9 (1) The application for the refund of duty shall contain the following particulars—

(i) The balance of salt in store at the beginning of the quarter.

(ii) The quantity of salt purchased during the quarter.

(iii) The quantity of salt used during the quarter, and the quantity on which a refund of duty is applied for.

(iv) The balance of salt in hand at the close of the quarter
 (v) The quantity, weight and such other details of products manufactured during the quarter as may be required by the Assistant Collector of Central Excise of the sub-division hereinafter referred to as the Assistant Collector

(vi) A declaration stating the product manufactured and the name and situation of the factory or works, and that the salt on which a refund is applied for has been used bona fides by the applicant in the process of manufacture of such product at such factory or works

(2) The particulars entered in accordance with clauses (i), (ii), (iii) and (iv) of sub-rule (1) shall distinguish between salt on which duty has been paid, or is deemed under rule 8 to have been paid, at different rates

10 The application for the refund of duty shall be sent to the officer of the Central Excise Collectorate appointed in this behalf who shall after verifying the figures forward it to the aforesaid Assistant Collector for disposal

11 The manufacturer shall provide and set apart, for the storage of the salt purchased for use in the factory, a store-room which shall be to the satisfaction of the Assistant Collector, securely constructed and fitted with a strong door capable of being locked. Salt manufactured in the Province and salt imported shall be stored separately in the store-room as also shall salt on which duty has been paid or is under rule 8 deemed to have been paid, at different rates

12 Each consignment of salt procured under this concession shall be stored separately in the store-room and distinctively marked, and the applicant shall not use any goods from any such consignment until all the salt previously procured has been expended and entered as expended in his accounts

13 (1) The store room shall not be opened except between the hours of sunrise and sunset, and then only for one of the following purposes, namely —

- (a) for the receipt of salt into the store,
- (b) for the preparation by grinding or for the issue of salt required for purposes connected with manufacture,
- (c) to allow the stock of salt to be checked by weighment or otherwise by officers of the Central Excise Collectorate

(2) The store room shall not be opened except by or in the presence of the Manager of the factory or the store keeper of the factory, the latter shall retain the key of the store room in his own possession provided that when the store-keeper is away from the premises of the factory or works, he shall leave the key with the Manager

(3) The key of the store room shall be available at the premises of the factory to facilitate inspection of the store room by the officer of the Central Excise Collectorate, Bombay, not below the rank of Range Officer, at any time between the hours of sunrise and sunset failing which the manufacturers shall be liable to a fine not exceeding rupees one hundred for each occasion the inspecting officer has to return without being able to inspect the store-room

14 All spent-lye or other useless refuse containing salt shall be effectually destroyed on or near the premises in such manner as the Collector of Central Excise, Bombay, may direct

15 The factory or works may be entered and examined at any time by any officer of the Bombay Central Excise Collectorate not below the rank of a Range Officer authorised by the Assistant Collector, or by any officer of the Central Excise Collectorate of a province other than Bombay who may be especially empowered in this behalf by the Central Board of Revenue or by an officer of the Baroda State empowered in this behalf by the Darbar in respect of factories or works situated within that State, and due facilities for examining the manufacturers salt register as well as for checking the stock of salt received, expended and in hand, shall be afforded by the Manager and all servants of the manufacturer. Salt shall be stored in the bags in which it is received from the salt-works or depot and the bags shall be arranged in tiers so as to facilitate checking and weighment

16 The register referred to in rule 15 shall be written up daily and signed by the Manager or Store-keeper and shall be in Form A hereto annexed. Separate register shall be maintained for salt manufactured in the Province of Bombay and for imported salt

17 The Manager of the factory shall furnish the Assistant Collector through the officer of the Central Excise Collectorate appointed by him for the purpose with a monthly statement to be posted by the 10th of each following month, showing the opening balance of salt at the beginning of the month, the quantity purchased during the month, the quantity expended during the month, the balance at the close of the month and the weight or quantity or other particulars required by the Assistant Collector of the production during the month of the article for which the salt was used. The manufacturer's book showing the weight or quantity of the article dealt with and of the product manufactured shall be open at any time to the inspection of any officer of the Central Excise Collectorate not below the rank of a Range Officer.

18. (1) On any breach of these rules by the manufacturer, or there being reason to believe that the concession of rebate of duty on the salt used by the said manufacturer is being otherwise abused, the Collector shall be competent to impose a preventive establishment at the cost and expense of the manufacturer, or to cancel or withdraw the concession granted under these rules, and to forfeit the amount of inspection fee deposited for the year, and the manufacturer shall on demand refund all duty, the remission of which shall have been wrongfully claimed and sanctioned

Provided that in the case of persons to whom the concession has been granted by the Central Government under rule 2 of these rules, the Collector shall obtain the Central Government's previous approval before taking any action under this clause

(ii) The manufacturer shall also be responsible for any loss or damage that may be occasioned by the breach of rules referred to in clause (i) above

19 Any person who may be dissatisfied with an order passed by the Assistant Collector under these rules may appeal to the Collector of Central Excise, Bombay, and any person who may be dissatisfied with an order passed by the Collector of Central Excise, Bombay, under these rules may appeal to the Central Board of Revenue
